Just Plain Facts:

"I turn first to the advertising pages," the average exhibitor will tell you.

One big reason why 8546 exhibitor subscribers to MOTION PICTURE NEWS read it by preference is because it carries each year from 800 to 1300 more advertising pages than any other trade paper.

VITALITY OF FILM

FILM is a delicate substance. Properly developed and printed it is unbelievably strong. But unless handled with extreme care it loses its vitality and soon wears out. Light, heat, and humidity in the laboratory all play their parts in determining the life of film.

NEGATIVE and prints from THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES are clearer and last longer than others, although the raw stock is all the same. The treatment it receives in the laboratory makes the difference.

THE temperature and humidity throughout our plant are automatically controlled. Dust and dirt can't possibly get in. This insures 100 per cent vitality and increases the quality immeasurably. Our prints and negative wear longer, look better, and save the producer money.

“Unlimited Facilities For Quality Work”

Leaving the Cream in the Bottle

I RECENTLY left the West Coast Studios after screening practically all of our fall productions to be released under the forty-one picture program sold to exhibitors for the first six months of this year.

In talking to exhibitors of these pictures, I promised them the greatest productions that our Producing Department had ever turned over to us for distribution.

Those of you who bought these productions on faith and on our word know to what extent our pledges have been kept.

We are releasing these productions just as fast as possible, and in many cases pre-releasing, to get them into your hands at the earliest possible moment.

As an example, "Blood and Sand" is just finishing the greatest four weeks run in Broadway's picture history and could have been kept on indefinitely. Everyone knows it—admits it—but there was something else to think of besides the profits this picture would make for us after an indefinite run.

Exhibitors are in need of box office attractions now more than ever before in their history, so "Blood and Sand" is being sent on its way so that YOU and YOU and YOU may get it soon. Not only to make you money, not only to start your new season right, but to show to the people who support your theatre, that this is one of the kind of pictures you were talking of when you told them of the new Paramount program of this season.

And this is but one—there are more to follow—for when you have seen "Man-slaughter," "The Old Homestead," "Burning Sands," "To Have and to Hold," "The Young Rajah," "The Spanish Cavalier," "Clarence," and others, you will realize more than ever before what a dependable source of supply means, and that the making of good pictures is the result of good planning, good thinking, good resources, and good organization—not the result of just big talk.

$2 pictures? Yes, everyone of them and they could have been shown at $2 for a long run. But you, Mr. Exhibitor, would not have had them for six or eight months, and you need them now.

They were made for you, for picture theatres to run at popular prices and bring back your business as only pictures of this kind can do.

Goldwyn Pictures in 1922-23

GOLDWYN will produce and distribute during the coming year only TWENTY BIG PRODUCTIONS. Each one is a truly BIG picture in every sense of the word. Each picture is being produced in a BIG way, built on the solid foundation of GREAT stories, directed by the foremost directorial minds in the business, backed by the unlimited resources of the Goldwyn organization, created to make money for you. Each will be sold individually on its own merits.

Intensively Advertised

BIG pictures are BIG from the point of view of your box-office and bigger when they are properly advertised and exploited to your audience. We are going to tell America about each GREAT Goldwyn production through a tremendous advertising campaign. We will tell your audience about our line-up of powerful attractions through intensive national and local advertising, in the principal magazines, in hundreds of newspapers, on billboards.

Goldwyn Will Make "Ben Hur"

BEN HUR, the most widely known book in the world is being made by Goldwyn into a colossal dramatic spectacle, filmed in Palestine, Egypt, Italy, America.

Other great Goldwyn pictures to come:

GIMME—another Rupert Hughes knockout.

SIX DAYS—Elinor Glynn's stupendous love drama.

PASSIONS OF THE SEA—R. A. Walsh's first Big One for Goldwyn.

BROKEN CHAINS—$10,000 prize story directed by Allen Holubar.

THE BITTERNESS OF SWEETS—a wonderful Rupert Hughes story.

MERMAID COMEDIES Have Earned Your Patronage

BECAUSE their quality has been consistently high and sustained through two successful years of furnishing laughter to millions of theatre-goers.

They are produced under the personal supervision of Jack White, the youngest and one of the most highly regarded directors of screen humor.

They do not depend on so-called "gags" to force a laugh. The director's artistry consists of an unusual ability to manufacture genuinely humorous situations which at the same time are possible situations.

Patrons of motion picture theatres who have enjoyed any of the following MERMAID COMEDIES—

A Fresh Start	The Vagrant
Moonshine	Bang!
For Land's Sake	Free and Easy
Step This Way	Rolling Stones
The Rainmaker	Poor Boy
Treasure Bound	Rapid Fire
Robinson Crusoe, Ltd.

will be glad to know that Educational will release thirteen of these two-part productions for the season of 1922-1923.

MERMAID COMEDIES are always identified by our trade-mark on posters and lobby cards displayed in the entrances of theatres which pay for quality throughout their entire programs.

Editorial

"Look Out Below," First of Jack White's New Series, Contains Steady Procession of Mirthmaking Incidents.

"Jack White's opener for the series of thirteen Mermaid Comedies for release by Educational in 1922-3 is Look Out Below, slated for regular issue in September. It is up to the average of the immediately preceding Mermaids, and that surely is a statement which does not damn with faint praise. It is 99.44 % pure fun. And that is the chief aim of comedies.

"Look Out Below is fast. The two reels slip through all too quickly. There is no let-up in following incident. Much of the action takes place on a steamer, and contributing to the excitement are a dog and a monkey. The former alone will put over the picture, but the comedy does not lean on him by any means.

"There are some old stunts with a new twist in this picture, and there are some new ones. By and large, it is a real comedy."

New York, N.Y. August 17, 1922.

Mr. Joseph Plunket, Managing Director,
Strand Theatre, New York City.

My dear Mr. Plunket:-

Words fail to express my appreciation of the picture entitled "Just Tony". I have taken several friends on two different occasions. This is the first time in my life that I have ever seen a picture twice, and enjoyed it as much, if not more, the second time than I did the first.

I have worked with horses for the past twenty years and, of course, I know how intelligent these faithful creatures are. I hope the public will be awakened through this picture and realize how much more can be done with animals through kindness. I am sure "Just Tony" will have a successful run.

Every boy and girl, as well as the grownups, in the United States should see this picture and William Fox certainly deserves praise for producing such an excellent entertainment.

I thank you for calling my attention to this wonderful picture, and giving me the opportunity of seeing it. You know I never go to shows of any kind but if there were more pictures like this, I would always go to see them.

Very sincerely yours,

The Great Alone

Directed by Jacques Jaccard

Personally Supervised by Isadore Bernstein

The final answer on a picture is found in a list of the first run accounts that play it; the number of circuits that play it and in the reports made by the exhibitors who have played it. That kind of answer is the answer of the box-office and it doesn't lie or go wrong once in a thousand times.

In "What the Picture Did for Me" and in the "Exhibitor Box-Office Reports" you find highly favorable reports on the business "The Great Alone" has done in every section of the country. It has won both public and exhibitor favor.

"The Great Alone" is a big, virile, full-of-action romantic melodrama; a snow picture of blinding storms; of heroism; of physical encounter and it contains without question as great a fight scene as ever caught before in a motion picture.

It has story value; a big, well-known cast and extremely powerful direction by Jaccard.

Book it now.

So, this is Paris!

Mad, fascinating Montmartre. Parisian night life that brings the amusement-seekers of the world to the resorts of the gayest city in all the world.

A spectacular, romantic melodrama, full of color; full of life; full of thrill and excitement and action; a story of love and ambition and temptation revolving around the famous Red Mill.

Prints in all our 24 exchanges now and you can get a pre-release showing ahead of its national release September 10.

Deadly

Division

Because we have argued against the advertiser's use of four trade papers we have probably been thought just humanly selfish.

Well, maybe so; but is it selfish to strive for sound business for the good of all?

And trade paper advertising is only a business matter; strictly that, and very seriously that.

It is a matter of service to the exhibitor—adequate service; of results to the advertiser—adequate results.

Serious? Yes—it costs over a million a year!

When the average trade paper advertising appropriation is equally divided among four or five trade mediums its average life is a month.

During that month maybe fifty theatres book the picture; several thousand get it during the balance of the year.

Thousands of theatres at one time or another want to know all about it: but, after one month, the trade paper advertising pages will never again give a line of information about it.

Salesmen are sent out to sell it—at great expense, comparatively. Maybe exploitation men travel about to give the service the trade paper pages could just as well give. Expensive press-books go with it. Salesmen go out repeatedly after play-dates.

But trade-paper advertising service on the picture is long since dead and buried—buried with fifty theatres.

And why?

Simply because a division of an adequate appropriation made it inadequate—limited it to a mere announcement—made each of four mediums ineffective to do what a trade paper is meant to do.

If the same appropriation had been concentrated in one or even two mediums, trade paper pages could have been used continuously for six months—

To tell all about the picture, its accessories, its first runs, its exploitation by exhibitors in all types of houses and sections—supplementing and reinforcing the sales effort at every turn.

The exhibitor wants this service; it would save the producer much other selling and advertising expense; it would pare down the huge cost of distribution.

Why isn't it done?

We'll tell why next week—in a confession.

What First National big

Fresh news every week

"HURRICANE'S GAL" IS CALLED EXCEPTIONAL

Starring the beautiful Dorothy Phillips and produced under the direction of Allen Holubar.

Robert Smith, manager of the New Grand Central theatre, St. Louis, wires:

"Exceptionally good picture. Very thrilling and dramatic. Acting splendid and pleased our patrons. Business very good."

William J. Bernardi, manager of the Regent theatre, Pittsburgh, wires:

"Eminently satisfactory from every viewpoint. Box office returns BIG and public liked the picture. Immensely more talked about than any picture shown here in months."

A. G. Stolte, managing director of the Des Moines theatre, Des Moines, Ia., wires:

"Did big business despite strong opposition and extreme hot weather. Dorothy Phillips at her best. A 100 per cent picture."

W. C. Patterson, manager of the Metropolitan theatre, Atlanta, wires:

"A sure money getter, alive with incidents and unusually thrilling. Most satisfactory."

T. J. Eslick, Hope theatre, Dallas, wires:

"Best audience picture I have ever played. It has everything and made splendid record here."

Dave Bershon, West Coast theatres, wires from Los Angeles as follows:

"Did phenomenal business at the Kinema despite summer heat and summer resort exodus. Bound to please audiences everywhere and we expect reports of big business from all over our circuit. It is there 100 per cent."

"SONNY" WENT SO BIG THEY HAD TO HOLD IT OVER!

An Inspiration Pictures, Inc., picture and directed by Henry King.

A. M. Bowles, General Manager of Turner and Dahnken, San Francisco, wires:

"Sonny gave better satisfaction and proved a bigger box office attraction even than 'Tol'able David.' Enthusiastic praise and daily increase in box office receipts resulted in second week. Barthelmess the most popular star today and a big asset to the incomparable First National program."

Mrs. Frank Paul, Marvel theatre, Carlinville, Ill., reports:

"'Sonny' and 'Tol'able David,' with Richard Barthelmess.—It's a pleasure to show pictures like these. A-1 in every respect and we received nothing but compliments. Barthelmess great. Also think Pauline Garon in 'Sonny' a coming star.—From Exhibitor's Herald."

Sig Samuels, Metropolitan theatre, Atlanta, says:

"'Sonny' is the first picture in all my years as a theatrical manager that I have backed with my personal endorsement. It exemplifies the splendid principles on which the Better Films Committee is founded—a cleaner, finer, bigger and better picture. I am happy to present it."

The Philadelphia Enquirer says:

"A picture that is worthy of enshrinement in a permanent Hall of Fame for Photoplays. Richard Barthelmess holds the audience in the hollow of his hand. He brings the tear to the eye and causes hearty laughter."

The Cincinnati Enquirer says:

"It strikes deep into the heart. It is easily Barthelmess' best role, better even than 'Tol'able David.'"

The New York Herald says:

"Barthelmess does the finest work he has ever performed. A feature shattering all previous records—one that will linger long in the memory."

Time Attractions are doing

A real box office gauge

"THE CROSSROADS OF N. Y." PACKED THEM IN

Mack Sennett's latest big comedy-drama feature, starring Mabel Normand, is making the money.

Eugene H. Roth, California theatre, wires:

"We packed the theatre every show today. Another 'Molly O.'"

The Chicago Herald and Examiner says:

"Mack Sennett has produced another super comedy-melodrama. The picture has characteristic originality and humor. There is something new and vigorous about it—and startlingly brilliant and inimitable. That's the Sennett touch. It is rich and personal and one of the funniest we've seen."

The Chicago Tribune says:

"An intriguing mixture of melodrama, straight drama, slapstick comedy and comedy at its subtlest. When you think you know what's coming, Mack Sennett fools you. Splendid acting and scenery. I'd like to see it over again."

The Cleveland Press says:

"It maintains the interest throughout. Melodrama that gallops and races with furious fights, auto chases and wrecks. Some very funny bits. It's well worth an evening."

The Cleveland News says:

"Real melodrama, romance, thrills and comedy with an imposing cast of players."

The Cleveland Leader says:

"Keen satire and fitting burlesque."

"ONE CLEAR CALL" IS BEST DRAMATIC SUBJECT

A John M. Stahl production, presented by Louis B. Mayer.

Balaban and Katz, proprietors of a big chain of theatres, wire from Chicago:

"'One Clear Call' gave supreme satisfaction to critics and public alike. Business at the Chicago theatre above the average. It is one of the best dramatic subjects produced in some time."

The Pittsburgh Press says:

"One of the season's finest photoplays and the best that has come from the studio of the master producer, John M. Stahl."

The Pittsburgh Sun says:

"One of the best dramas of the year. It is filled with powerful human interest as well as possessing thrills and appealing humor."

The Chicago Examiner says:

"We want you to see 'One Clear Call.' It is one of the most realistic, absorbing films you have ever seen."

The Chicago Tribune says:

"Just be assured that if you enjoy fine work it is there for your seeing. Henry Walthall is immense."

"FOOLS FIRST" CALLED A SURE FIRE PICTURE!

A Marshall Neilan production, taken from the story by Hugh MacNair Kahler.

The Omaha World Herald says:

"There are sure-fire situations in 'Fools First.' A typical Marshall Neilan picture, well cast, well directed, splendid subtitles, a good plot and an unusual one, plenty of suspense and interesting character portrayals."

The Atlanta Georgian says:

The Los Angeles Herald says:

"Many original scenes showing the masterhand of Neilan. The climax is so radically new one realizes there is no limit to the genius of Neilan."

The Los Angeles Record says:

"Neilan proves himself the Charles Dickens of the screen."

The Atlanta Georgian says:

Motion Picture News

Getting Them In

THE New York Times recently made a stirring appeal for the further distribution of the picture "Hamlet," with Asta Nielsen, the Danish star. Considerable discussion was aroused.

After achieving a marked success in Europe the production was brought to New York, something like a year ago, with the expectation that it would find a ready market in this country. But so far no distribution has been arranged.

We make mention of "Hamlet" here, not to hold a brief for the picture, although from the reviews the production received during its run at the Lexington opera house, New York, it evidently possesses merit, but because some large and fundamental problems are involved. We take it only as a type of the foreign, and, often, the American picture.

The problems are:

What is to be done here with the foreign picture?

What opportunity has the so-called "high brow picture," the picture of classic theme, literary excellence and artistic appeal?

These are weighty matters. They concern largely the development of the motion picture in the field of dramatic entertainment; and also they involve in a large way the welfare of the United States.

If motion pictures are to continue to carry abroad, to millions of people, the important story of American life, progress and ideals, then we must give the foreign picture a home here, a home it deserves to have. We must reciprocate.

If the motion picture is to develop as it should and if the picture theatre is to thrive as it should, we need the greatest possible latitude of creative effort—which means the creative effort of the world.

The critics of the Metropolitan press, speaking for varying classes of some millions of readers, say that Asta Nielsen's "Hamlet" is rare entertainment.

If our picture houses, then, are not to show it, at least one of two charges will be brought readily to light: that the foreign picture is deliberately boycotted by the industry here, or that the American motion picture public is made up of morons insensible to finer creative effort.

Both charges are manifestly and ridiculously untrue.

The market problem here with "Hamlet"—or with any foreign picture or any finer American picture of assured entertainment value is advertising.

The Chaplin, Pickford, Fairbanks, Norma Talmadge pictures—people whose name and charm are household words in millions of homes—need advertising, and lots of it.

But for "Asta Nielsen" and "Hamlet" to approach the American home without even knocking and then expect the door to be thrown wide open is to assume that the American household knows Asta Nielsen's "Hamlet."

And the American home doesn't.

We assume that the average American audience would enjoy Asta Nielsen's "Hamlet"—once they got in through the theatre doors. We feel confident they would.

But what is to get them in?

Not the name of Asta Nielsen. Not the name of "Hamlet." We are speaking now of that broad public necessary to box-office success throughout the large and little communities of this country.

But one thing will bring them in—a ringing declaration that a charming actress will make live for them a great drama of human passion, love and tears.

Advertising! The right kind, intelligently directed. It never failed.

What we have to say of this picture applies quite as well to many and many an American picture.

We have smashed to pieces already one bugaboo—that American audiences don't like costume pictures.

But what did it? Better pictures, yes, of course, but also the advertising of these better pictures, the out and out appeal, through star, title and vivid description, to the widespread human hunger for entertainment.

That's all that counts—entertainment—whatever its source and character.

But—to entertain is one and a great thing; to get the public into the entertainment is another factor and just as important.

Wm. A. Johnston

THE purpose of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., is revealed in a small pamphlet over Will Hays' signature. The watch-words are CONFIDENCE and CO-OPERATION.

The following is quoted as a part of the association articles.

"The object for which the Association is created is to foster the common interests of those engaged in the motion picture industry in the United States by establishing and maintaining the highest possible moral and artistic standards in motion picture production, by developing the educational as well as the entertainment value and general usefulness of the motion picture, by diffusing accurate and reliable information with reference to the industry, by reforming abuses relative to the industry, by securing freedom from unjust or unlawful exactions, and by other lawful and proper means."

Mr. Hays comments on the pamphlet as follows:

"Thus the purpose of our activity is succinctly stated in legal language and becomes the very definite program of our effort.

"This is not a vague gentlemen's agreement. It is the legal statement of a legal purpose by a legally organized body. It creates no super-court, autocratically to pass upon pictures, nor to do many of the other things which have been suggested. The purpose of the association is stated in its articles of association, and I respectfully submit to you that no articles of association breathing a more important message could well be found."

UNIVERSAL carries off the honors on the National Board of Review's latest list of meritorious pictures. Take notice of the Hoot Gibson feature, "The Galloping Kid," especially recommended for adolescents, and "The Storm," starring House Peters. We looked for the asterisk denoting a particularly fine picture opposite "The Storm," and noticing its absence we shall use one of our own . . . (*) . . . Fox is represented on the list with two short subjects—a couple of Mutt and Jeff cartoons, while Goldwyn is selected for two sport reviews—"Red Man Sport," and "Western Stuff." These novel westerns are marked as suitable for the juveniles, but we wager an asterisk against a question mark that the grown-ups won't dismiss them as "kid stuff." Two other features complete the selections—First National's "The Light in the Dark," starring Hope Hampton and Producer Security's play of prison life and reform, "The Right Way," made under the auspices of Thomas Mott Osborne.

TOM TERRISS, the erstwhile Vitagraph director, is at work in London making "The Harbor Lights," an adaptation of a Drury Lane melodrama. By a curious coincidence, the director's father, William Terriss, a famous English actor of his day, scored his greatest success in the play from which the picture is adapted. Upon the completion of "The Harbor Lights" Mr. Terriss has arranged for a series of pictures that will be released in this country through one of the recognized companies.

"American business is ready for an unusual prosperity when the rail and coal strikes are ended, if figures on car loadings for the week ending July 22nd as compiled by the car service division of the American Railway Association are to be taken as a criterion.

"In that week loadings other than coal were the heaviest of any week of this season of the year in the history of the railroads of the country and were within nine-tenths of one per cent of the peak, October 15, 1920, when the railroads made their record of loadings."

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Michael Comerford, head of the important Comerford circuit of Eastern Pennsylvania, is in New York. The coal strike has, of course, severely affected attendance at his houses but an early resumption of business is now expected.

E. W. HAMMONS, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., sailed from New York on the White Star liner Homer August 19 for his annual conference with his business associates in London. He expects to be away from New York a little more than a month.

Mr. Hammons plans to make arrangements for still greater distribution of Educational's product in Europe, and probably will take up the question of getting these pictures into more theatres in Australia as well.

BEARL SIEBEL postcards from Vienna that he has finished his first picture with Bert Cann as cameraman. His location man is leading him on to Berlin, France and Italy to collect exteriors for the next feature.

ROBERT J. FLAHERTY is going back to the Arctic next Spring to make another fine picture like "Nanook of the North"—perhaps a finer one. Bruce Bliven, in the New York Globe, rates "Nanook" as one of the three greatest motion pictures ever made. That's praise indeed! And we, too, believe that "Nanook" is one of the greatest contributions to the screen; but Mr. Flaherty has told us something of the theme of his next picture and we are keen about it.

Robert J. Flaherty

Mr. Flaherty is a born producer. He went first into the Arctic as a mining engineer; but he went back as a motion picture producer, determined to express in pictures the romance of the great white north as he saw it—with a born producer's eyes. It was mighty difficult to make others see what he saw but like all determined artists he finally got there and he came back with what he saw. We need this sort of imagination plus determination—need it mightily. There are plenty of good mining engineers but few knights of the camera like Robert J. Flaherty. Watch for his next one, but don't be impatient. It takes time—lots of time, and unending patience, trial and travel to make "Nanooks." But how they do illumine the picture horizon when they do arrive!

HOWARD DIETZ contributes to the August number of "Advertising and Selling" an article on "What We Have Learned About Human Nature." It is a clear and interesting analysis of the basic appeal to American audiences of the picture drama—not only an advertising article but "a human nature story" as the editor's note points out. The article is illustrated with specimens of Goldwyn advertising.

"BUSINESS is Better" announces the Nicholas Power Company. "Twenty-two years entirely devoted to motion picture projection—a record quite unique in this field—enables us to properly judge conditions in every branch of the film industry. Progressive exhibitors are ordering new equipment."

Pola Negri sails from Europe September 6th on the Majestic. Ben Blumenthal accompanies her and on their arrival will decide upon production plans. It is not as yet determined whether her first picture will be made at the Famous Players-Lasky Long Island Studio or in California.

HERFORD T. COWLING has sailed for London, his purpose being an extended photographic tour around the world, taking motion picture film and photographs. If you want to know what has occupied Mr. Cowling's attention the past six years, let us inform you that he photographed the Paramount-Burton Holmes travel pictures abroad. Some features of the present tour will be a trip with some big game hunters into the wilds of Africa over the trails covered by the late Col. Theodore Roosevelt and an expedition into that erstwhile forbidden land—Thibet.

CLAYTON HAMILTON, erst-while dramatic critic, but now writing stories and continuity for the screen, recently returned from Honolulu. He is reported seriously ill at the Hollywood Hotel, where he makes his home.

J. IRVING GREENE, director of advertising and publicity of Associated Exhibitors, packed up his golfing outfit last week and left for a fortnight's outing at Stamford, N. Y. Mrs. Greene, who is also an enthusiastic and accomplished golfer, is with him, and the trip is really in the nature of a honeymoon, as the couple were married only two months ago.

HARRY BEAUMONT and wife are proud parents. No wonder. Twins. Girls.

G. M. VINTON has arrived in New York, bringing with him four notable scenic films with human interest stories made at the Kiser Studios, Portland, Oregon. The subjects are "The Royal Chinook," "The Festive Haul," "The Price of Progress" and "Fleeced For Gold." Mr. Vinton is stopping at the Hotel Astor.

GLAD to see a good man step along. Jimmy Grainger becomes one of the Goldwyn executives. He will continue, also, to represent Marshall Neilan.

J. G. VON HERBERG of Portland and Seattle is in New York serving on First National's rotating committee.

CHARLES R. CONDON, Louis B. Mayer's publicity director, and Fred Niblo, returned to Los Angeles last week. It was Condon's first visit to Gotham in three years; since the time Charlie was one of the most popular magazine representatives in the trade. On his arrival Condon freely and anxiously admitted California was a great place. He left convinced of it. Walking up Broadway, a terrific rain storm drove us into the gilded palaces. Over two orangeades Charlie told the wonders of the West and the coming schedule of Meyer releases. The writer presented a check for $4.65 for the drinks. It included a couvert charge, but to Charlie it was orangeade—and much worse stuff than can be obtained for five cents out where he came from.

R. S. COLE sends us an engraved announcement advising his friends that he has taken over the distribution of Stephens Salient Six motor cars for the metropolitan district and all foreign countries. His concluding paragraph is especially interesting. "I have decided that on the first hundred I place I will make a special price to those of my friends who may desire cars." Success.

The photograph reproduced here is especially significant of the scenes of the departure of the seaplane voyagers en route from New York to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, a flight of 8,500 miles, which was interrupted by the collapse reported in the newspapers. Members of the crew were all saved when the machine met with accident between the Bahamas and Haiti. The Pathe News cameraman, J. Thomas Baltzell, is shown here perched on the nose of the Sampaio Correia, with his camera, grinding scenes of the departure.

MRS. AGNES EGAN COBB is paging the market for one big super-feature and six good program pictures for England. This is highly flattering to authors on this side of the big pond, considering that the British Isles is and always has been the center of literary activities. Among the visitors who have called at Mrs. Cobb's offices recently are B. S. Lames of the Canary Islands, Spain, and S. A. G. Swenson of Stockholm, Sweden. Their object? To purchase pictures for their respective countries.

THIS is positive. Ray Carroll and Helen Jerome Eddy are leaving New York shortly with a negative, the title of which is "Love's Coming of Age," for distribution by F. B. O.

Headquarters? The Algonquin.

IT'S hard keeping track of W. R. Rothacker these days. Paris, naturally, is his favorite city and he postcards from Baden-Baden that he will visit the city on the Seine again. Other old world capitals included in the itinerary are Berlin, Vienna and London.

AMONG the film personages at the Hotel Pennsylvania is H. O. Davis of Universal.

WE are willing to wager that the threadbare prejudice against costume pictures will receive another knockout blow when "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" makes its appearance on the horizon of the screen. A sixteen page illustrated booklet from the Fairbanks studio, entitled "An Ideal—and its fulfillment" has come to hand and judging from the sincerity of its descriptions and the beauty and splendor of the pictures' settings this latest creation of the effervescent actor surpasses in magnitude most of the productions—foreign and domestic—that have been called "big" in the past.

Nothing is sillier than the standpatism of the prejudice against the costume production. And we are sure that in this glorious old romance of the twelfth century Douglas Fairbanks will just about prove the truth of that contention.

JOHAN S. ROBERTSON, feature director for Paramount, who has just completed Mary Pickford's new production, "Tess," is due to arrive in New York shortly. Mr. Robertson's contract with Famous Players-Lasky has expired. His plans include several big propositions which will be boiled down to one when he arrives in the city to give them his personal attention, according to his publicity purveyor.

AT Tyler, Texas, the management of the Electric, Palace and Broadway theatres are admitting shopman on strike and their families free of charge on three matinee days each week until the railroad strike is settled. This seems to be one of the sanest moves ever made in a local crisis. It gives the strikers a place to go, takes their minds from their worries—and, incidentally, is an excellent business move. It seems rather a shame that such an act on the part of an exhibitor can't be placed along side of a scandal story of some alleged moving picture star who was never more than an extra. But newspapers, of course, aren't made that way.

SOONA RUSTOMJEE DHARWAR of Bombay, India, writes in asking us to send him some samples of motion picture stars as soon as possible. We are sending him a generous sample in Fatty Arbuckle, who is speeding full steam ahead for the Orient.

Organizations Plan Cooperation With Hays

Liaison Officer Named to Function With and Through Agencies For Betterment of Pictures

AS a result of a meeting held June 22 last at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria between Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and about one hundred representatives of national civic, religious, educational and welfare organizations, there has come into action, it was learned yesterday, a definite plan of cooperation between those who make the pictures and those who are interested in better pictures because of their effect upon the people of the nation.

A body of men and women whose names are well known in welfare work of various sorts throughout the country have definitely organized, have prepared to go to work, and have chosen an executive officer, at the invitation of the producers and distributors, whom they have assigned to duty in Mr. Hays' office. Colonel Jason S. Joy, formerly executive secretary of the American Red Cross, is the man selected, and he assumed his duties last Monday.

The plan of cooperation is best explained, perhaps, by the following resolutions of organization and declarations of purposes, enunciated at a meeting of some of the welfare workers in Mr. Hays' office several days ago:

Whereas, more than one hundred representatives of national civic, religious, educational and welfare organizations of the United States, together with representatives of exhibitors', actors', and authors' organizations, met in New York City on June 22 at the invitation of Mr. Will H. Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., to discuss methods of fostering the production, distribution, exhibition and appreciation of better motion pictures.

Whereas, these representatives, whose organizations include in their affiliated membership a substantial portion of the American public, unanimously passed a resolution of appreciation to the producers, confidence in the plans as announced and pledged support through an elected Committee of Three with instructions to form a committee of fifteen to twenty-five persons, and to effect a permanent organization to assist in realizing the objects set forth in the Articles of Association of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, namely:

"Establishing and maintaining the highest possible moral and artistic standards in motion picture production," and

"Developing the educational as well as the entertainment value and general usefulness of motion pictures." Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That a plan of organization be set up as follows for accomplishing the purposes mentioned above:

1. A General Committee, representative of national organizations similar to those participating in the meeting of June 22nd, and forming a nation-wide consulting body. (About 100 persons.)

2. The undersigned Committee of Twenty, chosen from the General Committee by the Committee of Three elected on June 22nd—also nationally representative, but so constituted geographically as to permit of frequent meetings.

3. An Executive Committee, including members of the Committee of Three elected on June 22nd, to act between meetings of the larger committees.

Rejected Picture Passes After Revamping

PICTURES rejected by the Motion Picture Commission of New York are not necessarily barred from screen showing for all time, if they are revamped and in their new state meet with approval. This was shown when "Voices Of The City" was approved which as "The Night Life" was rejected in its entirety.

The original picture was rearranged by Goldwyn and eliminations and changes were made, with the result that it was passed by the commission.

4. An Executive Officer, selected by and responsible to the Committee of Twenty, and charged with assisting the various cooperating organizations in attaining the ends herein set forth. Be it also

Resolved, That no action taken by the Committee of Twenty or by any representative of a particular association thereon shall be binding upon any particular organization against its own wishes. And be it further

Resolved, That the purpose of the work of the several agencies here named shall include:

a. The establishment of a channel of intercommunication between the agencies instrumental in forming and interpreting public opinion and the motion picture industry.

b. The increased use of motion pictures as a force for citizenship and a factor in social benefit.

c. The development of more intelligent cooperation between the public and the motion picture industry.

d. The aiding of the cooperative movement instituted between the National Education Association and the motion picture producers to direct the making of pedagogic films and their effective employment in the schools.

e. The encouragement of the effort to advance the usefulness of motion pictures as an instrument of international amity, by correctly portraying American life, ideals and opportunities in pictures sent abroad, and the proper portrayal of foreign scenes and persons in all productions.

f. The furtherance, in general, of all constructive methods of bringing about a sympathetic interest in attaining and maintaining high standards of art, entertainment, education and morals in motion pictures.

(Signed) MRS. OLIVER HARRIMAN, President Camp Fire Girls; MRS. GEORGE M. MINOR, President-General Daughters of the American Revolution; HAROLD S. BRAUCHER, Secretary Community Service, Inc., and Playground and Recreation Association of America; MRS. WOODALLON CHAPMAN, Chairman Committee on Motion Pictures, General Federation of Women's Clubs; HUGH FRAYNE, The American Federation of Labor; JAMES WEST, Chief Scout Executive, The Boy Scouts of America; LEE F. HANMER, Director, Department of Recreation, Russell Sage Foundation; CHARLES A. McMAHON, Editor National Catholic Welfare Council Bulletin; REV. F. ERNEST JOHNSON, Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; HAROLD ROSS, Editor American Legion Weekly; MRS.

ROBERT E. SPEER, President Young Women's Christian Association; MRS. JANE D. RIPPIN, Director The Girl Scouts; DR. JOHN R. MOTT, General Secretary International Committee of Young Men's Christian Associations.

The men and women whose names are attached to the resolutions and declaration of purposes are among the leaders of their national organizations, the combined membership of which is more than 11,000,000.

Their representative at motion picture headquarters will keep them informed at all times as to the constructive work being done by the producers and distributors looking toward the improvement of the quality and the raising of the standards of pictures. He will also keep Mr. Hays informed of the aims and activities of the organizations he represents and of their cooperative efforts.

By reason of the presence of an executive officer right at the headquarters of the motion picture industry, it is hoped both by the welfare organizations and by Mr. Hays that his programme of "Confidence and Cooperation" may be materially furthered and the present well-defined improvement of the pictures may be maintained and accelerated.

Comments upon this new plan of procedure, made by both the motion picture industry and by the public—"whose servant the industry is," as Mr. Hays has frequently said—agree that it is the most important step he has yet taken toward proving that motion pictures are being and will be improved, and that those who produce them are working with sincerity and zeal to that end.

Addressing the Committee of Twenty, upon its declaration of purposes, Mr. Hays said:

"Your adoption of this Declaration of Purpose and your willingness and determination to carry out its provisions mark a definite mile stone, it seems to me, in the public relations of this industry. With these great organizations which you represent and with many other associations giving us the benefit of their criticism and cooperation, both the industry and the public may look toward the future with the fullest hope for the largest accomplishment.

"I am deeply grateful for your concurrence in what is being done relative to the utilization of the motion picture as an agency for better international relationship, and for the fullest employment as a pedagogic instrument.

"It is my firm conviction that the motion picture will embody within itself the art, aspirations and ideals of America; and having done that, it will be instrumental in selling America to the world. In the accomplishment of those great tasks, we shall want to lean heavily upon you. We will first deserve your confidence and thereafter we must jointly bring about the accomplishment of our common objectives."

Colonel Joy, the new executive officer for the welfare organizations, is a Wesleyan man, 1910; was a Major of Field Artillery in the war; after the armistice, was Director of the Commission on Training Camp Activities as Lieutenant Colonel; was later Executive Secretary of the American Red Cross and for the past year as Director of Domestic Operations had charge of the Red Cross responsibilities toward ex-service men.

Public Relations and the Picture Industry

Expert Points Out Ills and Cures in Series of Four Valuable Articles

Following is the first of a series of four articles written exclusively for Motion Picture News by Turner Jones, Public Relations Representative for Southern Enterprises, Inc., Atlanta, Ga. In these articles Mr. Jones deals with a subject of interest to everyone in the industry, as he points out the ills and cures as they are and as they may be remedied. Producer, distributor and exhibitor will profit by reading the series.

THE position of the average motion picture theatre with regard to public opinion is very similar to that of the negro whom Polk Miller met on the side of the road one day. The negro was getting up and sitting down in a most perturbed fashion, with perplexity and fear visible upon his swarthy countenance. Polk Miller asked for an explanation and received this answer: "Lordy, Boss, I'se done swallowed a' egg and I'se 'fraid to run, 'fraid it'll bust an' 'fraid to sit still, 'fraid it'll hatch."

For the motion picture theatre to please the extremists, or chronic agitators, would result in a "bust." To ignore this element results in the "hatching" of censorship, blue laws, admission regulations, and what not. To steer a middle course pleases neither side.

The great difficulty at present, which is a cumulative situation, is that the public has already gained wrong impressions of the aims and methods of the motion picture industry and is already too willing to believe that the purpose of the industry is exploitation of the community rather than the rendering of an entertainment service. This is not peculiar to the theatre, for we find every branch of the public utility industries confronted with the same problem and we can learn much of value as to the proper method of solving this problem by observing the methods employed by these utilities.

All public relations work is based upon one general assumption: That the nature and practice of regulation (political, economic, social), will be a reflection of public sentiment, which is the expression of the people's understanding and knowledge of the industry. If the people have been told that the motion picture industry is the fourth largest industry; that it is as rich as Croesus, etc., then legislatures will tax us accordingly.

This principle cannot be over-emphasized, and it applies equally well to the attitude of religious bodies, women's organizations, public agitation, and consequently to box office receipts.

The intent in the theory of regulation will be respected in the practice of regulation to the extent that the people are truthfully informed of the facts, circumstances and problems of our industry. For example, given a state with censorship. The law on the statute books may be stringent and extreme, but the administration of that law will reflect the opinions of the people relative to the moral, educational and recreational value of pictures.

With this principle as a starting point, the Public Relations Office of the Southern Enterprises, Inc., has formulated four definite objectives toward which it is working. These objectives serve equally well for the individual theatre, as for a number of theatres and equally as well for a producer or distributor as for

P. N. Brinch Resigns from Hodkinson Corporation

P. N. BRINCH has resigned as Manager of Exchanges of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. He plans a protracted vacation before making any new affiliations. Mr. Brinch's resignation became effective on Monday of this week, August 21st.

Mr. Brinch became associated with the industry at the time that W. W. Hodkinson was active in the affairs of General Film Company. When Hodkinson severed relations with General Film and joined up with the Triangle organization, Brinch accompanied his superior into the new enterprise. At the organization of the present W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, Mr. Brinch took a prominent part in the formulating of the company's policies and became assistant to the president and general sales manager of the Hodkinson organization. When the company established its own exchange system about a year ago, Mr. Brinch was made manager of exchanges.

a theatre. However, to be successful, members of the industry must recognize the truth of Roosevelt's statement that: "Every man in an industry owes a part of his time to making that industry better."

The four objectives are:

1. To secure and maintain public goodwill. In this connection goodwill implies confidence, friendliness, sincere interest, and worth-while regard.

2. To better the public's conception of the motion picture industry. Generally speaking, the public's conception of our industry is apparently one of an insolent, fabulously wealthy trust which ignores the community. Too frequently we are classed with agencies of indecency and immorality.

3. In regulatory matters, to change our stand from a defensive to an offensive position. In too many states we now sit by while our opposition organizes agitation for our regulation. Following the advice of professional lobbyists, we wait quietly for fear of arousing agitation, until the situation is past curing save by lobbyists.

4. To personalize our companies and theatres to the public. A corporation is readily classified as dishonest, overbearing, insolent, etc. People are not so quick to falsely classify or believe ill of a person.

How are these four objectives to be reached? Educational propaganda is the answer and the channels through which it must reach the public are: Press, patrons, civic and commercial organizations, schools, screen, speakers, goodwill advertising.

Practically applied these methods fall under four general heads: (1) Organization of opposition; (2) dissemination of information; (3) personalization and public goodwill; (4) political activities.

Before discussing in detail the methods of public relations work, it is to be observed that no hard and fast line can be drawn between it and exploitation, and none should be drawn. Just as every point of contact with the outside public is a sales opportunity for the theatre's attraction, so it is a sales opportunity for the reputation of industry and company, a sales opportunity for the worth of motion pictures, for the inadequacy of censorship, for the injustice of Sunday discrimination, etc. And box office receipts may be increased by availing ourselves of these sales opportunities, since these are the only opportunities to develop new patrons.

Theatre Owners Urge Hays Action

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania have passed resolutions prompted by utterances of Will H. Hays, in which the public was urged not to patronize pictures that might affect public morals. These resolutions urge Mr. Hays to inform the public just what pictures should and should not be patronized.

They follow:

"Whereas, Mr. Will H. Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, has in public speeches and newspaper interviews confessed that the companies represented in his association have produced and are now distributing photoplays of such a character as to be subversive of public morals; and,

"Whereas, Mr. Hays has stated that such pictures should not be patronized; and

"Whereas, Mr. Hays has stated that improvement can not be expected until next year; and,

"Whereas, the public has no means of determining which of the pictures can be patronized with propriety;

"We, the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania, voicing the sentiments of our membership, as being unalterably opposed to the presentation of indecent pictures; be it

"Resolved, That we hereby solicit Mr. Hays, whom we appreciate as a competent judge of what is wholesome, moral and clean, to make public statements upon the pictures distributed by the members of his organization, informing the public which of the pictures measure up to the standard set by him and which do not; and,

"Whereas, the motion picture exhibitor is compelled to buy his pictures before production and has no means of determining which of the pictures are fit to be shown; and,

"Whereas, the contracts contain what is known as the non-cancellable clause; be it further

"Resolved, That we hereby solicit Mr. Hays to secure for us cancellation of contracts for pictures which, in his opinion, should be condemned."

Exhibitor of Atlanta Passes Away

George Schmidt, manager of the Strand theatre and one of the best known and best loved figures in Atlanta theatrical circles, died early Monday morning at his residence, 250 North Jackson street. Mr. Schmidt had been ill for several weeks.

He was thirty-one years old at the time of his death, and had been a resident of Atlanta about six years, coming here from Spartanburg, S. C., to manage the Strand, Vaudeville and Alamo No. 2 theatres.

Los Angeles as "Dollar-A-Week" Man Saw It

By A. G. STOLTE, Manager Des Moines Theatre, Des Moines, Ia.

MY impression of my visit to Hollywood? Oh boy! It was just one grand and glorious week, so filled with interest and enjoyment and education,

A. G. Stolte

I was completely overwhelmed with the pleasure of being one of the nine fortunate exhibitors, so royally entertained by First National. I cannot begin to tell how very much I was benefited by that trip to Hollywood. I returned thoroughly imbued with the idea that out there on the coast several hundred people have my interest very closely at heart.

They are bending every effort to make First National pictures just as successful as possible and knowing of their interest, my interest is doubled and every effort I put forward, I know will be thoroughly appreciated by the folks in the studio.

I was especially pleased at the interest exhibited by the stars. They plied us with questions and listened attentively as we told them of the roles in which our patrons preferred to see them and they begged for any suggestions we might have for their future appearances.

We obtained many interesting insights into the mechanical end of the production of our photoplays. Of the detail—the painstaking detail—with which the most unimportant scenes are shot; of the magnitude of some of the sets and of the genuine labor involved in the shooting of the average photoplay.

We found Hollywood just an average city of many mammoth factories where day after day hundreds of laboring people put in many, long, weary hours, grinding out a product that influences the world. There is more business in Hollywood than there is pleasure and most of the nights the people of the studios drop into their beds along about ten, too weary of mind and body to think of stepping out. Naturally they have their gay times, but for the most part it is work all day and rest all night. After eight or ten tedious hours in the studio or on location, under the glare of the hot lights, repeating scene after scene under the direction of a hard taskmaster, the studio people are too tired for the "gay parties" of which we read.

Among the studio people there is great urge for the betterment of photoplays—wherever you go and whoever you meet, sooner or later, the talk will turn into the more serious channel of the future; the responsibility that rests on every one in the industry; the plans and the dreams for the coming productions.

And so I have come back to the Des Moines Theatre, after my week, ready to do my utmost at this end of the road to fulfill the hopes of the folks out there in the studio. And as I work, I know they are working, too, and because of this knowledge of cooperation I am looking forward to a new and greater success.

It's a great game—this business of entertaining the world in your theatre! But, knowing the people behind you; knowing their determination and their ability and knowing how much your success means to them, you can't fail!

Review of "Shall the Movies be Censored?"

By E. F. Supple

"SHALL the Movies Be Censored?" a pamphlet published by the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, proves to be by far the most interesting exposition of censorship, pro and con, that we have read thus far. Its origin is briefly this: In the spring of 1921, A. T. Hills, appointed by the Chamber to confer with other organizations on ways to improve "the tone of motion pictures then being shown in Cleveland," made a report of his observations to the Chamber. This report the Chamber handed over to its Municipal Committee with a request that the committee make a study of censorship. The committee did so, and its final report, submitted to the Chamber a few weeks ago, is embodied in this pamphlet.

Not only its findings but also its conclusions are presented in the report. "Some sort of regulation should be retained, at least for the present . . . this function of regulation could best be exercised by the Federal government." Thus, the committee states its conclusions. Thirteen committeemen concur in this verdict: four dissent, rejecting legalized censorship in any form.

In its study of sources, the committee examined some fifty-five official reports, magazine articles, organizational pamphlets and bulletins, letters from prominent people, and various other documentary data—all bearing on the subject of censorship. Besides, eight speakers—four advocating and four condemning censorship—were given hearings. These men by virtue of experience and office were well qualified to argue their respective sides. On such written and oral records it based the committee's report—and likewise its conclusions as stated above.

The report states the case for and against censorship, comprehensively and impartially. The case for censorship stands as follows:

(1). Rapid growth of Industry demands drastic control.

(2). Juvenile delinquency is directly traceable to screen.

(3). Censorship where already enforced is good as deterrent on those producers who would otherwise foist unclean film on the public.

(4). Opponents, by proposing remedies other than censorship, impliedly acknowledge need for some kind of regulation.

(5). Screen stories contrast good with the bad. But the public, through the censors—and not the producer, who is an interested party—should determine how much bad should go into a film.

(6). The prevalence of sex themes in pictures, and—allied with this—the elaboration of the sex appeal to an extreme so as to make for success at the box-office.

Thus rests the case for censorship. Now for the counts against, as recorded in the report:

(1). Censorship is unconstitutional, freedom of speech and press being guaranteed in "The Constitution of the United States."

(2). Proponents often fail to distinguish between bad taste and bad morals.

(3). Is un-American and a fore-runner of stage and press censorship with resultant abuses made possible at hands of machine politicians.

(4). Public is free to choose its plays and literature. Why not its pictures?

(5). Mind of professional censor, predisposed to ferret out evil, finds it where it does not exist in many cases.

(6). Censors must "censor" or their jobs will be abolished.

(7). Laws already on the statute books are sufficient to provide protection against the salacious and unclean.

(8). Pictures of past few months show improvement. "The situation is righting itself." This is obvious when comparison is made with lower types of production of a couple of years ago which were due "to the inevitable backwash of war."

(9). The press everywhere has declared against censorship editorially.

(10). A censor board, in the final analysis, is not "a cross-section of public opinion"—as is claimed—but an embodiment of personal opinions. Disparity of rulings prove this.

(11). Pictures can not be reduced to the child level of intelligence as 85 per cent of the patronage is adult. Yet such is the aim of many censorship advocates while practically all censorship proponents base their arguments on harm done to the child and the adolescent.

And so rests the case against censorship.

Our own opinion concurs with the four dissenting committeemen. We believe that the evidence against censorship far outweighs—on the face of the record—that in its favor. Space does not permit a detailed refutation, but we would call attention especially to the "pro" argument advanced under Number Five. Herein the proponents say the public should determine the bad that goes into a film story. But that is exactly the contention of the opponents of censorship everywhere—the public should be the one to determine, and not a politically appointed censorship commission.

What has the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce to say concerning the report and conclusions of its Municipal Committee? The president and secretary of the Board of Directors give the answer, with their eyes on Will Hays and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. They say:

"The pictures which are being produced this summer will be released in the autumn; the people will be able to judge at that time whether the efforts of the organization have been successful. For that reason, further consideration of this report is postponed."

And we feel their words are being quietly repeated by plain citizens this wide country over.

Far East Exhibitors Are Having Troubles

Utility Corporation Secretary Tells Of Conditions In China, Japan and Philippines

KENNETH MCGAFFEY, secretary of the Motion Picture Utility Corporation of San Francisco, has just returned to that city from a five months' trip through the Orient in the interest of his company, arranging to make productions there this winter.

According to McGaffey the exhibitors of the Far East countries are now having their troubles.

"The rainy season in the Philippines causes an annual slump in business at this time," he writes. "This slump is expected and figured on both by the distributor and the exhibitor. But there has been an additional slump the past year, owing to financial depression, and in the Provinces business is very bad.

"In China the war is raising hob with the theatres in Canton and Tiensien. This is no comic opera conflict, but three hundred thousand fully equipped men in the field. The exhibitors simply have to shut up shop in the provinces where the fighting occurs. If one side wins the money they take in is all right. If the other side happens to come out ahead the other money makes fine cigar lighters. There are only about fifty theatres in all of China and these along the coast. So it does not take much to put a crimp in the exhibition game in Quaint Cathay.

"In Japan the picture business is much better. The craving for serials is on the wane, and the feature coming into its own, but the Japanese exhibitors are hurting themselves by giving too long a program. The usual show consists of an American feature, a Japanese feature, an American comedy and a Japanese comedy or two, or three reels of short subjects. One theatre in Tokyo was showing four feature pictures as one program. When they are shy of a feature they run two parts of a serial. One company is making Japanese features for home consumption only.

"They turn out about three five-reelers a month, with one company working, and they look it. One firm is getting ready to photograph a number of one-reel stories based on the old Japanese fairy tales, and as this is being handled by Japanese trained in American studios it is expected that some of them will be acceptable for foreign consumption, as the settings of the old temples and gardens are wonderfully beautiful.

"I was in Tokyo when Sessue Hayakawa and his wife, Yuru Aoki, arrived for the first visit to their native land in many years. Hayakawa was received with an ovation that is generally only given a victorious general returning from the wars. In his home town a huge welcome arch was erected and the Tokyo crowds lined the streets and cheered as he was escorted to the hotel. The story that he was unpopular over there is erroneous. A number of the local film publications devoted an entire issue to him and the post cards of photographs of his arrival are for sale all over Japan.

"On the pirating charge George Mooser, of United Artists, is going after all users of duped film tooth and nail, and has stopped the showing of pirated copies of several of his firm's pictures.

"The only other American film representatives I met over there were Hugo Amberg, Far East representative, and Edward B. Rowe, Tokyo branch manager for Universal, although Tom Cochran was on his way over for Famous Players.

"Down in the Strait Settlements conditions are better. Java, Borneo and India are now a good market for serials, although quite a few people have left the serial theatre and gone over to the feature. Most of the Orientals like animal serials. The Chinese can get more kick out of seeing a lion or tiger get after a blonde motion picture actress than anything in the world. 'Tarzan of the Apes' made a big hit over there."

Rumor Splits Von Stroheim And Universal

Report Says "Merry Go Round" Will Be Produced Under Some Other Director

WEST COAST film circles are stirred by the persistent rumor that Eric Von Stroheim is through at Universal City and in consequence, "Merry Go Round," which he has been planning and for which the cast has been selected and the sets built, will go into production with another director.

A break between Von Stroheim and Universal immediately after "Foolish Wives" was completed would not have been surprising and was even anticipated, since it was no secret that many of the "U" officials, including Carl Laemmle, president of the concern, were disgruntled over the picture's enormous cost and the high hand which their employee had exercised in connection with the production of the feature. Even after the picture had been cut and titled and was being given its premiere at the Central theatre, New York, there were rumors of friction.

Von Stroheim quarreled with anyone who suggested editing the film to even a prodigal feature length, and was particularly bitter over deletions that were made in anticipation of censorship objection. However, when "Foolish Wives" began to prove that even with its million dollar expense sheet, it would still get off the nut, matters quieted down and Von Stroheim went back to the coast to plan a successor to his most ambitious production.

What happened thereafter up until the past week is a matter of trade history. Von Stroheim wrote another story, with its locale in Europe, as have been all of his pictures, planned the sets, started the Universal studio force at work building them, selected the players he desired for the long cast, and was all ready to start shooting. Even the title of the production, "Merry Go Round," had been selected.

What has caused the split, if one has occurred, is only a matter of conjecture. At this writing Von Stroheim is silent on the subject, and no announcement is forthcoming from Universal, either at Universal City or the New York office.

R. H. Cochran, vice president of the Universal, when asked concerning the rumor, said: "We have heard nothing here in the home office about Von Stroheim quitting. So far as we know here everything is quiet and serene regarding Von Stroheim. His big sets are well along and the cast is engaged."

Von Stroheim's career has been spectacular and enviable from the standpoint of his success as both a director and actor. He first made a name for himself as an actor, playing various peculiar roles for which he was a type under a number of directors and on several lots.

It was in the early days of Triangle that Von Stroheim began to attract attention. Norma Talmadge was making a picture at the Ince studio, Culver City. There was a small role calling for a type to play a scandal mongering newspaper reporter. Von Stroheim, at that time not even rated as an extra but employed at the studio in a menial capacity, was pressed into service. He ran away with the scene, and both press and public gave him generous recognition. Soon after he appeared in other similar roles, always scoring as a distinctive personality.

When the United States entered the war against Germany, Von Stroheim's position, because of his nationality, Prussian, became difficult. He dropped from sight for a time, but finally landed with Universal as a player. Here he progressed in technical knowledge until his ability was freely admitted.

However, Von Stroheim's ambitions were not to be appeased by success as an actor. Soon he had convinced Carl Laemmle that he possessed ability as a director and was given his chance. The result of this venture was "Blind Husbands," a picture that brought forth unlimited praise from the critics and labeled him as a genius.

With "Blind Husbands" a hit, Von Stroheim started work on another picture. This production, too, was successful, and then came "Foolish Wives."

What the latter production cost, the time it consumed in filming and its more recent history, is a matter with which every exhibitor is familiar.

If Von Stroheim is done at Universal City, his future affiliations, and he most certainly will be sure of a berth in the industry, will be a matter of no small importance. No matter what rumors of temperamental genius, of wasteful extravagance, of ungovernable tendencies, have been heard, there will be those who will desire his services. Genius is not to be denied, and Von Stroheim is one at making a certain type of picture and playing a certain type of part.

L. H. KLOCK, Manager of the Arcadia Theatre Company of Wellsboro, Penn., has considerable to say regarding the picture business at present, as a result of the invitation of MOTION PICTURE NEWS for opinions on remarks recently made by J. D. Williams.

The following was received from Manager Klock:

"As you invite exhibitors opinions regarding Mr. J. D. Williams' remarks relative to the picture business at present, we venture to state some of the thoughts in the mind of an exhibitor in a small country town.

"The depression which has been general in all lines of business for many months naturally is noticeable in the receipts at the box office the same as in the receipts of the department store or any other line of business. People do not have the money to spend as lavishly as they did two years ago. When they make purchases they watch the prices closely,—they are looking for bargains. In the picture business they are picking their entertainment,—they go to see the picture that they think will please them. There are of course other influencing conditions, such as good music, modern theatre equipment which includes comfort, that tends to draw them to certain theatres, but the picture is THE thing they want most.

"In nearly every line of business whether it be manufacturer, jobber or retailer, inventories have been reduced with the lead pencil,—they have reduced their prices and taken their losses. This was imperative in many instances or ruin would have surely overtaken them. The public demanded cheaper prices, or better goods at the same prices. Admission prices can not be materially reduced in the modern picture theatre owing to the necessary overhead, and I doubt very much that it would help business to any extent to reduce prices if we could.

"Now the thought arises: have the producers and distributors reduced their inventories? Why not throw away much of the 'junk' that has been hurting business directly? Take their losses now and get on firmer ground. Release only pictures that are box office winners. In so doing they would certainly win the confidence and esteem of the exhibitor who would certainly reciprocate when opportunity permitted. Don't be in the class with the landlord,—keep the prices up on undesirable properties. 'Can' the junk.

"Mr. Williams wisely states that fewer and better pictures are necessary. That the number of box office knockouts are limited we all admit. Then, we would like to ask, why arrange to make 60-70 the coming season? Why does Paramount release 41 in six months? How many will really be winners for the exhibitor? With these figures in mind there seems to be no relief in sight. The exhibitor who knows his audience can already count the small number of the releases announced that will pull good at his house. There is certainly lots of room for good attractions but no room for the stereotyped class of pictures which are being announced and heralded at present by some of the best producers and distributors in the country. Make better pictures and release only good pictures and conditions will improve at once."

Accessories Concern to Start on Coast

Sol Lesser, with his associates, Mike Rosenberg and Irving M. Lesser, of Principal Pictures Corporation, and with the aid of his West Coast associates, A. L. and M. Gore and Adolph Ramish, has launched a project whereby accessories pertaining to the exploitation and better showing of motion pictures will be manufactured and sold to exchange centers and exhibitors the world over.

It is the plan of Mr. Lesser and associates to erect a building in Los Angeles in the industrial section of the city. In this edifice will be installed machinery and workmen who will create and turn out every available accessory that the film executives deem worthy of exploiting a photoplay.

Manitoba Exhibitors Association President Tells of Great Britain Conditions

CONDITIONS existing in the moving picture business in Great Britain, as viewed by a Canadian, have been described by R. Kershaw of Winnipeg, Manitoba, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, Manitoba, who returned recently from a three months' visit in the British Isles. Mr. Kershaw, who is one of the leaders in the moving picture theatre business in the Dominion, was given an enthusiastic welcome at the weekly luncheon of the Manitoba association in Manitoba Hall, Winnipeg, on Thursday, August 17.

According to Mr. Kershaw, England is seriously bent on rehabilitation and everybody and everything is freely taxed. The English theatres, particularly, are under a very heavy tax burden. The presentation of pictures in England was on a par with that found in most theatres in the Dominion, he declared, but the projection does not measure up to the standard in Canada or the United States, he believed. One fault, he pointed out, was due to smoke, many of the English exhibitors permitting patrons to smoke at will.

Mr. Kershaw attended the banquet in London in honor of William Fox at which $25,000 was raised for the purpose of fighting heavy taxation on theatres and pictures.

The association members took steps at the luncheon in Winnipeg to tighten up on circuses and traveling carnivals which have been eating into the moving picture theatre business in Winnipeg to a considerable extent. A committee representing the association was appointed to negotiate with Manitoba municipalities with a view to securing restrictive legislation against a certain class of carnivals that remain in a community a week at a time.

Prime Minister Last Word in Censors

THE Prime Minister of Australia is now the court of last appeal on all questions of motion picture censorship in the operation there of a Parliamentary Censor Board, according to word just received by Thomas H. Ince from Australasian Films, Ltd.

Here is the Parliamentary censorship chain:

Censor Board, controlled by Act of Parliament, does not permit film importer to take film out of customs until duty has been paid.

Customs duty cannot be paid until film has passed the Censor Board.

If the Censor Board rejects the film, the importer cannot get it out of customs to show members of Parliament and representative citizens without an appeal to the Minister in Parliament for Customs. If the Customs Minister fails, then comes the Prime Minister.

Georgia Censorship Failure, Clubwoman Says

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, chairman of the department of citizenship of the Georgia Federated Women's Clubs, has issued the following with regard to the failure of censorship in those states where it is now in operation:

"As Chairman of the Department of Citizenship of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, as a member of the Advisory Committee of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, and as a member of the Better Films Committee of Atlanta, I feel that I can legitimately present to you, as a legislative official of the State of Georgia, the true attitude of the Women's Clubs of this state and the opinions of that ever increasing number of men and women now working in several cities in Georgia for the betterment of motion pictures.

"After making a thorough study of the operation of state censorship in Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland and Kansas, the only states in which it exists, we have become convinced that this form of regulation cannot help the situation and that it has proven a failure in these states, so far as the betterment of pictures is concerned. At the recent convention in Chautauqua, N. Y., many women from these states assured us of this fact.

"Yours very truly,

(Signed) "MRS. ALONZO RICHARDSON,
"Department Citizenship, Georgia Federation Women's Clubs."

Harmony Body to Meet at Kansas City

The beginning of a reign of prosperity and harmony in Western Missouri, it is believed, will be marked by the first meeting of the Joint Board of Arbitration, formed recently at Kansas City by the M. P. T. O. Missouri, which is scheduled to be held at the Hotel Baltimore, Kansas City, next Tuesday, and for which much preparation has been made.

Scores of letters of congratulation, inquiry and commendation have been received by Secretary Lawrence E. Goldman of the M. P. T. O. Missouri since the formation of the new body. That a similar organization will be formed in the St. Louis district is virtually a certainty, while Kansas, Oklahoma and Iowa are contemplating the adoption of the plan, under which a decision by the board is final and must be obeyed.

Allen Theatres Seek Time Extension

Announcement was made at Toronto, Ontario, on August 18, by G. T. Clarkson, official receiver and assignee for Allen Theatres, Limited, Toronto, that an application had been placed before the judge in bankruptcy at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, for an extension over several years to enable Allen Theatres, Limited, to attempt a recovery instead of being compelled to sell to another corporation.

Clarkson admitted, however, that there was some objection on the part of a number of minority shareholders of the bankrupt company to an extension being granted although the principal creditors favored an extension.

The matter is before the judge in bankruptcy who will decide whether the extension will be officially confirmed or the assets of the Allen company be sold to the other corporation.

A committee comprising five representatives of creditor firms was named, it was announced, to manage the estate of Allen Theatres, Limited, if the court will now set aside the bankruptcy order. The committee is composed of R. J. Bulkeley of Cleveland, Ohio; M. H. Ludwig, K. C., Toronto; G. F. Perkins of the Perkins Electric Company, Montreal; M. J. Goldring of the Robert Simpson Company, Toronto, and Lee A. Kelly, a lawyer of Ottawa, Ontario.

According to one Allen Theatre official, the move by the creditors to seek the setting aside of the receiving order of the court marks the beginning of the end of difficulties for the Allen company.

Music Questionnaire Is Sent Exhibitors

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America have sent a questionnaire to exhibitors in which their cooperation is urged in the use of non-taxable music. The status of the house with regard to the musical situation is requested as well as the kind of music required.

The association is asking exhibitors to cooperate with local music dealers in popularizing license free compositions and popular numbers. The music department is in a position to supply lists, catalogues, professional copies and orchestrations of music carrying no tax or license fee.

Censor Believes Censorship Will Not Work

"It is the opinion of my wife, a motion picture censor in Illinois, as well as myself, that it is doubtful if censorship of movies will ever be effective."

This is a declaration made by Albert D. Albert, noted publicist, in the course of an address delivered from a Chautauqua platform at Cedar Point, O., Lake Erie summering place, according to information received by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., from one of its correspondents.

Albert, former newspaper editor, is one of the leading moral uplift workers in Illinois and a member of various organizations striving for higher standards of morality.

Paramount Pep Club to Have Outing

The members of the Paramount Pep Club, the social organization of the employees of the Paramount home office, will hold their second annual outing at Asbury Park, N. J., September 16. A special boat will take the party in the morning to Atlantic Highlands, and from there a special train will be run to Asbury Park. The return trip will be made in the evening by special train.

During the afternoon the final round of the golf tournament, the preliminaries of which were played at Adolph Zukor's farm early this summer, will be staged on one of the local courses. Those who will compete are Adolph Zukor, Eugene Zukor, E. E. Shauer, S. R. Kent, John C. Flinn, A. M. Botsford, Oscar Morgan and Frank V. Chamberlin.

Personal Representative Named for Godsol

James R. Grainger, has been made personal representative of F. J. Godsol in the Sales Department of Goldwyn Distributing Corporation of which Mr. Godsol is president. Last Saturday, Grainger started on a tour which will take him to every important picture center in the country.

For the past four years, Grainger has been General Representative for Marshall Neilan, who is now making pictures in association with Goldwyn.

Correction in Review of "Heart's Haven"

By an oversight a statement properly belonging to the review of Fox's "The New Teacher"—page 789, issue of August 12th—appeared in the criticism of Benjamin B. Hampton's "Heart's Haven." The statement which should be read in connection with "The New Teacher" and not the Hampton-Hodkinson subject is as follows:

"Otto Hoffman, as a hypochondriac, furnishes the other jarring note. The other players are adequate."

In the list of the cast the name of Otto Hoffman is correctly placed in the review of "The New Teacher."

Washington Film Board of Trade Elects Officers

The Film Board of Trade at Washington, D. C., have elected new officers, and an announcement just issued heralds important changes in policy to be made effective as soon as possible.

R. Clinton Robin, Pathe, was unanimously elected president. The other officers elected were, Walter Price, Goldwyn, vice-president; Eugene Wilson, Vitagraph, treasurer; and C. M. Thomas, Strand Film, secretary. It was also voted to continue the services of Charles E. Wagner as corresponding secretary.

Co-operation as espoused by Will Hays and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., will form the basis of the new policies to be enacted by the Washington Board of Trade, it is announced. Harmony between exhibitors and exchanges in this territory is to be sought for primarily, and the first step in this direction is the establishment of a Grievance Committee which will comprise three exchange representatives and three exhibitors. Of the exhibitor members, one is to be appointed by the Virginia Exhibitors League, one by the Maryland Exhibitors League and one by the exhibitors of the District of Columbia. The exchanges will be represented on this committee by Clinton Robin, Pathe; Joseph S. Hebrew, Fox; and C. M. Thomas, of the Strand Film.

Universal N. J. Studio for Auction

The contents of Universal's Coytesville, N. J., studio are to be auctioned off September 14. The auction, to be conducted by J. Mott Allaire, will be held at the studio, on Lemoyne avenue, Coytesville.

The varied assortment of articles to go under the hammer include studio props of all kinds, costumes and some electrical equipment.

The company has made no pictures in the studio for several years.

Cleveland Wage Scale Still Unsettled

No decision has been reached between Cleveland motion picture operators and motion picture exhibitors as to the wage scale for the new season. Committees of operators and exhibitors have met, and while all negotiations have been entirely amicable, they have not reached a satisfactory amount somewhere between the amount now paid the operators and the 20% increase they are asking.

Photographic Process to Have Test Case

A NEW photographic process, having to do with double exposures, will result in a test case being made on the coast. The controversy is between Norman Dawn, who claims to be responsible for the process, and Ferdinand P. Earle and The Rubaiyat, Inc. Dawn claims that infringements have been made on his patents.

Earle makes the contention that many companies used the process before Dawn secured his patents, and that it was in general use previous to that time. He also alleges that John and Douglas Fairbanks have assured him their moral and financial support in the controversy. It is said the process was used in "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood."

F. B. O. Makes Changes in Field Force

Harry M. Berman, General Manager of Distribution of the Film Booking Offices of America, this week returned from a tour throughout the exchanges with several announcements of changes in the personnel of the field force.

Milton Simon, who has been manager of the Exchange in Washington, D. C., has been transferred to the St. Louis office and will act in the capacity of Special Representative.

A new exchange will open at Sioux Falls, at an early date which will serve exhibitors of North and South Dakota. Mr. Sherman Fitch has been appointed Sales Manager. Two new division managers are also announced. J. H. Calvert for the Omaha, Kansas City and Oklahoma territories with headquarters at Omaha, and A. R. Cheery will act as Division Manager with headquarters at Pittsburgh.

New Picture Inspired by Pope's Illness

Jaxon Film Corporation of New York is releasing a motion picture with the attractive title "The Chair of Peter," produced by the San Marco Film Company of Rome. The inspiration for the picture came with the illness of Pope Benedict XV. The company obtained official permission to make films of the Pope's obsequies and the coronation of his successor, and when the picture was completed it received the endorsement and approval of Pius XI.

Blanche Sweet Before Camera After Long Absence

After an absence of almost two years, Blanche Sweet is again playing before a motion picture camera. Her reappearance in the studio took place last week when she played in the opening scene of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," in the role of Alice Pettigill. "Quincy Adams Sawyer" is being made on the coast for Metro under the direction of Clarence C. Badger.

"The Loves of Pharaoh" Is Set for August 28th

PARAMOUNT'S "The Loves of Pharaoh" has been set for general release for August 28th. This subject is presented by the Hamilton Theatrical Corporation, and its all-star cast contains some well-known European screen players, including Emil Jannings, Paul Wegener, and Harry Liedtke. Dagny Servaes, a blonde beauty new to American audiences, is seen in the role of a slave girl. Much of the action of the photoplay revolves around this part. Ernest Lubitsch directed the production.

"The Loves of Pharaoh" is a spectacle into which a dramatic and fervid love story has been injected. The picture is notable for its massive sets, including a reproduction of an ancient Egyptian City for which fifty massive buildings were built. The spectacular battle scenes between the Egyptians and invading Ethiopians are also a feature of the production. Thousands of players appear in these scenes. The historic value of the picture has been widely commended and the lighting effects and handling of the crowds are acknowledged as distinct achievements.

The picture played to big business at the Criterion theatre, New York, for more than three months.

Jack Holt Returns to Coast Studio

Having finished the exterior scenes in New York for his latest Paramount picture, "Making a Man," Jack Holt has returned to California where the remainder of the picture will be filmed at the Lasky studio. Joseph Henabery, the director, Albert Shelby LeVino, who adapted the Peter B. Kyne story, and Richard Johnston, assistant director, went to the Coast with Holt.

The Eastern scenes in this picture include several taken at Atlantic City, in Central park, at the Plaza hotel, on Fifth avenue and on the Bowery.

Hawks Joins Morosco for Production

Howard Hawks and Walter Morosco have formed Hawks-Morosco Productions and have contracted with M. C. Levee, President of United Studios, for studio space and production facilities. The "Border Patrol" is the working title of the new organization's initial vehicle.

Jack Conway will direct and the featured players will be Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix. Other members of the cast so far engaged are J. Farrell MacDonald and Tom Wilson.

American Legion Will Produce Picture

Hanford Mac Nider, national commander of the American Legion, has made the announcement that Thomas H. Ince has been engaged by the Legion to produce a picture temporarily titled, "Blood Bond." It is said the cost will be $200,000.

It is said further there is a likelihood of additional production by the Legion of pictures that will inspire good citizenship and faith in the Government and the people. Mac Nider is a member of the Better Films Committee of the Will Hays organization.

Jed Prouty Is Signed by George Fitzmaurice

Jed Prouty, vaudeville and musical comedy star, has been signed by George Fitzmaurice for a part in the producer's new picture for Paramount, titled "Kick In." This subject features Betty Compson and Bert Lytell. Prouty was on a visit to the coast at the time of his engagement. He is probably best known for his work in "The Velvet Lady," "The Only Girl," "Seeing Things" and "The Pink Lady."

Walter Heirs to Take Matrimonial Leap

Walter Heirs now making personal appearances throughout the east, will be married about Christmas time. The bride to be is Adah McWilliams, of Syracuse, N. Y., formerly of Los Angeles.

Ten Pictures Start F. B. O. Season

TEN pictures have been announced by the Film Booking Office of America as their contribution to the campaign for a prosperous fall season. These pictures include the output of a majority of the stars who are now busy at the R-C Studios in California, and will from the bulk of the F. B. O. early fall product.

The ten will start the newly-named organization on its first season with an impetus which they expect will place it among the leaders of the industry.

In the order of release they are: "In the Name of the Law," "The Kick-Back," "The Snowshoe Trail," "Wreckage," "The Three Cornered Kingdom," "When Loves Comes of Age," "Captain Fly By Night," "Good Men and True," "Thelma," and "The Remittance Woman."

Marilyn Miller May Star with Her Husband on Screen

MARILYN MILLER, the Flo Ziegfeld star, and recently in the limelight as the bride of Jack Pickford, may co-star with her husband for the screen, according to an announcement emanating from the United Artists headquarters in New York. Miss Miller's contract with Ziegfeld, it is understood, terminates in September, and it is not unlikely that arrangements will be effected at that time to introduce Miss Miller as a screen star.

Jack Pickford is at present completing "Garrison's Finish." Arthur Rosson is directing and Elmer Harris supervising.

"The Christian" Titles by Hall Cain

Goldwyn has completed arrangements whereby Sir Hall Caine will write the titles for the screen version of his novel, "The Christian," which Maurice Tourneur is now producing for Goldwyn at that firm's studios in Culver City, Calif.

Sir Hall went to the Isle of Man with Director Tourneur and the leading members of the cast while the exteriors were being shot.

Baum Is Promoted to Equity Vice-Presidency

At a meeting held at the Equity Pictures Corporation last Monday week, Louis Baum, formerly general manager, was promoted to the position of Vice President of his concern. His promotion has been given to Mr. Baum in appreciation of his past services rendered to the company.

William Russell in scenes from "The Crusader," Fox.

In "Moonshine Valley," William Farnum will claim stellar honors in the William Fox production, directed by Herbert Brenon.

Fox Heavy Plunger in Fiction Mart

Announcement Made of Story and Play Material Secured for 1922 Season

WILLIAM FOX has plunged rather heavily in the matter of story material purchased for the season of 1922. Considerable variety is manifest in the line-up of literary and dramatic material which will serve as the basis for current and forthcoming productions. Among the stories and plays purchased are the following, as announced by the Fox Film home office this week:

George Owen Baxter's "Free Range Lanning," which will be adapted for a screen western and very likely serve as a vehicle for one of Fox's cowboy stars.

"Alcatraz," by Max Brand. This story is unique in that it is about a wild horse of the western plains. The exclusive picture rights were bought for this by Mr. Fox for Tom Mix and his horse Tony.

"Shadow of the East," by E. M. Hull, author of "The Sheik." The enormous popularity of "The Sheik" was largely responsible for the purchase by William Fox of "Shadow of the East."

"Truxton King," by George Barr McCutcheon. The novels of George Barr McCutcheon have been maintaining a prominent position among the best sellers.

"The Splendid Outcast," by George Gibbs. George Gibbs has the distinction of being a successful artist and illustrator as well as a writer.

"Mixed Faces," by Roy Norton. For years Roy Norton has traveled all over the world, and his novels are noted for their dashing plots of adventure and love.

"The Fanner," by Kenneth Perkins. A delightful story that was instantly assigned to Tom Mix.

"One Way Trail," by Ridgwell Cullum, described to be fine material for a thrilling western.

"Trooper O'Neil," by George Goodchild, a story of the lands adjoining the Arctic Circle.

"Dr. Rameau," a French novel by George Ohnet, that has attracted attention. The novel will appear on the screen under the title of "My Friend, the Devil." It was directed by Harry Millarde, who is at present in England producing "If Winter Comes."

"A Self-Made Man," by George Horace Lorimer. This author is the editor of the Saturday Evening Post and one of the widest read authors in the United States.

Mr. Fox also has acquired the exclusive motion picture rights to "If Winter Comes," by A. S. M. Hutchinson. Records show that month after month this story has held first place as a best seller.

In the dramatic field Mr. Fox has purchased "The Fast Mail," by Lincoln J. Carter. This play has been one of the most successful melodramas ever produced either in the United States or Great Britain.

"The Shepherd King," a play reputed to have done more to disarm church criticism of the stage than any other factor. This subject was made in Rome, Egypt and Palestine by G. Gordon Edwards.

Mr. Fox also holds the exclusive dramatic rights to "Monte Cristo," which he has made into a special.

Novel to Be Based on Sennett's "Suzanna"

The Macauley Company, publishers in New York, will publish a book version of Mack Sennett's production "Suzanna," and it is planned to place the novel on sale in conjunction with the showing of the picture. The arrangements were recently effected by Mack Sennett and a representative of the Macauley Company. R. E. Drago, a prominent author, will write the book version of the Mabel Normand vehicle. This is one of the few instances where a picture has furnished the theme for a novel.

Universal Competition Is Ended

Exhibitors' Exploitation Suggestions Are Numerous for "Robinson Crusoe"

WHAT is conceded to have been one of the most valuable exhibitors' contests ever arranged by the film producing company has just been brought to a successful close by Universal. It is the Exploitation Contest for "The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe." London's "Fish Patrol" to Be Pictured

Jack Mulhall will be starred in a series of film versions of Jack London's famous sea stories, "Tales of the Fish Patrol."

The series has been under preparation for some time. They will be in two reels.

Selznick Will Open New Production Unit To Operate In New York City

THE SELZNICK PICTURES CORPORATION are about to resume production in the East. A new production unit under the personal direction and supervision of David O. Selznick is about to be established to begin work in New York City in the immediate future.

This unit will be in addition to the one now operating on the Pacific Coast.

The establishment of a second unit is in line with the general policy of expansion which the company is said to be planning for the future.

The first picture to be made in the East under the new arrangement will be the special starring Theda Bara which will mark her return to the screen after an absence of almost two years.

When the final choice of a story is made which will probably be some time during the coming week Mr. Selznick will name the director and start casting. It is thought that the studios of Forty-eighth Street formerly occupied by Selznick in the East will be used for the Bara production.

Live Figures and Paintings Combined in New Subject

Another production similar to "The Enchanted City," in which live figures are combined with paintings, has been completed by Warren A. Newcombe. "The Enchanted City" played at the Rivoli Theatre last February and attracted attention for its novel double exposure effects. The new picture is called "Sea of Dreams." The story is based on Greek and Roman myths. Hazel Lindsley plays the featured role, and her type of beauty is said to blend harmoniously with Mr. Newcombe's paintings. Harry Chandlee is titling the picture.

Kane Appoints Crandall Field Manager

President Arthur S. Kane, announced this week the appointment of Jean J. Crandall, of Washington, as Field Manager of Associated Exhibitors, and Mr. Crandall entered upon his new duties at once.

The new appointee entered pictures as a salesman for the World Film Corporation at Buffalo in 1917. For the last year and a half he was in the securities business in the national capital.

Blackton-Carpentier Film Named "Gypsy Cavalier"

"A Gypsy Cavalier" has been selected as the title for the film now being produced in London by J. Stuart Blackton, with Georges Carpentier and an all-star British cast. The picture is adapted from "My Lady April" by John Overton.

Vignola Starts "Adam and Eva" for Cosmopolitan

Robert G. Vignola starts work this week on his new subject for Cosmopolitan. The picture will be an adaptation of Guy Bolton and George Middleton's stage success, "Adam and Eva." Marion Davies will be starred. The supporting cast will include Tom Lewis, Louella Gear, Leon Gordon, William Norris, T. Roy Barnes, Amy Ongley, William Davidson and Edward Douglas. Mr. Vignola and his company left New York this week for Stamford, Conn., where the initial scenes for "Adam and Eva" will be photographed. The company expects to be on location for about ten days. The interiors will be shot at the Cosmopolitan studios, New York City. The settings will be designed by Joseph Urban and are to be of an elaborate character, it is announced. Mr. Vignola's staff will be headed by D. P. Carle, who has been his assistant for several years.

Fred Greene, Jr., Joins Universal

Fred V. Greene, Jr., one of the best known moving picture exploiters in the industry, has been engaged as exploitation man for the Big "U" E change, Universal's New York distribution center. He has been a Paramount exploitation man for three years, first in Denver and then in New York. Greene has been in the show business almost all his life, having been a writer of vaudeville acts and plays before entering the moving picture field.

Allied to Release Mary Alden Vehicle

Announcement is made by Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation of the immediate release of "A Woman's Woman," with Mary Alden heading an all-star cast. "A Woman's Woman" is a Charles Giblyn production for the Albion Productions, Inc., and was adapted from Mrs. Nalbro Bartley's story of the same title originally appearing in The Saturday Evening Post.

Four scenes in "Grandma's Boy," showing Harold Lloyd in the title role. (Associated Exhibitors.)

Fashion Display with Castle Picture

IRENE CASTLE'S latest Hodkinson picture, "Slim Shoulders," will be given its premiere at the Capitol theatre in New York during the week beginning September 3, with an Irene Castle Fashion Promenade prologue in which thousands of dollars' worth of newly imported gowns from Paris will be featured. Many of the gowns that will be shown in the Fashion Promenade are duplicates of the gowns that Mrs. Castle brought back with her from Paris when she returned four weeks ago. Others are originals from the smartest shops on the Paris boulevards and were brought over last week by the buyers of one of the largest silk manufacturing houses in America.

Cast Chosen for Von Stroheim's New Picture

Erich von Stroheim has completed the selection of a cast for "Merry Go Round," his next Universal-Jewel production. Norman Kerry and Mary Philbin are to have the outstanding parts. Kerry will play the role of Count Hoheneff. Miss Philbin will appear as "Agnes," a waif of the Prater, or pleasure park of Vienna. Wallace Berry and Dale Fuller will be seen as creatures of the Prater. Spottiswoode Aitken, character actor, will impersonate Count Steinberg, Minister of War; Colonel Waverka, late of the Austrian army, will impersonate Emperor Franz Josef; and the role of the Arch Duke Eugene will be played by the Earl of Glandore, Major Maurice Talbot-Crosbie. Several who contributed their best to "Foolish Wives" will again be seen in "Merry Go Round." Among them are Caesar Gravina and Al. Edmundson.

The cast will also include Caesar and Al. Edmundson, both of whom appeared in "Foolish Wives"; Allan Sears, Albert De Conti Cedassamare, George Hackathorne, Fay Holderness and Sidney Bracey.

"Hound of Baskervilles" Secured by F. B. O.

The Film Booking Offices of America will distribute "The Hound of the Baskervilles." This is one of the three Sherlock Holmes detective stories which has been published in novel form, being sufficiently long to occupy an entire book. The film version is a feature in five reels. Eille Norwood plays the role of Holmes, and Rex McDougal plays the juvenile role.

New Casting Director Named at Studio

Ned Hay, formerly an assistant director at Paramount's Long Island studio, has been appointed casting director at the studio. He succeeds Arthur Cozine, who becomes location manager.

Urges Business Methods for Exhibs

Showmanship and Methods of Up-to-Date Merchants Will Win, Says Levy

"MOTION pictures are, more than ever, getting down to a legitimate basis. The industry has grown so rapidly that it hasn't been directed along sane commercial lines. But it now is finding its groove, and as soon as it begins running in that groove, nothing will be able to stop it."

This statement was made by Col. Fred Levy, one of the biggest dry goods men in the South, and one of the most influential motion picture executives below the Mason and Dixon line. Col. Levy, who is president of the Associated First National Pictures, Inc., of Kentucky and Tennessee, will serve next week as a member of First National's rotating committee. For eight years he has made an intensive study of motion picture showmanship. He has studied it from the angle of a practical and successful business man, because he was well established in the clothing business in Louisville when he entered the field of motion pictures. And, as he did in the clothing business, he has made a pronounced success out of his motion picture investments. An insight into this success may be gained by considering the fact that he now is affiliated with the operation of thirty-one motion picture houses, a number of which are in Louisville.

"What is success in the motion picture business to be based on?" Mr. Levy was asked.

"From now on it is going to be gauged more or less by the manner in which exhibitors present their attractions to the public," was the reply. "In bygone days the showman felt that he had a clear field to himself; that his business was exclusively one of exploitation and presentation. It seems that to-day wide-awake merchants are making some showmen 'take a back seat,' because they have learned the art of showmanship, and whether it be a retail or manufacturing business, they measure their success by the measure to which they can dramatize their business and present their offerings to the public in showman-like way. If exhibitors as a whole would wake up and follow the methods of up-to-date merchants and the more progressive exhibitors, then there would be little doubt as to final success."

Col. Levy's first entry in the amusement line was with the B. F. Keith interests in Louisville. Next he became interested in motion pictures. Besides being president of Associated First National of Kentucky and Tennessee, he is president of the Big Feature Rights Corporation and of Educational Films of Kentucky and Tennessee. He also is president of the Strand Amusement Co., operating a chain of theatres in Western Kentucky, and of the Lafayette Amusement Co., operating theatres in Central Kentucky.

"Rejuvenation" Tells Unique Story

What is expected to be one of the most pretentious of the Fall releases of American Releasing Corporation is a production by Lambert Hillyer of Cyrus Chapin's original story, "Rejuvenation," a story which parallels the rejuvenation of a man and a great city following the San Francisco fire of 1906.

It is a San Francisco and Oakland story which is to be photographed in those cities. The producer is Overland Productions which has taken over the plant of the Stewart Motion Picture Co. in Oakland. • Mr. Hillyer is now casting the production and has, to date, definitely engaged Jack Mulhall, Bessie Love, Henry Walthall and Tully Marshall.

From the Fox comedy, "The Eskimo"

Sidney Franklin to Direct Chas. Norris's "Brass"

Sidney Franklin has been engaged by Harry Rapf to direct the forthcoming Warner Bros. attraction titled, "Brass." This subject will be an adaptation of Charles G. Norris's novel of the same title. Mr. Franklin has recently directed a number of Norma Talmadge's vehicles.

Marie Prevost will head the cast of players for "Brass." Monte M. Katterjohn has prepared the screen adaptation.

"Up on the Wings" Made by Camus Company

It was incorrectly stated in the August 26th issue of the News that Luis Lezama of Mexico City had produced "Up on the Wings." Mr. Lezama requests that it be pointed out that his connection with the picture was in the capacity of director; that the picture was produced by the Camus Pictures Corporation, of which German Camus is president; and that the picture was sold last April to the Aywon Film Corporation by M. Mier of New York, agent for the Camus organization. Mr. Lezama is no longer connected with the Camus Company.

Rupert Is Made Coast Studio Executive

W. L. Rupert, for several years an official in Universal's Kansas City exchange, has been made Assistant Business Manager of Universal City, one of the most responsible positions at the big studio plant. He will aid Julius Bernheim in the commercial administration of the studios in the big film city.

Mary Pickford Completes "Tess of Storm Country"

AFTER fourteen weeks of continuous work, Mary Pickford has completed her new version of "Tess of the Storm Country," the Grace Miller White story which constituted one of Miss Pickford's earliest triumphs. Present indications are that the new "Tess of the Storm Country" will be in not more than seven reels. It probably will be ready for United Artists release by October 1st.

Every possible effort has been made to make new "Tess" superior not only to Miss Pickford's earlier version of the story but her other productions as well, declares a statement from the United Artists' home office this week. The director is John S. Robertson, loaned to Miss Pickford for this feature. Charles Rosher, who has handled the camera for practically all Miss Pickford's notable starring vehicles, presided over the photography. In the cast are such players as Lloyd Hughes, Gloria Hope, Forrest Robinson, David Torrence, Jean Hersholt, Danny Hoy and Mme. de Bodamere.

One of the exteriors built for the photoplay consisted of an entire fishing village, said to be one of the most unique settings of its kind ever erected. Only four locations were used, thus establishing a record for Miss Pickford of the smallest number of locations ever used by her.

Clara K. Young May Go to Italy to Play Lead

It was learned that Clara Kimball Young may go to Italy to appear in a photoplay written by Richard Washburn Child, the American novelist, who is at present the United States Ambassador to Italy. "The Hands of Nara," also written by Mr. Child, furnished the story for Miss Young's latest motion-picture. Her present work in California, where she is playing the lead in "Enter Madame" for the screen, forestalls any immediate plans to go abroad. It is likely that she will make one more picture on the Coast before coming to any definite decision in connection with Mr. Child's proposal.

Pola Negri Due in America September 15

POLA NEGRI, Polish star, who is coming to America to appear in Paramount pictures, will sail from Europe on the Majestic September 9 and will arrive in New York the 15th, ready to start work at the Long Island City studio, according to a statement emanating from the Famous Players-Lasky home office in New York.

George Fitzmaurice, who will direct Miss Negri in the production which is to mark her American debut, will arrive from the West Coast with his producing organization at about the same date.

Lewis Stone Is Signed for Paramount Stock Company

Jesse L. Lasky has signed Lewis Stone, well-known leading man, as a permanent member of the Paramount Stock Company under a long-term contract. Mr. Stone will play leads in special productions for Paramount, and his first role will be that of the leading man in William de Mille's next production, "Notoriety," by Clara Beranger. In this picture Mr. Stone will play opposite Bebe Daniels.

Cast for "Enter Madame"

The cast which will be seen in support of Clara Kimball Young in her next Harry Garson production titled, "Enter Madame," will comprise Lionel Belmero, Rosita Marstini, Wedgewood Nowell, Orra Deveraux, Elliott Dexter, Louise Dresser, Arthur Rankin, George Kuwa and Mary Jane Saunderson.

Pathe Announces Short-Subject Releases for Week of September 3rd

ATWO-REEL Western titled "His Own Law" and featuring Leo Maloney heads the Pathe short-subject release schedule for the week of September 3rd. This is one of "The Range Rider Series," which is being distributed by the Pathe organization.

Episode No. 8 of the Ruth Roland serial, "The Timber Queen," is titled "The Smuggler's Cave." This chapter shows the liberation of Ruth from her prison aboard the sinking and burning tramp steamer and her rescue from a watery grave. The locale once more shifts to the timber country where new adventures await the hero and heroine who are brought together again.

"Wet Weather," with Paul Parrott, is the Hal Roach Comedy release. Never were there such rains. The hero and his bride are washed out of bed into the garage. Mother-in-law arrives, is washed out into the street and back again. The hero, trying to finish his sleep in the automobile, is washed away in the machine and over the edge of a cliff—to be saved for more watery adventures, in which the bride and mother-in-law figure with much comic effect.

The Aesops Film Fable released in this schedule is called "Fearless Fido," the moral being, "You can't keep a good man down." The Harold Lloyd release is called "Off the Trolley." This subject presents Snub Pollard as the motorman, and Harold Lloyd and Bebe Daniels as passengers much smitten with each other.

Pathe Review No. 171 shows a picturesque storm in "Photographic Gems." "The Man from Mars" is a bit of speculation in astronomy. "Monkey Shines" literally illustrates that title, while "The Eagle's Nest in Provence" is the subject of the beautiful Pathecolor feature.

Mary Buys "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall"

THE rights to "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" have been sold to Mary Pickford by the Kenma Corporation. The rights to this subject were secured in January of this year by the Kenma organization as a screen vehicle for Madge Kennedy. Since then there have been a number of offers for the purchase of the photoplay rights to the story, including one as high as $80,000, it is stated.

Vice-President Steele of the Kenma Corporation explains that the rights were finally disposed of to Miss Pickford "not so much because of the substantial sum offered for it" as because of the company's determination to make Miss Kennedy's next vehicle after "The Purple Highway," just completed, a modern story. Present production plans would make it impossible for Kenma to produce "Dorothy Vernon" with Madge Kennedy before next summer, declares Mr. Steele.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 752 S. WABASH AVE.

The Wisconsin rights to "More to be Pitied" has been purchased by the Celebrated Players Film Corporation of Milwaukee.

Manager Shirley has returned from New York, where he was in conference with home office officials, greatly enthused over "Trifling Women," which, he declares, will be a record breaking picture both from an artistic and box office standpoint.

The Cosmopolitan National exchange is now located at 738 S. Wabash Avenue, having removed from its former offices at 806 S. Wabash Avenue.

"Captain Kidd," the serial recently acquired by Joe Friedman of Celebrated Players Film Corporation, is a sure fire winner, in the opinion of those who have viewed the first few episodes. Full of action with picturesque scenes, it carries an interesting story throughout.

Jake Hendlesman's new theatre at South Bend, Indiana, is rapidly nearing completion and the popular exhibitor is already arranging for the opening of this twenty-five hundred seat house, which will be one of the finest moving picture theatres in northern Indiana.

Emil Stern, of the Lubliner & Trinz Circuit of Chicago, recently took advantage of a big Paramount ad tie-up. With the opening of the Pageant of Progress Week, Paramount contracted to run an extensive campaign in all the leading Chicago newspapers. Mr. Stern negotiated to run his ad alongside of Famous Players and it proved a genuine business stimulator. The Lubliner & Trinz ad was prepared by Albert Dezel of the Master Advertisers Corporation.

This is the ad copy used to announce the premier of "A Tailor-Made Man," when it opened at the California Theatre, Los Angeles Manager Rozelle, of Metro, who has just returned from Indianapolis, reports that the Hoosier capital is benefiting by the business revival which is helping theatres generally throughout the territory, and that materially increased attendance is evident. While in Indianapolis Mr. Rozelle closed with the Bringler Company for the first four Metro releases of the season, which include, "The Prisoner of Zenda," "Broadway Rose," "House of Nora" and "The Five-Dollar Baby." "The Prisoner of Zenda," which is heralded as one of the great pictures of the year, is scheduled to open at the Roosevelt on completion of the "Blood and Sand" run.

Trustee William F. Zibell will sell certain films, which are the property of the bankrupt Pioneer Film Corporation of Illinois, at his rooms in the Monadnock Block, on September 2nd at 10 A. M., according to a notice sent out by Sidney E. Eastman, Referee in Bankruptcy.

The musician's union has officially notified the representatives of the motion picture theatre owners and managers outside the loop that the union will not accept the 10 per cent wage cut, as proposed by the theatre men. It is understood that negotiations are at a standstill and little likelihood of an agreement before September 15th, when the present wage and working agreement expires, is seen. Many theatre managers are talking of abolishing orchestras altogether and getting along with organ and other instrumental music.

Goldwyn Division Managers J. Koerpel, of Cleveland; W. E. Troug, of Kansas City, and Cecil Maberry, were present at a conference in Chicago this week, which was also attended by J. R. Granger, of Goldwyn's home office. Plans for exploitation and sale of Goldwyn's Fall and Winter product were gone over at the meeting.

Sidney Heyman, of the Orpheum Theatre, Waukegan, was in the city this week booking pictures, and reports a marked improvement in theatre attendance at the Orpheum and other Waukegan houses.

Maurice Hellman has purchased the Illinois and Indiana rights to eight five-reel westerns, featuring Dorothy Wood and Pete Morrison. The first release date for this series, which was acquired from Sanford Productions, will be September 15th. Reelcraft's program for the year is now about lined up and will assure exhibitors a feature a week for fifty-two weeks. Mr. Hellman is now planning to open up offices in Milwaukee, as well as the one he is operating in Indianapolis, and has taken quarters in the Toy Building, where booking will begin on October 1st.

William C. Muir, who, although a Chicagoan, has been connected with the film business in Indianapolis for some time past, was in Chicago this week and it is reported, will become affiliated with a large distributing organization.

The engagement of "Blood and Sand," at the Roosevelt Theatre, started with tremendous business and on opening day the entire house was filled at 11 A. M. and every seat was occupied from then until closing time. Indications are that the run of this Valentino feature will be a record breaker for the Balaban & Katz theatre.

Julius Stern, president of Century Comedy Company and vice-president of Universal Film Company, with David Bader, special press representative for Century Comedy Company, spent a few hours at the Chicago Universal Exchange en route from Universal City to New York. Mr. Bader is responsible for the splendid Baby Peggy Contests being conducted throughout the Pacific Coast States. Never was there greater activity among Century and Universal studios says Mr. Stern.

C. F. Young, formerly connected with Goldwyn's Chicago exchange, is now representing Reelcraft on the north side, Benny Weisenbach having been transferred to the south side territory.

Harry Berman, of the Film Booking Offices of America, was in the city this week and while here announced the appointment of Joseph Klein, who has been division manager for territory east of Chicago, to the managership of the Chicago office, taking the place made vacant by the resignation of C. R. Plough, who will devote his attention to the management of his theatre interests. Mr. Berman is gratified over the forward strides being made by the Film Offices, both in this territory and throughout the country, and commented on the general improvement in business done by motion picture theatres as bearing out his predictions that business would look up this Fall.

Nathan Wolf, manager of the Biltmore Theatre, last week was the victim of bandits, who waited for him in the vestibule of his apartment at 1057 N. Sacramento

This attractive advertising layout used by The Mission Theatre in Los Angeles for "Human Hearts"

Boulevard, and got five hundred dollars from him, which he was bringing home from the theatre.

Louis P. Kramer has resigned as manager of publicity for Universal's Kansas City office to direct the publicity and advertising at the Chicago exchange of the Film Booking Offices of America.

"Kid" Kramer is one of the youngest exploitation men in the country, although he has had a wide and varied experience in the exploitation and newspaper field, and is known from coast to coast, having been special press representative for Leonard Wood when the general was a presidential candidate. He handled Shubert vaudeville at Chicago and the publicity on the Fox specials, "Over the Hill," "The Queen of Sheba," and "The Connecticut Yankee," during their simultaneous day and date run at forty-three outlying theatres, a world's record. Kramer then joined Universal to handle "Foolish Wives" at Chicago and was later assigned to Kansas City.

Harry M. Berman, general manager of F. B. O., believes that with his wide experience and large acquaintance among the exhibitors and newspaper folk in the Chicago territory, Kramer is just what F. B. O. and the exhibitors need in the way of an exploitation director at the Windy City office.

Alhambra
as familiar as your own name—

Wherever you may go about the rank and file of attractions, you are never careless enough to miss the really important ones: a picture like this, for instance, that is standard, as sterling and as well known as the family Bible; a story that took twenty long, laborious years to put into twelve big volumes, but now, thanks to that marvel, the motion picture, has been fused into two hours of never-to-be-forgotten enjoyment.

And so, we take keen pleasure in offering

"MONTE CRISTO"

FAMOUS PLAYERS
If You Believe It, It's So—
A knockout; had the pep and kick to it and pulled big houses for one week. (Middle West.)

Tom Meighan shows to advantage. Many patrons believe it his best work. Attendance very good. (Middle West.)

Fair picture. Business good, considering the heat. (East.)

While Satan Sleeps—
Held up well for second run; weather against business. (East.)

Dramatically wonderful picture but lacks popular appeal. Hot weather hurt attendance. (Middle West.)

The Loves of Pharaoh—
Pulled them in for best business of summer to date. A big surprise for a foreign-made production. Well liked by patrons and press. (East.)

Poor business for a good picture. Too heavy entertainment for the hottest week of the summer. (Middle West.)

Fairly good entertainment and business the same. (West.)

Over the Border—
Went over in fine shape in spite of warm weather. This is an ideal summer offering, well acted. Especially good for cities along U. S.-Canadian border. (East.)

The Beauty Shop—
Only a fair business, due mostly to unusually hot weather. (Middle West.)

The Dictator—
Excellent picture shows Wallace Reid to advantage as hero of South American revolution. Played to good business. (Middle West.)

The Young Diana—
Interesting chiefly as spectacle. Star not a good drawing card here. Business only fair. (East.)

Top of New York—
Fair production with business about as usual. (West.)

The Siren Call—
Fine feature which brought good box office receipts. (West.)

FIRST NATIONAL
The Masquerader—
Great picture and great business at advanced prices. Matinees also were crowded. (Middle West.)

Remarkably well acted feature with story which will appeal to high grade audiences. Did big business. (Middle West.)

Hurricane's Gal—
This one has real kick. Many came back a second time bringing their friends. Good business. (Middle West.)

We did only fairly well with this picture. Can't tell whether it was excessive heat that affected business or whether the picture was not popular. (Middle West.)

Fools First—
A good drawing card. Did a good week's business. (Middle West.)

Seemed to go over very nicely with patrons. Heat affected business. (Middle West.)

Gypsy Blood
Patrons liked this one and it went over good for a week. (Middle West.)

Love's Penalty—
Just an average program picture that recorded box office receipts below usual figures. Not enthusiastically received. (East.)

The Deuce of Spades—
Charley Ray always pleases. Did fair business. (Middle West.)

The Silent Call—
One of the best pictures shown this season. Many strangers in audience. Did excellent business. (Middle West.)

The Half Breed—
Good picture which seemed to please my patrons. (West.)

SELZNICK
Woman of No Importance—
Hot weather failed to hold this one back and it played to a good weekly attendance. (Middle West.)

Evidence—
Good plot picture. Drew well for one week. (Middle West.)

Under Oath—
Excellent picture and good business notwithstanding the heat. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL
The Trap—
Very good picture. Good business in spite of heat. (Middle West.)

Don't Shoot—
Clever picture with mystery and plenty of punch. Holding over for second run on account of big business. (Middle West.)

Fair as to box office value. Seemed to please. (West.)

The Loaded Door—
Mystery play with more mystery than art. Business average summer attendance. (Middle West.)

FOX
A Fool There Was—
A good entertainment and did better business than this house has averaged lately. (East.)

Racing Display Is Great Aid to "My Old Kentucky Home"

El Paso, Texas.—For the small sum of ten dollars Manager J. M. Edgar Hart of the Palace theatre increased his business thirty per cent. by a novel lobby display on "My Old Kentucky Home." It consisted of a beautifully decorated stall, which looked like a white fence enclosure. This was covered with canvas and attractively painted and lettered. In the stall was a live pony, with the regalia of a thoroughbred racer, and alongside stood a young lady in jockey garb. Behind the display and concealed by a large stack of hay was a victrola which played "My Old Kentucky Home."

Broken Window Draws Crowd as "Trouble" Stunt

Rock Island, Ill.—Manager E. R. Cummings of the Fort Armstrong Theatre, wins the prize for a stunt on Jackie Coogan in First National's "Trouble." The window of a prominent retail store was marked to give the illusion of having been broken through. It was exhibited as the broken pane that got Jackie Coogan into "Trouble." Another exploitation angle used by Cummings was a freehand drawing contest, a specification being that the drawings had to be 7x11—in other words the proper size for window displays later on.

Freckled faced boy who was paid for looking like Wesley Barry, driving this ballyhoo to exploit "School Days" at the Arcade theatre, Brookhaven, Miss.

Advance Exploitation on "One Clear Call" Arouses City Officials

MADISON, Wis.—Just before "One Clear Call" came to the Strand Theatre, all the city, county and state officials, leading business men, and the most prominent professional men received through the mail scraps of wrapping paper on which was printed in red ink the figure of a horseman in the regalia of the Ku Klux Klan. The paper bore no other sign except the address. The news of this got on the front pages of the papers with conjectures as to its portent. Then on Saturday night, just before "One Clear Call" opened the next day, a lone horseman, masked, wearing white robes, appeared and rode around the capitol square. He was arousing some alarm, and was taken to the police station. He turned out to be an advertisement for "One Clear Call," news of which was in the Sunday morning papers. Manager A. P. Desormeaux was well pleased with the results of the stunt.

Mint And "The Lotus Eater" Brought Fans To The Midland Theatre

Hutchinson, Kans.—Kansas is not so far from the Mason-Dixon line or prohibition so old that the citizens have forgotten the lure of mint leaves. When Earl Haas, manager of the Midland Theatre played "The Lotus Eater" he sent around small tags to his mailing list with this copy: "In Lotus land they eat leaves like these to win soothing peace and dreamy delights. John Barrymore inspires that in 'The Lotus Eater' coming to the Midland." To each card he mailed out he attached a spray of mint. The leaves, at the time of sending were just off the ice and their odor was a certain incentive to open the package. The cards and flowers were supplied by a local florist who was anxious to advertise his business in this way and all Manager Haas had to pay for this stunt, which increased box-office receipts considerably, was the cost of mailing or sending.

Veiled Figure Silently Exploits "One Arabian Night"

Beatrice, Neb.—Included in the "harem impersonation" connected with exploitation for "One Arabian Night," at the Gilbert theatre, was having the figure on the street giving out cards, completely veiled. The impersonator was grotesquely garbed, and this fact, coupled with the veil, which covered the entire face, instead of from the chin to the eyes, aroused interest in an attempt to determine whether the stroller was male or female. In this case, a glance at the hand, which was ornamented with a sparkler on one of the delicately formed, fingers, gave a clue as to the sex. The veil bore the inscription, "One Arabian Night," advertising the tie-up between the mysterious figure and the attraction at the Gilbert theatre.

Lights and Lobby Display Provide Emergency Exploitation

Wilmington, N. C.—Ernest G. Stellings, manager of the Grand theatre, was forced to act quickly in getting out his publicity on "The Green Temptation," because of a short notice booking. Having only two days' advance notice Manager Stellings at once set to work and had all lights in his lobby dyed a deep green, which were worked on a flasher with white lights, alternating two of green and one of white. He also had painted lobby cards of medium green, using two other shades of green for his lettering.

When "Across the Continent" hit El Paso, Texas, these decorations held forth in the lobby of the Palace theatre.

The lobby of the Hippodrome was decorated as above for "Over the Border," when at that theatre in Waco, Texas.

Everything Is Turned Green for "My Wild Irish Rose"

New York City.—Henderson's Theatre on Surf Avenue, Coney Island, made an extensive exploitation of "My Wild Irish Rose."

The week before the opening a drop was arranged to accommodate the twenty-four sheet. A gilt frame was painted around it and this drop was lowered during the overture and some of the acts of vaudeville which required no special setting.

Three days before the opening the lobby was arranged. A large cut-out made from the twenty-four sheet poster was placed in the front of the house. The lobby was decorated with crepe paper showing Irish lads and colleens doing folk dances. Green bulbs replaced the white ones in the lobby, and palms and other green shrubbery gave a decidedly green appearance to everything. Irish flags were used extensively in the decoration, and as a centerpiece a large harp draped with the Irish flag was used.

On either side of the theatre and going down to the marquee were strings of flags giving the exterior of the theatre a carnival appearance. Streamers of green lights were hung from the top of the theatre to the marquee, and on the opening night large quantities of green fire were burned to attract attention.

"Which Man?" a Slogan Exploiting "The Storm"

NEW YORK, N. Y.—For the exploitation of "The Storm" at the Central theatre, Marc Lachmann, Universal exploiter, put over a tie-up with the Evening Mail which ran for eleven days in that publication. It was called the "Which Man" contest, with $200 in cash offered as awards. The idea is suggested by the story of the heroine of the play and the two extreme types of men played by House Peters and Matt Moore. An art lay-out ran daily with eight column streamers announcing the stunt.

The Mail circulation department extended the use of their carrier wagons for the period of the stunt and posted special 2 sheets regarding "The Storm" on the wagons. Fifty of the wagons were used in a street parade up and down Broadway one night with a band, red torches, etc.

Family Night Proves a Hit for "My Boy"

L A CROSSE, Wis.—F. L. Koppelberger, general manager of the La Crosse Theatre, and his general press agent, Bill Freiss, evolved a plan during the dull season showing splendid returns. It started with the run of "My Boy" and has continued with increasing gains through subsequent attractions.

The idea was nothing more or less than "family night." Special admission of 55 cents at the Rivoli and 28 cents at the Majestic, including war tax, were in order for the entire family, including father, mother and the children. The idea was extensively advertised and the largest family appearing was to be awarded the racoon lined coffee percolator.

On the second week of the plan a gentleman and lady presented themselves at the box office having in tow what Manager Koppelberger declared looked like a Sunday School picnic. It was father, mother and eleven children and they all got in for 55 cents. The theatre lost money on this demonstration of the Rooseveltian anti-"race suicide" demonstration; but the family consented to be photographed for advertising and exploitation purposes.

"Meet Me at 'The Crossroads of New York'" Used as Slogan

Jersey City, N. J.—There was once a popular slogan in Chicago "Meet me at the Fountain," which referred to a certain rotunda in a large department store. The slogan traveled as far as Jersey City, where it became local, referring to a meeting place in a large department store.

So for the run of "The Crossroads of New York," both the Central and Tivoli Theatres tied-up with the department store and launched a teaser campaign. A select mailing list was covered with cards that read "Meet me at the Crossroads of New York." The recipients were asked to watch the newspapers, paving the way for the first big display splurge on the picture.

The management report that this popular slogan, slightly paraphrased, caught the eye and was effective in stimulating business and pass it along for the benefit of those exhibitors in whose towns there is a popular meeting place which might be paraphrased in the same way.

The Question of "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" Serves as Teaser

Houston, Texas.—Manager H. A. Brownlee, of the Capitol theatre, began his campaign on "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" by running teaser ads in the newspapers.

A large cut-out was taken from the twenty-four sheet lithograph and mounted on the marquee, directly over the entrance to the theatre. It showed a picture of the mother with outstretched arms and the title of the picture stood out boldly. This cut-out and title was lighted by a portable spot, which played upon it from across the street.

For a ballyhoo, Manager Brownlee had a young lady dressed as an aged mother, giving out cards reading, "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight? Help Me Find Him."

This stunt started three days before the opening. And after the picture was running, the same old lady stood on the streets and gave away a card reading: "I have found my wandering boy. He is at the Capitol theatre, and he's in the movies—better see him. The picture is great and called, 'Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?'"

Scene in the prologue entitled "The Blacksmith Shop" a part of the program at the Central theatre, New York City, the feature being "Human Hearts."

Two doors leading into the main lobby of the Empress theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla., were separated by an artificial "lighthouse," between the latticed doorways leading to "Rose of the Sea"

Far West Makes Exploitation History on "Smilin' Through"

Spokane, Wash.—A week prior to the opening performance of "Smilin' Through" at the Liberty theatre, Manager Ray A. Grombacher started putting over a campaign on the Talmadge picture that is said to have gone down as exploitation history.

He began with having his pretty ushers dressed in crinoline costumes and exciting the curiosity of regular patrons. Then he put a card with slogan "Let's Go Smilin' Through 1922" in each merchant's window, in telephone booths and at cafe tables, and a small card on each ice cream and cafe menu in the city and later in each hotel mail box.

Followed a teaser campaign in three newspapers, with the result that in spite of heat and a raise in admissions, business was exceedingly gratifying.

Black Cats Cut-Out Bring Good Luck and Business

San Diego, Cal.—For the showing of "At the Sign of the Jack o' Lantern" at the Superba, Manager W. E. Jones arranged a prologue, which included the singing of "Sneakie" by Harry Becker, local vocalist, with a special drop appropriate to the weirdness of the picture. The Superba lobby was hung with lean and lank black cats, cut from black paper, and strips of black and orange crepe paper, together with jack lanterns.

A training quarters in the lobby of the Palace theatre, Muskogee, Okla., for Wallace Reid in "The World's Champion"

Scatter Ads and Newspapers Used for "Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush"

Walkerville, Ont.—Through the use of stunts conducted by Manager Rosenthal of the Walkerville Theatre "Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush" is reported as having enjoyed good business.

Two days before the picture opened, small scatter ads appealing to the Scotch element were published in the newspaper. Typical ones read "Would you enjoy a weak bit of Scotch? Watch this paper." "Have you found the Bonnie Briar Bush?" "You can meet all your friends Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush." "Notice! The MacDonalds, MacDuffs, MacFarlanes, MacLeans, MacDougalls, MacArthurs will all be together next week at the Bonnie Briar Bush."

The day of the opening, teasers were distributed and after the first day of the run, Manager Rosenthal used more scatter ads, including the names of prominent citizens in them, for instance "Mr. Smith liked 'The Bonnie Briar Bush' at the Walkerville Theatre so much last night that before he left he bought ten tickets for tonight in order to treat his office employes. Yes, it must be a good picture."

Exploitation Introduces "The Prisoner of Zenda," to Broadway

New York.—A street stunt on "The Prisoner of Zenda" caused considerable comment. A week prior to the opening Broadwayites were eager to know just what nationality were twenty-eight men in gaudy uniforms who passed them in the street. The men were selected from "extras" who work quite steadily in pictures, and the only visible signs of any advertising in connection with the stunt were the gold letters "Zenda" on the red sash from the shoulder to the waist. The financial district, subways, buses, all the beaches and parks were invaded by the uniformed men and crowds followed wherever they appeared. One afternoon they paraded Broadway on horseback. A teaser ad campaign ran in the dailies during the week of this stunt. The opening night the men were used as "atmosphere" in front of the theatre.

Large Banners Used When Parade Planned Sells Out

Anniston, Ala.—The local Ford dealer had promised Roy Smart, Noble theatre, he would stage a parade to advertise "Across the Continent," but when the time came he had sold every Ford in the place and had nothing to parade with. Anyway he paid for two big banners advertising the picture and hung them across the front of his place. So Mr. Smart forgave him for the parade fiasco.

Mr. Smart started his campaign about two weeks in advance with a series of teaser slides changed every change of program. Four hand lettered cards were placed on soda fountains several days in advance.

For the principal lobby attractor Mr. Smart used one of the revolving continent maps gotten up by the Exploitation Department, and being routed around the Southern Enterprises territory. This was augmented by a banner, two cut-outs, and the regular lithos and photos.

Albany Boy Scout Tieup Brings Good Financial Returns

Albany, N. Y.—The Boy Scouts of Albany were having financial trouble until they co-operated on "Trouble" showing at the Strand Theatre. Part of the exploitation campaign on the picture consisted of a drive by which the Scouts were given a percentage of all tickets they sold for the picture's run.

The Scouts alone netted five hundred dollars for their end, so it's an easy guess whether or not the theatre made a profit.

Lobby and decorations used in the Howard theatre, Atlanta, Ga., for "School Days"

This canvas completely covered the exterior of the Columbia Theatre lobby, when the house was closed for repairs, and was scheduled to re-open with "The Storm."

Selling "The Storm" at Seattle

Seattle Exhibitor "Makes Hay" While His Theatre Undergoes Repairs

Seattle, Wash.—When Manager R. W. Case closed the Columbia theatre for twelve days during August to allow for repairs and decorations, he turned his attention to an exploitation campaign on "The Storm" to reopen. The biggest feature of the campaign was the "outdoor movies." These were given in front of the theatre every evening.

While the interior of the house was being remodeled, the lobby was closed up by a large canvas curtain covered with a twenty-four sheet bearing the words "The Storm Is Coming," and also contained stills and descriptive reading matter regarding the picture.

In the right hand upper corner of this curtain was placed a glass screen, three by four feet in size, and each evening a complete "miniature sidewalk movie show" was given. The program included a news reel, a comedy, several hundred feet of trailer on "The Storm," and other film novelties. The programs with the exception of the trailer, was changed every evening.

The Columbia also tied up with Seattle music house representatives, with the result that each evening several vocalists would sing their latest song hits while the slides were shown on the screen. Music during the pictures was furnished by three musicians from a local music house, who furnished their services in return for an advertisement upon the screen. All vocal and musical numbers were put over through a magnavox, so that they could be heard at a great radius.

All the entertainment and projection was done from behind this large curtain, which completely covered the lobby of the theatre.

Each day photographs were taken of the work inside and slides were made of the photographs.

During the time that the Columbia was closed it still maintained its advertising space in the newspapers. Each day the ads mentioned the "sidewalk movies" and also told of the progress of workmen inside of the house in bulletin form.

Aside from the exploitation around the theatre, Manager Case and his staff tied up with several business firms of the city. Stills from "The Storm" were seen in many shop windows. A huge fashion show linking up with the picture was put across in a large department store window. Motion pictures were taken and projected in the window of another store in the heart of the business district. Banners, showcards, posters, billboards and dodgers all over the city reminded the public that "The Storm Is Coming."

These four words were also emphasized every night on one of the largest electric signs in the city, on top of a twelve-story downtown office building. Public attention was attracted to the sign by a huge spotlight mounted on the building and focused on the sidewalk so that it would shine in the eyes of the pedestrians and autoists on the street.

The day before the reopening, five hundred kites were set free from the top of a downtown newspaper office, and the five hundred children who caught the kites and brought them to the Columbia box office were given free admission to the show. Each kite bore the words, "Fly your kite now; 'The Storm' Is Coming."

The campaign finally ended with a great open house at the theatre the night before the formal opening, with free performances lasting about twenty-five minutes each.

Free "Gas" an Actuality for "The Ruling Passion"

FORT MORGAN, Colo.—Free gasoline became an actual fact when H. L. Hartman manager of the Cover Theatre, played "The Ruling Passion."

For five days before the showing teaser ads were run in the newspapers calling attention to "free gas" at the Cover Theatre on the nights the picture was to be shown. Arrangements were made with a filling station at Fort Morgan to furnish gasoline free to the exhibitor on the strength of the good advertising in it for the oil company.

Amarillo Lobby Transformed Into Border Cabin

Amarillo, Tex.—For "Over the Border" the entire front of the Mission Theatre was covered over in a canvas frame, cut and painted to represent a log cabin with entrance and exit doors. In the centre was painted a realistic chimney, of the old fashion type. And on this chimney was a card carrying the title and the stars in the picture.

The cost of this display was small, yet the effect of snow and ice reported to have been a decided stimulus for business.

House Artist F. C. Gutierrez, of the Palace Theatre, El Paso, Texas, looking over the lobby display he designed for the run of "North of the Rio Grande."

"One Arabian Night" instigated the idea for these decorations for the prologue.

Entrance to the Broadway Theatre, Charlotte, S. C., showing decorations used when "Star Dust," starring Hope Hampton, was presented.

Telling Denver About "My Wild Irish Rose"

Denver, Colo.—The Isis theatre, Denver, was the center of a campaign of exploitation for "My Wild Irish Rose." M. Witmark & Sons, the music publishers, through their district organization, lent effective aid in the general program, which included many novel stunts. Carnations, dyed green, were used as souvenirs; a police quartette appeared at all performances and rendered Irish melodies; the Denver Post entered into the spirit of the thing with a "freckle contest," challenging the city for Mickey Daniels, the speckled kid of "My Wild Irish Rose." The Post also broadcasted "My Wild Irish Rose" in vocal solo, and announced the picture. Not many were allowed to go uninformed that it was "Irish week" at the Isis, and Denver is still whistling, singing, playing, listening in on and talking about "My Wild Irish Rose."

Theatre Uses Wash Line to Advertise "The Great Adventure"

Beatrice, Neb.—The Gilbert theatre reports some successful exploitation out of a wash-line, a few old clothes, a traveling grip and a selected caption, when it ran "The Great Adventure."

The idea of the wash-line in itself is not new, but it was the thought behind the wash-line that was relied upon to excite curiosity. The words on the articles joined together to form a continuous line read: "I Can't Take These Along on the Great Adventure."

An exploitation idea used by the Gilbert Theatre, Beatrice, Nebraska, in advertising "The Great Adventure."

Special Prologue Used for "The Man Unconquerable"

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — It would seem that Sid Grauman, of Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre, goes in for prologues with a vim. Ahead of the feature "The Man Unconquerable," Mr. Grauman staged a prologue entitled "A Night on a South Sea Island." The stage was converted into the interior of a South Sea Island shack, wherein drifted a group of men and two girls to sing and dance, each one announced by a Chinaman, the role being played by Victor Rodman, local actor.

The men who compose the Cosmopolitan Trio, identified with the theatre, sang three numbers, "Gray Days," "Wie House Among the Heather" and "Wake Up, Little Girl," while a light melody was sung by a feminine soprano.

A native Hawaiian girl created a sensation with a primitive dance of the South Sea Islands, clad in beads and a grass skirt, which lured the spectators into the atmosphere of the tropics, when the feature began to unroll.

"Dumb Bell" Stunt Revived Used to Exploit "Trouble"

DES MOINES, IA.—Even if the "dumb bell" stunt is one that has been used before with somewhat different accessories, the manager of the Des Moines Theatre, used it in a street ballyhoo of a laborer carrying two connected tin signs in the shape of a dumbbell. The first read: "Even a dumb bell knows a good picture when he sees one." The second followed up with: "He says it's Jackie Coogan in 'Trouble' at the Des Moines Theatre."

The "dumb bell" lived up to the name by refusing to answer any questions, simply pointing to the sign.

The newspaper display ad: "Don't Go Near the Window at 607 Walnut Street or You'll Run Into 'Trouble,'" attracted attention and directed inquisitive people to a beautiful window display of "Jackie" clothes that had been made into a tie-up for "Trouble," with the Utica Clothing Company.

Lobby Display Makes Success of "Over the Border"

Denison, Tex.—All efforts to put across "Over the Border" at the Rialto were centered on the lobby display. And Manager Collins states that his entire theatre force put their shoulders to the job and thus completed it very quickly at the same time reducing the cost of having it done outside.

The effect was that it "radiated" coolness and made it look inviting to all that passed the theatre.

For snow they used cotton batting, which was made to hang and represent icicles and snow. On the roof of the cabin and around the base was scattered salt to appear like snow.

Perforated Window Cards Made Night Display for "Smilin' Through"

Kearney, Neb.—Manager Swan, of the Empress theatre, solved the problem of night time exploitation when he played "Smilin' Through." He used window cards in his retail merchant tie-ups and had them perforated and boxed with incandescent lights inside. The perforations outlined the illustrations and type in the picture and the light shining from within gave a perfect display at night time without the cost of illuminating the whole windows.

Window display arranged for exploitation of "Smilin' Through," when about to run at the Jones Theatre, Canon City, Colorado.

The way the lobby of the Strand Theatre, Waterloo, Iowa, was decorated for the showing of "The Primitive Lover."

Political Angle for "Our Leading Citizen"

Asheville, N. C.—John B. Carroll of the Imperial Theatre built a lobby that sold the political angle of "Our Leading Citizen."

Politics isn't a dry subject and stump speeches, torchlight parades, political watchwords and the like have as much inherent romance as cowboy life or the South Sea Isles.

Mr. Carroll cashed in on these possibilities. He strung a banner across his lobby reading "We Want Tommy," a fine political slogan modeled after the famous "We Want Teddy" which the Bull Moose used for T. R. in 1912.

He mashed the stanchion rails in front of the box-office to resemble a stump platform, such as are built on the streets for candidates to speak from. A cut-out of Meighan was placed on the platform.

Wilmington Theatre Invites Review and Criticism

Wilmington, Del.—A departure from the essay contest stunt was the cash prize offered by the Queen Theatre, for the best review and criticism of "Our Leading Citizen."

The offer—$25 in cash—was made through the Every Evening, newspaper, which sponsored the contest for the circulation building possibilities. The paper got behind it with abundant free publicity for both "Our Leading Citizen" and the Queen.

Freckled Faced Boys Spread News of "Penrod"

SAN DIEGO, CAL.—All the freckle-faced kids between the ages of 6 and 16, were invited to a free showing of "Penrod," at the opening performance of the Pickwick theatre. The boys had only to present themselves, with a coupon cut from the Evening Sun, with which Manager Dwight Hill had made a tie-up, and if they showed a well-mottled countenance they were admitted without cost. A special show was put on at 8:30 a. m. to accommodate the early gang.

Improvised Oil Wells in Lobby for "Gas, Oil and Water"

Atlanta, Ga.—Contrary to the popular idea that all the oil wells are located in Texas, exploitation for "Gas, Oil and Water" when at the Criterion Theatre, indicated some were right on the main street of Atlanta.

The manager built his own oil wells in front of the lobby and found they attracted sufficient attention to more than pay for the expense, since readers of the signs in connection with the "gushers" led the public to inquire as to whether or not the management really had discovered an oil well and was preparing to finance it. This started gratifying "mouth to mouth" advertising and is reported to have reaped results.

Tie-up with Shaving Cream Exploits "Hail the Woman"

Lansing, Michigan.—Believing that "Hail the Woman" might be regarded as a picture mostly for the feminine sex, Manager Hamer, of the Strand theatre, decided to make a special drive for male interest.

The Barbasol Shaving Cream Company was just putting out a new product and the arrangement was that a supply of small tubes be given, one to every man who attended the photoplay, accompanied by a pamphlet advertising the advantages of the man with a clean face. Advertising for the theatre, of course, included mention that there was a surprise for the men in connection with seeing "Hail the Woman."

Bread and Honey Samples Help with "Wild Honey"

El Paso, Texas.—A novel stunt was used by Manager J. M. Edgar Hart of the Palace theatre in connection with "Wild Honey." A French chef, entirely garbed in white duck, including the chef's cap, bearing a sign on the front, "Palace Theatre," and carrying small wicker baskets over either arm, dispensed honey on small squares of bread.

In the two and one-half days the picture showed the chef gave away nineteen loaves of bread cut into inch squares. The honey and bread were furnished by a local cafe, and the courtesy was returned them by advertising on the screen.

Decorations used for lobby display by the Palace Theatre, Amarillo, Texas, for the run of "One Clear Call."

Wall paper representing builder's blocks of Solomon's time was used to decorate the lobby of the Rialto theatre, San Antonio, Texas, for "The Queen of Sheba"

Directions Painted On Pavements Tells Autoists To Go "Smilin' Through"

Madison, N. J.—Exploitation painted on the sidewalks has been in common use for some time but G. T. Spoffard, of the Liberty Theatre, used this angle when he played "Smilin' Through."

Some of the main roads were being repaired, necessitating detour. For the benefit of motorists unfamiliar with these by-ways Manager Spoffard had the pavements painted "Go 'Smilin' Through' to Morristown." Another sign read: "To Dover" indicating the direction of the intersection with an arrow.

The city council was glad to consent to such a plan which gave the theatre abundant publicity and rendered a useful service.

Distributes Visiting Cards When "Sonny" Plays South

Richmond, Va.—When at the Broadway Theatre, "Sonny" distributed visiting cards, that is in an alias for Richard Barthelmess. A number of boys visited the residential section and left cards at each door reading: "Sorry I missed you. See me at the Broadway, 'SONNY.'"

Retail merchants fell in line with the exploitation of this attraction, the sign along the theatrical section varying from: "Sonny gets his shoes shined here" and "Try a Sonny Sundae" to "Sonny Buys his Lollypops here." By the time the retail merchants had finished their co-operation, "Sonny" was an animate individual with whom the entire city was acquainted.

Tied to Local Politics Picture Reaps Benefits

HUNTSVILLE, Ala.—Manager C. A. Crute shook up the town with his campaign on "Our Leading Citizen." His most important stunt was a tie-up with the local paper by which the leading citizen of Huntsville was selected and presented with a silver loving cup. The loving cup was presented at the theatre during the showing of a subsequent picture and resulted in front page stories and a packed house to see the presentation.

As the first shot in his direct campaign Mr. Crute teased the title over. A 24-sheet board was blanked out and a sign painter lettered on "Vote for Bentley, Our Leading Citizen." A Ford car with banners carrying the same copy was driven about the streets for three days. On opening day the banners were changed to read, "See Thomas Meighan as Dan Bentley in 'Our Leading Citizen,' Lyric Theatre Today."

For the engagement the lobby was turned into a campaign headquarters for a political race. There were desks, a typewriter, an adding machine, filing cabinet, etc., and on the wall several cards with campaign slogans. Also photographs of Washington, Lincoln, Wilson, Harding and Dan Bentley (Thomas Meighan) were draped with American flags and hung around the lobby.

Theatre Ties Up With Elks' Convention

Galveston, Tex.—This island city has a population which rarely changes from one census to another, but suddenly it grew five thousand persons larger because of the convention of the Elks.

Manager Charles Sassee got on the good side of the visitors by displaying a large wall-board shield with the familiar Elk's Head and the greeting: "Welcome B. P. O. E." when he played "The Green Temptation."

Mr. Sassee also built an attractive lobby with a set of one-sheet frames which occupy the direct center. On top of the frame were perched five miniature figures of Betty Compson attached by strings to a large head of Theodore Kosloff suspended from the ceiling. These figures were all cut-outs.

Local Election Helps Advertise "Our Leading Citizen"

Muskogee, Okla.—The season of the year was in Manager Ollie Brownlee's favor since it was election time, so he took advantage of this opportunity to exploit Thomas Meighan as The Leading Citizen and billed the town heavily with signs "Vote for Thomas Meighan Our Leading Citizen at the Palace Theatre."

Several automobiles were rented carrying banners with the title of the picture and also emphasizing the voting angle.

One thousand cards were printed of the candidate style, asking the patrons to vote for Thomas Meighan. These cards were handed out at the theatre and at all polling booths.

The lobby of the theatre was decorated with cut-outs from the twenty-four sheet and everything was in keeping with the campaign headquarters.

Washington Exhibitor Recommends Energetic Exploitation

Washington, D. C.—Sydney Lust, theatre owner and state-right distributor, is a strong believer in energetic exploitation of his theatres. For "Robinson Crusoe" at The Leader Theatre, an employe successfully impersonated the island hermit, a goat being duly provided; also the "A Prince There Was" presentation, featuring Thomas Meighan and tying up with "Eskimo Pie." Mr. Lust recently blocked traffic with his outdoor exploitation of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

"I Am the Law" Exploitation by Burke's Palace Theatre

F T. WORTH, Texas.—Manager Barry Burke arranged for "I Am The Law" a kind of atmospheric prologue for the patrons entering the theatre which certainly gave them the impression that it was much cooler in the theatre than on the hot streets.

The entire foyer and lobby front was boxed in with beaver-board, painted to represent the sides of a log cabin. Then all joints and edges of the logs were painted to the effect that they were covered with snow.

A cutout made by the art department showing cedar trees covered in snow and a scene typical of the arctic regions, stood just in front of the door or entrance...

On the floor salt and artificial snow were scattered, making it even cooler under foot.

Lighthouse Front Makes Exotic Display for "Rose o' the Sea"

Oklahoma City, Okla.—A light house front is original inasmuch as the sense of personal touch makes it different from other displays of similar nature. In that respect the Empress Theatre presented a unique lobby front during its run of "Rose o' the Sea." The two entrances to the theatre were done over in trellis style, permeating the summer idea.

Between these trellises was a painted light house with a burning beacon at the top that guided passersby to the Empress evenings when the show was on. The manager couldn't have made a much more attractive display, but by way of a finishing touch he used a small cut-out of Anita Stewart near the bottom of the light house, while the hand painted announcement of the attraction was done with an eye to synchronizing curves.

At the right of the lobby front a handsome cut-out of the star was a further eye attractor.

Employs Ku Klux Klan Stunt to Exploit "One Clear Call"

Bellingham, Wash.—Manager Al. Finkelstein, of the Liberty theatre, used the Ku Klux Klan rider on the streets when he exploited "One Clear Call," but also took care to have this rider dressed in a garb that did not resemble the costume of any known organization. This added to the mysterious appearance of the rider, and increased the publicity value, which the management reports to have been effective in securing results.

Theatre lobby, the Liberty, Spokane, Wash., dressed for "Nanook of the North"

Appropriate Ballyhoo for "Watch Your Step"

Memphis, Tenn.—Manager H. B. Clark, Majestic Theatre, borrowed an old cut-down Ford for a ballyhoo. A man drove it all over town with a cop aboard as though he were being taken to jail. One sign on the car read, "Next time you will 'Watch Your Step.'" And another sign read, "The Driver was in a Hurry to Reach the Majestic, but Watch Your Step." This ballyhoo was used on the streets several days in advance and served to get the title over.

When the picture opened the same car was placed in the lobby minus a wheel and showing other signs of having been in a wreck. The sign referred to above "The Chauffeur Was in a Hurry, etc." tied it up with the picture and with the ballyhoo. There were also in the lobby a 6-sheet cut-out of racing car and cards with sales copy for the picture.

Loew's Cleveland Houses Show Prologue Interest

Cleveland, Ohio.—For the past few weeks Loew's houses here have given superb demonstrations of prologue interest and artistry. "Good References" was played at the State Theatre, together with a repeat run of Charles Chaplin in "Sunnyside." The curtain rose on a scene representing the exterior of a Parisian cafe that was complete even to the striped awning and the small tables for apertifs, vin rouge and liquers in front. The scene was quickly changed into a tabloid musical revue with comedy elements, synchronizing with the themes of the double bill.

A week later the State Theatre ran "One Clear Call" and the Allen Theatre played "Star Dust." "In a Music Shop" was the prologue used for "One Clear Call," combining the elements of a musical revue, which had met with extreme favor at the hands of the State's patrons, with a classical symphony overture by the orchestra under the direction of Angelo Vitale.

The lobby of the Hippodrome, Ft. Worth, Texas, decorated with real trees, artificial snow and ice for "Over the Border." The ticket office was used as the foundation for the cabin.

Exhibitor's Regular Catch Line Applied to Current Attraction

El Paso, Texas.—During the entire summer, Manager J. M. Edgar Hart, of the Palace theatre, has used a catch line, which, when the attraction, "Over the Border," was playing at his theatre, was applied to his exploitation. The regular line, "Kum Keep Kumfy Kool," is lettered on a large banner and stretched across the front of the lobby during hot weather. For "Over the Border" it was decorated with imitation snow and ice.

Directly in the center of the lobby of the Palace stood a division post, carrying the United States on one side and Canada on the other. In front of the post stood cut-outs of Betty Compson and Tom Moore, the suggestion being taken from a black and white still. The entire box office was enclosed in beaver board painted to represent a log cabin with ice and snow banked and hanging from its corners and crevices. All lobby frames were banked in imitation snow and cotton batting.

The lights of the lobby were dimmed and shaded a pale green, thus shedding an effective light on the wintry scene.

Banana Trees Used to Exploit "The Dictator"

TAMPA, Fla.—As a special lobby attraction for the showing of Wallace Reid in "The Dictator," C. D. Cooley, manager of the Victory theatre, transformed his lobby into a banana grove.

He got about twenty large banana trees, from eight to ten feet tall. The roots and dirt were placed in buckets and kept watered so that the trees held their fresh appearance all through the showing, making a most attractive lobby. The monster green leaves flapping in the breeze caught the attention of passers for a block or more in each direction. Though most of the people in the south are familiar with banana trees, still it was a novelty to see them in the theatre lobby and most everybody stopped and looked them over, and the posters and photos on the picture did the rest of the selling.

Lobby Transformed to Mexican Country for "North of the Rio Grande"

El Paso, Texas.—Manager J. M. Hart conceived the idea of building in the lobby of the Palace theatre a stage effect with scenery and cut-outs of the stars, "North of the Rio Grande." It was not only effective for a front of the house decoration, but served also as a prologue to the picture. In the display could be seen the Rio Grande flowing between the mountains; then in the proper perspective stood Jack Holt and Bebe Daniels in a characteristic pose. In front of the pictures of these two stood a tripod. Hanging on this was an iron pot with fire underneath. Red lights gave the effect of flames.

Painted on the beaver board front were typical scenes of Mexican country, with the cactus and barren country. In the upper right hand corner was a painting of Holt and in the left hand corner a painting of Miss Daniels.

On the tile floor painted in water colors, were the title of the picture and the stars' names.

Strand Theatre of Tampa, Fla., Gets Big Tieup for "Foolish Wives"

Tampa, Fla.—C. D. Cooley, manager of the Strand, made the Sunday edition of the Tampa Tribune look like a special edition exploiting "Foolish Wives."

There was a double page spread, with a heading that read, "'Foolish Wives' vs. 'Wise Wives,'" running clear across the two pages. Then down the center was a six-column house ad on the picture. Surrounding this were the ads of merchants, all with headings in which the wisdom of "Wise Wives" over "Foolish Wives" was played up.

This two-page spread was not all by any means, for scattered all through the paper, in the ads of the regular advertisers, was some reference to the title of the picture, "Foolish Wives."

Display of Domestic Requisites Makes Lobby Homelike

Des Moines, Iowa.—The special eye-catchers which Dan Burgun, manager of the Garden theatre, used for lobby display for "The Song of Life," a domestic drama, included a washing machine, a steam cooker and a dish washer. In addition, the "home" touch was added by the buzz of a vacuum cleaner in front of the box office.

Lobby exploitation for "Over the Border," used by the Palace Theatre, El Paso, Texas.

Inviting decorations transformed the lobby of the Rialto, San Antonio, Texas, into a rose covered bower, with letters spelling "Smilin' Through," and "Norma," flashing on and off

Dancing Doll and Talking Machine Used for Lobby Attraction

Augusta, Ga.—Across the front of the Rialto Theatre lobby the main title was spelled out with large red hearts, one letter being painted in white on the center of each heart. The hearts were held in place on a frame covered with wide mesh chicken wire.

A phonograph was secured for the center of the lobby and on this was the very latest thing in the way of a dancing doll. The doll was about twelve inches high and according to Mr. C. F. Creslein, "shimmied" in a most realistic fashion.

Corralled Ballyhoo Show; Used It For "Smilin' Through"

Augusta, Kan.—Daredevils, ballyhoo artists, performing under the auspices of a shoe polish manufacturing company, were doing their tricks in Augusta when "Smilin' Through" was about to open for a run at the Isis Theatre. Manager Johnson seized the opportunity to proclaim the merits of his picture through her-alds on "Smilin' Through" to the huge crowd that assembled to watch the stunts. A "Smilin' Through" banner was also used, far larger than the banner to advertise the shoe polish and it practically "stole the show." In reciprocation, however, Mr. Johnson repaid the kindness, because his banner read "Use This Shoe Polish and You'll Go 'Smilin' Through' 1922."

Friedl Devises Something For The Kids

Des Moines, Iowa.—E. ploiteer Johnny Friedl injected a picture puzzle gag into a co-operative ad taken by a local clothing house.

He took a close-up still of Thomas Meighan and cut it into small bits. These were scattered about so as to make the face unrecognizable.

Printed in the ad, they made a fairly difficult picture puzzle. Anybody presenting the assembled photo at the store between 9 and 10 a. m. received a free admission to "Our Leading Citizen," playing at the Strand Theatre.

The caption threw the readers off the track. It said:

"Here is a photograph of our leading citizen. Who Is He? As a Lawyer he is a good fisherman. Not much of a politician, yet he will get into Congress. He stands for clean government and is a favorite with everyone not only here in Des Moines but with millions all over this country."

Exploitation Simplicity Puts Over Matrimonial Picture

Stratford, Ont.—When the Allen Theatre landed a double truck for "Is Matrimony a Failure?" they topped the display of co-operative displays with this caption: "Is Matrimony a Failure, Go to the Allen Theatre and Find Out."

This has simplicity and pulling power which the box-office later testified.

Local Ku-Klux-Klan Exploits "One Clear Call"

MARILLO, Tex.—Three weeks in advance of "One Clear Call" at the Fair Theatre, manager C. R. Sullivan began his campaign by covering the town well with paper and also started trailer and slide three weeks in advance. All small paper was hung two weeks in advance and as a result of advance advertising, a tie-up was arranged with the Amarillo Ku-Klux Klan, using a photo of the masked men enlarged to 48 x 72 as a centerpiece. Saturday previous to showing Monday, six men were placed in Ku-Klux-Klan robes on horses and they rode the streets until Wednesday.

Exploitation by the Barrel Used with "My Boy"

ST. JOHN'S, N. B.—This is the line of attack used by the Queen's Theatre, in putting over "My Boy": painted barrels were placed at prominent street intersections and captioned in accordance with Jackie Coogan's vernacular as indicated by the paper on the picture. It read: "We kids will have a barrel of fun at the Queen's Square Theatre. Jackie Coogan."

In one instance it was possible to get the traffic cop to step inside the barrel and direct traffic. While there aren't many cities in which exhibitors may get away with this stunt, yet it may prove worth trying. And in Canada, they managed to do it on a Sunday.

Looks like a window display, but it was a part of the lobby decorations for "The Bachelor Daddy" at the Palace theatre, Ft. Worth, Texas

FIRST NATIONAL'S OUTPUT FOR THIS SEASON

Attractions Selected From Work of Great Stars and Producers Whose Reputations Are Real Asset at the Box Office

By Robert Lieber,

President of Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

PERFORMANCE is more potent than promises and we believe the selection of productions our company will distribute this season is the best evidence that can be given of Associated First National's business plans.

We feel that it is pertinent at this time to emphasize one outstanding fact concerning our forthcoming product, and that is that the pictures offered are a most carefully selected line from great popular stars and producers whose reputations are a real asset at the box office.

First National Attractions are this year culled from many studios and are, in fact, a selection of the finest works of many of the best paid and most brilliant artists of the screen. Therefore, First National takes pride in its offerings, which represent the best that artistic effort and skilled knowledge of actual box office drawing power have combined to give to exhibitors. It is the exhibitor who understands the public. He is constantly in touch with his audience and, unless he deliberately blinds himself to their likes or dislikes, he knows what they want.

Let no man in the industry hesitate about giving the exhibitor full credit for all he does to elevate the tone of motion pictures and at the same time to make them successful. He works hard. He is conscientious. Burdened with responsibility, he discharges every duty that confronts him. And always he asks only for fine pictures that play upon the better emotions of his patrons. Necessarily these pictures must make money for him. Like the banker or any merchant, the exhibitor is in business for money. The exhibitor of today realizes he cannot make money unless he shows the very best he can buy in the way of screen entertainment.

We believe that First National, composed as it is of exhibitors, has a clearer insight into the amusement sentiment of the public than any other organization. First National profits by this insight to the extent of insisting upon and obtaining quality and box office power in its attractions.

Business organizations, like individuals, learn by experience, and First National is no exception to the rule. My associates have determined that we cannot successfully handle several grades of product. The needs of the vast majority of our customers demand that we deal in none but productions which promise to be good enough to play at least a full week in the best theatres. In a word, we are specializing in Big Time attractions.

We recognize a constantly improving public taste and believe that our pictures must be of a quality which will win the approval of discriminating audiences.

We believe business will improve if our industry offers the public the proper inducements in worth while entertainment.

The product we now have scheduled is an absolute guarantee of the biggest season of big pictures in the history of the industry. The reason is that every one of our production sources from which we have obtained the releases that make up this schedule is hard at work trying to exceed what already has been accomplished.

In selecting First National's output for this season we have measured each subject by more rigid standards than ever before. Our experience of five years has convinced us that profits for producer, distributor and exhibitor come only from worthy productions. We propose to subject every production enterprise with which we are associated to more rigid pre-production examination.

While realizing that perfection is almost impossible, we still hope, plan and mean to earnestly strive for finer First National Attractions.

First National policy for the coming year may be summed up by stating that our goal is, "Better pictures at the right price."

Joseph M. Schenck's Plans for His Stars

Noted Producer Tells of Plays for Norma and Constance Talmadge and Buster Keaton

Norma Talmadge

Joseph M. Schenck

Constance Talmadge

Buster Keaton

BEFORE sailing for Europe Joseph M. Schenck, one of the greatest of American producers, whose plays are released through First National, gave out a statement in which he said:

That there will be a scarcity of pictures during the coming season and that in consequence a "feverish haste and excitement" in production may be looked for.

That the motion picture industry now is on a pre-war basis, which means that the "fly-by-night" producer has been eliminated from the industry.

That exhibitors already are clamoring for good pictures and are eager to sign up for future productions with reliable firms.

That big pictures will be the ones in demand during the forthcoming season.

That he is going abroad not only for recreation but for study. He will visit Paris, Berlin, Munich, Nuremberg, Vienna and Algiers. In the latter country he will make studies with the idea of sending Norma Talmadge and her entire company there for the filming of the exteriors for "The Garden of Allah."

That John Emerson and Anita Loos are to write two plays for Constance Talmadge.

That Buster Keaton finishes his twelfth comedy in September and then comes to New York for a vacation, after which he will begin work on a feature comedy, from a story by Keaton and Eddie Cline.

"Mr. J. D. Williams, manager of First National, was recently quoted as saying that the day of the big picture has arrived," said Mr. Schenck. "I agree with him that the big picture is bound to be the one in demand. By this I do not mean the spectacular picture, but one with a big story and a big star. Any star that brings money into the box office is entitled to good money. The condition of overpaying actors has been cured."

"Exhibitors now realize that there will be a great shortage in pictures and they are willing to sign up with reliable firms for future productions. They know that the public insists on having big pictures and that to make money they must supply the demand."

As to future production plans Mr. Schenck said:

"Norma Talmadge, having finished 'The Eternal Flame' and 'The Voice from the Minaret,' will next star in 'Within the Law,' a screen adaptation of Bayard Veiller's play. Following this she will be starred in 'The Garden of Allah.'"

"Constance Talmadge, having finished 'East is West,' will next be starred in an original story by John Emerson and Anita Loos."

Hope Hampton and "The Light in the Dark"

IN "The Light in the Dark," a First National Attraction, Hope Hampton, one of the most winning of stars has a play that is something new for the screen. This production has in it a compelling story, an unusually fine cast, marvelous photography, embracing color work such as never before has been shown on the screen, and superb direction.

Hope Hampton.

Charles Mussett, Edgar Norton and Dore Davidson.

Supporting Miss Hampton are Lon Chaney, E. K. Lincoln, Theresa Maxwell Conover, Dorothy Walters,

The story deals with the finding of a cup, believed to be the Holy Grail. This cup exercises a tremendous influence over the person possessing it. Like the cup that descended to Sir Galahad in Tennyson's poem, it has a "mystic glow." But with the supposed power exercised by the cup, there is brought out in the play the power exercised by a good woman over those with whom she comes in contact.

Hope Hampton's preceding picture, "Star Dust," proved a big box office attraction under the First National banner.

Strongheart

Laurence Trimble

Wonder Dog and Director

"BRAWN OF THE NORTH" is the latest picture, for First National release, in which Strongheart, "the wonder dog of the screen" will be seen. This is said to be a better picture than "The Silent Call,"—and those who have seen the latter know what that means.

The Most Vital Problem Before Exhibitors

Is That of Big Productions of Future—History of Business Supplies Answer to Question

By J. D. Williams,

Manager, Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

PERHAPS the greatest and most vital problem before every exhibitor today is that of the source or sources from which the industry will obtain the big productions of the future. In the history of the business are facts which answer this question of grave and vital import to everyone identified with the screen.

Five years ago, eighty per cent of all releases were produced by units working under about three releasing brands. Centralized production activity was the vogue, and program booking the sales policy. The independent producers of that era were few in number, and the encouragement given to them by distributors and exhibitors was little indeed. The distributor preferred, for obvious reasons, to control production. Certain economies were effected in negative costs by the inescapable machine-like methods of centralized production control. Very few realized to what extent those methods restricted the ambitious, imaginations and abilities of those who actually gave to the releases of that day their box-office value, whether it was in story, star, performance, or direction. The exhibitor found it necessary to support the program booking policy to the exclusion of the worthwhile occasional independent production, because he needed a minimum number of releases virtually guaranteed to him for every change of program, and the distributing organizations controlling production were the only sources from which he could obtain his requirements.

Gradually this order of things changed. It is not necessary to review the evolution step by step. The important feature of it is that as various individuals tested and proved their ability to create entertainment that meant profit to exhibitors and increasing public demand for their efforts they experienced an awakening confidence and the ambition to be independent of the restraints and limitations imposed by the systems of dual unit control in the studios where centralization of picture-making was the policy.

When First National Exhibitors Circuit sought the support of independent producers, almost five years ago, its exhibitor members were greatly worried by the dangerously few individuals available, who had the ability to make a class of picture needed for their big first-run theatres.

Charles Chaplin was the first of the big stars to break away and become an independent producer. The great number who subsequently followed this policy, in pursuit of ambition and freedom from the restrictions of system and method, which hampered and subordinated personalities and abilities, do not need to be named individually. They are the backbone of the industry's production sources today.

Even as these independent units have progressed and built up their standards, and outdistanced previous remarkable accomplishments, they have within themselves created new identities, both stars and directors, who in turn have become the heads of their own production companies, and these newer creative artists are gradually, but surely, developing their genius to the point where it will compare equally with the abilities of those who at one time were their masters.

There are assistant directors, leading men, leading women, and others in the ranks of the players and creators of the independent productions today, who will be the production sources of tomorrow. There is no barrier to their future, excepting that of monopoly, and this can be accomplished only when the theatres of the country submit to centralized control, centralized booking, and thereby bar from their screens all independent production.

As long as there is a free field and adequate support from independent exhibitors, the foothold that the independent producers have today, by virtue of the promising number of them now actively at work, will increase, and as it grows in surety and permanency, it will automatically build up and elevate the entire business. The strength of independence, like the strength of unity, is in numbers, but with the added advantage of no restraints and unlimited possibilities where every real ability exists.

If all of the fiction magazines of the country were suddenly combined, the quality and standard of current literature would be shattered. The same is true of motion pictures.

The future of the industry rests first with the independent producer, and the growth and progress of the business will be in exact proportion to the ability, genius and creative faculties of those who make the pictures.

Here's Chaplin, Better Than Ever

HERE is Charles Chaplin, better than ever. His latest production for First National release will be presented this Fall. This will be a story written and directed by Chaplin himself. As Chaplin is a master at writing and directing, as well as acting in comedy, it is a certainty that his next picture will be all fun, such as only Chaplin is able to create.

Chaplin's last picture, "Pay Day," enjoyed phenomenal success. It played extended runs to capacity houses all over the world. What of his next picture? Reports from the coast are that it is the best he has ever made.

East is East and West is West, and Chaplin is Chaplin. As a star that folks living in the four points of the compass talk about and admire, he holds his own place in the first constellation. His best work has been seen under the First National emblem.

John M. Stahl.

Louis B. Mayer.

Lewis S. Stone.

JOHAN M. STAHL'S latest production, presented by Louis B. Mayer for First National release, is "The Dangerous Age," a drama that is filled with heart interest and thrills. In "The Dangerous Age" Lewis Stone enacts a powerful role as the husband who tired of his ever-attentive wife.

NATIONAL CAMPAIGN WILL ADVERTISE BARTHELMESS

Magazines, Billboards and Papers to Be Employed

HERE is news for exhibitors. It applies to those who have shown Richard Barthelmess pictures, released through First National, as well as those who have not. It means greater box office value for Barthelmess productions, which already have wonderful drawing power.

Inspiration Pictures, Inc., which makes the Barthelmess productions, announces herewith, through its President, Charles H. Duell, Jr., that within a few weeks it will begin a smashing National advertising campaign on Richard Barthelmess, already one of the most popular male stars on the screen.

The campaign opens with a page advertisement in the Saturday Evening Post. This will be devoted to the latest Barthelmess picture, "The Bondboy." Then will follow a poster campaign to take in one-fourth of the billboards in the United States. Following that will come a magazine and newspaper advertising campaign.

Richard Barthelmess, on the screen, typifies the average American youth of today. The parts he plays may be those of a returned soldier, tugging at the reins of civil life, a simple farm boy seeking to "make good," a clerk trying to work himself to a higher position by honest effort, a wealthy youth mingling with wage earners and falling in love with a plain but pretty and pure-hearted girl—in all of them he stands out as Young America today. And because he feels, looks and acts the part, he is beloved by young folks and old folks.

Looking at motion pictures just as a business man would view any other big industry, Mr. Duell considers that he has a star very much in demand, and so he is going to "sell" Barthelmess to the American public for the exhibitor just as a big flour, automobile or shoe manufacturer would "sell" his product to the public through National advertising.

Barthelmess today is a tremendous box office attraction. Such pictures as "Tol'able David," "The Seventh Day" and "Sonny," released through First National, have made big money for exhibitors. His next picture, "The Bondboy," will make even more money. It is the biggest Barthelmess success.

With the showing of "The Bondboy" will begin the National advertising campaign. One of the officials of Inspiration Pictures in discussing the campaign, said:

"Our advice to exhibitors—and First National will bear us out in it—is to book Barthelmess productions early. Bookings on 'Tol'able David,' 'The Seventh Day' and 'Sonny' are heavy. Already there is a big demand for 'The Bondboy.' When the National advertising campaign begins this demand will have increased tenfold. 'The Bondboy' is one picture in a thousand. It is Barthelmess at his best."

Directed by Henry King, "The Bondboy," like "Tol'able David," shows Barthelmess as a country youth. In it he is called upon to do the strongest and most varied acting of his screen career.

POWERFUL PICTURES WILL DOMINATE THE INDUSTRY

By B. P. Schulberg of Katherine MacDonald Co.

PRESENTLY, the strong picture will be the rule in this business rather than the exception.

The trend is already apparent and the soundness of "quality" productions is attested by the clamor the public is making over pictures into which thought, talent and honest effort have been poured.

Dementia, in its various phases, is responding to treatment.

The wild orgy of spending for spending's sake in the making of pictures is receding to the vanishing point, and the men who are producing pictures at the present time are doing it with a degree of financial sagacity hitherto unknown in our business. We shall provide lavishness where necessary, at all times, and splendor of set and scene, when called for; but waste will not be countenanced. In this connection I am speaking for the Katherine MacDonald productions, primarily, but I believe I also voice the intention of the majority of responsible producers.

That phase of picture thought involving a fixed belief on the part of producers that they could make pictures of indifferent quality and be certain the exhibitors would take them also has been cured to a large extent. The knowledge has finally percolated through the clouds of self-satisfaction that the public will not pay real money to see pointless pictures, no matter how well known the lead may be.

In addition to a commanding personality at the top of the cast, there must be in the cast real actors and actresses, each capable and known for his or her artistic talent.

We've got to have directors who have proven their ability and whose names are a guarantee, both to exhibitors and to the public, of honest picture values.

Paper-thin plots will not be tolerated. Stories have got to be stories in every sense of the word, with dramatic power and convincing scenic backgrounds.

We are closer to this ideal today than at any time in the history of the picture business, and tomorrow we will be even closer. We are certain to attain our goal if we keep on striving—and we must keep striving or give up entirely.

Katherine MacDonald productions are good instances of strong pictures well made. Take "Heroes and Husbands," a recent release, for instance. Here you have, first, a star who is well known, who is famous for her beauty as well as her power as an actress. She is supported by such actors as Nigel Barrie, Charles Clary, Mona Kingsley. The picture was directed by Chet Withey and the story written by Charles A. Logue. Next, there is "The Woman Conquers," directed by Tom Forman.

Then consider her latest First National release, "White Shoulders." Directed by Tom Forman, this is from the Saturday Evening Post story by George Kibbe Turner. Quality and sanity have come into the picture business. Bunk and insanity have gone out of it.

What Makes Box-Office Attractions Today?

Richard A. Rowland, for years president of Metro Pictures Corporation and senior member of the firm of Rowland & Clarke, of Pittsburg, with extensive holdings in Western Pennsylvania, recently joined the executive forces of Associated First National Pictures, Inc. He is associated in the administration of the company's activities with President Lieber, J. D. Williams and Harry O. Schwalbe. Mr. Rowland has earned a reputation for honest methods and square dealing in every branch of the industry in which he has served.

By R. A. Rowland

WHAT is a box-office attraction? First, a good story. From there on the responsibility rests with the star, the director, the title. If this combination hits around 80 per cent. the picture is invariably a success. But to strike the 80 per cent. there must be a certain amount of legitimate exploitation in order to call to the attention of the public the quality offered. From that point on the success of the picture is in the public's hands and mouth-to-mouth advertising must do the rest.

A picture based on a novel that has had a big sale is always a box office attraction. If the novel has a great sale and limited picture possibilities its success beyond the title lies in its treatment.

But it always is the story that counts. Your novel that has had a big sale would be impossible but for its story. Your successful spoken play would be impossible as such or as a picture but for the big thought or lesson it carries. Your original scenario must have a big story. And then the star, the director, the producer must do the rest to make it a box office attraction.

We now are in the epoch of the Big Time Attraction. Our pictures today, to be box office attractions, must have Big Time, just as vaudeville has it. We believe First National has Big Time Attractions for the forthcoming season. We believe First National is going to offer the best box office attractions of any company. We say this with all due respect to our competitors.

Assuredly the exhibitor who plays First National Attractions may safely anticipate a wonderful season for he will get Big Time Box Office Attractions.

Tully Tells of "Omar the Tentmaker" : :

By Richard Walton Tully

IF questioned off-hand as to what I hope to accomplish in my film version of "Omar, the Tentmaker," a First National Attraction, I should unhesitatingly reply,—to provide film-fans with a clean, 100 per cent entertainment. That always has been, and always will be, my endeavor in screen and stage productions. Seldom, perhaps, do any of us exactly hit the 100 mark, but it's a fine thing to aim steadily at the bullseye.

However, after the wonderful reception that has been accorded my first film, "The Masquerader," another First National attraction starring Guy Bates Post, I feel much more certain of my ground and the way the public will react to "Omar," in which Mr. Post will of course enact the bibulous, lovable poet whom he vivified so wonderfully on the stage for four consecutive years.

Of course at the outset, our biggest problem was to reproduce in Los Angeles the Persia of a thousand years ago when Omar Khayyam sang his immortal songs and lived his exciting life. Personally I had studied deeply in the lore of ancient Persia, and three years ago visited Persia for several months,—studying the people, their manners and dress, their architecture and their modes of living,—all of which, especially in the remote sections, have altered scarcely at all through the centuries. Then I was doubly fortunate in securing the advisory services of Francois Aga, the artist and Persian expert, as well as those of my permanent art-director, Wilfred Buckland, who seems to have at his finger-tips a conception of the proper setting and peopling of any scene anywhere on the globe and at any time in the world's history.

Full credit for painstaking effort and splendid ability in the making of "Omar the Tentmaker" should be given to James Young, the director, and to Georges Benoit, the cameraman.

This is all only a brief idea of what we have tried to do in filming "Omar the Tentmaker." I am not given much to prophecy, but I do unqualifiedly venture to predict that Mr. Post's recreation of the life of Omar Khayyam, will be universally acknowledged as the most perfect and enjoyable characterization the screen has ever seen.

INCE EIGHT SHOW WORK OF SCREEN MASTER

Producer Has Put Every Ounce of Energy Into Them

IN eight special productions to be released as First National attractions during the 1922-23 season, Thomas H. Ince has done some of the best work of his remarkable career.

These pictures, listed elsewhere on this page, have a box office value that is apparent at a glance to any experienced showman. First, there is the name of Ince. Second, there is the story. Third, there is the cast, containing names popularly familiar to every motion picture patron.

Thomas H. Ince, termed by those who know him as "the dramatic dynamo of the screen," has put every ounce of his energy into these productions. The result is that they are filled with dramatic "punch." And the "Ince punch," indefinable, inimitable and elusive, yet definite, forceful and apparent, is that something which puts an unexplainable force into the pictures he creates. What Belasco is to the spoken drama Ince is to the screen. His was one of the first names to be identified with good and popular screen entertainment.

The studios of Thomas H. Ince at Culver City, Cal., are the most practical and the handsomest in the world. The Ince organization embodies a personnel that has long been identified with the noted producer. Every department of the great studios works under the direct supervision of Mr. Ince, who sets a pace for his staff. Every worth-while story passes across his desk for selection or rejection.

In business life a man's record is the only satisfactory manner of sizing up his worth. Mr. Ince has always produced pictures that made money for the exhibitor. "Mother o' Mine," "Lying Lips," and "Hail the Woman" were big box office attractions. The "Ince 8," to be released by First National, will be greater attractions.

HERE ARE THE INCE 8

HERE are the eight special productions which Thomas H. Ince will release through First National during the 1922-23 season.

SKIN DEEP. A fast action drama of New York's East side. In it are Milton Sills, Florence Vidor and Marcia Manon.

THE HOTTENTOT. Adaptation of William Collier's stage success. Douglas McLean and Madge Bellamy.

BELL BOY 13. Douglas McLean.

JIM. John Bowers, Milton Sills, Marguerite De La Motte, Francelia Billington.

THE SUNSHINE TRAIL. Douglas McLean.

SOMEONE TO LOVE. Madge Bellamy, Cullen Landis.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF HATE. Frank Keenan, Lloyd Hughes, Marguerite De La Motte.

A MAN OF ACTION. Douglas McLean.

Thomas H. Ince

"Skin Deep" is a fast action drama with an unusual plot. "The Hottentot" is a screenful of love and laughter. "Jim" is a tremendous story of the conflict between a woman's ambition and a man's love. "The Brotherhood of Hate" and "A Man of Action" are high tension dramas, and "Someone to Love" has been pronounced one of the most remarkable dramas ever produced. Another dramatic triumph is "Sunshine Trail," while "Bell Boy 13" is filled with laughs and thrills.

The "Ince Punch" is evident in every foot of these First National attractions. They are real entertainment because Thomas H. Ince took all the time that was necessary to make them right and had all the resources that were necessary to produce them as he wanted them produced.

"SUZANNA" IS THE GOODS, WIRES MACK SENNETT

Inside Information on Mabel Normand's New Picture

WHEN Mack Sennett starts out to do a thing he does it right. He made and is making a continued success of his comedies. And now, as a producer of melodrama, he has put everything into "Suzanna," a First National attraction, in which Mabel Normand is the star, and he believes he has scored a pronounced success.

Mr. Sennett is of a retiring disposition. He rarely makes a statement. Recently when he visited New York on business an effort was made to interview him, but he refused to be seen. But he broke his usual silence when he returned to the coast and saw a working print of "Suzanna." He sent to his New York representative, E. M. Asher, the statement printed elsewhere on this page. And Mr. Asher supplemented that statement with the following:

"In the first place, work started on 'Suzanna' about the time I left Los Angeles, which was the early part of October, 1921. The production has just been completed but is not finally out, so you can see that this picture has been in work for ten months. In a recent letter from our auditor he advised me that the production would cost over $400,000. Mr. Sennett states that this picture is by far the biggest thing he has ever done and is a bigger, greater and more appealing production than 'Mickey' or 'Molly-O.'

"'Suzanna' is one of those pictures that is different. It is a romantic story of early California and contains a little of everything which goes to make up entertainment value, such as comedy, romance, thrills."

So much for what Mr. Asher says. An out-of-the-industry evidence of the power of "Suzanna" is the fact that the Macaulay Co., one of the biggest publishing concerns in the country, has retained a noted writer to novelize the picture play. This is the first time that a prominent writer has made a novel of a big screen play. In the past pictures have been adapted from novels and plays.

"Suzanna," directed by F. Richard Jones, is a romantic story of picturesque old Mexico. Supporting Mabel Normand in the production are George Nichols, Evelyn Sherman, Walter McGrail, Eric Mayne, Winifred Bryson, Carl Stockdale, Lon Pott, Leon Barry and George Cooper.

One of the biggest and most thorough exploitation campaigns ever launched with a motion picture has been laid out for "Suzanna." Tieups for a song, phonograph record, albums, silks, hats, shoes, a prepared food and a brand of candy, all covering the United States and Canada, have been arranged. Two of the firms in the tieup have ordered ten million reproductions of pictures from "Suzanna" to be inserted in their cartons.

Mack Sennett has always been a producer of integrity, and when he writes that "Suzanna" is "the goods," he means it and is giving inside information to exhibitors.

Mack Sennett

MACK SENNETT SAYS:

"SUZANNA is the finest romantic comedy drama I have ever witnessed. It has romance, heart interest and comedy, backed up by marvelous production. In fact, it is a symphony. We can safely promise the world IT IS THE GOODS." —Telegram from Mack Sennett to E. M. Asher, his New York representative.

"The Isle of Doubt"

Syracuse Motion Picture Co.—5,483 Feet
(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

THE Syracuse Motion Picture Company is to be congratulated upon its first effort in the field of film production. This is a picture much above the average of those released by some of the veteran producers. It possesses a cast of the first water. Such names as George W. Fawcett, Wyndham Standing, Warner Richmond and Dorothy Mackaill mean something when displayed in advertising. The picture combines the appeal of a society drama with the lure and adventure of the South Sea isles.

The plot has been worked out on the screen before, but in the present instance there are several original twists and situations injected. The direction of Hamilton Smith is praiseworthy. The photography is uniformly good throughout. We wish that it has been possible to let George W. Fawcett "live" a little longer into the picture. His "death" in the second reel removes one of the picture's biggest assets. Miss Mackaill is inclined to be too theatrical in her work. Warner Richmond does well in the heavy role. Mr. Standing is an ideal type for the adventure-loving bachelor.

The scene on the island where the villain, seeking to kill the hero, pursues him through the woods and shoots him—with blank cartridges—is well worked out and one of the big moments of the picture. There are a number of other dramatic situations in the picture, notably the shanghaiing of the villain, the husband's discovery of the plot to get him to divorce his wife and the attempt of the girl and the villain to steal food. The dancing of Veronica at the Hawaiian ball is real stuff.

The Cast

Eleanor Warbuton.....Dorothy Mackaill
Mrs. Warbuton.....Marie R. Burke
Gerry Patten.....Warner Richmond
Burton J. Warbuton.....George W. Fawcett
Dean Deland.....Wyndham Standing
Bill Hardy.....Arthur Dewey
Adapted from the novel by Derek Bram. Directed by Hamilton Smith. Distributed by Playgoers Pictures, Inc., through Pathe.

The Story—Dean Deland, adventure-loving bachelor, falls in love with Eleanor, a daughter of a socially ambitious family. Eleanor, however, is fascinated by a worthless chap. Assisted by the mother, the two conspire to have Deland marry Eleanor and then make his life miserable so that he will be glad to free himself for a financial consideration. The marriage takes place. One evening Deland overhears his wife and Patten talking over their scheme. Deland ships the mother to Palm Beach and takes his wife and Patten aboard ship which starts for a small tropical island. Here the real character of the two men is displayed in a series of thrilling situations. Deland wins the love of his wife.

Classification—A romantic drama of romance and adventure staged in a society atmosphere and a tropical isle.

Production Highlights—The work of Wyndham Standing, George W. Fawcett and Warner Richmond—film play veterans all. The Hawaiian ball and the dancing of Veronica. Some attractive interiors. The reading of the will. The Exploitation Angles—This picture gives exhibitors opportunity to use the popular south sea island atmosphere in the lobby and as a prologue. The cast is a good one and can be played up in advertising. This one has an especial appeal for exhibitors in central New York state, also, because of the fact that it was made by the Syracuse Motion Picture Company. This fact should be emphasized by houses in that district presenting the film.

Drawing Power—Suitable for second class downtown theatres, towns and neighborhood houses.

"Barb-Wire"

Arrow S. R.—5,000 feet

(Reviewed by Eugene Carlton)

THE title of "Barb-Wire" has virtually nothing to do with the theme of the production, which is general more than specific. It is just a rambling "wild west" story with enough two-fisted heroes and villains to receive the sanction of the ordinary western fan. Aside from the first and last parts of the story, there is little reason why any title befitting a western picture should not be tacked on this production.

However, despite a mediocre vehicle, the work of Jack Hoxie is good, as his acting alone saves the production from dropping into lower ranks. A quarrel over the fencing of a ranch is nothing unheard of in a western. Neither is the triumph of a hero over a villainous cattle king. However, when the latter becomes entangled in the barb-wire with which he had threatened to hang the young hero, and, during the course of the "death struggle finale," is hurled from a cliff, then the unusual enters and provides virtually the only "punch" of the picture. For a defendant in a trial to dash on horseback through the window of the court room would be a real thriller, if properly executed, but in this case the incident has been slightly "booted," and lacks the smack of reality. Summed up as a whole, however, it can charitably be said that the picture "gets by."

The Cast

Jack Harding.....Jack Hoxie
Joan Lorne.....Jean Porter
Martha Harding.....Olah Norman
Bart Moseby.....Wm. Lester
Nick Lazarre.....Joe McDermott
Bob Lorne.....Jim Welsh
Produced by Anthony J. Xydias. From the story by William Lester and Marin Sais. Directed by Frank Grandon. Photographed by William Nobles.

The Story—Young rancher starts to fence in his claim of government land and is warned not to do so by villainous cattle king. A "band man" conspires with the cattle king to "get" the young rancher. Latter hides in room of girl he loves to overhear cattle king's conversation, while the "band man" takes young rancher's hat and gun, committing a crime and leaving the hat and gun as evidence. Believing her son is doomed, mother of young rancher holds up the court at point of revolver and son leaps through window on back of horse which has been brought in courtroom as evidence. In a death battle on cliff with the young rancher, cattle king loses life.

Classification—Purely a western drama, with melodramatic touches and a love story mixed in.

Production Highlights—Fight on cliff; the saving of the life of the young rancher in street fight.

Exploitation Angles—Jack Hoxie's name and reputation as a western star cannot be over played.

"Wildness of Youth"

Abrahamson—State Rights—Seven Reels

(Reviewed by Lillian Gale)

THIS is what might be described as up-to-date melodrama. Although there is a suspicion of a theme, which would illustrate that youth will have its fling. It indicates that youth seldom takes advantage of mature advice and that those in the adolescent state often ignore living examples of elders who are "paying the piper" for indiscretions of their younger days.

There is a splendid cast. There are players whose reputations are founded upon work that brought them recognition, all of whom might have been able to deliver a better performance had their parts not called for unnatural situations. Mary Anderson deserves particularly favorable comment for work well done. Hers was the difficult role of an over-indulged daughter of a rich man. Her close ups will likely add to her list of admirers.

Joe Striker, a juvenile who is often seen these days, handles a thankless sort of role with commendable precision, while the old favorites, Harry Morey, Virginia Pearson, Thurston Hall and Julia Swayne Gordon do their share in their respective roles.

The late "Bobby" Connelly is particularly appealing as a deserted child and on the whole, those who follow melodramatic subjects and enjoy rapid happenings, pathos uninterrupted by comedy incidents and happy endings, will likely look with favor on "The Wildness of Youth."

The Cast

Louise Wesley.....Virginia Pearson
Jule Grayton.....Mary Anderson
James Surbrun.....Harry T. Morey
Andrew Kane.....Joseph Striker
Edward Grayton.....Thurston Hall
Mrs. Martha Kane.....Julia Swayne Gordon
Teddy Wesley....."Bobby" Connelly
Dr. Carlyle Preston.....Harry Southard
Senora Gonzalez.....Madeline La Varre
Roger Moore.....George J. Williams

Story and scenario by Ivan Abrahamson and Don Dundas. Direction by Ivan Abrahamson. Photography, Marcel Le Pickard.

The Story—Andrew, spoiled son of Martha Kane, whose husband dissipated her fortune and then disappeared, is in love with Jule, wilful daughter of a philanthropist and founder of an institution for homeless children. Louise Wesley, who would seem to be hiding her past, is superintendent of the home and admired by the rich Edward Grayson. He appeals to Louise to attempt to correct the impulses of his daughter.

A stock broker, with artificial veneer, is Andrew's rival, also old enough to be Jule's father. In his attempt to win he gives a week end party, inviting both the youngsters, but with the purpose of convincing Jule that he is preferable to the youthful Andrew. Nearby is a hut where lives an old man and his grandson. Incident brings the boy to ask aid of Andrew and when the child is blinded by a flash of powder intended for Andrew, it is necessary to find money to pay for an operation on the child's eyes. Through this many evils are righted and wrongs uncovered, with the outcome that the bad man meets an untimely end, leaving youth and love to conquer all other obstacles.

Classification—Society melodrama.

Production Highlights—Explosion of powder which blinds little boy. Courtroom scene when mother of child arrives just in time to save innocent boy accused of murder.

Exploitation Angles—Popularity of players.

"Rich Men's Wives"

Gasnier-Preferred-Lichtman—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A GOOD box-office title likely to attract the eye everywhere, a couple of gifted troupers in House Peters and Claire Windsor, and a society background charged with real smart atmosphere—these will be sufficient to make this picture popular wherever shown. They will probably compensate for a obvious story which is trite and often stupid and which never gets down to the core of its subject matter—the "paying the piper among the wealthy disciples of jazz." It is only suggested, and so much incident and background are planted in the introductory reels that the plot seems to be an arbitrary side issue.

"The little child shall lead them" formula brings forth the happy conclusion and after the parents have learned their much needed object lessons the reconciliation naturally follows. Many patrons will be provoked over the husband who glowers continually before his guests—who has little sense of humor and who sends his wife away because he has refused to believe that she is the innocent victim of a flirtatious idler. He keeps the boy. The interlude at this point feature the remorseful husband and the pathetic wife—the former given to gazing at her portrait, the latter, bearing her cross in scenes of poignant pathos.

Naturally there is only one solution—the child must be taken ill. And this climax arrives when the husband and father, stepping out of the character by giving a dance for the parasites who disrupted his home, and allowing an "excitement eater" to introduce his boy as cupid in a bizarre scene when the dance proved boresome to the guests. The father catering to such an idea is a false touch, but the moment offers some heroics since the wife overcomes her modesty and steps into the room shouting defiance to all. She picks up the youngster and saves him from serious illness. The guests are sent away and the husband pleads forgiveness and receives it.

It is a woman's picture—the mother love spark being developed well enough to stimulate the feminine sex. Miss Windsor is occasionally too emotional in the hands of Gasnier, though she will surprise many with her technique. The society atmosphere is great. And the touching bit of the child kissing the mother through the glass door is a true heart-wringer.

The Cast

John Masters.....House Peters
Gay Davenport.....Claire Windsor
Mrs. Lindley-Blair.....Rosemary Theby
Juan Camillo.....Gaston Glass
Mrs. Davenport.....Myrtle Stedman
Jackie.....Baby Richard Headrick
Estelle Davenport.....Mildred June
Mr. Davenport.....Charles Clary
Maid.....Carol Holloway Nurse.....Martha Mattox
Reggie.....William Austin
By Frank Dazey and Agnes Christine Johnston.
Directed by Gasnier. Distributed by Al. Lichtman. Corp.

The Story—Portrays excitement hunters among the wealthy idlers. Wife is pursued by professional lover and her husband misjudges her. She is cast from home and the child taken away from her. A time comes when she proves her true character and saves the child from serious illness. Reconciliation follows.

Classification—Story of marital infidelity and the breaking up of a home with the family reunited through a little child. Some effective scenes.

Production Highlights—The exceptional background, showing many lavish sets. The society atmosphere. The creditable acting of Claire Windsor and House Peters. The ball-room scene. The incident when child kisses mother through the glass door.

Exploitation Angles—Properly exploited for its idea of the craving for excitement among the idle rich and featuring House Peters, Claire Windsor and Gaston Glass among the cast, and playing up the box-office value of the title—will certainly put this one over. Some artistic dances

"Look Out Below" is the name of the Educational-Mermaid picture, from which the above is an extract.

"The Hidden Woman"

American Releasing—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Stuart Gibson)

THIS one, taken as a whole, isn't so much. It has redeeming features, not the least of which is a series of gorgeous shots in the Adirondacks—at least the subtitles refer to it as the Adirondacks—which do much to advertise what some brilliant chap has nicknamed "the great outdoors." As to the story, it is merely a variation of a theme long ago hoary with honest toil—the regeneration of a "poor little butterfly" through her regeneration of somebody else and her communion with the above-mentioned section of the world. Evelyn Nesbit is the "poor little butterfly."

But observing the film through the eye of the average patron it will pass. It is like a good many others; but, so many argue, since the others paid, this one may also pay. There is a humdinger of a fight in it, and the aforesaid lovely outdoor settings, a small boy to act as hero at the psychological moment, and the really great fundamental theme of a woman's struggle with her soul—ever old, yet ever new.

There isn't any acting to speak of, that of Murdock MacQuarrie as the elderly reformer who finds that in his zest for reforming others he has let his own kin go to the dogs—a situation first introduced years ago on the screen by D. W. G., being the only part worth mentioning. Whether the situation which arises when the true love of the lady sends her away to a camp wilderness and then remains in the background throughout her series of dangerous crises with men and things is a likely one, may be overlooked.

The Cast

Ann Wesley.....Evelyn Nesbit
Bart Andrews.....Crawford Kent
"Iron" MacLoid.....Murdock MacQuarrie
Vera.....Ruth Darling
Bill Donovan.....Albert Hart
Johnny Randolph.....Russell Thaw
Mrs. Randolph.....Mary Alden

Authorship, scenario, etc., uncredited. Produced under the personal direction of Allan Dwan.

The Story—Ann Wesley disregards her lover's pleas to settle down. She goes broke, is left with only a bit of land and a cabin in the Adirondacks and retires to oblivion, starting to teach school. Her interest in the downtrodden and world-weary arouses criticism from the reformers, but she persists in her course, regenerating and reuniting with his wife a ruffian who had been derided and cursed by the reformers. In the task she finds the "hidden woman" within herself.

Classification—Drama of regeneration, with a moral to be read by those who run.

Production Highlights—Ann's gay parties. The fight between the villain and the regenerated drunkard. Little Johnny's row across the lake for his teacher's honor. The truly magnificent outdoor settings.

Exploitation Angles—A woman's soul groping for light—and finding it. The come-back which proves that a man may be down but is never out. The Adirondacks settings.

"Paid Back"

Universal—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS is a domestic drama carrying a sort of quadrangle for its plot ramifications. It is a story, conveniently told, relying upon melodramatic situations for its highlights. It revolves solely around a young wife's sacrifice—her determination to spare a friend from anticipated unhappiness, rather than have the latter's husband discover a liaison which she had before her matrimonial adventure. The wife pays hush money to recover her friend's letters, and her elderly husband placing a wrong conclusion upon discovering the incident, sends her away. This moment occurs immediately after the wedding ceremony (a good, atmospheric touch).

What follows appears to be episodic. The villain, sensing a new erotic love with the forsaken bride, endeavors to compromise her. But it is her plan to lure him to the South Seas and keep him there by the point of a gun—so that he may not practice his wiles upon others of her sex. The story becomes lurid melodrama because there doesn't appear to be any real motive for her conduct. The bride has left her would-be despoiler severely alone during the voyage and to put up a good front, passes herself off, upon her arrival at the South Sea retreat, as his sister. There is no real excuse in having him accompany her to the island in view of what follows. Simply because he makes unholy love to her should occasion no reason for such revenge upon her part.

The hero is introduced rather late. And the director has resorted to a familiar incident to arouse the heroine's interest. She sees the youth for the first time punishing a brutal overseer. The power of a manly fist is supposed to awaken infatuation upon the screen! The rest of the picture concerns the girl's effort to frustrate the villain's attempt to elope with the hero's sister. One arbitrary incident is crudely treated. Papers from home arrive simultaneously with the young man's offer of undying affection. These papers announce the death of her husband. Thereafter it is smooth sailing, because the villain to escape the clutches of the angry hero, develops a fever and perishes in a swamp.

Gladys Brockwell returns to the screen as the heroine and flashes some of her old-time emotional talent, while Stuart Holmes takes care of the villainy in his customary style.

The Cast

Carol Gordon.....Gladys Brockwell
Jack Gregory.....Stuart Holmes
David Hardy.....Mahlon Hamilton
Dorothy Britton.....Lillian West
Carol's Servant.....Kate Price
Elouise Hardy.....Edna Murphy
Jason Lockhardt.....Arthur Stewart Hull
Ship Captain.....Wilfred Lucas

By Louis Duryea Lighton. Scenario by Hope Loring. Directed by Irving Cummings. Photographed by William Fildew. Produced by Universal.

The Story—Treats of young bride, who, though innocent, is caught in compromising situation by husband. She succeeds in luring a philanderer to the South Seas, passing herself off as his brother. Eventually she finds real love and marries an American there after news is brought of her husband's death.

Classification—Story of quadrangle, revealing compromise, disillusionment, revenge and punishment—as well as romance.

Production Highlights—The work of a competent cast. Adequate atmosphere of the South Seas.

Exploitation Angles—The cast is the important angle to emphasize in this picture. Any mention of Stuart Holmes, Gladys Brockwell, Edna Murphy and Mahlon Hamilton is likely to stimulate patronage. For a prologue you can put over a South Sea background with some native dances and native music. Bill it as a domestic drama with a punch.

Drawing Power—Good for program audiences in neighborhood houses. The cast should collect the average crowd.

THE fine cast and the high artistic mounting given this production are the two biggest points of appeal. The story will go all right with an intelligent audience, but it will be unusually hard for many folks to follow its devious paths. It takes a real artist to make a dual role of Marjorie Latham and Aziza, beggar girl of India, convincing. The fact that Florence Vidor is a real artist saves the situation. In the interpretation of the widely different characters, Miss Vidor contributes to the screen an appealing and colorful portrayal.

We think the picture would have been vastly improved if the sub-theme in India had been eliminated—keeping a few flashes only. It would make the story much easier to follow and not detract in any way from the power of the plot. This is another "dream" tale. Most of the action is supposed to take place in dreams. A girl is subject to such vividly realistic dreams that it is shown her personality has a counterpart in the body of Aziza, a beggar girl of India. The picture seeks to prove that it is possible for two personalities to live in the world with the same soul. Pretty deep stuff, as it were.

This feature has one of the finest mountings of any seen this year. The opening scenes showing the receiving of election returns and their broadcasting by radio are unusually well done. The shots of India are artistic gems, especially the views of the marriage procession in which the whole Barnum & Bailey elephant family must have been used. Miss Vidor's nautch dance is a colorful bit. In these India scenes beautiful photography and lighting is in evidence. There is an exciting chase on horseback between the Rajah and the beggar girl. The tiger hunt near the close is another thriller. The star's work as a woman of the underworld is praiseworthy. Jack Mulhall is adequate as leading man. The rest of the cast is good.

Adapted from Katherine Hill's novel, "The Shuttle Soul." Directed by King Vidor. Scenario by Frank Howard Clark. Photographed by George Barnes.

The Story—Falling in love with the man she is trying to save from a dangerous woman, Marjorie Latham, tells him she can never marry him for in her dreams her other self belonged to a Rajah in India. The girl seeking to save her brother from prosecution for forgery has agreed to win the banker's son away from the he above mentioned vamp. Thus she masquerades as a woman of the cabarets and finally brings the vamp to justice, showing that it was his woman and not her brother who committed the forgery. Then comes a lot of dream stuff in India with the Rajah being killed and Aziza, her other soul, dies on the funeral pyre. Free again she agrees to marry the banker's son.

Classification—A colorful drama of dreams, romance and adventure with the action jumping over and anon between America and India. A production marked by lavish investiture.

Production Highlights—The fine character work of Miss Vidor. The exquisite settings in every scene, but especially those in India. The scenes between the heroine and the vamp. The marriage procession and the human sacrifice scenes in India. The fine photography and lighting. The good cast. The election return crowds. The lavish interiors.

Exploitation Angles—The popularity of the star. The dream theme. Start a newspaper contest on the power of dreams and their influence on our actions. Miss Vidor's stunning gowns. The India atmosphere.

My Friend The Devil

Fox—Nine Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

TO Charles Richman must go the honor of contributing to screen literature one of the finest, most powerful dramatic portrayals in the history of the motion picture industry. As Dr. Rameau in this very excellent film adaptation of Georges Ohnet's novel, Mr. Richman gives to the silent art a characterization of surpassing excellence.

The entire picture has been correctly mounted and costumed in the period in which it is laid. The settings are elaborate throughout, the photography being of unusual beauty and direction by Harry Millarde all that could be desired. The only fault that one can find with this production is its length. The action is draggy in the early reels. By careful editing the picture could be cut to seven or eight reels at the most and would benefit tremendously as a result. The quicker the observer is taken up to those last two powerful reels the better. The picture abounds in dramatic situations. There are so many that space prohibits enumerating them all. The theme of the picture deals with the spectacle of a man who did not believe in God. This theme will be of value in aiding exhibitors' tie-up with local clergy in putting the picture over. The storm scenes at the beginning and finish have been well handled. But after all, the climax is the big thing here. It'll put the production over anywhere.

The cast is a very fine one. William Tooker as Dr. Brewster is convincing at all times. Peggy Shaw as the doctor's daughter is a fine type for the character. Barbara Castleton displays some real emotional fireworks. The scenes between her and the artist being especially fine. But to Mr. Richman must go credit for the outstanding work of the film. It will be a long time before we see another such bit of acting.

The Cast

Dr. Rameau.....Charles Richman

Dr. Rameau, as boy.....Bunny Grauer

Dr. Brewster.....William Tooker

Jacques Rameau.....Adolph Milar

Mrs. J. Rameau.....Myrtle Stewart

Adapted from Georges Ohnet's novel, "Dr. Rameau." Directed by Harry Millarde. Scenario by Paul H. Sloane. Photographed by J. Rattenberg.

The Story—Calling upon God to strike his brutal stepfather dead because of his treatment of his mother, little George Dryden sees his mother killed by lightning instead. He renounces faith in God and becomes an atheist. The lad later becomes a prominent surgeon, who believes only in science. He marries. His wife becomes involved in an affair with an artist whom he has aided. The event is kept quiet by Dr. Brewster, a friend. Fifteen years later, Dr. Rameau finds the truth in his dead wife's diary. In a frenzy he turns his daughter away. The girl becomes seriously ill. The famous doctor exhausts his knowledge in trying to save her. Unsuccessful, he calls upon the Almighty. The girl becomes well. So he acknowledges God.

Classification—A powerful drama splendidly acted by a superb cast. Featuring one of the most absorbing climaxes in the history of the silent art.

Production Highlights—The masterful interpretation of the role of Dr. Rameau by Charles Richman. The fine supporting cast. The exquisite lighting and photography. The attractive mounting given the picture. The tremendous climax. The prologue in which the mother is killed. The moments of passion, between the Doctor's wife and the artist.

Exploitation Angles—This is a special in every sense of the word. You can go the limit in boosting it as a dramatic masterpiece. You can put over a great book store tieup with "Dr. Rameau," the book, as the central display. Your medical societies will be interested in this picture. Get their co-operation.

A Little Child Shall Lead Them

Fox—Ten Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

WOMEN of America, yes, men too, have a real treat in store for them in this excellent Fox special. Its theme is one of universal appeal—motherhood and the joys which little children bring into the household. Never has a picture been able to boast of more talented child actors and actresses than are shown here. Even the two year olds act like Dave Warfields. The story seeks to show that tyranny in the home inevitably results in distrust and unhappiness and we are taken through the lives of two sisters, one who has ignored the divine mission of woman and the other who dreams of the day when she shall be led by a little child.

While the production runs for 10,000 feet, there are only a few places where the action is slowed because of unessentials. Many of the scenes in the orphanage could be eliminated with propriety. Roger Lytton as the tyrannical Colonel Lewis is given the burden of the acting and he acquits himself in his usual fine manner.

The production has been mounted correctly, many of the exteriors being unusually attractive. This is the sort of picture which motion picture audiences everywhere like to see. We would not be surprised if there was a run on the orphan institutions following the showing of the picture. There should be many adoptions as a result.

There are a large number of tense moments during the action, all of which have been well handled by Director Dawley. The scene in which one sister tells the story of a dog family and its trials and in which dogs are used is a fine bit of work. It will create a deal of comment.

The Cast

Colonel Lewis.....Roger Lytton

Betty Lewis.....Peggy Shaw

Barbara Draper.....Florence Billings

Frank Draper.....Ernest Hilliard

Story by "Mr. X." Directed by J. Searle Dawley. Scenario by Paul H. Sloane. Photographed by Bert Dawley.

The Story—Deals with the fact that tyranny in the home brings distrust and unhappiness. Setting forth the lives of two women; one seeking motherhood, the other shunning it. Proving that a little child is the solution of many domestic troubles. Showing how one woman is won over to real happiness through the adoption of two orphan children. Pointing a wonderful moral to all the world.

Classification—A drama of human emotions, teeming with the ingredients that strum at the heart strings. Placing motherhood in the sublime position where it belongs.

Production Highlights—The excellent acting by the children, especially the babies in the cast. Mr. Dawley's fine direction. The intelligent titles. The lavish exterior settings and the correct interiors. The scenes in the orphanage. The work of the cast. Scene where father learns of daughter's attempt to deceive him and of her lover's death in an accident. Scene in which husband discovers his wife has a child by a former marriage and learning that he is an adopted orphan himself. The winning of the sister to the joys of caring for little children.

Exploitation Angles—You have a great chance here to put over special showing for orphan asylums, tying up with your local newspaper on stunt. Get the co-operation of Mothers' Clubs and other women's organizations. Give private showings for these clubs. Put on a special performance for mothers and their babies. Let the newspaper in on it. There are countless angles for exploitation in this picture play for the whole family.

SUMMER days are dancing days, and the best of all dancing pictures is "FRENCH HEELS," in which IRENE CASTLE comes back to the screen with the most fascinating array of new gowns and novel steps ever thrown on the silver-sheet.

"The kind of picture," says Film Daily, "that your women patrons will eat up."

Give your audiences a summer program of light, cheerful entertainment. It's too hot to get worked up over heavy, sensational-pictures.

"FRENCH HEELS" takes us from Fifth Avenue to a lumber camp in the North Woods. The lake shots alone will bring a breath of the cool out-of-doors into your house, and IRENE CASTLE'S dancing will reflect what is in the minds of nine tenths of your audience.

"Her admirers," says the Motion Picture News, "will find plenty over which to enthuse. Says the New York Evening Journal: 'Even without Mrs. Castle, 'FRENCH HEELS' would prove an interesting offering.'"

In other words, in "FRENCH HEELS," the Exhibitor has star value PLUS! If you haven't played it, Book it this Summer, while its appeal is greatest.

The DeHavens, and two scenes from their first F. B. O. release, "Their First Vacation"

"The Chicken Parade"

(Aubrey-Vitagraph Comedy—2 Reels)

THIS is Jim Aubrey's newest Vitagraph fun film. First of all, it has a misleading title. There is no chicken parade such as we of the 20th century expect. Instead we see just one small shot of some real hens stumbling about after lapping up some hooch spilled from a truck. These scenes always bring laughs. The entire two reels, however, deals with one of the nation's leading industries—bootlegging.

The plot takes up the adventures of our hero in his pursuit of Tiny Jim, a 300-pound liquor vender. The best thing is this comedy is a flivver that does everything but talk. A large pair of ears, nose, eyes, mouth, etc., have been placed on the front of the Henry Built and the "critter" follows its master everywhere. The car even pursues Tiny Jim up a high oil derrick. The scenes inside the distillery are amusing and there are some good scenes showing hero and villain in a race in barrels which takes them over barn tops and into a lake.

The comedy is timely, fairly amusing and well mounted. The cast is adequate. Some of the scenes, however, are sticky, the well known syrup, flour, water tanks, etc., being used to excess. "The Chicken Parade" is better than most comedies now being released.—CHARLES LARKIN.

Typical New England

(Urban—One Reel)

Some beautiful scenes accurately filmed, showing places of interest in the New England States, where flock vacationists. It begins with views of a quiet little town in Massachusetts, known as "Dalton," followed by Lenox, showing "Main Street" and Pittsfield, with its noted golf course. Gloucester is shown and described as the great fishing center. Then Marblehead, with yachts gathered for the race feats. This is a pleasant reel to see, the scenes depicted being in spots that are most inviting.—LILLIAN GALE.

"A Spirited Affair"

(Star-Universal—One Reel)

BOOTLEGGING is becoming a popular idea for comedy expression. Here is a Star employing Roy Atwell and Lila Leslie as the chief comedians. Where is the whiskey stored? You will be surprised to locate it in a large doll which is mistaken for a baby. Atwell plays the role of a husband who carries a flask on his hip. When this is discovered by his "dry" uncle he quickly adjusts a rubber nipple and declares it is baby's bottle. When the old man asks for the baby he is shown the doll. The finish introduces the merry conflict between bootleggers and revenue officers. Many of the gags are familiar which, of course, makes the comedy only mildly amusing. We are glad, however, that comedy directors can keep their liquor in something else besides a gas jet.—LAURENCE REID.

"Through the Storm"

Playgoers Pictures—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

"HONESTY IS THE BEST POLICY," is the theme of this H. G. Plimpton production, which runs for six reels, mainly because there are too many subtitles. These titles are verbose and are stuck in between every few moments of action. The picture has been mounted in attractive backgrounds, some of the exteriors being unusually beautiful. The story opens with a rather thrilling moment when during a storm the roof of a small country hotel is struck by lightning, collapses and kills one of two girls. The storm scenes are well handled.

The story is slight in plot and does not warrant stretching to 6,000 feet. The photography is below par, the lighting being especially poor in many of the scenes. The direction is amateurish. During the working out of the later part of the plot, Miss Stockton has opportunity to wear some attractive gowns as well as sports attire. There are some very finely staged interiors in the home of the rich aunt. This picture would be much more acceptable if half of the subtitles were edited down to half their size and at least a fourth of them eliminated.

Edith Stockton has the leading role. She has a good screen appearance but in her present role she is forced to work continually under emotional stress, so that we are given little opportunity to view real beauty which would be disclosed if the heroine could smile. Miss Stockton is inclined to be too stiff in her acting. Luis Kimball is not convincing in the leading male role. The remainder of the cast is mediocre.

Just what success the feature will have depends entirely on the class of the house in which it plays and the price of admission the patron pays. The ten-cent theatre can't play "Four Horsemen's" all the time. Maybe this will slide by without raising a storm of objections, considering that it is frankly a program release.

The Cast

Helen Stone.....	Edith Stockton
Lillian Atterbury.....	Mary Worth
Dr. Ernest Bruce.....	Louis Kimball

A Horace G. Plimpton production. Photographed by Lawrence Fowler. Pathe Exchange, distributors.

The Story—Helen Stone, a failure in both city and country, is on her way back to town when an accident holds up her train. With a girl companion she starts for the one hotel through a storm. During the night, lightning strikes the inn, the roof falls upon the girls, killing the companion. Helen takes her place and starts with a letter of introduction to a rich aunt. Enthroned here with every luxury, her real identity is at last discovered and an attempt made to blackmail her. Driven by conscience she tells all, with the usual happy ending ensuing.

Classification—A melodrama in which most of the space is taken up with long explanatory subtitles.

Production Highlights—The collapse of the roof upon the sleeping girls. The girl's confession of her real identity and the situations attending it. Some attractive exteriors.

Exploitation Angles—Don't get too enthusiastic in advertising this one. Use as few superlatives as possible. Play up the melodramatic story telling of a girl's rise to a high position in society by passing herself off as another. You may tie up with some sporting goods store with the photos from the picture showing the golf course scenes.

Drawing Power—Will get by where patrons care naught for logic, acting, photography, etc., as long as they get a little thrill. Suitable for smaller houses in towns and neighborhood districts as well as cities.

Reports Favorable on "One Clear Call"

"ONE Clear Call," Louis B. Mayer's latest John M. Stahl special, is not only proving a spectacular box-office success but is being held over for two weeks in many one week run houses, according to reports on the production received by Associated First National Pictures.

It was the first picture this year to play two weeks in Jensen and Van Herberg's theatre, Portland, Oregon; in San Francisco it held the same distinction with a two week showing at Turner and Dahnken's Tivoli theatre; and in the leading Jensen and Von Herberg theatre in Seattle "One Clear Call" was held over for a second week by popular demand.

All of these theatres did a tremendous business, with the evening shows packed and a record-breaking matinee attendance in spite of the hot weather conditions, according to First National.

South Sea Natives in Battle Scenes

Goldwyn is in receipt of a cablegram from director R. A. Walsh who is photographing Carey Wilson's "Passions of the Sea" in Tahiti, stating that he had made some great battle scenes with the South Sea natives for the climax of that photoplay.

The scenes on board ship were completed ten days ago. Walsh has made such excellent progress on the picture that he expects to have it completed several days in advance of the sailing of the ship on which passage has been booked for San Francisco. The company is expected back in the studio early in September.

Rupert Hughes' latest picture, "Gimme," and the $10,000 prize winning scenario, "Broken Chains," are in the process of cutting at the Culver City studios.

"The Song of the Lark" Praised in Review

James W. Dean, whose reviews of motion picture productions have wide circulation throughout the United States, writes as follows about Pathe's short feature called "The Song of the Lark":

"Let those who decry the tawdriness of the films, the expounding of salacious themes, pause to consider 'The Song of the Lark,' a new two-reel drama directed and written by Arthur Maude."

Police Picture Widely Booked Many First Run Contracts Secured for "In the Name of the Law"

FOLLOWING up its representative first run bookings in New York, Los Angeles and Detroit, "In the Name of the Law," the Emory Johnson police drama which is now being distributed by the Film Booking Offices of America, will soon be seen in many of the largest first run houses in the country.

A flood of contracts has reached the F. B. O. home office in the past two weeks which prove that the exploitation possibilities of this picture, as outlined by the F. B. O. publicity and advertising department, and illustrated by them during the pre-season run of the picture at the George M. Cohan theatre in New York have been fully appreciated by exhibitors throughout the country. In every theatre which the picture will play an effective tie-up will be arranged with the police departments and in many cities the picture will be dedicated to the local police chiefs.

The picture is always shown to the city and police officials before the opening of the run and the result, to date, has been a lavish indorsement of the production as a truthful document which presents in an entertaining way the home life of the American policeman in a vivid and fascinating manner.

Among the first run houses which will show "In the Name of the Law" for a week's run or longer in the near future are the Apollo in Indianapolis, the Walnut in Cincinnati, the Strand in Buffalo, Loew's State in Cleveland, Fay's theatre in Rochester, the State theatre in Pittsburgh, the Columbia in Dayton, Ohio, the Colonial in Richmond, the Strand in San Francisco, the Pantheon in Toledo, the Walnut in Louisville and the Columbia in Erie, Pa.

"Blood and Sand" Sets Record Valentino Picture Establishes New Attendance Figures at N. Y. Rivoli

PARAMOUNT'S Fred Niblo production, "Blood and Sand," starring Rodolph Valentino, continued its record-breaking performance at the New York Rivoli throughout the second week of its run, according to figures submitted by the Rivoli management to Paramount's statistical department. The first week it grossed both in attendance and receipts more than any other picture in the history of the house, 62,344 people paying $37,006.42 to see it.

Starting its second week on Sunday, August 14, when the picture grossed nearly $200 more than on its opening day a week previous, by closing time Monday the total receipts had topped all previous records for the first two days of a second week of a run at that house by more than $3,600, according to the report. The previous second-week record for that period was held by George Fitzmaurice's production, "Experience." Incidentally, the Monday receipts far exceeded those for any other picture on a second Monday at either the Rivoli or the Rialto.

The daily record for a second week was broken every day without interruption to the end of the week and when the figures were totalled it was found that "Blood and Sand" not only had beaten the second-week record, held by "Beyond the Rocks," by $6,244.32, but had also exceeded the best previous record at the Rialto.

Exploitation Force Is Near Completion

The work of completing the personnel of the Film Booking Offices exploitation field force is now nearing completion under the direction of Nat G. Rothstein, director of publicity, advertising and exploitation of F. B. O. Al Boasberg will remain at the Home Office to supervise the work of the men in the field. Hal Horne is now in the Omaha territory assisting exhibitors in staging campaigns on "In the Name of the Law," which has been widely booked throughout the Middle West.

Charles Geigerich will exploit in the Eastern States. Frank Leonard is working from the New York office and will stage a campaign in Newark where "In the Name of the Law" will enjoy a week's run at the Strand Theatre. Harold F. Wendt has been stationed at the Cleveland exchange, M. B. Rice at the Seattle Exchange and Charles Kramer at the Chicago office.

Lasky Studios Resume Full Activity

THINGS are humming again at the Lasky studio with the return from location of several companies and the starting of new Paramount pictures.

"The Cowboy and the Lady," featuring Mary Miles Minter and Tom Moore, directed by Charles Maigne, topped the list of people used last week with 112, including principals and extras. A cowboy dance was the occasion.

George Fitzmaurice's "Kick In," with Betty Compson, Bert Lytell and May McAvoy, is next on the list with some forty or more people. "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew," a Sam Wood production starring Gloria Swanson, follows with thirty-five or more.

"Buffalo Bill" Praised by Exhibitor

A. B. Cheatham, manager of the Ideal theatre, Charlotte, N. C., reports he is breaking all records for his house with "In the Days of Buffalo Bill," Universal's current historical chapter-play, starring Art Acord. In a recent letter to the Universal home office, Cheatham accorded high praise to the Buffalo Bill picture.

"It seems that the Universal has put out another record breaker in the way of a serial," he wrote.

"I just thought it might be of interest to you to know 'In the Days of Buffalo Bill' played to more paid admissions on the first episode than any serial we have ever put on at our Ideal theatre. It broke all records on the opening chapter."

Indian Sports Shown in Review

The latest issue in the Sport Review, edited by Grantland Rice, produced by Jack Eaton for Artclass Pictures and released by Goldwyn, is of educational value as well as of interest to those who like to see sports reflected upon the screen.

Sports in which the descendants of the "noble red man" indulge in a two-day midsummer carnival at Banff in the Canadian Rockies are pictured in this film, beginning with bow and arrow shooting, the red man's primitive weapon, and ending with a woman's race.

Horseback wrestling, in which two Indians, riding bareback, attempt to drag each other off the horse, is said to be almost as exciting to the spectator of the film as is the event itself to the Indians.

Others who will appear in the Ford cast are Virginia Valli, George Hackathorn and little Pat Moore.

Marc McDermott will play the lead in "Lights of New York," a Fox special for the coming season, release date for which will be announced shortly. Estelle Taylor, Marguerite Seddon, and Clarence Nordstrom will support the actor.

Niles Welch, Peggy Shaw, and Ernest Hilliard will grace the cast of "A Little Child Shall Lead Them," another special on the Fox schedule. In "A Fool There Was," the cast lists such names as Lewis Stone, Estelle Taylor, Irene Rich, Marjorie Daw, William V. Mong, and Wallace McDonald. Besides Charles Jones, the star, "The Fast Mail," the Fox special adaptation of Lincoln J. Carter's melodrama, boasts Eileen Percy, Adolph Menjou and James Mason.

"Supporting John Gilbert in 'Monte Cristo,' special, are Estelle Taylor, Virginia B. Faire, Gaston Glass, Renee Adoree, Spottiswood Aitken, Robert McKim, William V. Mong and Jack Cosgrove.

Following is a list of names, representing an array of talent from the stage and screen which will be seen in the season's product:

Helen Ferguson, Beatrice Burnham, Mahlon Hamilton, Tully Marshall, Violet Mersereau, Roger Lytton, Holmes Herbert, Nigel de Brulier, Florence Billings, Adelaide Prince and Barbara Bedford.

Ince Specials Due for Release

Season's Output to Be Distributed Through Associated First National

A LL Thomas H. Ince productions for the coming season will be released through the Associated First National under an agreement just reached by the independent producer and the distributing organization.

Nine specials which have been in production at the Ince studios will be released shortly under the agreement which comes as the culmination of several months of negotiations between Mr. Ince and officers of the First National to determine the exhibition values of the forthcoming pictures. Satisfactory arrangements were reached as soon as the features in question could be seen in completed form or near completion by First National officials.

The Ince schedule is the most pretentious ever offered in a single season by an independent producer, according to John McCormick, Pacific Coast representative for the First National who announces the following productions for early showing:

"Skin Deep," with Milton Sills, Florence Vidor and Marcia Manon heading the cast;

"Some One to Love," a C. Gardner Sullivan story. Madge Bellamy, Cullen Landis and Noah Beery are in the cast;

"The Hottentot," with Douglas MacLean, Madge Bellamy and Raymond Hatton;

"Jim" (working title), with Milton Sills, John Bowers and Marguerite de la Motte;

"The Brotherhood of Hate" (working title), with Lloyd Hughes,

Frank Keenan and Marguerite de la Motte;

"A Man of Action" (working title) with Douglas MacLean, Marguerite de la Motte and Raymond Hatton;

"Sunshine Trail" (working title), with Douglas MacLean and Edith Roberts;

"Bellboy Thirteen," a Douglas MacLean comedy;

Maurice Tourneur's "Lorna Doone," with Madge Bellamy, John Bowers and Frank Keenan.

"Screen Snapshots" Is Given Praise

The following letter from Fred A. Miller, managing director of the California Theatre, Los Angeles, is quoted by Pathe as a representative indication of the appeal which the new series of "Screen Snapshots" has for exhibitors and their patrons:

"I have booked the entire series of 'Screen Snapshots' from Pathe for the California Theatre, and am convinced that it is the cleverest novelty reel on the market today."

Katherine MacDonald Support Selected

Among capable players chosen by B. P. Schulberg to support Katherine MacDonald in "The Lonely Road," a First National attraction, are Orville Caldwell, Kathleen Kirkham, Eugenic Besserer, Vera Lewis, William Conklin and Charles French.

Pathe Cameraman on Brazil Flight

J. THOMAS BALTZELL took to the air with the New York to Brazil seaplane expedition Tuesday, August 15, proud and confident cameraman. He carried with him most inspiring recollections of the farewell dinner given in his honor the night before by Editor Emmanuel Cohen and members of his Pathe News staff.

Mr. Baltzell, whose experience and fully tested resources as a news cameraman won for him this important assignment, is twenty-five years old. He is married and lives in Washington, D. C. During the last five years he has done much of the serial photography screened in Pathe News.

Negative of Mr. Baltzell's "Log of the SC-1" will be rushed back to New York from different ports touched, for printing and distribution in regular issues of Pathe News.

Ballroom Bullfight Is Latest Twist

Bull-fights, real or comic, are now the vogue in motion pictures since "Blood and Sand" flashed its torrid way across the cinema horizon. And so it is that a "ballroom bullfight" is announced as one of the striking features of a vivid party given in "The Impossible Mrs. Bellow," a new Gloria Swanson Paramount picture.

It was a rather remarkable setting for a bull-fight, the Turkish Oriental room in the luxurious villa of a Russian Prince at Deauville, France. Hundreds of players, representing the fashionables who throng that famous watering resort, used pillows to sit upon instead of chairs, smoked the Turkish water pipe, were served by Orientals in fezes and otherwise immersed themselves in the color and atmosphere of the East.

"Through the Storm" Is Loew Attraction

The Loew time, in Greater New York, has added another to its Playgoers Pictures attractions in "Through the Storm," the five-reel photoplay featuring Edith Stockton and Louis Kimball. This romantic and spectacular drama, which is a Horace G. Plimpton production, has proved a hot weather favorite, with its wealth of attractively mounted exteriors, according to Associated Exhibitors.

Besides the featured players the cast is composed of Mary Worth, Leonard Mudie, Gladys Stockton, James Cooley and Regan Stewart.

shipped him all the more because he treated them like slaves. A kiss or a blow, but never a kind word, was all his girls got from him.

One day, in the Cafe D'Or, a dance hall and rendezvous of thieves and wrongdoers, Picard and the Ferret met and became enemies. The Ferret and his woman, Mimi, had just finished a swirling, tumultuous Apache dance. Picard, to show his appreciation, handed the girl a fifty-franc note, and complimented her for her dance. The Ferret looked Picard insolently in the face, shrugged his shoulders and then roughly seized the money from her. In an instant Picard had him by the wrist in such an iron grasp that the Apache's fingers fell apart. With a smile Picard restored the bill to Mimi.

"She's mine—and what's hers belongs to me," snarled the Ferret, caught like a fox in a steel trap. "Don't mix in the affairs of the Ferret, Monsieur Picard. The Ferret never forgets."

The Ferret did not forget. At the same time, Picard falls in love with Helene Duprenay, whom he meets when he forces his way into her country chateau. Loving a burglar in spite of herself, Helene refuses to listen to his protestations of love until he has redeemed himself by receiving as noble a tribute from society as the croix de guerre he won on the field of battle. This becomes Picard's single aim in life. But the Ferret stands ever in his way. It is a tense, deadly duel of wits and strength in which the best man finally wins.

A STORY of the clash of wills of two strong men; a story of the glittering, fascinating, subtle Parisian underworld; a story of the power of love conquering evil and crime.

The "demimonde" of Paris presents a manysided picture with its gangs of ruthless Apaches, its well dressed, gentlemen crooks, and above all its dainty grisettes and insinuating cocottes. The two extremes of this colorful, treacherous, variegated life were represented by a certain Monsieur Picard and an individual known in the dens and dance halls of Montmartre as the "Ferret."

Monsieur Picard had the manners and bearing and accent of a gentleman, which easily gained him entre to the highest society in France. He mingled freely with the richest and noblest members of the "beau monde" and was thus able to plan at leisure his methods of robbing them. He stood for the type of man who becomes a criminal merely for the excitement and adventure of the life and not from sordid desires and inclinations—all in all, a handsome, gay, well-bred man of the world.

On the other hand was the sinister figure of the Ferret. He was a good looking, devil-may-care young fellow, swarthy of face and dark of eye, just about as safe and easy to handle as a rattlesnake coiled to strike. Picturesquely dressed in velour trousers and loose-fitting coat, with a bright crimson sash wound round his waist, it was not hard to understand why the women loved him. And they wor-

Strong Support Assured Agnes Ayres

FOR "A Daughter of Luxury," which Paul Powell will direct, with Agnes Ayres as star, another of the exceptional casts which distinguish all Paramount pictures has been chosen.

Those who will appear in the production with Miss Ayres are Tom Gallery, Howard Ralston, Edith Yorke, Edward Martindel, Sylvia Ashton, Clarence Burton, Zasu Pitts, Robert Schable, Bernice Frank, Dorothy Gordon and Muriel MacCormic.

The story is an adaptation by Beulah Marie Dix of the play, "The Imposter," by Leona Merrick and Michael Morton.

Century Changes Name on New Comedy

Johnny Fox's latest Century, directed by Al Herman has been changed from "At the Fair" to "Slam! Bang!" as being more typical of the jazz it portrays.

Besides Johnny Fox, Maudie, the clever Century mule, plays a big part in the story which shows how a boy and his trained mule get in and out of all sorts of trouble and mischief. The story was written by Al Herman, who directed it.

Ena Gregory, the little blonde Australian beauty, takes the feminine lead. Others in the cast are Percy Pembroke, Joe Bonner, Ed Carlie, Lillian Biron and Tom Dempsey.

"Monte Cristo" Wins Praise

New York Critics Are Unanimous in Their Approval of the Fox Special

WITHOUT exception, the New York newspaper reviewers were whole-hearted in their praise of "Monte Cristo," the Fox special, which opened an indefinite engagement at the Forty-fourth Street theatre, Monday, August 14th.

Following are a few extracts from the New York papers:

The Herald: "'Monte Cristo' thrilling as a photoplay—Dumas' romance of love, hate and vengeance screened with fine effect. A wealth of pictorial and dramatic detail. One of the real achievements of the modern screen."

The Times: "The action of the story is swift, sure and smooth—those who stood with Edmond Dantes at the first showing of 'Monte Cristo' felt its thrill as keenly, perhaps, as any audience ever did at the famous play."

The Journal: "If you wish to renew your youth, see 'Monte Cristo.' All the adventure and romance of Dumas' novel woven into the Fox production."

The Sun: "'Monte Cristo' is a film of rare pictorial beauty. It is doubtful if any previous films excel it in any respect. It is full of real thrills."

The Mail: "The world is 'Monte Cristo's'—screen version of the gorgeous melodrama preserves most of its thrills—it is glorious picture stuff, this greatest of adventure romance."

The Telegram: "If you want real thrills, go to the 44th Street theatre and watch Edmond Dantes, the hero of 'Monte Cristo,' come to life on the screen."

The World: "You will be entertained to your heart's content. We lay a wager on its success."

Good Reports on "The Timber Queen"

With the Pathe serial "The Timber Queen's" screen career barely a month old, Pathe reports the receipt of an unusually large number of commendatory letters from exhibitors who saw in the latest production starring Ruth Roland a fine opportunity to stimulate business. The following telegram is quoted from Manager Charles H. Barron of the Kansas Theatre, Wichita, Kansas:

"I am pleased to state that my campaign on 'The Timber Queen' went over with a bang. Ruth Roland is the talk of Wichita. We stood them out matinee and night for three days."

International News Shows Gliders

Striking shots of the French, American and other gliders, speeding in motorless flight in the tests just completed at Clermont-Ferrand, France, are included in International News No. 66, just released by Universal.

This subject is said to give the audience a strange and weird sensation. The sight of aeroplanes in flight without motors is one which grips the imagination.

"Orphans of Storm" in Chicago Run

RELATED, but none the less important in the motion picture industry is the news that comes from the new management of the remodeled Roosevelt theatre, Chicago, of the remarkable run all during the month of July of D. W. Griffith's "Orphans of the Storm," a United Artists Corporation release.

This Griffith production was booked by the new management of the Roosevelt as the proper vehicle to open the remodelled house and to serve as a demonstration of the future Roosevelt policy of presenting only the biggest and best of feature productions.

The original engagement was for the first two weeks in July. Despite the terrific heat of Chicago July "Orphans of the Storm" is reported to have played to capacity for six performances daily for the entire two weeks.

F. B. O. Expands Short Subject Program

SEPTEMBER will see the first big expansion of the short subject program of the Film Booking Offices. During that month the first of three series of comedies will be available for exhibitors. They are "Their First Vacation," the initial Carter DeHaven comedy, "Pop Tuttle's Movie Queen," the first Plum Center Comedy starring Dan Mason, and "Sweet Thirteen," which will introduce Gloria Joy in a series of Sherwood MacDonald two reel children's comedies.

Heretofore the sort subject program of the F. B. O. has consisted of two single reel short subjects, Hy Mayer's "Travelaugh" and "Starland Revue." Starland Revue, in presenting intimate scenes of Broadway players and plays, has struck a responsive chord throughout the country, according to F. B. O.

"The Christian" Now Being Edited

The last scenes for Goldwyn's picturization of Sir Hall Caine's novel, "The Christian," were taken on Wednesday of last week by Director Maurice Tourneur after several nights of work with mobs to supplement the big mob scenes taken in London last June.

The work of editing "The Christian" has already begun under the direct supervision of Paul Bern, Goldwyn's editor-in-chief, and of the director. A complete print of the photoplay will be sent to Sir Hall Caine in London immediately after the assembling and editing is finished, and the author will himself write the titles for it.

Bosworth Joins Neilan For Picture

Hobart Bosworth, well-known stage and screen star, after considerable negotiations and purely through his friendship for Marshall Neilan, has held up his own productions in San Francisco and gone to Los Angeles to play the part of Shane Butler Keogh in "The Strangers' Banquet," Mr. Neilan's first production in association with Goldwyn.

Bosworth played the lead in the first motion picture ever made in Los Angeles, the Selig version of "The Count of Monte Cristo."

"Rupert of Hentzau" to Have Stars

For "Rupert of Hentzau" to be produced as a special by the Selznick Company, Myron Selznick is reported to have selected a cast which includes no less than four players who have been rated as stars for the past several years.

The announcement is temporarily held up pending the actual signing of one of these stars to a contract.

Standing Star In "The Isle of Doubt"

WYNDHAM STANDING is the star of "The Isle of Doubt," a six-reel feature which Playgoers Pictures announces for release September 10th. This picture, which was adapted from the novel by Derek Bram, is said to combine the appeal of a high class society drama with the adventure and lure of the tropics.

Standing portrays the hero, Dean Deland.

The "girl" of the picture is played by Dorothy Mackaill, a popular figure on both the stage and the screen. Miss Mackaill has sung and danced at the London Hippodrome, and in the big Century Theatre shows and the Ziegfeld Midnight Frolics.

In the cast also are George Fawcett, Warner Richmond and Marie Burke.

"Souls for Sale" to Be Pictured

Rupert Hughes has begun the adaptation of his latest novel "Souls for Sale" for the screen. This is a story of life in the motion picture colony in California, and ran originally in the Red Book magazine.

It is said that the picture will differ in many ways from the printed version. The author-director's last picture "Gimme" which now is being edited at the Goldwyn studios, was written directly for the screen in collaboration with Mrs. Hughes.

Quick Bookings for Educational

Earliest Pictures of Program Are Receiving Commendation of Critics

ENTHUSIASTIC praise from critics and quick bookings from big first run houses in all parts of the country are greeting the earliest pictures in Educational's 1922-1923 program of short subjects as they become available for release or for pre-release private reviews, according to the Educational office.

A real sensation is reported created by the Earl Hurd Comedies, the single-reel novelties presented by C. C. Burr in which Mr. Hurd is combining "shots" of real actors with animated cartoons in a manner that leaves the audience guessing as to how it is done.

Typical expressions from exhibitors are those reported to Educational's home office from the Boston and Des Moines branches. The buyer for a string of theatres in New England declared "One Ol' Cat," the first picture of this series, the "best thing I ever saw." "The greatest one-reel special ever released. Entirely different from anything ever made," is what the buyer for the Blank Enterprises said when taking these comedies for these big first run houses in Iowa.

Critics in and out of the industry speak very highly of these short novelties, reports Educational.

"Garrison's Finish" Completed

Mary Pickford Helping Edit Brother Jack's Story of the Race Course

ALL the camera work has been completed on Jack Pickford's "Garrison's Finish," this young star's first photoplay production for early autumn release by Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation, and the further work of editing and titling is well under way in the hands of Elmer Harris, who prepared the screen version of the race-track story. In this task Mr. Harris is aided by the personal supervision of Mary Pickford, celebrated sister of the star-producer.

Competent critics and motion picture experts who have seen the first working prints of "Garrison's Finish" declare it to be a real picture in every sense of the word; assert that it has in it everything that goes to make a photoplay of the highest class, predict an immediate public approval of the production and the star's artistry, and prophesy its certain success.

"Garrison's Finish" is Jack Pickford's first independent production, and he plays the leading role of Billy Garrison, the all-square jockey who is double-crossed by another rider, but who eventually wins out and comes under the wire a winner.

Century Makes Changes in Titles

Changes in titles of pictures have been announced by the Century Film Corporation. The title of "Freshie" has been changed to "The Fresh Kid," as another picture bore the former title. "Too Many Babies" has been changed to "The Cabby." It features Maudie the mule. Others in the cast are Louise Lorraine, Jackie Morgan, Jerry Mandy, Bill Irving and Hap Ward.

Baby Peggy's picture, filmed in the Yosemite Valley, is called "Peggy of the Mounted." It parodies the life of the mounted police.

Clever Impersonations in New Revue

Starland Revue, number 9, contains clever impersonations of Francis White done in a tip-top manner at the Moulin Rouge, a popular midnight amusement place on Broadway, New York, as well as some swift toe-dancing by Veronica Marquise, the sensation of more than one midnight show. Scenes from "Abie's Irish Rose," the Jewish-Irish farce show just enough of this new Broadway play to interest the local theatregoer, and give the folks far away from New York an opportunity to know what it's all about.

"Sherlock Holmes" in Tenth Week

THE John Barrymore picture, "Sherlock Holmes," which will be the second photoplay released by Goldwyn for the new season, has now reached its tenth week at B. S. Moss' Cameo theatre, New York, and that following a week's engagement at the Capitol theatre where it came close to equalling the biggest week's receipts in the history of that mammoth theatre.

The appeal of this picture is due to the strong hold which Conan Doyle's famous detective has upon the popular imagination, coupled with the very human and authoritative embodiment of the part by John Barrymore.

"Sherlock Holmes" is scheduled for release by Goldwyn on October 29.

Noted Character Women in "Gimme"

Georgia Woodthorpe and Kate Lester, two of the screen's best known character women, are in the cast of "Gimme," by Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes, which will be the eminent author-director's next Goldwyn production.

Miss Lester and Miss Woodthorpe are both old-time players of the stage. Miss Woodthorpe contributed a delectable piece of acting to the screen version of "Bunt Pulls the Strings," in the role of the Widow Drummond. Miss Lester is known as the "grande dame" of the screen, having appeared as the society leader in "Dangerous Curve Ahead," and many other pictures. Helene Chadwick has the leading role in "Gimme."

Cast Named for "Without Compromise"

Emmett J. Flynn, who directed "A Fool There Was" and "Monte Cristo," two Fox specials for the season of 1922-23, has begun work on "Without Compromise" the next William Farnum vehicle, with an exceptionally notable cast of artists, according to word from the West Coast Studios of Fox Film Corporation. The picture will be a screen adaptation of the widely read story by George Hubbard and Lillian Bennett-Thompson.

The names of some of the players who will participate in "Without Compromise" are: Tully Marshall, Robert McKim, Hardee Kirkland, Alan Bennett, Eugene Pollett, Will Walling, Otis Harland, Fred Kohler, and Jack Dillon.

Chaney Will Be Seen as Hunchback

LON CHANEY has been engaged by Universal to star in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," that company's forthcoming Jewel production of "Notre Dame de Paris," Victor Hugo's immortal novel.

Chaney's selection is said to be the result of an almost unanimous demand upon the part of exhibitors and others in the industry. Ever since Universal first announced the intention of filming the Hugo story, suggestions have come from all sides that Chaney and no one but Chaney should be cast for the title role, according to Universal.

Chaney welcomed the chance to interpret the quaint Parisian dwarf for the screen.

Selznick Turns Down "Evidence" Offer

The Selznick Pictures Corporation has received an offer for the stage rights of the Elaine Hammerstein picture "Evidence." It was refused on the grounds that it might conflict with the screen presentation. Several years ago the Select Picture "Scandal" was produced as a play and enjoyed a year's run on Broadway. In this case the showings did not conflict as they would with "Evidence."

The original story of "Evidence" was written by Edward J. Montagne of the Selznick staff. He is also the author of "Under Oath," Elaine Hammerstein's latest picture.

Hot Weather Fails to Halt Picture

Torrid weather has had almost no effect on the bookings of "When Husbands Deceive," with Leah Baird, according to Associated Exhibitors, who released the feature August 20th.

Many first run exhibitors are now signing contracts for the picture in order to give it an early place on their fall programs. One of the first of these was Edward Reed, who has just announced his intention to offer this as the feature attraction at his Strand, the largest picture theatre in Providence, R. I., during the week of September 4th.

Something New in "Dusk to Dawn"

"Something absolutely new" is the promise Associated Exhibitors has been making in its preliminary announcements of "Dusk to Dawn," the current Florence Vidor release. The new feature is to be out August 27th. Based on Katherine Hill's widely discussed novel, "The Shuttle Soul," with its stirring situations and its exotic touches, this photoplay is said to have opened to the star dramatic possibilities of which, according to all reports, she has taken full advantage.

Goldwyn Line-up Wins Approval

Exhibitor Comment Reported Favorable On Eight Super Special Releases

HARDLY had last week's trade papers got off the presses when Goldwyn began receiving letters and telegrams from prominent exhibitors congratulating the producing firm on the line-up of eight super-features for release between October 8 and December 31.

Judging from the tenor of exhibitor comment so far as received, Goldwyn has struck a responsive chord with its new policy of fewer pictures, but big pictures, and also with its first releases. Many of the messages received state that the writers expect to show every picture that Goldwyn puts out for the entire new season even though they are to be sold individually.

There has been special satisfaction expressed that the first of the releases is to be a new Rupert Hughes picture "Remembrance." They feel that a companion picture to "The Old Nest," doing for Father what that picture did for Mother, should rival that screen classic in popular appeal.

Frequent mention is made of the John Barrymore picture, "Sherlock Holmes." The combination of Barrymore and Conan Doyle's immortal detective arouse the utmost confidence before the film is seen, according to Goldwyn.

Critics Like "The Masquerader"

Chicago Reviewers Are Unanimous In Their Praise of Post Picture

GUY BATES POST in "The Masquerader," a First National Attraction, was praised lavishly by the motion picture critics of the Chicago newspapers when it opened there at the Chicago theatre. Here is what the Chicago critics had to say:

Carl Sandburg in the Daily News—"The acting of Guy Bates Post and his supporting cast in this picture, as well as the direction and swiftness of narrative, makes it an out-of-the-ordinary specimen of silver sheet thespies."

Bob Reel in the Evening American—"The Masquerader," at the Chicago, marks Guy Bates Post's debut on the screen. His stage presentation of this play was wonderful; his film performance is beyond description.

Observer in the Herald and Examiner—"The Masquerader" is one of this year's screen classics. Merit and quality characterize it from beginning to end.

Caroline Frum in the Tribune—"Here is a picture it is a pleasure to recommend. It is the best thing I have seen on the screen for a long time."

Genevieve Harris in the Evening Post—"The Masquerader" is a thorobred among film plays. It has manner, distinction, that something which we may sum up in the language of the day as "class."

Paramount Plans Song Tieups

Music Publishers Will Distribute Compositions Dedicated to Pictures

THREE important song tie-ups for forthcoming Paramount pictures have just been effected by the Paramount publicity department.

The first of the pictures to be thus popularized is the Fred Niblo production, "Blood and Sand," starring Rodolph Valentino. The well-known music publishing firm of Waterson, Berlin & Snyder has published the song, "You Gave Me Your Heart (So I Give You Mine)" and has dedicated it to the Paramount picture. The cover design includes a full-width still from "Blood and Sand," followed by the lines, "Dedicated to the Paramount Picture, 'Blood and Sand,' Starring Rodolph Valentino, With Lila Lee and Nita Naldi." Professional copies are now in the hands of singers and the song already is said to have made a hit in New York.

Another song recently issued is "The Old Homestead," which, according to the cover, is based on the Paramount picture, with Theodore Roberts, George Fawcett, T. Roy Barnes, Harrison Ford and Fritz Ridgeway. This is published by the Philip Ponce firm.

Out in Los Angeles, Aubrey Stauffer, well known as a Paramount scenario writer, has composed a song for the exploitation of "The Young Rajah," another picture in which Rodolph Valentino is starred and which is adapted from the play by Alethea Luce and the novel, "Amos Judd," by John Ames Mitchell.

Jolson Pleased With "Grandma's Boy"

"GRANDMA'S BOY" is the greatest comedy picture I ever saw, and I've seen them all," declared Al. Jolson, arriving back in New York from Los Angeles the other day. Just to show you what I thought of it:

"I went to California expecting to make some pictures of my own. I saw Harold Lloyd at the Symphony and—well I got cold feet. That line of Pope's came to me, the line about fools rushing in where angels fear to tread, and I beat it back to New York without daring to look a camera in the face. I had a long, hard, hot, dusty trip across the mountains and deserts, but it was worth it all—just to see 'Grandma's Boy.'"

It was a fervent tribute which the king of stage comedians paid the young man he is now pleased to describe as the monarch of screen funmakers.

Cecil DeMille Ready for Work

Cecil B. DeMille has returned to the Lasky studio from his two weeks' vacation cruise aboard his new yacht and is busily engaged in preparing for the forthcoming Cecil B. DeMille production which is scheduled to start within thirty days.

To date the story, cast and other details of this picture have been shrouded in mystery. The producer devoted his entire time prior to his vacation to the work of cutting and titling "Manslaughter," which will be released by Paramount about the time studio production work on the succeeding picture starts.

Maigne Company Back from Wyoming

Charles Maigne and his company making "The Cowboy and the Lady" for Paramount, with Mary Miles Minter and Tom Moore in the featured roles, have returned to the Lasky studio from Wyoming and are now at work on interior scenes for this Clyde Fitch play adapted by Julien Josephson.

Selznick News Is Full of Action

Selznick News 1068-C is packed full of action and is almost certain to give theatregoers a real thrill, according to the Selznick office. First there are pictures of the head-on railroad collision at Horine, Mo., in which two giant locomotives hurled themselves at one another. Another wreck at Gary, Ind., in which four were killed, shows the engine and train piled over a wide area. Following the wrecks come scenes of Uncle Sam's battering war flivvers going over the top at Camp Meade, Md. The sight of these lumbering tanks, battering everything beneath their relentless bows, furnishes a thrill.

Clean Pictures Success Even in Summer

During the month just past the Aldine theatre, in Philadelphia, had for its manager, Arthur S. Kane, president of Associated Exhibitors and of Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation. Mr. Kane was conducting an experiment. He set out to prove to his own satisfaction—and he succeeded—that even in midsummer the public stood ready to patronize clean pictures. Leasing the Aldine from Felt Brothers for thirty days, Mr. Kane installed, successively, Jules Verne's "The Isle of Zorda," Alfred Lord Tennyson's "Lady Godiva," George Eliot's "Silas Marner," and "The Power Within," by Dr. Norwood, a popular Philadelphia clergyman. The public response was gratifying. Large crowds packed the house, even on the hottest nights, declares an Associated Exhibitor's statement.

Goldwyn Strengthens Picture Cast

Not satisfied with a cast that boasts House Peters, Antonio Moreno, Pauline Starke, Rosemary Theby, George Siegmann, William V. Mong, Carl Harbaugh, Mary Jane Irving, William Haines, David King and Myrtle Lind, Goldwyn has made two additions to the cast of Carey Wilson's romance of the South Seas, "Passions of the Sea," formerly called "Captain Blackbird."

The two new additions to the cast are William Moran and Eric Mayne.

Urban Classic Shows Battle Fleet at Sea

"The United States Battle Fleet in the High Seas" is the title of the newest Urban Popular Classic series which is being released weekly by Vitagraph. The fleet is seen at anchor before sailing; then comes the majesty of sailing; first the submarines, then the destroyers, then the battleships. The cameras keep in touch with the fleet until it arrives at another naval base, recording the daily life at sea.

Coast Reviews Praise Picture

Pathe Reports Enthusiasm Over First of New Johnny Jones Comedy Series

WEST COAST newspaper reviews, and a budget of advice to Pathe from Producer J. K. McDonald show both the critics and celebrities of the Hollywood Film Colony buzzing over the latest completed picture in the new series of Johnny Jones Comedies, called "Makin' Movies." One specimen of critical judgment sufficiently represents that aspect of the preview result, The Hollywood News printed this: "'Makin' Movies,' which delightful comedy was given a preview at Hunley's theatre on Saturday evening, was without a doubt a forecast of what pictures are coming to. This is one of the cleanest and most delightful comedies ever flashed on the screen, and unless the writer is mistaken, is destined to break several long records for two-reel pictures. In his advice to Pathe, Producer McDonald writes: "We have been utterly besieged with telephone congratulations all day long. Rupert Hughes told me in the presence of Will Hays and Jesse Lasky that 'Makin' Movies' was the greatest kid picture he had ever seen, feature or otherwise."

Lloyd Picture for N. Y. Strand

Manager Plunkett Arranging Prologue for Opening of "Grandma's Boy"

JOSEPH PLUNKETT, managing director, has selected the Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors "Grandma's Boy," produced by Hal Roach, as the feature for Labor Day week at the Mark Strand Theatre, New York City. Plunkett is arranging an elaborate prologue to introduce Lloyd's first five-part picture. The exact nature of this he declines to reveal, but he promises that it will be thoroughly in keeping with the importance of the picture. Members of Mr. Plunkett's staff decorated the Strand lobby with stills and a huge portrait of the star more than a week ago.

Arthur S. Kane, president of Associated Exhibitors, announced this week that on Sunday last, August 20, "Grandma's Boy" entered upon the 15th week of its world's premier run at Dr. H. B. Breckwedel's Symphony theatre, Los Angeles, thus smashing the record for the continuous run of any picture, feature or other, in that way. Mr. Kane took occasion also to comment on the unparalleled triumph which "Grandma's Boy" has achieved wherever else it has been seen.

Jack London Pictures Started

Eight Two-Reelers Being Made from Famous Tales of the "Fish Patrol"

PRODUCTION has begun at Universal City on a series of eight two-reelers adapted from Jack London's celebrated "Tales of the Fish Patrol," virile short stories of the marine police who preserve order among the lawless foreign fishermen in the waters around San Francisco. Jack Mulhall is starred in the series. Edward Kull is the director.

Titles for the entire series have been chosen. The first will be known as "White and Yellow," and will present a vivid cross section of the drama of life among the white and yellow men who vie for fish and fortune in San Francisco Bay.

Following the first, the other seven will be released, one every second week, in the following order: "King of the Greeks," "Pirates of the Deep," "The Law of the Seal," "The Fight in the Fog," "Dangerous Waters," "The Yellow Handkerchief," and "Wolves of the Waterfront." The "Tales of the Fish Patrol" series will alternate week by week in Universal's two-reel drama schedule, with a series of Lumber Jack dramas starring Roy Stewart. Kull already has had his "Fish Patrol" company at Balboa and other beaches for several days' work. No efforts are being spared to make these two-reelers into pictures of feature calibre according to Universal. The cast is being selected during the filming of the series.

Carter Will Continue with Selznick

Douglas Carter, the colored comedian will not, as has been reported, head a comedy company which is producing all-negro films in St. Louis. Carter has just signed a contract with the Selznick Company and expects to be with that organization for some time to come. He is one of the featured players in "Love Is An Awful Thing," the latest Owen Moore comedy. In addition he is President of the United Order of Colored Native Sons of California and if he ever

Valentino Completing "The Young Rajah"

Rodolph Valentino will soon complete "The Young Rajah," under the direction of Phillip Rosen. In this Paramount picture adapted by June Mathis from the play by Alethea Luce and the story, "Amos Judd" by John Ames Mitchell, the star plays not only a Harvard man, who in reality is a Hindu potentate, but represents in vision scenes, which show the splendours of the Far East, characters familiar to all students of Hindu history and mythology. The picture will be completed shortly and in a matter of two weeks Valentino will start, under the direction of Alan Dwan, his new production "The Spanish Cavalier."

Hackathorne Signed for "Merry Go Round"

George Hackathorne, character juvenile, has been engaged by Universal for "Merry Go Round," Eric von Stroheim's new film masterpiece. Hackathorne's most recent work with Universal was the portrayal of the half-wit in "Human Hearts," the Universal-Jewel starring House Peters, which now is playing its pre-release premiere in the Central theatre, New York City. In "Merry Go Round" he is to interpret the role of a hunch-back, an appalling creature of the Prater, as Vienna's pleasure park is known.

"Town That Forgot God" Has Appeal

"The Town That Forgot God," another super-special which Fox Film Corporation announces for release during the season of 1922-23, possesses a universal appeal in its silent delineation of the small American city and its folk. Harry Millarde directed the production which deals entirely with the provincial community. The cast is one selected from the best group of small town character-types on the stage. Bunny Grauer, the juvenile actor, plays the lead.

Cooley Is Engaged for Selznick Cast

Hal Cooley has been engaged by Myron Selznick for one of the principal parts in the support of Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle in "One Week of Love."

Jessen's Studio Notes by Wire

LASKY

William DeMille's next picture, titled "Notoriety," an original by Clara Beranger, includes Bebe Daniels and Lewis Stone among the principals.

Allan Dwan will direct Rudolph Valentino in "The Spanish Cavalier," and Nita Naldi will play the feminine lead opposite.

The leading male role in "A Daughter of Luxury," starring Agnes Ayres, will be played by Tom Gallery. The director will be Paul Powell.

Monte Katterjohn has completed continuity for "His American Wife," adapted from Hector Turnbull's story. It will serve as a starring vehicle for Gloria Swanson. Conrad Nagel will play opposite the star, under the direction of Sam Woods.

Jack Holt is expected on the coast shortly after working in "Making a Man," under the direction of Joseph Henabery. The picture was made in the New York studio and photographed by Gilbert Warrenton. Director and cameraman remained in the east.

The cast for "The Pride of Palomar," a Cosmopolitan production under the direction of Frank Borzage, includes Marjorie Daw, Joseph Dowling, George Nichols, Warner Oland, Tote DeCrow, Anna Hernandez, Evaline Shennan and Jessie Heddard.

PATHE

Malobee Productions, formed by Leo Maloney and Ford Beebe, have completed ten of the range rider series, short westerns, for Pathe. These include Josephine Hill, opposite Mr. Maloney.

Harold Lloyd's five reeler, entitled "Dr. Jack" will be shipped next week.

Craig Hutchinson has been engaged by Hal Roach to alternate with Charles Parrott in the production of Snub Pollard two reel comedies.

CHRISTIE

INDEPENDENT

Sidney Franklin has been engaged to direct "Brass," adapted by Monte Katterjohn from the Charles G. Norris story of the same name.

"Little Heroes of the Street," directed by William Beaudine, featuring Wesley Barry and Marie Prevost, is complete and ready for shipment.

William Zeiter will direct "The Beautiful and Damned," from a continuity by Olga Printzlau.

Among the Shulberg productions are three subjects in the making. They are "Ching Ching Chinaman," under the direction of Tom Forman; "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," made by L. J. Gasnier, and "The Lonely Road," starring Katherine McDonald, under the direction of Victor Shertzinger.

Ray Leek has been appointed publicity director for Schulberg.

METRO

Cast for "Peg o' My Heart," starring Laurette Taylor, includes Mahlon Hamilton, Ethel Grey Terry, Russell Simpson, Lionel Belmore, Vera Lewis, D. R. O. Hatwell, and Nigel Barry. The production is under the direction of King Vidor, and the continuity is the work of Mary O'Hara.

Irving Willatt is casting "All the Brothers Were Valiant," starring Billie Dove.

The next picture which will be made with Viola Dana as star, will be "Emy Lou," an original story by Bernard McConville.

The Clara Kimball Young subject, "Enter Madame," is complete.

Fred Niblo returned from New York. His first production is now reported to be one untitled, as yet, to be followed by "Captain Applejack," the screen rights of which were purchased by Louis B. Mayer for a Fred Nible production.

John Stahl has completed "The Dangerous Age."

The Reginald Barker Company engaged in the filming of "Hearts Aflame," have returned to the studio, after spending some time on Canadian location.

Hugh Fay has been engaged by Hunt Stromberg to direct Montana comedies, and is now making "The Punctured Price." Harry Gribbon, Eugenie Gilbert and Alfred Hollingsworth have the important parts. The next Montana story is titled "Silk Purses and Cauliflower Ears."

UNIVERSAL

There are three subjects nearing completion, in the U editing department. They are: "Wolf Law," starring Frank Mayo; "Confidence," starring Herbert Rawlinson; "The Girl Who Ran Wild," from Bret Harte's "M'iss," starring Gladys Walton.

There are others, all ready for shipment, such as "The Kentucky Derby" and "The Flirt."

"The Fourth Musketeer," title of number seven in "Leather Pushers" series, starring Reginald Denry, is now in the making.

The next story for Herbert Rawlinson in line for production is "One Wonderful Night," from a play by Louis Tracy. Stuart-Faton will direct the picture.

Sigmund Moos, manager of the leasing department of the U. is scheduled for return from a trip to Germany.

Irving Cummings has completed the feature "The Jilt," with Ralph Graves, Marguerite De La Motte and Matt Moore.

1st NATIONAL

Phyliss Haver has been engaged to play opposite Buster Keaton. Eddie Kline, who will direct, will make exteriors at Big Bear Valley and Sacramento.

When Norma Talmadge returns from abroad in November, "Within the Law," with Miss Talmadge as the star, will go into production.

Charles Chaplin has completed his latest picture, but has not yet bestowed a title on the picture, which is in the editing stage.

Mack Sennett will star Phyliss Haver in five feature comedies, which will be directed by Richard Jones.

HERE AND THERE

Eddie Lyons back from New York after making contracts with Shallenberger for series of twelve comedies starring Lyons and twelve additional two reel Mirthquake comedies, starring Bobbie Dunn, production beginning at once.

Harry Cohn is beginning a series of two reelers. These are comedies for C. B. C., featuring three year old son of Chuck Reisner, whose name is probably not "Dinky," but who answers to the same. Father Reisner will direct.

Cohn is also beginning a new series of Hallroom Boys comedies, with Sid Smith and George Williams. Noel Smith and Al Santell will alternate as directors.

Ed LeSaint is now completing a continuity for "Only a Shop Girl," and will, also direct this feature.

Harry Garson is preparing to make a series of independent productions. The first will be from the poem by James Whitcomb Riley, "An Old Sweetheart of Mine." Elliott Dexter and Enid Bennett will head the all star cast.

Warner Product Sold in South

THE entire series of forthcoming Warner Brothers' productions have been purchased by M. Mitchell, of the Standard Productions Company, Atlanta, for the southern territory. The rights include Georgia, Florida, Alabama and North and South Carolina.

Mitchell has secured "Your Best Friend," featuring Vera Gordon, "Ashamed of Parents," "Parted Curtains," and the seven productions being made at the Warner coast studios, three of which are Harry Rapf pictures. These include "A Dangerous Adventure," with Grace Darmond; "Rags to Riches" and "Heroes of the Street," both featuring Wesley Barry; "Main Street," by Sinclair Lewis; "Brass," by Charles G. Norris; "The Beautiful and Damned," by F. Scott Fitzgerald, and "Little Church Around the Corner," by Marion Russell.

Standard Productions are "Leave Home" and "School Days."

Rose Coughlin Joins Bennett Cast

Of more than ordinary interest to the trade this week is the announcement of Whitman Bennett and C. C. Burr that these enterprising producers had secured the services of Rose Coughlin, justly reputed to be one of the world's most famous actresses, to portray the important part of the Owl in the "Secrets of Paris," now being made by Bennett and Burr. Aside from the actual value of the story itself, which is based on Eugene Sue's "Mysteries of Paris," the addition of Miss Coughlin to the all-star cast is considered one of the wisest moves made in casting this year.

First Arthur Trimble Picture Finished

The filming of the first of a series of twelve two-reelers featuring little Arthur Trimble, the new boy star, has been completed at the Hollywood Studio, according to an announcement broadcasted by Frederick G. Becker, Master Trimble's director.

Two more of these specials will be produced before arrangements for a release will be attempted, says Mr. Becker. Production on the second of this series was started at once.

Equity Plans Great Campaign

Widest Publicity to Be Arranged for "What's Wrong with the Women"

GRAT preparations are under way in behalf of "What's Wrong With the Women," which Equity Pictures will issue on the independent market. Daniel Carson Goodman's production, which was produced in New York without any great advance publicity campaign has already been shown to trade paper critics.

Equity is now completing plans for a publicity campaign which they claim will make this picture one of the most talked-of screen offerings of the season.

"It is not our intention," stated Mr. Goodman, "to capitalize a title. We have a story behind all this, which fully justifies our selecting such a name, and because of this we feel that we have the right to create advance interest in the picture by means of the title. There need be no fear that our advance publicity, which will be as great as any ever given a motion picture, will react to disadvantage. We want people to come into the theatre prepared to see an intelligent and fair-minded discussion of the feminist question because we know that 'What's Wrong With the Women' will afford just that.

"I need only point to the reviews in the trade papers under date of August 12th to prove that we have sincerely and faithfully depicted the current unrest among women and just as sincerely proposed an answer."

Nigh Turns Over "Notoriety"

All-Star Production Is Delivered in Entirety to Weber and North

THE director of "Why Girls Leave Home" and "School-days" played true to form this week when he made his entry into the offices of L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North flanked by a corps of assistants carrying cases of film totaling 100,000 feet in length. The huge load represented the scenes shot on "Notoriety," Will Nigh's latest high-powered production. The director is known for the excess footage he takes. It generally amounts to ten times the length used in the finished film, and always guarantees him against missing any of the high lights of the picture.

It took Will Nigh over two months to make "Notoriety"—the longest he ever took on any of his output. He finished "Why Girls Leave Home" and "School-days" in half the time that "Notoriety" took. The reason lies in the magnitude of the production, according to Nigh.

In number of stars it has more than both of his previous hits put together. In "Why Girls Leave Home" Nigh had only two big names at his command. In "School-days" he had only one—Wesley Barry. In "Notoriety" he has taken the star of "Why Girls Leave Home"—Maurine Powers, and added first-hand performers like Mary Alden, Rod La Rocque, George Hackathorne, J. Barney Sherry, Richard Travers and four others.

The action deals with the temptation of a country girl, played by Maurine Powers, to become notorious and cash in on a society scandal that she gets mixed up in by accident. Her name and face appear in newspaper headlines and the feeling is pleasant. Along come theatrical agents with offers to star her, now that she's so prominent in public print.

Aywon Announces New Picture Sales

Nathan Hirsh, President of the Aywon Film Corporation, New York City, announces the following recent sales: three Snowy Baker pictures and six Big Boy Williams pictures to Mr. Zambreno of the Unity Photoplay Co. of Chicago, for the territory of Northern Illinois; six Big Boy Williams pictures to the Columbia Film Service of Pittsburgh, Pa., for the territory of Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia; three Snowy Baker pictures to Luporini Bros. for the territory of Argentine, Paraguay and Uruguay; Fidelity, Woman Above Reproach, Winning of the West, Sons of the West, Gold of the Desert, Evolution of Man to Mr. Werner of the United Film Service of St. Louis, for the territory of Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri.

Prints Being Rushed on "Sure Fire Flint"

EXCHANGEMEN throughout the country who have contracted to distribute "Sure-Fire Flint" in their respective territories received heartening news this week when C. C. Burr, the producer, starring Johnny Hines, announced, that in order to meet the urgent demands of the state-right distributors on this production for early distribution, he has arranged with the Lyman H. Howe Film Laboratories of Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, to give special day and night service in the developing of enough prints to route them to all exchanges with all possible speed.

This arrangement was decided upon by Mr. Burr because of the general exchange demand for this second Hines feature, which is reported to be bigger in story and production than "Burn 'Em Up Barnes."

Billboard Campaign on Burr Picture

Exhibitor and exchange congratulations are daily pouring into C. C. Burr's office on the intensive nationwide out-door billboard campaign Burr has instituted in behalf of "Sure Fire Flint," starring Johnny Hines. In New York City alone, the Thomas Cusack Company has 48th Street, directly opposite the Strand Theatre, the other at Broadway and 7th Avenue.

Coincident with the outdoor campaign in New York, Burr also contracted for campaigns of like immensity in every principal city throughout the country.

Arrow Releases Sold in Boston

J. S. JOSSEY, who returned this week from Boston, brought with him a contract signed by Patten and Conville, under the terms of which Independent Films, Inc., acquire the New England rights to three Arrow releases, "The Innocent Cheat," "Chain Lightning" and "The Splendid Lie."

"The Innocent Cheat" is the Arrow-Ben Wilson special which created a favorable impression during its various engagements in and about New York.

"Chain Lightning," another Ben Wilson production, is a race-track story, with its locale laid in the Southland. Ann Little enacts the leading role.

"The Splendid Lie," in which Grace Davison is starred, is a society drama.

Press Book Issued on "Curse of Drink"

Bobby North showed the benefit of his twenty-five years of showmanship when he flashed a twenty-page press-book on "The Curse of Drink" before interested buyers and picture men this week. The book was a surprise. From cover to cover it is different from the regular run of campaign literature that goes with every new release.

The front page is the main departure from the beaten path. Instead of the usual advertising screamer that decorates a press-book cover and is supposed to be the main noise on the feature there is a colored drawing of a buxom babe "asleep at the switch." The drawing is taken from "Judge" and shows a baby overcome by the influence of the milk bottle, dead asleep. The caption underneath is the title of the picture "The Curse of Drink."

Extra play is given exploitation a page full of practical suggestions is published.

Territories Sold on Serial

Sam Grand Purchases New England Rights on Selig Animal Pictures

SAM GRAND, Federated member for New England, made a special trip to New York this week to close negotiations with the Export & Import Film Company on the Selig serial, "The Jungle Goddess," which that company is distributing.

Grand had been dickering for this wild animal serial ever since its completion, it is reported. No figures are mentioned in the announcement of the sale by Export & Import but it is understood to have been a record price for a serial in this territory. Grand will release the chapter picture about September first and intends to start an extensive exploitation campaign.

Louis Auerbach also announced that following the signing of the contracts on this deal Grand got into touch with Bobby North, whose Apollo Exchange bought the Greater New York and Northern New Jersey rights on the serial some time ago and who has reported unusual heavy bookings thereon, and together the two film men closed for the Upper New York State rights on "The Jungle Goddess."

It is said that within the next thirty days several of the country's biggest independent exchangemen will close on the Selig serial for September first release. Sol Lesser is now distributing it in California, Arizona and Nevada; Bob Lynch in Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey; Tom Brannon in North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee and Bobby North in New York.

Equity Closes Foreign Contracts

CONCOMMITANT upon the announcement last week of the stupendous deal made by Equity Pictures Corporation for their latest production, "What's Wrong With the Women," is the fact that contracts have already been closed for the sale of this Special for Australia and New Zealand and for the South American countries: Argentine, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador.

The buyer for the first-mentioned territory is the Australasian Films, Ltd. of New York City; and Jacobo Glucksmann of New York was the purchaser of the rights for the Spanish-speaking countries.

Boy Actor Engaged for New Picture

Before the Pine Tree production, "The Broken Silence," was complete, Joseph Depew, ten-year-old actor, was engaged for the title role of "Timothy's Quest." He was the first boy Director Sidney Olcott and the author, Kate Douglass Wiggin, agreed could play the most important part in the screen version of her popular novel. Therefore a vacation planned for the youngster was deferred. Following several weeks in Maine, where exteriors of the production were filmed, there were three weeks in the studio. And before the engagement was terminated, Joe was sought for three more pictures.

Last season Joe scored a decided "hit" in the stage play, "The Hero," with Richard Bennett, and established his histrionic

Backer Western Series Is Sold

Sales Manager Announces Closing of Territories on J. B. Warner Pictures

THE Franklyn E. Backer series of Westerns starring J. B. Warner has been sold for Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, to the Quality Film Corporation of Pittsburgh, of which Harry Lando is president. The Lando Film Distributing Company has also bought this same series for Ohio and Kentucky.

The territory on this series is being closed up rapidly, Jack Von Tilzer, General Sales Manager of East Coast Productions having just closed with G. A. Wedig, who controls the All Star Features of Detroit, for all of the state of Michigan except the upper peninsula. Von Tilzer is now on a tour through that section and reports much enthusiasm on the part of State Right buyers as soon as they see the Warner features screened. These Westerns were directed by Clifford S. Elfelt. Each feature is a five-reeler adapted from a well known magazine.

Elfelt, who was in New York to confer with Mr. Backer for several days, has returned to the West Coast, where he will continue to direct Warner. This star will soon start an entirely new series, Mr. Elfelt and Mr. Backer having decided upon this series as a result of the success of the current Warner pictures.

"Big Stakes" is now being released in the territories closed for the series, and "Flaming Hearts" will be the next release.

Eugene Sue's Romance, "Secrets of Paris," Reported About Half Finished

THE Charles C. Burr-Whitman Bennett production of the "Secrets of Paris," taken from Eugene Sue's romance, "The Mysteries of Paris," is about half finished. Kenneth Webb, who is directing the picture, is more than pleased with the manner in which the big scenes have come out. The biggest scene is the fight between the Prince (Lew Cody) and The Strangler (Montague Love). This battle takes place in the famous Rat Hole, a cafe so well known to all readers of both Sue and Victor Hugo. It was the hang-out of all the thugs, cut throats, street women and the dreaded apache in Paris. The role of the Prince is one that appeals to Mr. Cody. He claims it to be the best part he ever had and he is making the most of it. Another big scene is that of the cabaret and dance of the apache. In this Dolores Cassinelli as a true adventuress is shown in a part that gives her every opportunity to bring out all her latin temperament.

The scene in the dungeon showing the rising of the waters of the Seine, coming in this cellar in which the Prince and Mayflower (Gladys Huelette) are held prisoners, has been most cleverly carried out, according to Mr. Bennett, who has taken special care that this scene is realistic in every detail.

Tieup Is Effected on "Curse of Drink"

Joe Weil, of the Export & Import Film Company, has effected a tie-up with the Leslie-Judge Company on the Blaney melodrama, "The Curse of Drink," the American distribution rights of which were taken over by Larry Weber and Bobby North.

An extensive twenty-four sheet and one-sheet teaser campaign will mark the first step in the popularizing of this feature.

Hallroom Boy Comedies Going Well

THAT all signs point to the new series of Hallroom Boys Comedies going over bigger than ever is the opinion voiced this week by two of the buyers of this newest series of two-reel gloom-chasers based on the adventures of Percy and Ferdie Hallroom.

Pete Oletsky, head of Federated Film Exchange of Baltimore, who bought the newest series recently, sent a day-letter to Jack Cohn immediately upon receipt of a print of the first of the new pictures, saying:

"Hallroom Comedies went over big in this territory. Everyone a knockout."

Morgan A. Walsh, manager of Federated Film Distributors, Inc., of San Francisco, also wrote to the New York offices of the producers that his organization was very enthusiastic about the new series of Hallroom Boys Comedies.

"Don't wear yourself out waving a palm-leaf fan."

Phil Goldstone to Make "Mother and Dad"

Phil Goldstone, who arrived in New York from the coast during the week, announced that his second picture will be titled "Mother and Dad." He will start work on it on his return to the coast in about a week.

The first of the Goldstone pictures, "Deserted at the Altar," will be released on the state rights market in October.

"American Toreador" Purchased in N. Y.

Aywon Film Exchange reports purchasing the rights for the territory of Greater New York and Northern New Jersey for the American Toreador, featuring Virginia Warwick and Jim Fatten. This feature is being prepared with an elaborate advertising campaign. Release date is set for October 1st.

"Why Do Men Marry" Is Latest Unity

THE advantage of a title carrying a specific idea is illustrated in the special production, "Why Do Men Marry?" which, it is now announced, will be marketed by Unity Pictures, Inc., in the independent field commencing September 15.

The Unity offices in New York have selected this production to blaze the way for several big pictures which they will put out this year. Edy Darceia, who is featured in "Why Do Men Marry?" will be the star of the subsequent productions. Her success in the Fox special, "Nero," has stamped her not only as a woman of rare charm but an actress of exceptional ability. In "Why Do Men Marry?" she has the advantage of a modern story, lavishly produced, and a logical opportunity to wear gowns which will be of special interest to women. It is said that Miss Darceia wears a different gown in practically every sequence of the picture.

An attractive and practical plan book on "Why Do Men Marry?" has been prepared by Victor Nurnberg, and will be off the press the first of next week.

Increased Activity in Serials

Arrow Executive Points Out Popularity of Conservative Serial Pictures

WRAY JOHNSTON, Vice-President of Arrow Film Corporation, notes an increased activity in the serial market, due, he believes, to the ever-growing popularity of this particular type of screen entertainment.

"I don't think," said he in a recent interview, "that the lurid, sensational serial, filled with impossible situations and spiced with equally impossible 'thrills,' is what the theatre-goers want. But if you give them real entertainment in serial form,—a rational and logically constructed picture, well produced and well executed,—it's a proved truth that the result at the box office is invariably highly gratifying."

"This, I feel sure, accounts for the popularity of 'NAN OF THE NORTH,' which, since its release, has been registering heavily in every section of the United States. It was made by Ben Wilson, and Ben,—as the old-timers know,—was the first man to begin developing the serial picture.

"During the past week we have signed four important contracts on 'Nan of the North.' In Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia it will be marketed by Federated Film Exchange, in Northern Illinois and Indiana by Progress Pictures Company of Chicago, in Ohio and Michigan by Standard Film Service Company of Cleveland and in Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia by Liberty Film Exchange of Washington."

Enthuse Over "Rags to Riches"

Premiere Presentation on West Coast Brings Good Reports to Warner Office

THE premiere presentation of the Wesley Barry picture, "Rags to Riches," a Harry Rapf production made for the Warner Brothers, was recently given at the Strand Theatre, Pasadena. According to Rapf the production was received with enthusiasm by a large audience, and the response exceeded his wildest expectations.

In a telegram to Harry M. Warner, Rapf said: "Showed 'Rags to Riches' at Strand, Pasadena. Picture went over way beyond expectations. Turned out great audience picture. It has class and a big story full of laughs."

J. H. Goldberg, of the S. & O. Pictures Corp., Los Angeles, who was one of the spectators at the showing, wired the Warner offices as follows: "Had the pleasure of seeing 'Rags to Riches' and certainly must compliment you upon making one of the greatest productions of year. It is a work of art, thrilling, unique and original in every respect."

The cast supporting Barry includes Niles Welch, Ruth Renick, Russell Simpson, Richard Tucker, Minna D. Redman, Gilbert Clayton, Elaine Manning, Eulalie Jansen and "Snitz" Edwards. The story was written by William Nigh and Walter De Leon, and it was directed by Wallace Worsley.

Foreign Rights Sold on Neal Hart Series

EXPORT & IMPORT FILM COMPANY, INC., which controls the foreign rights on a series of Neal Hart five-reel features this week announced the sale for Cuba and Venezuela of six subjects, namely: "Hell's Oasis," "Danger Valley," "God's Gold," "Black Sheep," "Kingfishers Roost" and "Skyfire."

Activities of Exchange Managers, Exhibitors, Salesmen and Others

Buffalo

Sarah Rappaport, formerly with Filkins & Murphy, is now a member of Educational exchange staff in the Beyer building. Miss Rappaport is one of the veterans along Film Row. John H. Lyons has been engaged by Manager Howard F. Brink as a member of the sales force. Gail Lesch is the new bookkeeper and cashier and Eddie Jauch is booker. Eddie is also obtaining a lot of play dates in his spare time, according to Mr. Brink.

Ralph Mau has resigned as assistant booker at the Paramount exchange to become associated with Ralph Myerson in Macy Pictures, a new local company formed to put over a local Topics film.

George A. Hickey and his Goldwyn staff will move into the Beyer building, 509 Pearl street, on or about October 1, occupying the north half of the first floor. The exchange will be equipped with every modern device and will be one of the finest in the state. Mr. Hickey is now all set for his fall drive on the big 20.

Paul B. Elliott, formerly with Vitagraph in Syracuse and with Pathe in Albany is now covering the Southern Tier for Paramount. It looks like the local gang is going to draw down a big slice of that Paramount Week prize money as the office is now second on the list for the entire country. All one hears in the exchange these days is talk about the 1923 models in automobiles. Everyone in the office will probably have a new car if they get the expected kale.

R. S. Bendell is now in charge of the new Albany office of Film Booking Offices of America. Mr. Bendell has been a member of the local staff for a long time. He has also been connected with several other Buffalo exchanges. The Strand here will put on a big exploitation campaign in connection with the week's run of "In the Name of the Law," early in September. The home office of F. B. O. will send an exploitation man to assist in the campaign.

Henry W. Kahn was in New York last week for a conference with Metro office officials. A. C. Hayman, president of the new Strand company in Niagara Falls accompanied Henry to Gotham.

Kansas City

A farewell party marked the departure of H. N. Holmes from the Kansas City Universal branch office. Mr. Holmes, who was assistant manager, has accepted a position as special representative for the Film Booking Offices of America in the Kansas City territory and will be under his staunch friend, "Curley" Calvert. Friday night Mr. Holmes gave a farewell party at his home and the event incidentally marked the birthday of Calvert, although just which birthday it was "Curley" would not divulge. Art Johnson will succeed Holmes in the Universal office.

M. J. Meyer, former representative of Richards and Flynn exchange in Kansas City, who seven months ago was forced to resign because of ill health, again is on the old job.

Thomas Dodd, booker at the Kansas City Pathe Office, has been promoted. Last week Dodd ventured forth into the Northern Kansas territory in search of contracts. He will be succeeded in the office by "Curley" Wilson.

"Physical results" of the success of C. E. Gregory, the prize winning salesman of the Kansas City Goldwyn office, could be seen this week in the form of a 1922 red sport Buick roadster. Had the contest lasted a while longer it is difficult to surmise just what Gregory might have been driving about the streets.

R. E. Recob, formerly with the Kansas City Universal office, again is back on the same job after an absence of three years, during which time he was with the Federated Exchange in Oklahoma City.

Another addition to the sales force of the Kansas City Associated Exhibitors office was made this week — Roland Ringo, who will spend most of his time in the territory.

Washington

John J. Scully of the New York office of Educational was in Washington the week of August 14th, looking after the local Educational exchange, prior to the appointment of a new manager. This is Mr. Scully's second trip here this month, and is due to the resignation of J. Howard Beaver, Washington manager of the Educational Film Exchanges.

Mr. Beaver's resignation was effective, Saturday, August 19, as he is already handling his new duties as exchange general manager for Tom Moore's franchise in the Al Lichtman organization.

Leo G. Garner of The Reliance Film Corporation, of Washington, and his office manager, Fred Ballinger, join with Manager Nat Sauber of Rialto Productions of Washington, in stating that they are absorbing the Rialto exchange, whose office is being discontinued and moved into the quarters of the Reliance, in the Mather building. Sauber will be assistant manager of sales in the consolidated organization. The Reliance exchange has given up the handling of Triangle re-issues, and is to handle new releases of all types of product on the states-right plan, it is announced.

Publicity Director Edmunds of the Associated First National exchange states that a private showing of "Heroes and Husbands" was recently held at the residence of former President Woodrow Wilson, on S Street, Katherine McDonald being still his favorite film star. The first showing in public of Miss McDonald's new release was the week of August 6 at The Metropolitan of the Crandall chain.

J. E. Storey of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., general representative of the home office, was a visitor at the Washington office of Pathe, Saturday, August 19. His tour of the Southern territory under his supervision convinces him that business is promising, and much better further South than here or in the North.

District Supervisor Kendall of the Eastern territories of Vitagraph has been a Washington visitor the past ten days. While here he has been directing the local exchange, as "Gene" Wilson, the Washington manager, is making a fall trade promotion tour and annual contract clean-up of Eastern Shore Maryland and Tide-water Virginia.

Manager Etris of The Savoy and Garden theatres of the Crandall chain here announces the recent marriage of his son, R. Wesley Etris, general manager of the Crandall houses at Martinsburg, W. Va., the Apollo and Strand there being under young Mr. Etris' direction. The bride was Miss Mary Farnsworth of Martinsburg, and the wedding took place in the Episcopal parish rectory there.

Cleveland

The Cleveland Exhibitors' League staged a picnic on Tuesday, August 15, which was a roaring success. Exchanges were represented as well as exhibitors, making a friendly gathering of over 500 people. Walter Lusk, manager of First National Exchange, was the star of the picnic. In the ball game between the Exchange Managers and Exhibitors, which the exchange men won 9 to 6 in seven innings, Lusk did a Babe Ruth that should have reduced his waist line several inches.

The exchanges supplied the prizes for games. They were all motion picture products.

Max Shencker, of the Family theatre, walked off with five prizes. Translated into practical terms that means that he won $75 worth of film service. He starred in a sack race, a married man's race, a 50-yard dash and a fat man's race. It sure paid Shencker to attend the picnic.

Joe Leavitt of the King theatre won a whole show, including a news reel, comedy and feature.

Martin Printz of the Lakewood won a Lande prize, which includes a whole show complete, and a whole week's poster service. This was in a three-legged race.

Martin Brown, secretary of the Exhibitors' League, succeeded in winning a feature from S. E. Gerson and another from Frank Greenwald in a sack race.

Dr. Brody of the Homesite theatre, who doctors professionally and exhibits for pleasure, won a feature in a three-legged race.

Even the girls came in for their share of the profits. Gertrude Sledz of the Hodkinson exchange won the bobbed-hair backward race, and had to pass around the nice box of candy, which was her reward.

A. M. Shiessel, assistant manager at the Hodkinson office, show what training will do. He won the managers' race—a box of cigars.

Mrs. Elmer G. Derr, president of the Cinema Club of Cleveland, was conspicuously present at the picnic. And "Uncle Mennie" Mandelbaum, president of Associated First National Exhibitors Company of Ohio, did the honors.

Mr. E. Mandelbaum, president of First National Exhibitors Company of Ohio, had a new title handed to him this week when his daughter, Mrs. William Blau of Cleveland, presented him with a granddaughter. Congratulations!

St. Louis

George Levine, general manager of Universal short subjects, is expected to call at the local Universal office during the coming week. He is touring the Universal exchanges.

Barney Rosenthal, Universal manager, is in New York City.

Manager George Ware of the local Vitagraph office reports much interest in Larry Semon Week, September 3 to 9.

R. A. White, sales manager for the Fox Film Corporation, spent August 21 and 22 in St. Louis. He is touring the Fox exchanges.

Milton Simon of New York City has been made manager of the St. Louis F. B. O. office. He took charge Saturday, August 19. He succeeded Gus Garrick.

Making the Theatre Fire Proof and Reducing the Insurance Rate

Automatic Sprinklers Applicable to All Houses for Small Cost

FIRE losses in theatres and motion picture houses from 1918 to 1920, inclusive, totalled $5,427,000 according to carefully kept records of the Actuarial Bureau of the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Such figures are significant not so much because of the huge property loss, but because such wholesale burning of places where the public congregates in large numbers is bound now and then to result in holocausts like the recent Rialto Theatre fire in New Haven where nine died and several score were injured.

It is beside the point to go into a detailed account of how motion picture theatres should be built to be safe. Thousands of theatre owners have their houses. They can't rebuild them. They want to know how to safeguard them and their occupants without ruinously expensive and impractical building alterations. They want to know how to make them conform to building laws and safety requirements present and to come. They want the answer to their dilemma to be definite and specific. And further, they want it to take into account the fact that many of these theatres are converted mercantile buildings located in congested city blocks, hemmed in on every side so that there is a limit to possible exit facilities.

Under such circumstances there is only one answer—Automatic Sprinkler Systems. Ninety-nine out of every hundred fire protection experts would agree on that. They would agree with Fire Chief Fancher of New Haven who said after the Rialto theatre fire: "If the Rialto Theatre, particularly the stage section, had been properly equipped with an Automatic Sprinkler System, I am confident that the fire would never have spread into the auditorium and that consequently there would have been no panic nor loss of life."

Automatic Sprinkler Protection can be applied to any building. Practically every worth while manufacturing and mercantile property is so equipped. The very simplicity of this protection has in some measure blinded the public to its mar-

To the Exhibitors Advantage

Fire protection for the Motion Picture Theatre is a subject every serious-minded exhibitor should give most serious attention.

There are several advantages enjoyed by the house that has taken the greatest precautions: The assurance of a minimum chance for a disastrous panic, greater popularity for the house among the theatre patrons and a decidedly lower insurance rate.

There is no better protection against fire hazard than through the installation of an efficient automatic sprinkler system. The investment necessary is relatively small, in fact, insignificant when viewed from the safety standpoint.

The advisability of installing some such protection should be investigated by all. Consult with a representative of any dependable Sprinkler Concern.

velous adequacy. Briefly, a system consists of a series of pipe running near the ceiling. At regular intervals Sprinkler Heads are installed. These heads consist of a bronze body protecting a fusible metal strut capable of withstanding a tremendous water pressure so that the chance of accidental opening is nil. When a fire starts, the heat ascends. The soldered strut melts and automatically releases a shower of water right over the fire and there only—one head covering a space of ten by ten feet. The opening of a head automatically sounds a fire alarm and if the system has A. D. T. Sprinkler Supervisory Service, also calls the fire department.

This excerpt from the Chicago Tribune of February 23d shows what such protection means—"Crossed wires had started a blaze in draperies over the stage of the playhouse. Heat from the flames started Automatic Sprinklers to working. Before the Fire Department arrived—less than three minutes—the last spark had been extinguished."

That is one recent fire. It has been practically duplicated in fifty-four other theatre fires under Automatic Sprinklers as recorded by the National Fire Protection Association. It is impossible in an article of this length to go into a detailed discussion of the extent to which sprinkler protection might be required in various types of motion picture theatres. Some would require protection only in stage sections, others in concealed spaces over the auditorium, some complete protection throughout. These are questions of detail on which the engineers of any reputable Sprinkler Company would be glad to advise theatre owners without cost or obligation.

In general it would seem proper to use the same methods in equipping motion picture houses as has been generally applied to theatres throughout the country. For instance, it has not been considered feasible or necessary to equip the auditorium itself, but it has been found desirable to equip all other portions.

The auditorium is usually high studded and this is not favorable to good sprinkler protection. Furthermore, any fire in the auditorium would be promptly discovered if it occurred while a performance was being given. Similarly, the foyer would not ordinarily need to be equipped with sprinklers from a standpoint of safety to life.

All of the stage portions should be equipped both above and below the stage floor, also the basement, if any, under the auditorium, and all store rooms, dressing rooms, closets or concealed spaces. If there is a false ceiling over the auditorium or an attic, this should be equipped with sprinklers with the possible exception of a concealed space which is absolutely vacant and unused, without electric wiring, or anything else, and where such space is shut off by substantial boarding from the stage or other portion so that a fire cannot readily spread into same.

If the projection room is constructed in a standard manner and is in the auditorium portion, Automatic Sprinklers would not be necessary. If, however, it is in a room or shut off from the auditorium,

PLAN OF SPRINKLERS IN BASEMENT.

Standard arrangement for a system of Grinnell Automatic Sprinklers installed in a motion picture theatre having for water supply a direct connection to the City Main; also a Fire Department Connection, so that when necessary the firemen can pump directly into the system

The city water supply is controlled by a gate valve and a Grinnell straightway alarm valve. This alarm valve is connected to a water motor alarm gong located on the outside of the building, which operates automatically upon the opening of a sprinkler in case of fire. Automatic sprinklers are installed throughout all portions of the building, including the basement, boiler room, dressing rooms, fly-galleries, under roof and over drop curtain. A line of open sprinklers is also installed over drop curtain which is controlled by hand-operated quick-opening valve located at convenient point so as to be reached from stage floor. A stand-pipe system with hose attached is also installed as shown for emergency use. The test valve shown connected to the system under roof is for the purpose of testing the operation of the alarm valve and to determine whether or not full water pressure is on the entire system at all times. Sprinklers installed under trap in stage are arranged so that they can be shut off and readily disconnected in order not to interfere with the operation of the trap

The Gloom Chaser

Life is too short to put in a cheap organ that does not draw the crowds—especially when you can have a Barton Orchestral Organ, a full house and a line at the box office window.

A Barton Organ is a magnificent instrument in the hands of any organist—it will follow every emotion of your screen stories and enable you to put on effective musical interludes—organ solo or orchestral.

The Barton is a full pipe organ with orchestral instruments of great range and variety—the Barton exclusive divided manual makes possible hundreds of exquisite combinations never before obtained. It will delight your steady patrons and bring back the new ones.

The Barton isn't expensive—you can own one easily.
The Barton special plan cares for that—write for it.

Properties of the Component Elements for Projection

Continuation of Motion Picture Projection with Mazda Lamps by H. H. Madgsick and C. E. Egler, National Lamp Works of G. E. Co.

Adjustment of Mirrored Reflector

With the prismatic condenser lens, the most satisfactory practical method of setting the mirror is to close the dowser and observe the image of the coils formed on the fire shutter through a small hole in the center of the dowser. For the mirror adjustment it is not important that this hole be exactly in the optical axis. With the lamp operated at normal current, the mirror may be moved into a position where an image of the reflected coils will be observed. The mirror is moved back and forth until this image is of the same size observe the images of the coils on a black card held in front of the objective lens or on the blade of the rotary shutter if the coil images happen to be focused upon it. Its application is limited since a well defined image is not formed outside the projector head where the card can be held, or in the plane of the rotary shutter, except with certain lens combinations.

Where plano-convex condensers are used, the mirror adjustment using the pinhole in the dowser should be supplemented when adjustment must be made while the theater is in use, by observing the meshing of the filament and reflected coil reflections on the surface of the rear condenser element. The best results with plano-convex condenser equipment are, however, obtained by observing the uniformity of illumination and color on the screen. One of the limitations of such condensers is the need for this procedure, which is usually impracticable.

Where an accurate mirror adjustment is neglected and the image of the reflected coils is superimposed on that of the coils themselves, materially reduced and uneven screen illumination results. The unevenness of screen illumination is less marked with the prismatic condenser.

The mechanism of a motion picture projector always causes some vibration, hence all clamping screws must be kept tightened to preserve the alignment of the optical elements. The adjustments should be examined from time to time, and in case a lamp is replaced during the progress of the performance, the adjustment should be checked at the first opportunity.

The Complete Equipment

A complete equipment in which are incorporated the most recent features of design, including the prismatic condensing lens, a lamp setter, and other desirable features discussed above is shown in Fig. 42. Two plano-convex lenses are mounted on the same holder with the prismatic condenser in such a manner that they can be quickly moved into position for slide projection. This is accomplished by pushing the lamp housing to one side on the base provided; guides and stops limit its movement to the correct positions for motion picture and slide projection. The ammeter is carried on the housing in full view of the projectionist and the regulator is mounted on the base directly behind the housing. The removable socket and lamp setter shown in Fig. 37 (published in previous issue) form a part of this apparatus.

Such equipment, designed especially for the Mazda lamp and providing a convenient means of making the necessary adjustments, greatly simplifies the mechanical operations of projection, enables the projectionist to devote close attention to the picture on the screen, and permits the advantages of Mazda lamp projection to be realized to the fullest extent.

This is the last installment of this series of articles on Mazda Projection. The material here printed in the past may be obtained from the National Lamp Works in the form of a bulletin.

as the image of the filaments. It is then slightly tilted or moved laterally and vertically until the image of the reflected coils appears in the spaces between the coils of the filament image, as shown in Fig. 41. On several of the projection machines the lamp house may be moved to one side. In this case, the image of the coils coming through the dowser hole may be shown greatly enlarged against the wall of the projection room, making it easier to observe the position of the reflected coils. It is very important that the two images be adjusted to the same size. It will be noted that the image of the reflected coils is inverted and reversed; the right segment of the direct image shows as the left segment of the reflected coils.

The most accurate method of setting the mirror is to reduce the lamp current, open the dowser and fire shutter, and to

More Light for Less Money With the G-E Incandescent Lamp Projector

Pictures equalling the best in the largest theatres can now be obtained in smaller theatres without costly apparatus.

The same steady illumination possible with a direct current arc can now be obtained with the G-E Incandescent Lamp Projector on either alternating or direct current at a great saving in first cost and at one-fourth the current consumed by the arc, taking into account all inevitable losses by either method.

Maintenance cost is also low because there is no carbon dust to injure the mechanism of the projection machine; and the cost of lamp renewals does not exceed the cost of arc lamp carbons.

The G-E Incandescent Lamp Projector produces better screen results than any a.c. arc equipment and is the equal of the d.c. arc outfit up to 50 amperes.

The simplicity of the Incandescent Lamp Projector (no adjustments during operation) and its healthfulness (no fumes or dust) recommend it to projectionists everywhere.

N. A. M. L. FORUM

Dear Sir:

Please publish this in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS advising correspondents or publishers of my correct address.

To the Forum of the league, dear member of the N. A. M. L., I wish to inform you of my change of address, 188 East Eighth street, formerly 181 East Sixth street, Oswego, N. Y.

Please be advised that I haven't given up writing for the Forum. The last of my write up was to get every one of the members toward the changing of the name in which J. Stull suggested first, I was the second one to favor his suggestion, in which his suggestion looked more distinguished to me than N. A. M. L.

It is, I know it! And so do you! If you will set yourself down to a pen or a typewriter and write in for it? Then with all probabilities we can get it through. It won't be if you don't act. There were only a mighty few in suggesting it. With all that there are in the league. So let's hear more of you in favor of this.

I am closing here and thanking you, I am,

Very sincerely,
G. E. BOARDWAY, No. 1273,
Oswego, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

I am enclosing herewith 25 cents for which please send me a bronze N. A. M. L. button. My number is 1071.

We have just installed a pair of Motiograph De Luxe projectors at the Majestic theatre where I am employed, and I hope to send you a picture of same in the near future.

Trusting to receive this button by return mail, I remain,

Very truly yours,
ALBERT T. WESENER,

Sheboygan, Wis.

Dear Sirs:

Have been a member of this league for over a year as you will see by my registration number and I am sure interested in the work the league is doing for the betterment of projection. I have only received one set of films which were inspected by a member of the league, but they were sure in good condition.

Have been operating at the Liberty theatre for almost six years with two Powers 6As and have so far had very good projection.

I would like very much if you would send me some more labels as I have been out of them

Who Can Answer These?

Here's a real live letter from one of our members.

Motion Picture News,
New York City.

Attention P. M. Abbott

Dear Sir:

I've been following the series of articles on Mazda lamp projection that have appeared in the past issues of the NEWS and wish to tell you that the series has been a real education in itself. There are many interesting things explained of which I previously knew little.

There are a few questions I'd like to ask as I am a user of Mazda lamps:

(1) What causes the glass globe of the lamp to bulge out in a spot once in awhile?

(2) How about using the hole in the dowsor for centering the condenser and lamp filament?

(3) When do you think the crystal beaded screen can be used to advantage?

(4) I've read that large screens are not good to use, how do you figure that out?

The fellows that send in their letters don't seem to ask many questions. How about it, Brothers? When you ask a question and somebody answers it, we all learn something.

I'd like to have the fellows give their opinions on my list of questions and start some real live dope along for our columns. I'm out to give real service to my manager and learn my business from A to Z. Who's with me on starting some real live discussion?

Yours for good projection,

RALPH HARRINGTON,
70 Westover Rd., Caldwell, N. J.

The Editor could give his answers to these questions but would rather hear from some of the brothers who have their own ideas on these matters. Who's going to give Brother Harrington the best list of answers?

There is no doubt but what Harrington is right on the usefulness of discussion in these columns. Ask some real questions (no one knows it all) and get some real answers. Editor.

for some months. I am very much interested in the N. A. M. L. section of the NEWS which I read every issue.

Yours for better projection,

ARCHIE GOSS,
Liberty Theatre,
Brigham City, Utah.

Brother Goss has, by this time, received his new supply of labels.—EDITOR.

Let your ideas help some one else

Dear Sirs:

Please find enclosed my application to join the N. A. M. L. I'm now stationed at Great Falls, S. C. I have been reading the MOTION PICTURE NEWS for some little time and haven't seen anything in it from this neck of the woods or rather 'whole South Carolina. We have a very up to date projection room, equipped with two of the very latest Powers' machines, enough for any projectionist to be proud of and it is at any time open for any projectionist to look it over. There is one thing I can kick against and that is bad films as I'm not yet a member of the league. I can truthfully say that films have been going away in better condition than they came.

Hoping to hear from you and other projectionists soon regarding the N. A. M. L.; any information will be appreciated.

Very truly yours,

HARVEY KING,
Box 113,
Great Falls, S. C.

Dear Sir:

As I did not know the address to send my application in to become a member of the National Anti-Misframe League, I am sending my application to you. If it is not correct you will find an extra stamp. Kindly forward it to correct address. Thanking you for the trouble.

Very truly yours,

Gentlemen:

Enclosed find money order for 25 cents for button, also for membership card. I joined several years ago. My number is 197. I lost my original card some time ago. So if possible, I would like to have another re-issued to me.

Respectfully yours,

NATIONAL ANTI-MISFRAME LEAGUE PLEDGE

AS a motion picture projectionist who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the projection-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in reasonably good condition, according to conditions of film when received. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother projectionists and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

NEW FRONT PLATE AND LENS MOUNT FOR POWER'S PROJECTORS

Has a rack and pinion adjustment with double focusing knobs so that the lens may be easily focused from either side of the projector. The front plate is a solid casting which provides a rigid support for the lens mount. A thumb screw securely locks the lens mount after the picture has been brought into accurate focus.

The mount proper consists of a split collar which is securely clamped by means of a set screw, thus holding the lens firmly in position. Adaptor rings can be supplied to hold any projection lens of standard diameter, and lenses may be changed without difficulty or delay.

McVicker's theatre has housed Marcus Loew brand of vaudeville for the past eight years, but with the razing of the old structure and the rising of the two million dollar house on the site, vaudeville has passed out.

"We have performed a unique feat of engineering," said Aaron J. Jones, in speaking of the new theatre. "While the house was still in operation, we began work on the new foundation. That was as long ago as December 1st. Bit by bit we removed the old foundation from beneath the building, inserted our new brick and stone, sunk our caissons and put in our steel. In fact the proscenium arch of the new building, and everything back of the stage line, including plumbing and tile flooring in dressing rooms, was completed before the theatre closed its season on May 1st. With the opening of our new theatre on September 15th, we will have broken all records by completing our rebuilding process in less than eighteen weeks from the time the doors of the old house closed. I am leaving for New York next Tuesday to arrange all the details for the New

Second McVicker's theatre to occupy the old site which was the home of legitimate drama and later vaudeville

McVicker's theatre. We will play the very biggest first run motion pictures obtainable, with unique and stupendous presentations, and with synchronization by an orchestra of forty pieces, much on the order of the Capitol and Strand theatres in New York. Money will be no object in preparing our entertainment. I am going to gather about me the finest artists, stage directors, conductors and assistants that it is possible to secure."

Million Dollar Niagara Falls Theatre Opens

With Senator James Walker, Hope Hampton, Jules Brulator, Lew Cody and other luminaries of the film world in attendance, the beautiful new $1,000,000 Strand theater in Niagara Falls has its opening Saturday evening, August 26. Miss Hampton's new picture, "The Light in the Dark," in which is incorporated a reel of new Eastman color process, is the feature.

The Strand, which was built by a company, headed by A. C. Hayman, has a seating capacity of 2,200, and is one of the finest equipped as well as lavishly decorated theatres in the country. The interior murals by Raaphael Beck, all symbolic of Niagara Falls legend, are real gems.

Gentlemen:-

Although unsolicited, I cannot help but take this means of expressing my gratification upon the satisfactory results obtained from the Westinghouse Motor Generator I purchased from you a little over two years ago for the Flushing Theatre. The only adjustment or repairs it required during that period was one set of new brushes.

Am therefore enclosing an order for the delivery of a 6½ K.W. Generator to take care of a larger throw as you know I am now enlarging the show house.

You may also accept my order for a 6½ K.W. for the Ronson Theatre, Newark and the New Arverne Theatre, Rockaway Beach.

Wishing you the best of success,

Very truly yours,

H. Gainsboro

MOTION PICTURE THEATRE EQUIPMENT

New Owners Make Extensive Improvements

The Gralyn theatre in Gouverneur, N. Y., has been sold to James and Harry Papayanakos, former owners of the Olympic, Palace and Antique in Watertown. Extensive improvements will be made and a large orchestra will be installed. Harry Papayanakos will be resident manager and J. Claire Carpenter, former owner and now manager, will be associated with him.—Taylor.

Motiograph Projectors Installed in State-Lake House

The installation of two of the newest model Motiograph de Luxe projectors has been completed at the State-Lake theatre, Chicago, one of the finest and most popular theatres in the United States. Projection problems offered by this house are very difficult and the splendid picture being thrown by the new machine is very gratifying to both the house management and Amusement Supply Company officials who made

Theatres and Studios for Transatlantic Boats

The Orient Steam Navigation Company, a British firm, successor to the Old P. & O. Steamers, famous for over fifty years with tourists, has announced the equipment of their newer boats with motion picture auditoriums, up-to-date projectors, and with camera material for taking motion pictures aboard ship.

A similar suggestion was made at the Picture Theatre convention here last spring, by Secretary of the Navy Denby, now returning from Japan, China and the Philippines, for use by American S. B. ships.—(Knappen.)

S. M. P. E. Fall Convention October 9th to 12th

The fall convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers has been officially set for Oct. 9th to 12th, the convention to be held at the Powers Hotel, Rochester, N. Y. From all indications the selection of papers to be presented at this meeting will prove of great value for the advancement of this industry. Papers treating of Laboratories, Studios, Projection and Theatre Equipment are among those listed.

the installation. The throw is 148 feet and the angle of projection 24%. The new blue enamel machines are equipped with the new Motiograph 125 Amp. lamp and lamphouse. Other important Motiograph installations in the Chicago loop district are now under way.

New Theatre Opens with Dime Admission

The New Jewel theatre, Poplar Bluff, Mo., was opened to the public on August 15. This amusement house seats 600 persons and is one of the finest in that section of the country. Henry Turner, owner of the Jewel, has announced a general admission price of 10 cents. He was in St. Louis arranging programs for his new house—Barrett.

Truxton Theatre Changes Hands

Oscar Stein has purchased the Truxton theatre, Washington, D. C., and Truxton Theatre Corporation from Sidney Lust of the Super-Film Attractions and has spent several thousand dollars in renovating the house.—Knappen.

New Corporation Formed

Clarksburg, West Virginia, is to have a new theatre; the Fairmont Theatre Company of 444 West Pike Street, being recently capitalized and incorporated as a $50,000 concern. Among the incorporators are: Claude Robins, Philip P. Steptoe, Louis A. Johnson, Leslie P. Canfield, and Charles C. Robb.—Farley.

Building House of 1,200 Capacity for $40,000

B. F. McKeller is building a theatre in Greenwood, S. C., that will have a seating capacity of twelve hundred on two floors at an approximate cost of $40,000. Work on the theatre has been progressing for some time and it is hoped to have it open in about two months.—Stellings.

Reel on "How To Make Radio"

Standard Film Service of Cleveland is putting out a single reel made by Russell Productions, Inc., called "HOW TO MAKE A RADIO FOR 60c." Every effort is being made to use this reel as a booster for fall business. Standard Film is putting out a booklet which contains the subtitles in the reel, and which will assist the novice in following out the directions indicated on the screen. Contests will be held in neighborhoods, the best radio made according to the directions of the picture to get a complete standard radio equipment as first prize. "How to Make a Radio for 60c." is being booked only in conjunction with the first chapter of the serial "Cap'n Kidd" (Loeb).

THE public-wise manager knows that an audience comfortably seated is half won. He knows, too, that with the other elements of attraction more or less evenly balanced, the more comfortable seats of one theatre will easily swing the decision of "where to go" in its favor. Seating that was tolerated five and ten years ago is endured under protest now or altogether avoided.

Our Theatre Engineering Seating Department will be glad to consult with any theatre owner or manager on new installations or renewal of old. We can show you without obligation how your theatre can "cheat old age" and revive its youth for further years of service.

Making the Theatre Fireproof

this room should be equipped with sprinklers.

Experience with theatres has shown that practically all fires which do any serious damage occur outside of the auditorium itself and a system of sprinklers installed in the portions above mentioned gives practically complete protection from the standpoint of fire loss as well as safety to life. There have been no serious fires in such properties where the Sprinkler System was in service.

Liberal allowances in rates are made by the insurance companies for theatres and motion picture houses equipped with sprinklers as above mentioned, but there is no uniform percentage of rate reduction. Judging from the protection afforded, a reduction of at least fifty per cent. would seem to be warranted but each case would have to be taken up as a special problem and insurance companies will name rates for this protection. It should be borne in mind that in most cases a considerable percentage of the rate without sprinklers may be due to surrounding buildings, that is, exposure conditions, and the reduction in rate due to sprinklers would depend largely on that portion of the rate which is not related to exposure.

Automatic Sprinklers is the one class of protection which can be applied to all types of theatres and motion picture houses regardless of construction. Such a system will make even a flimsy wooden building relatively safe both from a standpoint of fire and life.

The big truth to learn is that Automatic Sprinklers can be successfully applied to any theatre and that their application will render comparatively old structures safe from the standpoint of both property and life.

House Open During Repairs

The Fairyland theatre arranged an unusual method by which repairs were made to the house and at the same time not closing down entirely. The first three days of each week during August the theatre was closed, with performances on as usual during the latter half of the week.—Gibson.

ITEMS OF THE EXCHANGES AND THEATRES

OKLAHOMA CITY

Lilly & Wheeler of Commerce, Texas, have bought both houses of Barnes and Hunter at Sulphur Springs, Texas. The Buford, one of the houses, will be closed temporarily, but is expected to reopen some time next month.

The Amus-U theatre at Cordell, Okla., made quite a hit when it gave the people of that place complete election returns by radio in conjunction with the regular night performance. The theatre charged only the usual admission prices and after the show everyone was admitted free to get the returns.

Jack Schaefer, chief in Hodgkinson's Dallas, Texas, office, has returned after a trip to the home office in New York City.

R. I. Payne, assistant manager of the Dallas, Texas, branch of the Consolidated Film and Supply Co., is vacationing in Galveston, Texas.

H. J. Bailey, branch manager for Vitagraph at Dallas, Texas, has resigned and gone to New York to live. He was succeeded by J. E. Huey of Dallas, as branch manager.

Jack Corbett, for a long time with Southern Enterprises at Dallas, Texas, has been transferred to Atlanta, Ga. He is succeeded as branch manager at Dallas by Rocky Newton who was formerly assistant to Mr. Corbett.

W. F. Lange has purchased the Queen theatre at Nordheim, Texas, from H. F. Heldt.

The Oasis theatre was opened at Abilene, Texas, August 10. E. G. Langley, R. E. Brookshire and E. A. Holmes are the owners.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Saturday, August 19, the Pathe people gave a screening in their Washington projection room of No. 67 Pathe Weekly, showing the Tank Corps at Camp Meade, a picture taken by one of Tommy Baltzell's camera men. In the same reel, we saw the scenes of Tommy Baltzell's departure on the international air flyer from New York for Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

The Capitol theatre at Charleston, W. Va., is to be the scene of the annual memorial services for the dead of the 80th (Blue Ridge) division, to be held at the third annual reunion at Charleston of the Division's Veteran Association.

The mothers of the Phenix City, Georgia, Parent-Teachers' Association gave performances of D. W. Griffith's "Way Down East," the lion's share of the receipts being turned over to them by the Phenix, the town picture house. Starting last Friday, the film was to be shown afternoon and evening and the last performance on Saturday night, August 19. Proceeds will go towards the school sanitation scheme.

Commencing Sunday, September 3, the Strand, under the management of Mr. Sparrow, has announced the better 1922-23 Loew Vaudeville-Strand theatre feature pictures. Mid-summer renovation, new hangings, and change in entrance and exit lobbies, are to greet the early fall patronage. One change will make the main entrance face the intersection of 9th and D streets, thus bringing the present entrance into harmony with the exit foyer on D street. A new steel and glass marquee is to feature this new limestone office building front. Over the lobby will be a new electric sign facing down to the avenue. All these changes have been made gradually.

The Columbia theatre started its morning showings to orphans last week when some fifty youngsters were guests of Manager Beattus of Loew's and the Washington Times. The Washington Bus line motored the little ones down, and Mr. Brownley, a local candy man, presented candy, through Miss Hiser, who sings the solo, Forget-Me-Not, composed by Director Ernst Lutz especially for the Metro film of that name, now showing at the Palace.

CLEVELAND

The Stillman theatre opened last week with big feature productions for long runs. Prices have come down. They are 65 cents for evenings, Sundays and holidays, and 40 cents for matinees as against last year's prices of 75 cents and 50 cents.

Reade's Hippodrome opens this week, thus adding another home of feature photoplays. The Hippodrome formerly showed Keith vaudeville. Walter Reade of New York leased the house when the Keith lease expired. In addition to eight numbers of vaudeville, the Hippodrome, under the new management will show big features and a complete picture show. The opening production is "Orphans of the Storm," the first release of this feature at popular prices.

CANADA

The LaPlaza theatre, Toronto, Ontario, has long been looked upon as a neighborhood institution because of special features which have been presented in conjunction with pictures. The theatre has carried out this idea still further by offering radio concerts at evening performances. Community singing is also being conducted.

R. L. Gregory has sold his theatre, the "Wonderland," at Acton, Ontario, to Mr. Silverthorn and has arranged to build a new moving picture theatre at Brampton, Ontario.

The Opera House at Bathurst, N. B., which was burned last spring, is being rebuilt and will be opened in September. The original theatre was built only two years ago for the presentation of pictures.

The Bijou theatre, St. Stephen, N. B., which was destroyed by fire last spring, has been rebuilt and will reopen shortly. While building operations were under way, the local curling rink was utilized as a moving picture theatre. This rink was the first picture house in St. Stephen, by the way, having been used for this purpose 12 years ago.

The Gem theatre, Fredericton, N. S., is nearing completion and is to be opened as a moving picture house by F. G. Spencer of St. John, N. B., who controls theatres in St. John, Fredericton, Woodstock, Windsor, Amherst and other centers of the Maritime Provinces.

Herman Kobold, the new owner of the Dominion theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, has installed himself as the manager of the house with Walter Dolman, a well-known Winnipeg organist, as musical director. Improvements costing $10,000 were recently made in the Dominion, which is one of the oldest houses in Winnipeg.

INDIANAPOLIS

Great dramas in the Bible some day will be put in motion pictures and widespread good result, declared William Jennings Bryan in a talk in Cadle Tabernacle on Sunday, August 13.

Date for reopening of Loew's State has not been announced. Emil Seidel, director of Loew's State orchestra before the house was closed early in July, was instructed to hire musicians a week ago but since received cancellation of the order from New York. He will become director of the orchestra at the Park, where Shubert vaudeville starts Labor Day.

BALTIMORE

The Parkside theatre, which has been closed for several months, reopened last week with a policy of three or four pictures a week. The Parkside is a neighborhood playhouse of some 250 capacity.

The Southern Moving Picture Corporation has been incorporated at College Park, Md., to deal in motion picture cameras and supplies. Stock totaling $100,000, with a par value of $100 a share, is authorized. Warren E. Claffin, Frederick O. Petrie and Eloise P. Claffin are the incorporators.

Arrangements have been made for a receiver's sale of the entire stock of supplies of Palmore and Homand, Inc., of this city, recently declared bankrupt by the Circuit Court. The property consists of equipment of a film exchange of some proportions, and includes a number of features and short subjects released on a State Rights basis.

William E. Stumpf, secretary of the Exhibitors' League of Maryland and house manager of the Garden theatre, is at Hebrew Hospital recuperating from an operation. He will return to work in a fortnight.

ATLANTA

The Better Films Committee of Atlanta met last Thursday at their regular monthly meeting in the private dining room of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and Mrs. B. M. Boykin, president of the committee, outlined plans already formulated for the Better Films Week to be held in Atlanta beginning September 18.

S. Y. Freeman, vice-president of Southern Enterprises, Inc., is in New York on a business trip.

An attempt was made last Tuesday night to rob the safe of the Southern Enterprises, Inc., located in the Howard Theatre Building, Atlanta. The intruder had succeeded in clipping one bolt from the safe and had removed the hinges when the approach of the night watchman frightened him away. There was $1,000 in the safe at the time. An employee is suspected of the attempted robbery.

ST. LOUIS

"Monte Cristo" will be the opening attraction of the William Fox Liberty theatre for the 1922-23 season. It starts on September 2. Harry Greenman, manager of the Liberty, returned from New York Thursday, August 17, to arrange for the opening.

The audience at a recent showing of "The Scoffer" in the Piasa Chautauqua Moving Picture theatre by a 9 to 1 vote decided in favor of continuing the film when some of those present protested to Edwin Johnson, manager of the theatre, that certain sub-titles in the film made too lightly of religion. Johnson decided that everyone present should determine whether the picture should be taken off. About 90 per cent of those present voted to continue the show.

Joe Mogler, president of the St. Louis Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, has been re-elected to membership on the Republican Missouri State Committee. He has held the honor two terms.

The Monmouth, Ill., Ministerial Alliance is threatening that city with a Blue Law drive. At a recent meeting the organization adopted resolutions condemning Sunday baseball and similar amusements. The sky pilots charged that all such Sabbath practices of the individual are painful to the Christian conscience of the community and prevent the highest moral development.

Fannie Hurst, well known moving picture scenario writer, was the guest of St. Louis relatives recently. She plans a trip to Russia to study social conditions as material for several contemplated magazine articles and moving picture scenarios.

The continuation of the coal strike in Illinois has the managers of St. Louis motion picture houses alarmed regarding their winter's supply of fuel. Usually they stocked up in August, but there is hardly a house in town with more than a shovelful of coal in the supply bins.

The New Grand Central, West End Lyric, Lyric Skydome and Capitol theatres controlled by Skouras Brothers and the Missouri theatre, the Famous Players Missouri Corporation first run house, paid their respects to the St. Louis Browns the week of August 19 by showing special moving pictures of the St. Louis American League club in action. Skouras Brothers supplemented their film with pictures of Brown stars of former years, including members of the famed Four Time Pennant Winners of 1885-86-87-88. The Browns are threatening to win a pennant for St. Louis.

The Opera House, O'Fallon, Ill., has been purchased by Sam Taylor from H. P. Schwarz. The price paid was not made known. Taylor takes charge September 1. The house seats 400.

NEW ORLEANS

The New Orleans Association of Commerce wants the industry to tidy up their internationalism, and change their attitude of showing up in their productions every foreigner as "a boob," according to a series of resolutions recently adopted by the association's foreign trade bureau. The commerce association members exhibited great anxiety over what they described as the "impossibility of a motion picture presenting a Mexican in any other light than that he is a villain."

The difficulties between the New Orleans Fire Board and the motion picture theatres of that city concerning complaints by the board that the houses are not adequately protected against fire hazards has culminated in a proposition by the board to the effect that each theatre maintain, at its own expense, of course, a uniformed city fireman, at its doors during the entire business hours. To this proposition and the considerable additional expense it entails the picture interests, through the Amusement Division of the New Orleans Association of Commerce, have promptly, emphatically and unequivocally sounded the voice of opposition.

"The theatres of New Orleans are adequately equipped with exits," declared J. Eugene Pearce, chairman of the amusement division. "A fatality from panic would be virtually impossible and in case of fire any theatre could be emptied before the blaze would gain headway. License fees for theatres here are so high in comparison with other communities that it would be unfair to impose this additional expense on theatres, when such a burden is not placed on factories, department stores, dance halls and any other place where large crowds of people habitually congregate."

No definite action has as yet been taken by the city authorities with respect to the opposition voiced by the exhibitors.

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

Adds good photography to picture interest —gives that truthful, accurate reproduction that is only possible when the reproductive scale of the positive material parallels that of the negative. That's why Eastman Positive Film carries quality through to the screen.

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base—now available in nine colors, is identified throughout its length by the words “Eastman” “Kodak” stenciled in black letters in the transparent margin.

"Figures Don't Lie"

Contained in this issue is the September compilation of "Exhibitors' Reports in Percentages," the most comprehensive and dependable method of judging the box office and entertainment value of feature pictures ever devised.

"Exhibitors' Box Office Reports in Percentages" is published once each month only, owing to the amount of clerical work involved in compiling the table.

An emotional cyclone—

A tornado of laughs—

A rainstorm of tears—

An avalanche of thrills—

That's "The Old Homestead." Here is America's greatest play brought to life by a perfect cast, with all the old thrills and a hundred new ones.

In Theodore Roberts, Uncle Josh lives again. And all the other characters—dear to the hearts of the American people—are so real you'll never forget them.

It's the greatest word-of-mouth picture ever made. Everybody who sees it will talk about it to everybody else.

Those who have seen it say it is a bigger box-office attraction than "Blood and Sand."

Your audience is sold on Rupert Hughes!

They like his brand. It hits folks where the heart is.

That's what made "The Old Nest" a box-office wonder that still continues to reap profits.

Rupert Hughes has now written an ever bigger drama of American home life, a tender, thrilling yet humorous story of a father who pays the bills.

It has the Hughes heart wallop. It has the Hughes audience angle. It has tears laughs, fights, frolics.

IT HAS EVERYTHING!

James W. Dean, the critic for the Newspaper Enterprise Association Service, says of "That Son of a Sheik" —

"This comedy reaches a high level of production. Its scenes are just as beautiful as those of the various feature pictures dealing with desert themes. Its story is more interesting than most of them and its burlesque portrayal of desert life just as true to life as that of films which sought seriously to reproduce that life."

To the Independent Producers of Motion Pictures offering services not hitherto available

Distribution

Our intimate acquaintance with all phases of distribution — national, independent or state-rights—enables us to place your product at the most advantageous terms and with the utmost protection.

Field Selling

Our organization in the field will undertake a new and vital service for independents by watching every first run situation and assisting the local exchanges in placing the product advantageously, and in following up unsold territory.

Auditing

With a thorough knowledge of values, we will approve contracts, enforce play dates, and with a competent auditing staff in the field, we will check up every exchange to the end that our clients may obtain their due revenue from each booking.

LEST YOU DO NOT KNOW—
Alexander S. Aronson, who pioneers this thorough and long-needed service, has had a most extensive and intensive experience in all phases of motion picture distribution.

SOME nine years ago he became associated with the WORLD FILM CORPORATION, confining activities at different times to their producing and distributing divisions.

Thereafter he organized, with others, REGAL FILMS OF CANADA, and subsequently GOLDWYN PICTURES LIMITED, also of CANADA.

Three and a half years ago he joined Goldwyn in the United States and controlled their distribution from Denver west.

In December, 1920, he became General Sales Manager and Vice-President of the GOLDWYN DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION, from which duties he voluntarily resigned this year.

Exploitation

We will have on our staff competent people to thoroughly exploit your product in important key cities, and to cooperate with the exploitation departments of the distributors.

Foreign Department

Our foreign division will place product so that our clients may obtain the maximum benefit from foreign sales. Where product is disposed on World's Rights, this department will be an invaluable aid in determining the Foreign value.

Star Appearances

We will maintain a department to book stars or featured players, either with or without film, obtaining the most advantageous business arrangements.

Every Department will be under my personal supervision

TO WEST COAST PRODUCERS

Within the next three weeks Mr. Aronson will be in Los Angeles. Write or wire now to arrange interviews when there.

Alexander S. Aronson

These services as a whole or in part, as you require them, are available at a price you can afford to pay either on a flat basis or percentage arrangement. They can be applied to product already released as well as to product contemplated for release.

The GRAPHIC

America's Screen Magazine of Human Interest

EDUCATIONAL has desired ever since its inception to release a genuine screen magazine.

Not a release made up of scenery, but one built up on short, terse stories filled with zest and human interest.

To build such a product required the services of national magazine and newspaper specialists who only recently became available.

Motion picture specialists have been added to the staff, and on October first the premier release of THE GRAPHIC will be ready for your closest scrutiny.

In brief, THE GRAPHIC will be a human interest digest of the world and its people. Not necessarily people who are prominent in the sense that they are rich and powerful, but always people who are picturesque.

THE GRAPHIC will reflect not only what people are doing, but how they feel about what they are doing.

Are You After Money?
Then Read That Wire

13,000 paid admissions in 3 days

—in the sizzling heat of one of the worst show towns in the world in summer time—13,000 spot cash admissions—that crashes the records of any comparative receipts of the biggest success on Broadway, N. Y. No picture ever shown on Broadway, New York, ever drew as much money in comparison, theatre for theatre—picture for picture and population for population. That's what F. B. O.'s "THE FATAL MARRIAGE" did at—

Clune's Broadway Theatre, Los Angeles

Read the telegram, you exhibitors who are looking for cash money and quick dough. Read the telegram you exhibitors who are howling about poor business. Read the telegram you exhibitors who think you've played real money getters. Then ask yourself if you haven't been asleep at the switch. "THE FATAL MARRIAGE" is a whale of an attraction with by Christy Cabanne. A smashing big press sheet goes with every booking and shows you enough exploitation to put this money getter across with a wallop. Everything is complete. Everything is ready for a clean up for you. Are you going to sit by and let this sure fire, cinch money slip away from you? What's your answer?

THE VALLEY OF SILENT MEN

Here is a Gold Mine For You!

Curwood, past master of Northwest country fiction, never wrote a better story than "The Valley of Silent Men."

Borzage, who directed "Humoresque," took his company to the actual location where the scenes are laid and there, amidst the natural surroundings, made his picture. He has created another "Humoresque," the gold medal winner, the picture exhibitors fought for and of which the public never tired.

Alma Reubens does the greatest work of her career. Lew Cody, George Nash and Joe King are included in the all-star cast.

PRESENTS

A GASNIER PRODUCTION

"RICH MEN'S WIVES"

While New York crowds of Mid-Winter proportions were storming the Capitol Theatre in Mid-August weather, the Trade Press Critics paid this splendid production the very highest tributes.

One of the Outstanding Attractions

Martin J. Quigley, editor and publisher of the Exhibitors Herald, wrote:

"'Rich Men's Wives' is a valuable addition to the list of big pictures of the current season. . . . Al Lichtman launches his distributing organization with a Gasnier production which is entitled to recognition as a first rate attraction in every important aspect. It is a lavishly and effectively produced society drama. It is enacted by a singularly fine cast. IT IS ONE OF THE SEASON'S OUTSTANDING ATTRACTIONS."

Head and Shoulders Above Others

From the Exhibitors Trade Review:

"The quality which lifts it head and shoulders above the ordinary photoplay is the tremendous amount of sympathy it creates for the suffering young mother and her pretty baby boy. Has a decided commercial value. 'Rich Men's Wives' is refreshingly free from the slushy striving after effect. The picture gathers force as it proceeds. Such scenes as that in which the baby boy kisses his outcast mother through the glass door brought tears to the eyes of the huge audience which packed the big Capitol Theatre during its initial showing, and there were many moments when the sympathy of the crowd was expressed loudly, a sure test of the heart interest striking right home. Artistically, the picture is a treat."

Looms up like a Million Dollars

Roger Ferri, in Moving Picture World, said:

"Al Lichtman made certain promises to the exhibitors of the country that he would strive to give them pictures that would fatten box office receipts. And he has wasted no time in fulfilling that promise, for in the first release of the Al Lichtman Corporation, 'Rich Men's Wives,' he has a picture that will compare favorably with the best in the business. It's sure-fire material that he has given the theatre owners in this production, which is luxurious in settings, and valuable in cast and story. Whatever superlative claims you make for this feature will be substantiated by the picture itself, for it has everything—pathos, humor, thrills and romance. This picture can be shown at the 'blue blood' houses and at the so-called small town theatres, and go over like a tornado. As a production, it looms up like a million dollars, elaborate, pretentious and extensive in many ways. Go after this one tooth and nail."

A Woman's Picture

Laurence Reid, in Motion Picture News:

"A woman's picture—the mother love theme being developed to stimulate the feminine sex. A good box office title likely attract the eye everywhere, a couple of good troupers in House Peters and Claire Windsor, and a society background charged with real atmosphere—these will be sufficient to make this picture popular wherever shown."

LLOYD GETS LAUGH FROM PRESIDENT

Harding Finds Comedy Relief When He Sees Harold in "Grandma's Boy."

Washington, August 10.—It took the antics of a motion picture comedian, Harold Lloyd, to bring a smile to the care-worn face of President Harding Thursday night, for the first time since the nation's chief executive has been overburdened by the cares of the coal and railroad strikes. For an hour the president forgot the momentous cares of his office, and almost rolled out of his chair with hilarious laughter. He came out of the "show" saying he felt more refreshed than he had for three weeks.

Harold Lloyd's new comedy, "Grandma's Boy," was the "medicine" that brought sunshine back to the president's countenance. It was administered, upon the urgent request of the president's private physician, after every other remedy had failed. The film was brought from a local film exchange to the White house, where a private exhibition was given in the east room. The president and Mrs. Harding, with a dozen members of their household, attended the performance.

The president expressed amazement at the resourcefulness of the young comedian in inventing so many new "stunts," and in his ability to provoke such continuous laughter for a solid hour.

NEW YORK

Turn your lobby into an Irish village.
Go to it. Now—next fall—next winter,

—Motion Picture News

From the New York American

"My Wild Irish Rose" is a good picture, and it is well photographed.

From the New York Evening Telegram

"My Wild Irish Rose" is a strange coupling of two classics—a song and a story. It sips the sweetness from both Chauncey Olcott's song and Dion Boucicault's famous stage success. This appealing motion picture, which has the power to please all factions and offend none, is given a surrounding musical program that is Celtic to the core, and is worthy of hearing, even as a separate entity.

From the New York Herald

The settings have been well chosen and the picture will be enjoyed by all those who travel miles to hear Chauncey Olcott say, "Ah darlint."

From the New York Tribune

"My Wild Irish Rose" is unusually good entertainment.

From the Motion Picture News

No picture has ever been placed in celluloid form which is more true to the atmosphere of the Emerald Isle. One can almost smell "the ould sod" and the peat bogs. Scenically, "My Wild Irish Rose" is a thing of beauty.

From the New York Evening World

If anyone enjoys ANY sort of entertainment this sort of weather, they will enjoy "My Wild Irish Rose."

From the New York Evening Journal

A liberal, full-sized bouquet of flowers is shown in "My Wild Irish Rose" at the Strand Theatre. "My Wild Irish Rose" is a beautiful, interesting and efficient adaptation of Boucicault's play, "The Shaugraun."

From the New York Sun

"My Wild Irish Rose," the adaptation of Dion Boucicault's play "The Shaugraun," at the Strand this week, is not much wilder or distinct from other roses, but it will be enjoyed by those who like any kind of roses. It has been well directed by David Smith, and there is a freckled little boy in it whose popularity may lead Jackie Coogan to adopt freckles, too.

From the New York Daily News

There's the funniest little boy—Richard Daniels—whose freckles rival those of young Wesley Barry, in this picture.

IRISH

CHICAGO TRIBUNE

It's a nice change from the bobbed heads and abbreviated frocks of today, this glimpse back into Victorian times. The clank of swords and the musty scent of crinolines have charm that never dies. It's a delightful bit of nineteenth century drama.

Chicago Herald-Examiner

The story of "My Wild Irish Rose" is romantic and dramatic. There is a great deal of wit and beauty in the picture. You will be missing something out of the ordinary if you miss "My Wild Irish Rose."

From Chicago American

Pat O'Malley is a real Irish boy in a role that he evidently enjoys, and that he makes you like as much as he does. A small Irishman, Mickey Daniels, will make all freckled faced youngsters look to their laurels. Stratford's musical setting for "My Wild Irish Rose" makes a double reason for you to hurry there. Come on, let's go.

SAN FRANCISCO

From San Francisco Bulletin

"My Wild Irish Rose" abounds in dramatic situations. The arrest of the hero, his trial, banishment to Australia, his escape from the prison ship, a stirring battle atop a cliff, are but a few of them. The director has achieved an array of living and lovable characterizations that stand out with cameo brilliance.

From San Francisco Call

"My Wild Irish Rose," the feature photoplay at the Tivoli this week is a thing of beauty, and runs true to the atmosphere of the Emerald Isle. The picture has a good story, one which holds the interest at all times, and a splendid cast, the members of which give some fine character portrayals.

From San Francisco Chronicle

"My Wild Irish Rose" drew throngs that filled the Tivoli Theatre all day yesterday, crowds that laughed at the fun and thrilled over the dramatic situations of the story. A merry-faced youngster, Mickey Daniels, causes many a laugh before he does a thing. And he does a lot of them.

Mickey Daniels, with his justly famous freckles, is at the Isis this week, and you would think you were in a peaceful spot in old Ireland. The feature is "My Wild Irish Rose." An' shure, it's a foine picture, so it is. It is a strange coupling of two classics, a song and a story. One was sung to fame by Chauncey Oleott and the other was Dion Boucicault's "The Shaugraun." The combination of so many things, all tend to make an excellent entertainment at the Isis this week.

Written and Supervised by George Beban

THE greatest road show screen attraction in the United States this season is "The Sign of the Rose" in conjunction with the personal appearance of Mr. Beban and his company enacting the famous "flower shop scene" from the picture. This attraction has broken house records already in twenty-one cities.

American Releasing Corporation is pleased to announce that our Theatrical Department has booked Mr. Beban and company and his tremendous picture for a route that embraces these big motion picture theatres:

LOS ANGELES: Fred Miller's California Theatre.
WICHITA, Kan.: Stanley Chambers' Miller Theatre.
KANSAS CITY: Frank L. Newman's Newman Theatre.
ST. LOUIS: Fred Cornwell's Del Monte Theatre.
PEORIA, Ill.: Dee Robinson's Madison Theatre.
ROCK ISLAND: Joe Hopp's Majestic Theatre.
CINCINNATI: MacMahan and Jackson's Lyric Theatre.
CHARLESTON: T. L. Kears's New Kears Theatre.

COLUMBUS, O.: William James' James Theatre.
NEWARK, N. J.: Adams Bros.' Newark Theatre.
PATERSON, N. J.: Adams Bros.' U. S. Theatre.
OKLAHOMA CITY: Tom Boland's Empress Theatre.

Other tremendous bookings in New York and Chicago will be announced next week. In the booking of this picture we are confined to a 35-weeks' season linked with the appearance of Mr. Beban and company in person and more than twenty of these have been closed and play dates set.

You want this attraction. To be sure of getting it you had better telegraph us immediately.

A Confession

We start this with a confession.

First, we make the broad statement that very few advertisers—the men who spread the million a year—know what a trade paper potentially is. That's a fact!

But it's our fault,—because we haven't told them.

We've been busily engaged in making good papers—and they are good. We've tried generously to give editorially what the advertiser should give in his advertising pages. We've been prodigal and cheerful about the large expense of it, too—and the red ink on the ledger.

But—for whatever reason—we haven't told the advertiser what the trade paper means to him—can do for him—should do for him.

The trade-paper is fully enough recognized—as an established and indispensable branch of the industry.

Appropriations are made without debate, divided (in a deadly way, too often) and handed out.

That's the trouble; they are handed out.

Handed out—as a sop.

To have the paper give editorially the information the advertiser could better give in his own white space.

Or for political objectives, or to buy editorial good-will, or good-naturedly—or what not.

The general feeling seems to be that as long as we get the advertising money we should not kick about the way it's used.

An advertiser, the other day, enthused over our "Booking Guide."

"That's the finest piece of service ever given the exhibitor," said he.

"If so," said our representative, "why don't you use it more fully to merchandize your pictures?"

"Oh well," said the advertiser, "you don't care to do you, so long as we advertise right along in MOTION PICTURE NEWS?"

Yes, we do care—tremendously.

We want the advertiser's money spent profitably to himself and profitably to the exhibitor. We do not care merely to receive it. We want it to give full service to the reader and to him.

Naturally we want this. A trade paper cannot prosper unless it helps its trade to prosper—through it.

Its value to itself and to its trade is measured by the service it gives.

So its advertising must serve—for all it possibly can.

Life says

Trouble"

It is a long leap from Nero to Jackie Coogan but, if you ask this department, it is a long leap upward.

In the first place, Jackie Coogan is an artist. He is so absolutely genuine in his appeal, that he never has to rely on cute, artificial tricks. In the second place, he is a remarkable pantomimist. He can express an idea in terms of action without recourse to mechanical diagrams in the form of sub-titles, inserts or flashbacks. These are qualities which are possible only in an unspoiled child, or in someone, like Charlie Chaplin, who has managed to retain a child's ingenious genius. I seriously commend it to your attention because it contains, in the person of Jackie Coogan, a degree of artistry that is lacking in ninety-nine movies out of a hundred.—Robert E. Sherwood.

"Proves Triumph at Strand"

—New York American.

The above is the headline in the big New York daily which comments as follows:

"Guy Bates Post, appearing for the first time in the cinemas, scores a new triumph in 'The Masquerader,' at the Strand Theatre this week. And Richard Walton Tully, making his debut as a movie producer, has set a pace so high that it will be difficult for him to keep up the excellent standard of his first flickering endeavor. Mr. Post's acting is superb. The scenes are wonderfully well done. Both star and producer have given the best they have to make 'The Masquerader' a picture well worth seeing. They have scored a dual triumph."

As You Make It

OF all the many and impressive business forecasts made we like best the shrewd terse statement of the silk manufacturer who said:

"Business will be good if you make it good."

And that's about all there is to this much mooted subject.

But it's a lot.

The United States today, from a business standpoint, is like a lusty animal straining at its traces, eager to leap ahead into booming, bounding activity.

Even so great an obstacle as the European financial debacle doesn't seem to stand heavily in the way.

The railroad and coal strikes do not affect the stock prices of the railroads and industrials.

Business—apparently—is going ahead anyway!

There is everywhere a determination to do. The crop yield is tremendous. Goods are wanted. Nothing—apparently—can hold the country back. It is on its way.

The way ahead isn't altogether clear. There will be set-backs. The graph line of business resumption will be a jagged one. But it will be upward. That's certain.

All of which is mighty encouraging in a general way.

But the motion picture individual is asking: how does this hit my particular case?

And the only definite answer we can find is the silk man's declaration:

"Business will be good if you make it good."

The business revival isn't going to pull any particular business along with it.

Success, as always, will be measured by each man's individual effort.

And every man who reads this knows better than we do just what his particular business demands of him—just how much hard work and brain work.

We won't attempt any advice.

But we have this to say to the trade at large:

The time has come, in this industry's career, for better business practices all-around, for contracts back and forth between producer, distributor and exhibitor that will let each live and prosper, as they deserve to.

A contract that discourages a good producer is a bad contract, mighty bad. A rental price that hurts a good exhibitor is a mighty bad business practice.

In other words, each of the three branches of this business can prosper only through the prosperity of the other.

That's true as daylight; and every sensible man knows it.

But the principle hasn't been applied in the past. Shortsighted profits—more commonly called "gypping"—have been a too common aim.

That must cease. It will cease. It always does in any industry. And—knowingly and sincerely we say—this new era is beginning right now.

So to the industry at large, more emphatically than to the individual, we say:

*"Business will be good if you make it good."
By fair dealing!*

MARCUS LOEW threw a bombshell into the British Trade with his declaration that the market there should be swept free from its accumulation of old pictures. The Kinematograph takes a decided "show me" attitude, in fact questions openly Mr. Loew's sincerity. Marcus Loew is known here to mean what he says, and his judgment is cool and deliberate. What he said will undoubtedly go for Metro pictures and we believe he will make a sincere effort upon his arrival here to get uniform action from the leading American producers. We have asked him to state his views on the subject in next week's MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

WE are keen for all that serves to encourage the independent producer; so we note with pleasure the entrance of A. S. Aronson into this important field. Mr. Aronson, who organized Regal Films and Goldwyn Pictures, Ltd., in Canada and who was recently Vice President and General Sales Manager of Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, is one of the ablest and most experienced distributors in the business. To the independent producer, who should be left free to give his best efforts to production, he offers such important service as approval of booking contracts, enforcement of play dates, auditing of accounts and, last but not least, advertising and sales promotion. A much needed service and a big field here for a capable man.

HARRY CHARNAS, President of the Standard Film Service Company of Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky, western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, starts on September 10th a four-day dinner trip covering the cities of Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Detroit and Cleveland. Banquets will be given to exhibitors in these exchange centers. A number of New York people will accompany Mr. Charnas as his guest.

WELL, well, well! Our old friend, Canon Chase, comes forth after a Summer's seclusion. What a jolly old codger he is! He is out again for Federal control of motion pictures—says they are not made right at all and as he would have them. But he doesn't stop there. He suggests Federal control of the private lives of the actors. And then—Federal control of their salaries!

This is a solemn thought. Here we are worrying over the economics of an industry and the Canon from his cloister clears up these business problems with one clarion call.

Stars' salaries? Why bother about the competition that makes them high? Let the Government step in and control them. Simple as A. B. C.

Then there's overproduction, duplication of exchange systems, high rentals, exhibitor competition, overbuilding of theatres—and what not?

Federal control! That's the answer. All the Government has to do is to step in and regulate. The Canon doesn't cover these points; but he is naively and graciously clever. He leads us to them by inference. If stars' salaries can be regulated, why—it's as clear as daylight—so can all the other abuses that arise from business competition.

Why on earth couldn't somebody in the business think of this? Where are our economists, anyway?

It's all so simple.

Just recently on the map itself, Czecho-Slovakia is in the way of establishing the American motion picture permanently on its own map. At least that's the avowed purpose of Mr. I. E. Svoboda, who has just arrived from the lusty infant Republic in Central Europe and is headquartered temporarily at the Hotel Astor, New York. In addition to acquiring films of the "Made in the U. S." brand for Czecho-Slovakia, Mr. Svoboda is here to negotiate for the distribution of American pictures in Germany, Austria, Hungary, Jugo-Slavia, Roumania, and Bulgaria. In his own country, Mr. Svoboda is one of the industry's pioneers, having established the first exchange in Prague ten years ago. He has also taken a prominent part in the organization of various film enterprises in the Balkan states, including the first studio in Prague to boast of mercury-vapor lighting equipment. He officiated as Carl Laemmle's representative for Central Europe just prior to his present venture as a foreign distributor.

THE London press is not using superlatives over the dramatization of A. S. M. Hutchinson's book, "If Winter Comes." Which, of course, makes it easier for Harry Millarde in his picturization of the big selling novel. All he has to do is watch his step and profit by the mistakes of the dramatist. And being right on the ground in touch with Mr. Hutchinson and the charming background of English country life, there is no reason why he should not succeed.

THE Ritz Carlton ushered in another big picture, Constance Talmadge scored her greatest success, Sidney Franklin delivered one of the finest pieces of direction in film history, S. L. Rothafel outdid himself in score and presentation, Warner Oland scored, Frances Marion and others too numerous to mention did their cleverest work—all this when "East Is West" was given its premiere last Friday evening.

Joe Schenck beamed, First National executives smiled happily, Samuel Shipman declared the picture better than the play, film men in general applauded without reservation and a large audience that was friendly at the beginning got quickly enthusiastic and then positively joyful.

"East Is West" is a fine piece of work—every bit of it. We congratulate every single member of the organization that made it. It is another harbinger of good times.

HARRY RAVER becomes a "hired man" for the first time in many moons and with the same jump he leaves the film business. Last Spring he put on an elaborate exposition and fashion show at Madison Square Garden for the Masons of New York State. The tidy sum of $175,000 was cleared for the state Masonic hospitals; and now the Masons of other states want his services in the same connection. Harry Raver is a born showman and a fine one, and we can well imagine how he will enjoy his new job, even as a hired man. Just the same he is a film man and always will be and he'll be back one of these days, we opine, to give us more "Cabirias" and to take other forward steps in the field.

Bert Wheeler succeeds Mr. Raver as President of Torino Films, Inc.

MARY ALDEN is about to start on a production which will take her to Porto Rico. The famous mother of "The Old Nest"—who is really a young woman by the way—recently finished her work in a prominent role in "Notoriety."

GUY BATES POST please stand up and receive our tribute for the excellent interpretation of the dual role in the screen version of your successful play, "The Masquerader!" Here is pantomime of the highest order. The differentiation of this dual identity, Chilcote and Loder, the former a gifted irresponsible, the latter a struggling journalist is an expression unsurpassed in the shadow world. How easily this play could have faltered in less skillful hands, and though you know the outcome of the story—the successful masquerading—Post carries you along with your eyes riveted upon the screen. There isn't one false move—every whim, every gesture is in its place. We might add that the picture contains the best sample of double exposure ever revealed.

ADOLPH ZUKOR has made a private pilgrimage to Rochester to inspect the palatial new Eastman theatre without waiting for the reception to the industry scheduled for Sept. 2. Mr. Zukor devoted a full day to the subject, and was entertained at the home of George Eastman, who donated the theatre and the Eastman School of Music with a supporting endowment to the University of Rochester.

Mr. Zukor was enthusiastic over the novel enterprise, which will have its premiere on Labor Day as a picture palace with a weekly break of continuity on Wednesday nights when concerts will be given and on infrequent occasions when grand opera will be presented.

The local newspapers devoted considerable space to Mr. Zukor's visit.

ERNEST E. VAN PELT, New York representative of Sacred Films, Inc., arrived at the studio and home office this week after an absence of seven months. During his sojourn in the East Van Pelt made many alliances with educational and religious organizations and obtained their support in helping exhibitors boost the Bible films from the pulpit and the class room.

The company will film the lives of Joseph and Moses in the original Biblical locales, the players sailing next month for Egypt.

EVER since Gardner Sullivan invented the famous subtitle "God's Vast Cathedral" as representative of the boundless West, the expression has been used indiscriminately. Any background that indicated several towering fir trees or pines with a few mountain cliffs thrown in for good measure was catalogued under the colorful caption. It's really been a misnomer except in mighty few instances. We will say, however, that Frank Borzage has found the big cathedral. It lies up in the Canadian Rockies—in that awe-inspiring country around Banff and Lake Louise.

Take a look at his production, "The Valley of Silent Men," and you will agree with us that under the big, blue and white canopy which prisoners call the sky—up there where men are men—up yonder in the far off places where the pines stand "like Druids of old indistinct in the twilight," indicating that they are silent sentinels guarding the destinies of man, Borzage has found a cathedral of cathedrals.

It is easy to wax poetic in writing of Nature's eloquent vistas. But the title writers should use more discretion. There are landscapes—and, well, there are landscapes. When one possesses indescribable beauty so that the observer can

The names of his comedies are "My Hero," "The Pirates," "The Reporter," and "Friend Husband."

Public Relations and the Picture Industry

Proper Cooperation Brings Tremendous Improvement in Conditions in South

By Turner Jones

Gives Remedy for Picture Ills

Here is the second of a series of four articles written by Turner Jones, Public Relations Representative of the Southern Enterprises, Inc., on Public Relations of the Motion Picture Theatre. These articles were prepared exclusively for the MOTION PICTURE NEWS. They are of interest to everyone in the industry as they point out the ills and cures as they are and as they may be remedied. In this week's article Mr. Jones adds much valuable information to that given last week. He tells of the wonderful improvement of conditions in the south as a result of proper relations with the public.

GERALD STANLEY LEE makes a very striking statements in his "Crowds," the sense of which is: Every new idea must have its committee, every movement must have its chairman, every new-born thought must have its conference, every plan must have its propaganda, etc.

It is impossible to convince a person of his error in judgment unless you offer some substitute. The above statements of Mr. Lee would indicate that whatever substitute program may be formulated for censorship will require an organization to render it effective. No member of the industry has sufficient time to go about the country convincing each individual of the error of censorship as a principle. Hence we must have a program to offer the public which is practical, easily adapted to the community, and which precludes censorship.

In approaching this question the Southern Enterprises, Inc., tried to determine what the average community considers its most serious problems in connection with motion pictures. These we found to be three:

Lack of suitable pictures for children,

Lack of accurate, reliable information as to type of pictures, prior to exhibition,

Lack of some means of securing the exhibition of more of the better pictures.

No one within the industry could possibly object to the realization of this program so we then set about finding the proper methods by which a representative group from each community could accomplish these aims.

It will be seen immediately that censorship cannot accomplish any one of these objectives. It cannot standardize pictures so as to render them suitable for children; it cannot serve as a guide to the public in selecting its cinema entertainment; it cannot insure a forward progress in production. Censorship is only a restraint, a "verboten," so our task was really one of selling the public on "what their problems actually are," rather than on the "method of cure."

WORK BEGINS IN ATLANTA

This work was begun in Atlanta. We called together a few influential men and women, with whom we discussed the question from every angle. They in turn called together others and established the first Better Films Committee in the South.

This committee, for experimental purposes, formed three sub-committees: (1) Committee on Selected Programs, which handles Boys' and Girls' Matinees on Saturday mornings as the first step towards a solution of the first problem.

(2) Committee on publicity, which publishes once every month a Photoplay Guide, taken from the Selected Lists of the National Board of Review, as the first answer to problem two.

(3) A review Committee, which holds itself in readiness to review any picture at the request of the theatre manager, to determine whether or not it shall receive the committee's endorsement.

This was merely the beginning. During the past twelve months sub-committees have been created for Visual Instruction, Extension Work, Parent-Teacher Associations, etc.

Better Films Committees have been organized in Memphis, Knoxville, Dyersburg, Jackson, Tenn.; Atlanta, Augusta, Monroe, Ga.; Jacksonville, Tampa, St. Petersburg, Fla.; Columbia, Spartanburg, Greenville, Charleston, S. C.

What is the Better Film Committee from the industry's standpoint? It is an effective method of organizing and capitalizing the energies and efforts, once exercised against us, to sell our best attractions for us. From the public's standpoint, it is the surest method of reflecting public sentiment to the producer, through the exhibitor, and insuring an orderly development of the motion picture.

Now as to results: In Atlanta alone, since the first of the year, more than 40,000 children have been entertained at the Boys' and Girls' Matinees conducted by the Howard Theatre. No one activity of a theatre in the South has ever created as much goodwill, among both men and women, in the community as has the Boys' and Girls' Matinee.

This matinee also places the theatre in a position where it can say: "We offer a program suited to your little ones and we do not want your children in attendance at our adult performances." Thus the burden of proof is shifted to other shoulders. At the same time the theatre is developing future motion picture patrons and identifying itself with motion picture entertainment in the mind of the youthful patron. These matinees are self supporting and usually make a small profit.

Boys' and Girls' Matinees were operated during the past school year in Birmingham, Montgomery, Anniston, Ala.; Jacksonville, Tampa, Orlando, Lakeland, St. Petersburg, Fla.; Atlanta, Augusta, Columbus, Savannah, Ga.; Asheville, Salisbury, N. C.; Columbia, Spartanburg, Charleston, S. C.; Memphis, Nashville, Knoxville, Chattanooga, Dyersburg; Jackson, Tenn.

The Photoplay Guide is accepted by newspapers as a feature so that no expense is attached to this plan of giving the public the means of selecting their cinema entertainment. All that is necessary is to turn over to the newspaper the Selected List from the National Committee For Better Films.

There is more prejudice and ill-feeling than we realize arising from the fact that many people feel that they must "take a chance" in entering a picture theatre. It is also poor salesmanship to make a sales-transaction before the customer is "sold on" the commodity.

The Photoplay Guide obviates much of this by telling the people what type of pictures the current releases are and enabling them to supervise their cinema entertainment. Such a Guide also gives the theatre an answer to the parent who permits its child to attend performances other than the weekly matinee for children and then criticize the theatre. It places the responsibility for supervision squarely on the parent.

The Photoplay Guide originated in Atlanta more than a year ago and has been inaugurated in eight Southern cities, as well as in San Francisco, Cal., Billings, Mont., and Toledo O.

The problem of securing more of the better pictures resolves itself into a question of promotion, or exploitation, of the best. Once the endorsement of the Committee has been given to a picture this fact is accorded full publicity. The Committee has access to many channels of publicity which are closed to the theatre, such as announcements at civic clubs, bulletin boards in churches, libraries and public buildings, special mailing lists, etc.

Three examples will be sufficient to illustrate this principle. "Hail The Woman" played in Atlanta under the Committee's endorsement. Mr. Willard C. Patterson, Manager of the Metropolitan theatre, estimates that his business was increased by this endorsement $1,700.00 for the week. On "Tol'ble David" he estimates that attendance was increased 400 per day for the last four days after the endorsement was given. "Disraeli," a poor box-office attraction throughout the South, did a very respectable business in St. Petersburg, Fla., with the endorsement and active support of the local Better Films Committee.

In Birmingham and Nashville, the Better Films Committees have conducted Better Films Weeks which resulted in a strong stimulus for theatre business and created much interest on the part of the public. The Atlanta Committee is now planning probably the largest Better Films Week ever held, for the third week in September. These weeks, conducted by an agency outside of the industry, usually make a number of new patrons for motion pictures, and create talk which is reflected at the box-office for four to six weeks afterwards.

The sub-committee on Visual Instruction, referred to above, works with the local schools, encouraging the use of motion pictures for educational purposes. The Atlanta committee this year introduced a bill in the General Assembly, now pending, providing for motion picture equipment in all state institutions.

The Committee on Extension Work is largely responsible for the spread of the Better Films Movement throughout the Southern states and also for much of the constructive propaganda against state censorship.

Enough has been said to show the splendid effect of the work of such committees on the public so far as goodwill and patronage is concerned. What effect has this same work had on censorship?

On April 28, 1922, the Better Films Committee of Atlanta called the Southeastern Conference for Better Films. About four hundred educators, civic leaders, ministers, editors,

Valentino Breaks with Famous Players-Lasky

Charges Breach of Contract in Mode of Advertising; Paramount to Make Court Test

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORPORATION has been notified by Rodolph Valentino that he has severed relations with the Paramount organization and will no longer appear as a star under their auspices. Valentino alleges a breach of contract on the part of Famous Players-Lasky in the matter of advertising as the reason for his action. Arthur Butler Graham of New York, the legal counsel of the star, on being questioned, refused to affirm or deny the report. Inquiries addressed to E. J. Ludvigh, counsel for Famous Players-Lasky, brought the information that the notice had been received announcing Valentino's decision to withdraw from the stellar ranks of the Paramount organization. When asked whether Valentino had established connections with any other company or was negotiating a new contract, Mr. Graham refused to make any definite answer to the question. Word from the Famous Players-Lasky headquarters was to the effect that the contract with Rodolph Valentino was an iron-bound agreement and that he would be held strictly to it.

In this connection Mr. Ludvigh declared it to be the intention of Famous Players-Lasky to establish in court the binding force of its contract with Valentino and determine legally whether a contract with a motion-picture star is something more than a mere formality. This action would be taken, Mr. Ludvigh stated, not only for the sake of Famous Players-Lasky but in the interests of all motion-picture producers that become parties to similar agreements with motion-picture players.

It is understood that the controversy has to do with the advertising run in connection with "Blood and Sand," the latest Paramount production to feature the star. Valentino alleges that the advertising conducted in behalf of the production was not in accordance with the provisions in his contract. Just what are the specific terms of the agreement covering the mode of advertising Mr. Graham refused to divulge at the present time. It is known that during the three week's engagement of "Blood and Sand" at the Rivoli theatre, New York, the names of Lila Lee and Nita Naldi were presented in conjunction with Valentino's in the house paper and the marquee lights. Mr. Graham admitted that the controversy centered about advertising run in connection with "Blood and Sand" but would add further details at the present time.

Valentino's decision to withdraw from the Paramount organization comes closely on the heels of the announcement that Pola Negri is coming to America to play in Paramount pictures. It was reported in certain quarters that Paramount's plans included the presentation of Valentino in a co-starring vehicle with the European star. The report of Valentino's determination to break with the Famous Players-Lasky organization, first given circulation on Wednesday afternoon of this week, caused considerable stir in Metropolitan film circles and occasioned much speculation as to the outcome.

While Rodolph Valentino had appeared in quite a number of screen productions previously, he attained his greatest prominence as a motion-picture player as the romantic South American hero of Rex Ingram's elaborate film version of Vicente Blasco Ibanez' novel, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." His dancing and dramatic acting in the role of Julio, opposite Alice Terry, established him permanently in public favor, and since then he has been an acknowledged box-office attraction of the first magnitude. His subsequent appearance in "Camille," opposite Nazimova, in "Beyond the Rocks" with Gloria Swanson, and in the featured role of Paramount's "The Sheik" confirmed him in public prestige. "Blood and Sand," in which Valentino enacted the dashing role of Juan Gallardo, a Spanish matador, played to record business on Broadway, at the Rivoli and Rialto theatres for a period of three weeks, and is this week repeating its success at the Marcus Loew State theatre, New York.

Valentino first gained attention as a cabaret dancer, following his arrival in America from Italy several years ago. His stage career includes three years in vaudeville with Bonnie Glass and Joan Sawyer. He next played two seasons in musical comedy, and then became associated with Universal. Among the earliest pictures in which he appeared are Universal's "The Delicious Little Devil," of which Mae Murray was the star and Vitagraph's "A Rogue's Romance," in which Earle Williams was the featured player. Another Mae Murray special in which he was cast was "The Big Little Person." Valentino later appeared in the Universal attractions, "Society Sensation," and "All Night." His next work was with Dorothy Gish in "Out of Luck," and with Clara Kimball Young in "Eyes of Youth." He also played in "Passion's Playground," a First National attraction, with May Allison in "Parlor, Bedroom, and Bath," and with Dorothy Phillips in "Ambition."

Valentino had just completed "The Young Rajah" for Paramount and was scheduled to start work next week in Hollywood on "A Spanish Cavalier."

Will Hays Makes Hit At Minneapolis

Great Crowd Enthuses Over Visitor at Inauguration of "Go to Movie Week"

WILL HAYS is reported to have made a tremendous hit at Minneapolis last week when he appeared before the Governor of the state, mayors, church people, school authorities and representatives of organized bodies. At the conclusion of his address the entire audience rose and cheered for several minutes.

There were three reasons for this, according to word from Minneapolis.

First, Will Hays is popular for his own energetic personality.

Second, this week is "Northwest Go to Movie Week," and the city is interested in all things pictorial.

Thirdly, Will Hays has an understudy in Minneapolis—E. A. Purdy, recently resigned postmaster, whom Hays called "a bird of a postmaster."

From the moment Hays hurled himself off a train at 8 a. m. until the midnight hour he spent an extremely busy day. Fact was, Mr. Hays was to have caught a train late in the evening, but everybody was having such an enjoyable time at the banquet of picture notables at the Hotel Radisson that the guest of honor missed his train for the East and was forced to stay overnight. Having broken his schedule, Mr. Hays then decided to remain all day Saturday.

Here's how the day was spent:

Breakfast at the Hotel Radisson with Mayor George E. Leach, after an enthusiastic reception at the station. W. A. Steffes, president of the Picture Theatre Owners' Association, and Theodore Hays, general manager for the Finkelstein & Ruben interests, were fellow hosts with the Mayor.

Address before the exhibitors of the Northwest at 10 a. m.

Guest of honor at a luncheon sponsored by the Civic and County Commerce Association at noon.

Talk before the weekly meeting of the Rotary Club, squeezed into the noon hour.

Address before the Twin City club women at the New Garriek theatre, St. Paul, at 2:30 p. m.

Evening, banquet at the Radisson, presided over by William Brinkman, vice president of the Minneapolis Business Men's Association, and attended by city officials, newspaper men, Northwest exhibitors and prominent citizens. Among the speakers was Governor R. A. Nestos of North Dakota.

Motion picture theatres must be placed in the list of essential businesses in case of a coal shortage, Mr. Hays declared during his visit.

During the last fuel shortage, he pointed out, people went to the movies to keep warm, when homes and apartments were insufficiently heated.

In his talks Mr. Hays, among other things, said:

"I am opposed to political censorship. It necessarily must fail. The country is fundamentally against it, whether it be of the press, pulpit or pictures.

"It is the public's duty to support good pictures not only 'Go to Movie Week,' but at all times. This support will insure a continuance of the better pictures.

"Plans are afoot among the producers to extend the films along pedagogic lines, and as a means of improving international relations.

"I am taking up my duties and approaching the various problems in connection therewith not only from the standpoint of men with millions of dollars invested, but—more important—from the standpoint of fathers and mothers with an investment of millions of children."

The motion picture theatres of Minneapolis presented tempting programs when "Go to Movie Week" opened last Saturday.

Kansas M.P.T.O. Has New Plan

Executive Board Appoints Former Newspaper Man to Handle All Details

THE new managerial plan of the M. P. T. O. Kansas now is in full progress, with the appointment by a special committee of C. C. Cook, a Kansas City, Kans., newspaper man, as business manager. The appointment followed a meeting Monday at Kansas City of the executive board of the M. P. T. O. Kansas.

A bulk of business, in addition to the naming of a committee to select a business manager, was transacted by the board at the meeting, including the transferring of the semi-annual convention from Salina, Kans., September 25 and 26, to Wichita, Kans., September 25. The convention was reduced to a one-day meeting, as no election of officers will be held this year, and the important issues to be brought up at the convention are so systematically arranged that they can be disposed of in a single day. However, if necessity demands the gathering will be continued a day.

All current bills of the association were paid and a full board was present, consisting of Stanley Chambers, Wichita; Harry McClure, Emporia; Roy Burford, Arkansas City; Richard Liggett, Kansas City; A. F. Baker, Kansas City; M. Van Praag, Kansas City; Clarence Smith, Kansas City, and William Meyn, Kansas City.

It is to Mr. Cook, the new business manager, that Kansas exhibitors now look to in the hope of perfecting one of the best state organizations in the Middle West, and it was with the utmost confidence that the committee, composed of Richard Liggett, William Meyn and A. F. Baker, selected him.

No supreme court ever disposed of a docket with more systematic regularity and finality than did the newly formed arbitration board at Kansas City Tuesday at the Hotel Baltimore.

Arguing, which develops into wrangling, was absent. There was a docket—the same as any civil court, and the cases were called in order, discussed in a judicial and impartial manner and a decision which is as final as that of the Supreme Court handed down.

etc., attended from the six Southeastern states. The Findings Committee, consisting of some of the most prominent men and women in the South, reported in part: "We doubt the wisdom or practicability of delegating to small groups the power of deciding for all the rest what pictures they shall see. If such censorship should be established it would have to be exercised by a single national body rather than by censors in every state or city. . . . But we think cooperation should be thoroughly tested before censorship is tried."

It is also worthy of notice that a Better Films campaign is not aimed solely at legislation, but is also a very definite form of institutional exploitation which breaks down the prejudices of non-theatre goers and arouses interest among the uninterested, thus developing new patrons for the theatre. The better Films Committee reaches those people who have for a number of years ignored the same newspaper ads, the same lobby displays, the same ballyhoos. They can be reached only by some such institutional work.

Today we can truthfully say that there is practically no sentiment in support of censorship in Georgia, Alabama, Florida, South Carolina, and it has been materially lessened in Tennessee. North Carolina is the only one of the Southeastern states in which this sentiment exists to a serious degree.

In the states named the actual cost, in dollars and cents, of defeating censorship has been reduced to anywhere from 1/13 to 1/525 of the cost just two years ago.

Now do not misunderstand these statements. The Better Films Movement is not a sop to public opinion nor an insincere method of obviating censorship, or of securing increased patronage at the theatres. It has been successful in these fields solely because it is a sincere effort on the part of the Southern motion picture industry to show the public how to secure Better Films.

It is our attempt at a solution of a far graver problem than censorship—the necessity for creating a demand and support, on the part of the public, for better pictures in order that we may stabilize our business. If you do not recognize this as an economic fact, do not attempt to organize a Better Films Committee, for you will inevitably fail.

This is purely institutional public relations work. Banks, railroads, power companies and many large corporations have made use of the same principles and every one of them will tell you that success cannot be obtained where SINCERITY and TRUTH are left out. In public relations work every statement or promise must be backed up with facts, for you are teaching and leading the public. You are attempting to mould public opinion with regard to motion pictures and that is the crux of the majority of our problems today.

Amusement Tax Takes 16 Million Drop

A DROP of $16,356,895 in admission taxes collected by the Government during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1922, is reported by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. The report this year totaled $73,373,937, as against $89,730,832 last year.

However, collection from the seating tax on theatres, circuses, etc., this year totaled $1,850,075, an increase of $146,695 over the amount collected in the same period in 1921.

The tax on films was removed January 1, 1922. During the six months of the fiscal year in which this tax was in effect a total of $3,678,868 was collected, as against $6,008,108 during the fiscal year 1921.

The taxes indicate that during the fiscal year 1922 the public paid about $100,000,000 less for amusements than during the preceding fiscal year.

San Francisco Starts Season with Bang

One of the greatest campaigns ever inaugurated to announce a new motion picture season was "pulled off" in San Francisco when the Granada, California and Imperial theatres announced theirs. Managing Directors Eugene H. Roth and Jack A. Partington of these three houses started advertising the "Greater Movie Season" two weeks ahead of time with the slogan, "It Starts August 20" and "Herbert L. Rothchild Entertainment Starts August 20."

On the screens of these three theatres a masked girl came out (in the film) and wrote on a blackboard with chalk the slogan "It Starts August 20," and "one-sheet" size art displays with similar copy was shown in the lobbies of each theatre.

The next week, or week before August 20, they covered the sheets in the lobbies with "Greater Movie Season Starts at the California, Granada and Imperial Theatres August 20." There were also big displays in the papers and the ushers wore printed ribbon badges for ten days ahead.

To Release Picture Here and Abroad on Same Date

"The Christian," produced by Maurice Tourneur for distribution through the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, will be released simultaneously in the United States and England. December 10th has been selected as the release date of "The Christian." George Kann, head of Goldwyn's foreign department, who returned last week from a three months' stay in Europe, arranged for the simultaneous release. This is stated to be the first time that an American photoplay has been released on the same date here and in England.

New Iowa Concern Buys Bankrupt Stock

The Iowa Theatre Equipment and Supply House of Des Moines, Iowa, announces the purchase at a bankrupt auction sale of the entire stock and fixtures of the Des Moines Film and Supply Company.

The owners of the purchasing concern, recently organized, are former employees of the Des Moines Film and Supply Company.

N. Y. Orphans to Have Picture Treat

ORPHANS and other lonely children throughout the State of New York are to be given an unusual treat during the next few weeks. Fifty thousand of these little ones in institutions are to be taken into the hearts of prominent women, many of whom are members of the New York State League of Women Voters, a non-partisan organization for the encouragement of civic responsibility in women.

God-mothers will be provided for these institutional charges, and on Saturday morning, October 14th, every orphan in and around New York City, Buffalo and Albany will be guests at motion picture shows arranged especially for their entertainment.

Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip, Chairman of the League, and Mr. Will H. Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., are sponsors for this movement to awaken wide-spread interest in the orphans. The film industry has joined forces with the women of the State in a campaign which has as its slogan "Make 'Em Happy."

Sydney Cohen Urges Coal Cooperation

Requests Theatre Owners to Assist Public and Officials in Relieving Situation

PRESIDENT SYDNEY S. COHEN of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, in a special statement just issued, urges the Theatre Owners of Greater New York and elsewhere to cooperate as far as possible with public officials and others interested in relieving the coal shortage which is now prevailing in all parts of the country, and which threatens to close 700 theatres in New York.

Mr. Cohen was appointed a few days ago a member of the Mayor's Coal Committee of Greater New York, the purpose of which is to devise ways and means to handle the coal emergency in the big city. Others on the committee are Preston P. Lynn, General Manager of the John Wanamaker store and President of the Business Men's League; Simon F. Rothschild, President of the Retail Drygoods Association, comprising all of the department stores of Greater New York; Edward P. Doyle, Secretary of the Real Estate Board of New York; and August F. Schwarzer, of the Taxpayers' Alliance and Builders' Association of the Bronx. Acting Mayor Murray Hulbert called the meeting at which this committee was named, and is himself ex-officio a member of the committee.

A meeting of this Special Committee was held Tuesday afternoon in Commissioner Grover A. Whalen's office, where it was definitely agreed to recommend that a special meeting of the Board of Estimate of Greater New York be called for the purpose of enabling the committee and others to make definite plans for emergency transportation of coal in the event that the present carrying

Sam Rork Signs Young as Director

SAM E. RORK has closed a contract with James Young, director, to make four special feature productions of noted stories with capable casts to be known as James Young Productions.

Young directed "The Rosary" among other pictures. He also directed for Richard Walton Tully the two great productions starring Guy Bates Post. The first of these, "The Masquerader," has already been hailed a tremendous success. He has just completed direction on "Omar the Tentmaker."

Mr. Young's contract with Mr. Rork will not interfere with his agreement to complete two pictures during the next year for Mr. Tully. Young will be given unlimited backing artistically and financially to make productions of the highest standard, according to word from the coast.

systems should in any way fail to meet all necessary demands. This meeting of the Board of Estimate will be held as soon as possible in conjunction with the Special Committee.

Referring to the coal situation as embodied in the work of the committee, Mr. Cohen made the following statement:

"Giving the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America representation on the Mayor's Coal Committee is an official recognition on the part of the government of Greater New York that the theatre is an essential industry and necessary for the welfare of the people. It is also a very distinct approval of our public service efforts wherein the theatre owners cooperate in every way with public officials in furthering necessary programs of all kinds calculated to advance the general welfare of the community.

"Theatre owners everywhere throughout Greater New York and other sections should cooperate fully in this work and demonstrate the great utility of the screen as a medium of public expression.

"Since the Washington convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, this public service work has been developed in many parts of the United States, and in every instance operated to the direct advantage of the public immediately concerned and the theatre owners. It established a bond of association between the theatre and the public which gives the theatre owner a distinct line of leadership as well as making the theatre a community center.

"I am indeed very gratified to know that we are able to give this kind of service to the officials and the people of Greater New York and that we will also be able to extend it wherever necessary throughout the country.

"A public service manual has been published by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, going into detail along various lines of cooperation between the theatres and those in official positions, and copies of this booklet have been sent to every theatre owner in the United States."

Eastman Theatre Informally Opens Tonight

$5,000,000 Rochester House Will Be Opened to Public Labor Day

LABOR DAY will find the $5,000,000 university-owned and university-operated Eastman theatre in active operation in Rochester. Throughout the week tests and surveys have been made covering every feature of the great enterprise, and it has been pronounced in readiness to function as designed by the architects, engineers and experts responsible for its perfection, and George Eastman, whose philanthropy placed the big model theatre in the hands of the University of Rochester with an endowment ample to permit of the widest experimentation.

On Saturday, September 2, preceding the public opening an informal gathering of leading figures of the film industry is scheduled. Contrary to custom, instead of an observance of the inauguration of an amusement enterprise, the function will partake of the character of a celebration of the completion of a great and complex structural undertaking.

Programme featuring usually devoted to the producing or artistic personnel of the theatre is accorded to those whose work makes the institution the magnificent monument that it is—Messrs. William C. Kaelber and Lawrence Grant White, architects; Robert E. Hall, consulting engineer; Albert A. Hopeman, general contractor; Ezra Winter, in supervision of the decorative scheme. Portraits of each are used, and less conspicuous tribute is paid a score of sub-contractors, manufacturers and supply houses of various sorts.

Saturday afternoon will be devoted to an informal reception and in the evening a dress rehearsal will be given of the bill which opens on Monday for the entire week. This programme follows:

A. Overture, "1812." Tchaikowsky. Eastman theatre orchestra, Arthur Alexander and Victor Wagner, conducting.

B. Eastman Theatre Current Events.

C. Music Interpreted Through the Dance.

(a) "Russia," Rachmaninoff (G Minor Prelude); (b) "The South at Work," Dvorak (Humoresque in A Minor). Ester Gustafson.

D. Eastman Theatre Magazine.

E. Vocal Prologue. "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise," Seitz. Marion Armstrong, Scotch-Canadian soprano.

F. "The Prisoner of Zenda," from the novel by Anthony Hope, featuring Lewis

Stone and Alice Terry. Produced by Rex Ingram, with an all-star cast, including Robert Edeson.

G. Organ Exits. Dezso d'Antalfy and John Hammond, organists.

Similar programmes will be given throughout a full week for the first month of operation, after which Manager Charles H. Goulding has arranged to slide gradually into the fixed policy of the house. This contemplates a three-day showing of a feature picture with incidental music starting on Sunday of each week.

On Wednesday the house will be closed until evening, when concerts of the highest order will be given. Thursday another feature picture will be introduced to continue until Saturday.

In October a further departure is scheduled when picture presentation will be withdrawn for a full week to permit of a season of grand opera.

None of the details of the latter have been made public, but it is understood that one of the principal operatic organizations will be brought intact, with an important array of guest artists to add lustre to the occasion.

Alfred Weiss Leaves Goldwyn Staff

Former General Manager Sells Interests in New York and Buffalo Offices

ALFRED WEISS, formerly vice-president and general manager of Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, has sold to that company his entire commission interests in the operation of the Goldwyn exchange offices in New York City and Buffalo. This important transaction, which was consummated the latter part of last week, is reported to have involved a cash transfer of $100,000.

Mr. Weiss' arrangement with the Goldwyn company has been in effect for the past five years and in lieu of the completion of the arrangement for the two years to run the payment was made.

Mr. Weiss has played an important part in the development of distribution systems ever since the early days of the business. He took a prominent part in organizing the Goldwyn distributing branch offices when that company was launched in 1917, and for five years he filled a high executive post with conspicuous success. Previous to his connection with Goldwyn he occupied important executive positions with Triangle Film Company and also operated his own exchange for five years under the name of the Alfred Weiss Film Exchange.

It is understood that Mr. Weiss will take a trip to Europe and that after his return his future plans will be announced.

Mr. Weiss's resignation from the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has occasioned regret on the part of his associates. F. J. Godsol, president of the Goldwyn organization, in a letter to the retiring general manager, wrote as follows:

"My Dear Mr. Weiss:—

"I want to tell you how terribly sorry I am that you have decided to leave us.

"Since my connection with the Goldwyn Company I have learned to depend upon you and your absence will mean a hardship for me.

"I wish you every success in your future endeavors.

"Please do not hesitate to call on me at any time that I can be of assistance to you.

"With best wishes,

"Sincerely yours,

"F. J. GODSOL."

That this feeling of regret over the severance of long established associations is mutual is evinced in Mr. Weiss's reply to the letter from F. J. Godsol. Mr. Weiss writes:

"My Dear Mr. Godsol:—

Von Stroheim Back on Universal Lot

ERIC VON STROHEIM and Universal have not come to a parting of the ways after all. According to advices from the coast, the difficulties have been smoothed out by the director and producing company and the former has returned to the lot to resume the direction of "Merry Go Round."

The bone of contention is said to have been over a point of production, in which Von Stroheim and a company official did not agree. However, it is said that harmony again prevails.

"It is with sincere regret that I renounce my business connections with the Goldwyn Company, for I have felt for many years that I was part and parcel of our whole scheme of producing and distributing. That I must now take up vaster activities is a matter of circumstance and in no way affects my cordial relations with each member of the Goldwyn organization with whom I have come in contact. I shall always be a booster for Goldwyn, and I am confident that with the momentum we have gathered in these years there is no question but that the success will be outstanding.

"Your letter was typical of the generous way in which you have fostered your association with those who are closest to you. I am loyal to you always and to those principles and enterprises for which you stand. Believe me, sir,

"Yours sincerely,

"ALFRED H. WEISS."

First National Club Holds Outing at Sheepshead Bay

The First National Club, composed of officials and employees of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., gave a party on Thursday of last week, which was attended not only by New York workers in the big organization but by the Eastern district branch managers and salesmen, who are here attending a conference.

Six buses filled with the club members and their guests left the First National offices at 5 p. m. and proceeded to Tappan's Inn, Sheepshead Bay, where a shore dinner was served. Afterward they went to Steeplechase Park, where they remained until 11 o'clock. The buses then brought them back to the city.

Among the First National executives who attended the shore dinner were J. D. Williams, general manager; H. O. Schwalbe, secretary-treasurer; Bruce Johnson, of the foreign department; Samuel Spring, of the legal department; R. H. Clark, manager of First National's New York Exchange; F. M. Brockell, supervisor of exchanges, and William Morgan, of the contract department.

Knickerbocker Pensions Flayed in Senate

Leading members of the Senate flayed the proposal that Knickerbocker survivors should be pensioned by Congress, during the Saturday session of the Senate. Senator Myers, who is so antagonistic to the industry, said: "I have been literally astounded to read in the newspapers the past few weeks that the helpless victims of the Knickerbocker disaster in Washington are to organize and come to Congress to demand appropriations from the Federal Treasury, as compensation for their sufferings and damage which they suffered in person in that frightful catastrophe, or incurred from the death of relatives. The Federal government can not be held responsible. Why they should expect Congress to reimburse them is more than I can understand. Congress does not compensate victims of other industrial accidents; why, then, do they feel in need of Congressional aid?"

Universal Purchases St. Louis House

THE Royal Theatre, Sixth street near Olive street, St. Louis, has been purchased by the Universal Film Corporation from Harry Koplar and his associates. Universal is said to have paid in excess of $50,000 for the theatre and plans to spend approximately $25,000 in improvements.

Confirmation of the sale, which has been rumored in local film circles for several weeks, was obtained from Barney Rosenthal, St. Louis manager for Universal, and Harry Koplar upon their return from New York, where the deal was closed.

Workmen have begun tearing down the Royal building preparatory to reconstruction and enlargement of the theatre. The Royal is ideally situated for a first run house, being located in the heart of the financial and shopping districts. It has 700 seats at present but will be greatly enlarged.

Three Theatres in S. F. Consolidate

Arrangements have been completed for the close consolidation of the California, Imperial and Granada theatres, San Francisco, to be operated by the Herbert L. Rothchild Amusement Company. This organization takes its name from the president of the corporation.

These theatres have just inaugurated an extensive campaign known as "Greater Movie Season," which has done wonders to stimulate the interest in motion pictures not only in these houses but throughout the entire city and surrounding territory. The aim is to give greater and better pictures, surrounded by entertainment of high standard.

The California, Imperial and Granada are operated under the joint associate directorship of Eugene H. Roth and J. A. Parkington.

New Missouri Head for Famous Players

Nathan Frank, well known St. Louis attorney and former owner of the St. Louis Star, has succeeded Fred L. Cornwell as president of the Famous Players Missouri Corporation, owners of the Missouri theatre, Grand boulevard and Lucas avenue, St. Louis leading picture theatre.

Cornwell has disposed of his stock in the Famous Players Missouri Corporation to the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. The amount of his stock and the price for it have not been divulged. However, his holdings are said to have been comparatively small.

North Carolina Launches Arbitration Board

The North Carolina Board of Arbitration is now practically a reality, with the first meeting of the committee there next week. The Board will consist of three members of the Film Board of Trade of Charlotte, E. E. Heller of Pathe, E. F. Dardine of Universal and W. J. Kupper of Fox, who, together with three members of the North Carolina M. P. T. O., J. A. Eastridge of Gastonia, H. B. Varner of Lexington and C. L. Welch of Salisbury, will decide all or any dispute between exhibitors and exchanges that may arise.

H. H. Hurn on the Hodkinson Sales Control Board

A N NOUNCEMENT is made of the appointment of H. H. Hurn, formerly branch sales manager of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation at Cincinnati, to the position of Central Division Sales Manager, and the transfer of W. F. Seymour, formerly Central Division Sales Manager, to the post of Eastern Division Sales Manager.

The Hodkinson Sales Control Board is now composed of six members: Vice-president and General Manager F. C. Munroe, who is personally in charge of the Western division; Vice-president and Treasurer Raymond Pawley; Advertising Manager Foster Gilroy; Eastern Division Sales Manager W. F. Seymour; Central Division Sales Manager H. H. Hurn; and Southern Division Sales Manager L. W. Kniskern.

Former Paramount Exploiters Rejoin Staff

Oscar Kantner and Harry Swift, two former exploiters on the staff of Paramount, have returned to the employ of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Kantner succeeds John Howard at Detroit, the latter having been called to the home office to act as assistant manager of the Theatre Department. Swift will be assigned to Cincinnati, where he will succeed Norman Dixon, who has become a house manager in the Theatre Department.

Strand Theatre, Niagara Falls, Opens Exhibitors, Film Men and New York Representation Attend Celebration

N IAGARA FALLS may safely boast of having one of the finest theatres in the United States, since the opening of the Strand on Saturday evening, August 26th. More power to Exhibitor A. C. Hayman, President of the Cataract Theatre Corporation and sponsor for this amusement palace, which is estimated to have cost a million dollars.

With a seating capacity of 2,200, this theatre has also provided for the comfort and convenience of guests, under all probable circumstances. There is not a seat in the house from which one cannot gain a straight view of the screen and the elegant simplicity of the entire structure and composition is marked throughout.

The orchestra for the new Strand will continue under the direction of Albert Greenberg, formerly conductor of Shea's North Park orchestra in Buffalo, N. Y.; Albert Boucard, formerly conductor and organist for the Strand and Regent theatres, Buffalo, will preside at the $40,000 Marr and Colton organ.

Ralph W. Thayer, formerly with the Paramount Theatre Department, received appointment as manager of the Strand, his last post for Paramount being Merriton. In launching a whirlwind campaign for the opening of the theatre and the premiere of "The Light in the Dark," starring Hope Hampton, Harold J. Beercoft, First National exploiteer, assisted Manager Thayer and was responsible for plastering the town, heralding the opening and the personal appearance of Hope Hampton. Mr. Beercoft was responsible for the shopping tour arranged for Miss Hampton, and the newspaper tie-up with a special Strand theatre section, which commanded generous space. He planned the aeroplane flight over the falls, which visited in addition to Niagara Falls, Chippewa, Merriton, Thorold, Stamford, Niagara-on-the-Lake and Queens-town. Tickets for the Strand were thrown to spectators, some good for only one admission, others for twelve. This, being advertised in advance, brought out crowds of people to watch the flight. Banners were stretched across the main streets reading, "Welcome, Hope Hampton." Every window had some kind of display tie-up with the picture. The leading ice cream parlor put on a "Hope Hampton sundae" and a "Strand special."

Following the feature, "The Light in the Dark," Mayor Thompson made a speech congratulating Mr. A. C. Hayman and the Cataract Theatre Corporation, and introduced Hope Hampton, who first told the audience how pleased she was to be there to welcome them to the new Strand, and then sang two popular numbers, which met with rounds of applause.

Many exhibitors from near-by points were in attendance, as well as several representatives of the trade press, and J. E. Brulatour, of the Eastman Film Company, from New York. Following a reception at the theatre, where A. C. Hayman, Ralph Thayer and Harold Beercoft acted as hosts to interested inspectors and patrons, a midnight supper was held for out-of-town guests at Neff's Niagara Inn, with Hope Hampton the guest of honor.

Sacramento Corporation to Make Pictures

Sacramento Pictures Corporation, has been formed at Sacramento to make a series of features. The first will be entitled "Graft," from William R. Leighton's story in the Saturday Post. Helen Lynch will be the lead.

Three Paramount Exploiters Are Promoted

T HREE Paramount exploiters have been promoted to executive positions in recognition of services rendered as members of the exploitation staff.

John D. Howard, who has served as an exploiteer in the Los Angeles, Albany and Detroit exchanges, has been appointed assistant to Harold Franklin, director of the Theatre Department.

Leon J. Bamberger, Paramount exploiteer at Toronto, was called to the home office as assistant to Claud Saunders, director of exploitation. Mr. Bamberger also served as exploiteer in the Minneapolis territory.

Norman Dixon, exploiteer at Cincinnati, has been made manager of the Empire Theatre, New Bedford, Mass.

Grand Premiere for "East Is West"

Brilliant Audience Views Screening of Constance Talmadge Film in N.Y.

THE NEW YORK premiere of "East Is West," the Constance Talmadge production which First National is distributing, at the Ritz-Carlton last Friday night, was attended by one of the most brilliant audiences that ever graced the presentation of a motion picture.

Among the many hundred guests who filled the spacious ballroom were many of the nation's leading writers, society matrons, theatrical producers, screen producers, editors, actors and actresses.

It is no misstatement to declare that the sponsors of the decorative presentation which greeted the eye upon entering the reception room surpassed anything ever attempted before in offering a truly arresting background.

Mr. Schenck and Benlah Livingstone, the publicity mentor of the Schenck forces, spared no effort in giving to the affair an atmosphere thoroughly celestial. At the head of the first stairway leading to the Ritz ballroom was a huge Chinese flower boat, with sails full set. In it wearing the costumes of their native country were a Chinese couple and several almond-eyed youngsters, borrowed from New York's Chinatown. In an alcove at the head of the next stairway was a Chinese orchestra. The odor of Chinese incense filled the corridor and the ballroom.

Before the showing of the picture Mr. Schenck, Norma Talmadge, Constance Talmadge and their mother held an informal reception, which also was in the nature of a farewell affair, for on the following day they sailed for Europe on the Majestic. Another reception followed the showing of the picture and Constance Talmadge was showered with congratulations and predictions that "East Is West" would prove one of the greatest successes of the 1922-23 motion picture season.

Among those who attended the screening were:

Alma Rubens, Justine Johnstone, Mae Murray, Marion Davies, Eugene O'Brien, Raymond Hitchcock, Jules Brulatour, Jesse L. Lasky, John Emerson, Anita Loos, Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Ballin, Irving Berlin, Messmore Kendall, Olga Petrova, S. L. Rothafel, Florenz Ziegfeld, Adolph Zukor, Eugene Zukor, Al. Woods, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Harris, Hugo Riesenfeld, Edgar Selwyn, Arch Selwyn, Edward Bowes, Nicholas Schenck, Louis Selznick, Winchell Smith, Charles H. Duell, Jr., Joseph Plunkett, Sam Shipman and John B. Hymes, authors of the play; J. D. Williams, manager of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., H. O. Schwalbe, Bruce Johnson, of First National; R. A. Rowland, of the First National Executive Staff; Joseph M. Schenck, Norma and Constance Talmadge and Mrs. Talmadge, Mr. and Mrs. Nate Spingold, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Brenon, Hassard Short, D. W. Griffith, Robert Vignola, Mr. and Mrs. Conway Tearle, Roland West, Mr. and Mrs. John Golden, Al Lichtman, Ben Moss, Hiram Abrams, Joseph Godsol, Sam Goldwyn, Jules Mastbaum, Eugene V. Brewster.

"Grandma's Boy" Topples 'Em Again in Oregon

Here's another "record smashed" chalked up for "Grandma's Boy," the Harold Lloyd comedy released by Associated Exhibitors. The latest record was staged in Portland, Ore., where the picture has entered its fourth week at the Heilig theatre. The management reports big business despite the competition of Barnum & Bailey and Ringling Bros.' circus.

California University Oarsmen Stage Race Scenes

Oarsmen of the University of California assisted a screen star recently when Rodolph Valentino went to San Francisco to make the Harvard-Yale boat race scenes for his latest Paramount picture, "The Young Rajah," adapted from the play by Alethea Luce and the novel, "Amos Judd," by John Ames Mitchell.

When the company arrived in San Francisco, Director Philip Rosen engaged Coach Ben Wallis, of University of California, to aid in staging the race and coaching the contestants and several members of the U. C. crew of 1922 to row the shells in the race staged for this sequence of the picture.

Third B'way Showing for "Sherlock Holmes"

Goldwyn announces that the John Barrymore picture, "Sherlock Holmes," which is now in its eleventh week at the Cameo theatre, will be screened for an entire week at the Broadway theatre, New York, beginning September 4th.

This will make three Broadway showings for the detective film in advance of release. The first showing was at the Capitol theatre. B. S. Moss then booked it into his Cameo theatre on Forty-second street, near Broadway.

The release date for "Sherlock Holmes" is October 29.

3 First Nat'l Specials in September

Norma Talmadge and Hope Hampton Vehicles and Ince Picture on Schedule

NORMA TALMADGE in "The Eternal Flame"; Hope Hampton in "The Light in the Dark"; and "Skin Deep," a Thomas H. Ince special, in which Florence Vidor, Milton Sills and Marcia Manon appear in the principal roles, are among the releases scheduled by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., for the month of September. These three subjects have already been booked heavily for first runs throughout the country, according to word from the First National headquarters in New York.

Norma Talmadge in "The Eternal Flame," is scheduled for National release September 4. This picture is presented by Joseph M. Schenck, adapted by Frances Marion from Balzac's "Duchess de Langeais," and was directed by Frank Lloyd. "The Eternal Flame" tells the story of the love of one of Napoleon's Generals for the Duchess de Langeais, a noted beauty in the court of Louis XVIII.

Supporting Miss Talmadge as the Duchess de Langeais is Conway Tearle, who plays the role of General de Montriveau. Also in the cast are Rosemary Theby, Adolphe Jean Menjou, Wedgewood Nowell and Kate Lester.

"The Light in the Dark" is scheduled for release September 11. Adapted from William Dudley Pelley's story, the film version is declared to be noteworthy not only for its originality and strong cast, but for a colored reel sequence, made under the new Eastman process and presented for the first time on the screen in this subject.

Hope Hampton plays the role of Bessie MacGregor, a New York shop girl, who finds a home with Mrs. Temple Orrin, a wealthy society woman. J. Warburton Ashe, Mrs. Orrin's brother, young, thoughtless, makes love to the girl, and then believing it would be folly to marry her, seeks forgetfulness by a journey to England. During a hunting trip there he discovers, in the ruins of an ancient castle, a silver cup of rare artistic design. Much of the remainder of the play centers around the cup. Recovered by the police in a raid on a pawn shop after it has been stolen from the Ashe home, it suddenly gives a dazzling light in darkness. Throughout the city the cup is publicized with legendary stories and becomes a byword. It is intimated that the cup is the Holy Grail, and it is reputed to have miraculous healing powers. It is in this part of the play that a strong part of the colored sequence appears, unfolding the story of Sir Galahad's Quest of the Grail.

Ashe, stricken with remorse, searches for Bessie, finds her in poor circumstances, and offers her his heart and hand. The ending of the story furnishes a distinct surprise. Lon Chaney has a powerful role as Panetelli, an underworld character, and E. K. Lincoln is seen as Ashe.

"Skin Deep" is scheduled for release September 25. It is a story of a returned soldier,

Berman Now Assistant to Bowes

A. C. Berman, formerly of United Artists, has been appointed executive assistant to Edward Bowes, vice president of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, and has assumed his new duties at the home office in New York.

During the past few years Mr. Berman has made an enviable record in the sales organization of United Artists, with which he became connected when that company was formed. Prior to that time he practiced law for fifteen years in Boston, his home city.

New Eastern Representative for Pacific Film Company

TO fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Julius Singer, President John J. Hayes of the Pacific Film Co., Inc., of Culver City, Cal., announces the appointment of Robert Bertschy as Eastern representative.

Mr. Bertschy was formerly manager of Warner's Albany (N. Y.) branch and is well known in state rights circles. He will have his office with Bill Alexander, 130 West Forty-sixth Street. According to Mr. Hayes, Mr. Singer resigned to formulate a consolidation of state rights exchange managers for booking purposes.

Paramount Releases For September

"Blood and Sand" and "Manslaughter"
Are Included in List of 7 Features

THE month of September will mark the release of seven Paramount productions, which include two specials—Fred Niblo's production, "Blood and Sand," starring Rodolph Valentino; and Cecil B. DeMille's production, "Manslaughter," with Thomas Meighan, Leatrice Joy and Lois Wilson.

Introducing Paramount Week, the company will release on the 3rd, Gloria Swanson in "Her Gilded Cage" and William DeMille's production, "Nice People," each of which has been booked day and date in nearly 250 houses, it is declared. "Her Gilded Cage" is a Sam Wood production, the story being written by Elmer Harris, who based it upon the play by Anne Nichols. Percy Heath wrote the scenario. David Powell is Miss Swanson's leading man and Anne Cornwall, Charles Stevenson, Walter Hiers and Harrison Ford are seen in support.

"Blood and Sand," the Fred Niblo production starring Rodolph Valentino, which has just finished a record-breaking run at the New York Rivoli and Rialto, is scheduled for release the 10th. This is the story of a bull-fighter's life, adapted by June Mathis from the novel by Vicente Blasco Ibanez and the play by Tom Cushing. A feature of the production is its artistic settings and distinctively Spanish types. Lila Lee, as leading woman, and Nita Haldi, in the role of a Spanish vampire, are featured with Mr. Valentino, who is here seen for the first time as a star. Prominent in the cast are Charles Belcher, Walter Long, Leo White, George Field and Rose Rosanova.

The other feature due the 10th is the Cosmopolitan production, "The Valley of Silent Men," with Alma Rubens. This is from the novel by James Oliver Curwood, and was directed by Frank Borzage, creator of "Humoresque" and "The Good Provider." John Lynch wrote the scenario of this story of the Canadian Northwest in which Miss Rubens has the role of a French-Canadian girl. Lew Cody is seen as an officer of the Northwest Mounted, and others in the cast are Joseph King, Mario Majeroni, George Nash and J. W. Johnston.

On the 17th comes an Irvin Willat production, "The Siren Call," with Dorothy Dalton supported by David Powell and Mitchell Lewis. This, too, is a story of the far North, from an original by J. E. Nash, with scenario by J. E. Nash and Philip Hurn. Edward Brady, Will Walling, Leigh Wyant, Lucien Littlefield and George Williams also appear with the players mentioned above.

For the same date is scheduled Jack Holt in "While Satan Sleeps," from the novel, "The Parson of Panamint," by Peter B. Kyne. Albert Shelby LeVino wrote the scenario and Joseph Henabery directed.

In "Manslaughter," adapted by Jeanie Macpherson from Alice Duer Miller's sensational novel and scheduled for release the 24th, Cecil B. DeMille has produced his greatest masterpiece, according to Jesse L. Lasky and other Paramount executives who have seen it. Thomas Meighan, Leatrice Joy and Lois Wilson are featured with other prominent roles in the hands of John Milner, George Fawcett, Julia Faye, Edythe Chapman, Jack Mower, Dorothy Cumming, Casson Ferguson, Mickey Moore, James Neill, Sylvia Ashton, Raymond Hatton, Charles Ogle, Guy Oliver and others.

Geldert Resigns as President of Mission Film

At a recent meeting of the Board of Directors of the Mission Film Corporation, Clarence H. Geldert, author-director of "Science—or God?" the recent Mission production, resigned as President of the corporation. Mr. Leon Rice, Vice-President of the corporation, will succeed Mr. Geldert to the Presidency, thereby permitting the former President to devote his entire time to his directorial duties.

Mr. Rice is a concert singer of international reputation, having sung in concert in practically every city of importance in the United States, Canada and Europe. Unlike most singers, he has had considerable business experience. For several years he was assistant manager of the Credit Clearing House in Detroit, Mich.

Christie Inaugurates Cut and Mat Service

In order to serve theatres which advertise comedy attractions in newspapers and house organs of their own, the Christie Film Company has inaugurated a special cut, photograph and mat service on all the new Christie Comedies beginning with "That Son of a Sheik," which is to be released in September through Educational exchanges. All of this material is being prepared under the direction of the exploitation department and will be available through Educational exchanges before release dates on all pictures.

Figures Show Magnitude of Fairbanks Subject

WITH a view to showing the magnitude of Douglas Fairbanks' latest production for release by United Artists, titled "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," the following figures have been submitted in a statement issued this week from the home office of the United Artists Corporation:

"Eighteen hundred players used in the biggest scenes.
"Three hundred horses used in a single scene.

"Total scenes shot, eleven hundred and eight.

"Maximum number of scenes in a day, thirty. (In Sherwood Forest).

"Minimum number of scenes in a day, two (In banquet hall.)

"Thirty thousand calls issued through casting department to players."

The United Artists statement, in addition, claims a new record for the speedy production of a special of gigantic proportions. The rapid progress made is credited principally to Fairbanks himself and Allan Dwan, who had charge of the direction. No time was lost on account of rain. The company worked on one holiday—Memorial Day—and four Sundays. Only four locations were used despite the magnitude of the picture. While the sets were under construction a crew of eight hundred men were employed, part of this number working at night to speed the work, it is stated.

The editing and titling are now practically completed, and the premiere will probably be staged late in September or early in October.

Scenes from "If I Were Queen," initial starring vehicle for Ethel Clayton, via F. B. O. release. The picture was directed by Wesley Ruggles, adapted from "The Three Cornered Kingdom," by DuVernet Rabell, and includes Andree Lejon, Warner Baxter, Victory Bateman, Murdock MacQuarrie and Genevieve Blinn

Pathe Names Releases for Sept. 10
Schedule Introduces First of Roach
Two-Reel Series Titled "Our Gang"

THE Pathe release schedule for September 10th will introduce the first of the new Hal Roach series of two-reelers which are to be distributed under the brand name of "Our Gang" comedies. These two-reelers will present children and animals in the principal roles. The first of the series is titled "One Terrible Day." The story starts with an invitation from a rich and benevolent lady to the Kids to attend a party in her beautiful residence. The Kids bring their four-legged friends along, including a flock of geese, and the subsequent developments are reported to be exceedingly funny.

The Pathe serial, "The Timber Queen," with Ruth Roland, reaches its ninth episode, entitled "Horned Fury." It carries the hero and heroine to Argentina, where Ruth stages some hazardous feats of horsemanship.

"The Landlubber," Hal Roach Comedy, with Paul Parrott, presents the comedian eloping on the yacht of the angry father in the case. The captain is sympathetic, however, and father and the violent rival suitor are suppressed—until the captain falls overboard. Thereupon the elopers fall over after him, and are seen bound for shore on a life preserver built for two. The Aesop's Film Fable offering is called "The Boy and the Bear," carrying the moral, "action speaks louder than words."

"Si, Senor," as the Harold Lloyd re-issue for September 10 is called, involves the comedian, with "Snub" Pollard and Bebe Daniels, in violent disturbances inaugurated by a fire-eating Mexican bandit. At the crisis, when "all seems lost," the comedy hero fights the bandit with swords with such characteristic comic success that the dreadful bandit is saddened, presumably, for the remainder of his career.

In Pathe Review No. 172, the New Jersey

fish hatcheries provide a fascinating subject presented in wonderful detail. In a varied programme of other interesting material, the Water Market of Venice is shown in beautiful Pathecolor.

Screen Snapshots in this release schedule present a studio scene with "a million dollar cast," including Mary Miles Minter, Bessie Love, Agnes Ayres, Theodore Roberts, Wanda Hawley, Bert Lytell, Conrad Nagel, May McAvoy, Director Paul Powell and Antonio Moreno, staging a movie for visitors. In other scenes half a dozen different screen favorites are intimately shown.

"Hungry Hearts" Opens at
N. Y. Capitol Sept. 10th

"Hungry Hearts," the Goldwyn special production, is booked for showing at the Capitol, New York, the week beginning Sunday, September 10. This is the picture founded upon Anzia Yezierska's stories of immigrant life on New York's East Side. E. Mason Hopper directed the picture, and in the cast are seen Bryant Washburn, Rose Rosanova, Helen Ferguson, E. A. Warren, George Siegman and many others.

An exploitation campaign "of an unusual sort for New York" will also be used in connection with the showing, it is announced.

Enid Bennett Returns to the Legitimate Stage

Enid Bennett will make her return to the legitimate stage in Oliver Morosco's new production, "The Sporting Thing to Do," by Thompson Buchanan. The play will be presented in Los Angeles at the Auditorium, starting September 4th, for four weeks and then brought East.

Fox to Star Chas. Gilbert in "St. Elmo"

Augusta Evans' novel, "St. Elmo," will soon be seen as a motion picture, with John Gilbert playing the leading role. It will be a William Fox production and will be directed by Jerome Storm. The scenario is by Jules Furthman.

Scenes in "A Little Child Shall Lead Them," Fox production directed by J. Searle Dawley

Educational Plans New Magazine

Weekly Screen Issues Will Contain Appealing Short Stories of Life

ANNOUNCEMENT was made at the home office of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., this week of the forthcoming issue of a magazine for the screen to be called "The Graphic." There will be fifty-two issues a year, and release will begin October 1.

This new screen magazine, which is to be produced by Educational Films Corporation, will be a departure from the accepted standard of short reel magazines in several respects. Instead of confining itself to scenic shots, stereotyped stunt photography and odds and ends left over from news reels, "The Graphic" will put into pictures genuinely dramatic and appealing short stories taken from life itself.

All stories that go to make up this magazine will be from specially prepared material, and will be photographed by cameramen trained for this work. "The Graphic" will not be content with merely showing the outward aspect of material things, but will seek to have a more deeply human touch that will show the trend of people's thoughts and hopes and desires.

Broadly speaking, this magazine will parallel to some extent the function of the better Sunday magazines, inasmuch as its subjects will contain elements of appeal that are fundamental and interest all classes of people, regardless of their particular calling or their particular limitations and tastes.

The stories carried in "The Graphic" will be primarily stories about people—people who in one way or another have a legitimate claim on the public interest. They will not necessarily be prominent people in the sense that they are rich or powerful, but they will always be picturesque characters in whom the public will be interested.

In brief, "The Graphic" will be a human interest digest of the world and its people, reflecting not only what people are doing but what they think and how they feel about what they are doing.

Plans for this magazine have long been under consideration, but the editors and artists under whose direction it was desired to issue it were not available until the present time.

Educational plans to have the first issue of "The Graphic" in all branch exchanges some time prior to the first release date, October 1, for private screening for exhibitors.

Burton Holmes Back from Far East

Burton Holmes, of Travelogue fame, reached New York during the week overland from Seattle, after an extensive trip through Japan, Manchuria, Korea and China.

In Japan he made a specialty of visiting the places made famous by the writings of Lafcadio Hearn, and in China he made an extensive voyage up the Yang-tse-Kiang, a trip which he found marvelously interesting and beautiful.

Paramount Pictures for Twin Cities

Paramount pictures in the future will be shown at the Finkelstein and Ruben theatres in the Twin Cities and other leading cities of Minnesota. Sidney R. Kent, general manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, was in Minneapolis and signed a contract with the Finkelstein and Ruben firm.

Sennett to Star Phyllis Haver in Series

MACK SENNETT has selected Phyllis Haver to head a separate comedy unit, and he will star Miss Haver in a series of full-length comedy drama productions which will be released through Associated First National Pictures.

In a statement emanating from the First National home-office this week, Miss Haver's elevation to stardom under the auspices of Mack Sennett is accredited entirely to her proved ability in past productions on the Sennett lot. From the galaxy of screen beauties known as the Mack Sennett Bathing Girls, Miss Haver arose and successfully worked her way up to her present position as a Sennett star. Her first vehicle, as yet untitled, will be ready for production this week.

New Manager for F.B.O.'s Chicago Branch

Harry Berman, general manager of distribution of Film Booking Offices of America, this week announces the appointment of Joseph Klein as manager of the F. B. O. Chicago branch, to succeed C. R. Plough, who has resigned.

Mr. Klein has served as Eastern District Manager for the Film Booking Offices for the past few years. Mr. Plough will devote his time to the management of theatre interests. Another addition to the F. B. O. Chicago staff is Louis P. Kramer, who has resigned as manager of publicity for Universal's Kansas City office to direct the publicity and advertising at the Chicago Exchange.

Earle Williams Starts New Feature

Vitagraph's west coast studio has begun work on the new Earle Williams feature, "You Never Know." The scenes are laid in San Francisco, along the water front in the days of South American revolutions, and gun-running Americans.

Earle Williams will be seen in the role of a secret service operative, assigned the task of running down a band of American revolution backers.

"Honeymoon for Three" Sloman's Next

On the eve of his departure from Hollywood for New York where he is to arrange for the distribution of his first personally produced picture, "Blind Justice," Frank R. Adams' magazine story, Edward Sloman announced that his next picture will be "A Honeymoon for Three," the popular story that has been running in serial form in the magazine section of the Hearst newspapers.

"Madame Sans Gene" for Independents

The Independent Market is to get another special feature. It is "Madame Sans Gene," the world famous story and stage play. This announcement comes from Producers' Security Corporation, which states that the feature will be released immediately. This latest feature is presented by Aubrey Kennedy and is titled by Margaret Mayo.

Zukor on Radio Opens Paramount Week

NEXT week, September 3-9, is Paramount Week, the fifth annual event which each year registers the high water mark of simultaneous showings of Paramount pictures. As a formal preliminary to the opening of the week President Adolph Zukor, of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, spoke by radio to more than a million people last night. Mr. Zukor's brief address, which was broadcast from Station WJZ at Newark, N. J.

Mr. Zukor's speech was in the nature of a felicitation for picture patrons upon the fact that the motion picture industry is once more standing securely upon its feet and is now placing before the public the biggest and best pictures in its history.

"If I Were Queen" Ethel Clayton Film for F.B.O.

Ethel Clayton's first picture made for release by F. B. O. bears the title of "If I Were Queen." This subject, which was made under the working title of "The Three Cornered Kingdom," is a screen adaptation of the magazine story by De Vernet Rabell. Wesley Ruggles directed the production. The cast includes Warner Baxter (opposite the star), Andree Lejon, Victory Bateman, Murdock MacQuarrie, and Genevieve Blinn. Joseph A. Dubray was in charge of the photography. The picture is scheduled for release in October.

A picturesque Balkan kingdom serves as the locale of the story and some elaborate court settings are stated to be among the features of the production. The story also possesses a gripping climax in which a realistic railroad wreck is staged. The adventures of an American girl in a mythical Balkan principality furnish the theme of the picture.

Preferred Pictures Buys "The Hero"

Dramatic Critics Proclaimed Play Among Best Presented Last Season

"THE HERO," which was proclaimed by New York's dramatic critics as one of the finest plays by an American author in 1921, has been purchased by Preferred Pictures, Inc., of which B. P. Schulberg is president, for immediate screen production.

Negotiations for the play have been on for some time and were finally closed with Sam H. Harris on Monday of this week by Al Lichtman, Vice-President of Preferred Pictures and president of the Al Lichtman Corporation, which is distributing the Preferred product.

The play was written by "Gilbert Emery," in reality Emery Pottle, a noted short story writer, and marked his advent as a playwright. It was presented at a series of matinees with Grant Mitchell in the leading role and later came to the Belmont theatre for a regular run, with a new cast headed by Richard Bennett, with Robert Ames, Fania Marinoff and other well known players.

Branded as "daring" by most of the critics, "The Hero" was a sensation because it marked the first effort of an author to analyze the appeal of a uniform for the feminine sex and to present the problem of physical courage versus moral courage.

The story centers around two brothers, one a stay-at-home plodder, the other a harum-scarum youth who leaves the United States, joins the French Foreign Legion and serves with conspicuous gallantry in the war. It is upon the soldier's return, bearing scars and decorations, that the author matches his character against the brother who had stayed home and shielded his mother and family while other men, physically courageous were in Europe fighting.

B. P. Schulberg, under whose supervision "The Hero" will be produced for the screen, said:—

"In purchasing 'the Hero,' Preferred Pictures is only following its fixed policy of acquiring the best stories possible for screen production. Mr. Pottle's play was rated as the best dramatic work of the 1921 season, and we have been trying to get the rights to it for some time past. And in this connection, I may also add that we are considering a number of others just as important from the standpoint of dramatic value."

Non-Theatrical Concern Absorbs Pictures

Through contracts signed Wednesday the entire non-theatrical activities of the Alexander Film Corporation, 130 West Forty-sixth street, are absorbed by the National Non-Theatrical Motion Pictures, Inc., of which Harry Levey is president and Arthur James vice president. By the terms of the agreement one hundred and fifty subjects, including William S. Hart, Douglas Fairbanks, Norma Talmadge, Charles Ray, Frank Keenan, Ray Stewart and a number of specials, will be marketed non-theatrically solely by the National Non-Theatrical Company.

Pola Negri's First to Be "Bella Donna"

POLA NEGRI'S first Paramount picture to be made in this country will be "Bella Donna," according to an announcement made by Jesse L. Lasky at Hollywood Tuesday. George Fitzmaurice will direct the Polish star and Ouida Bergere is now at work on the scenario of the novel by Robert Hichens.

Lasky further announced that, contrary to original plans, the picture will be made at the Lasky studio in California instead of the Long Island City studio. Miss Negri sails for this country on the Majestic September 6 and, arriving here about a week later, will remain in New York just long enough to see the town before entraining for the West Coast. Fitzmaurice plans to start the production about September 23.

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

TO THE PUBLIC:

Owing to arrangements made for the showing of Rudolph Valentino in "Blood and Sand," we can retain "The Prisoner of Zenda" only this week, despite the unprecedented patronage it is attracting. It is gratifying to note that the public has been quick and generous in its recognition of the extraordinary merits of this superb picture. This, however, is only one of the many great productions which will be shown in this theatre during the present season.

FAMOUS PLAYERS

If You Believe It, It's So—

Similar to "Miracle Man" but not nearly so good. People here rather disappointed in this picture. Business not what we expected. (Middle West.)

Not Meighan's best but good enough and much on lines of "The Miracle Man." Did good on average. (Middle West.)

The Dictator—

Light comedy stuff, with a touch of appealing romance and adventure. Held up fair for week. (Middle West.)

The Man Unconquerable—

Too much action said patrons. Business fair. Women did not like it and said so. (East.)

Through a Glass Window—

Borderland—

A rather unusual picture. Plot artificial. Photography and acting excellent. Average business. (Middle West.)

The Bonded Woman—

The Beauty Shop—

Not much of a picture, and only a fair drawing card. (Middle West.)

While Satan Sleeps—

The best drawing card in two months. Played to good houses for a week's run. (Middle West.)

The Top of New York—

Clever interesting picture and played to good business. (Middle West.)

Nice People—

One of the best Wally Reid has appeared in for some time. Is strong drawing card. (Middle West.)

The Young Diana—

Proved rather disappointing. Business off. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Rose O' the Sea—

A typical scenario of mediocre kind. Plot is weak. Characters hackneyed. A big musical program was responsible for a successful week with this feature. (Middle West.)

Fools First—

A fine picture, which went over big. Good story, excellent cast. (Middle West.)

Smudge—

All critics found fault with picture. Business fair. (Middle West.)

The Infidel—

Patrons liked this one and it did a good week's business. (Middle West.)

The Masquerader—

One of the year's best pictures. Did good business. (Middle West.)

The Primitive Lover—

Did fairly well. Constance Talmadge has done better work. Business fair. (Middle West.)

SELZNICK

The Probation Wife—

Combination of Thomas Meighan and Norma Talmadge in this good picture pulled big business despite the fact that it is a revival. (Middle West.)

The Referee—

Full of action and excitement. Star popular here. Drew well. (Middle West.)

Under Oath—

One of the best things Elaine Hammerstein has done. Business close to capacity at all shows. (East.)

Star popular and did pretty well in this picture. (Middle West.)

FILM BOOKING OFFICE

In the Name of the Law—

A good melodrama. Pretty fair business. (Middle West.)

Heart interest picture that opened to nice business that increased daily during entire week's run. Local police force guests of house management. (Middle West.)

Queen of the Turf—

Hot weather and the State Fair did not help business which was halting. The picture hasn't any well known player but is pretty good for a race story. (Middle West.)

METRO

The Prisoner of Zenda—

A real picture! Opened to capacity and played to full houses all week. Did so well that we held it over a second week. Play, cast, direction, equally praised by everyone. (Middle West.)

The Right That Failed—

This one staged an old-fashioned box office revival at this theatre. Held them out for every show on opening day. (East.)

Five Dollar Baby—

A good summer picture. Drew well in a poor week. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

Don't Shoot—

Good box office attraction which pleased our patrons and packed them in. (Middle West.)

Good stuff. Patrons liked it. Business better than average. (Middle West.)

The Married Flapper—

A good box office attraction. Good week's attendance. (Middle West.)

The Storm—

Seemed to meet with popular approval. Well advertised and lived up to the advertisement. Did good business. (Middle West.)

GOLDWYN

The Wall Flower—

Advertised for the week but did not hold out for that long. Lacks something. (Middle West.)

The Dust Flower—

Not so good. Attendance was below average, although the week was the hottest of the summer. (Middle West.)

Mr. Barnes of New York—

Was well received. Star is popular with patrons. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Orphans of the Storm—

Did big business for second run. (Middle West.)

A really great picture which proved itself a big box office attraction. Business very heavy. (Middle West.)

AMERICAN RELEASING

Belle of Alaska—

Good snow story for warm weather, but held up for only three days. (Middle West.)

FOX

The Fast Mail—

A regular thriller which played to a good summer business. (Middle West.)

HODKINSON

The Gray Dawn—

About the average Western picture. Fair business. (Middle West.)

Street ballyhoo used to exploit "Penrod" when playing the Lyric theatre, Harlow, Iowa

Social Lights Make Personal Appearances in Tie-up

MEMPHIS, Tenn. All house attendance records were shattered at Loew's Palace Theatre, Memphis, and the box office closed at 8:15 o'clock when G. E. Brown, director of publicity and advertising for the Consolidated Enterprises, Inc., booked an aggregation of 25 of the prettiest society girls of Memphis to appear on the stage. A line a block long hung around the theatre hoping to get in an hour after the box office closed.

The occasion was the selection of the girl who is to represent Memphis at the Atlantic City bathing revue this fall and in which 74 other cities in the country participated. Brown tied into the Commercial Appeal, the morning paper which conducted the competition and arranged for the judges to select the winner upon their personal appearances on the stage of the Palace Theatre. Twenty-five of the prettiest girls entered into the competition were given a dinner at one of the leading hotels and from there conveyed to the theatre, where they appeared before nearly 2,500 people.

Free publicity ranging in size from two columns to a full page was obtained through the tie-up, aggregating more than 75 columns. The stunt boosted box office receipts more than 100 per cent. for the day.

Exhibitor Masks Entire Front And Gives Picture Big Smash

Yakima, Wash.—Manager H. A. Gillespie, of the Liberty theatre, never economizes on wall-board and oil paint.

For the run of "Across the Continent" he walled in his entire front and painted reproductions of the lithographs, the 4-sheet, and the 6-sheet, the 1-sheet.

Mr. Gillespie and Harry C. Eagles, Paramount exploiter, who co-operated on the stunt, also sent out a ballyhoo consisting of a racing car bannered to read: "The Dent Wins Over All Cars. The Trans-Continental Record Smashed."

Eagles located a mud-hole just outside of town. Every half-hour he had the car driven through the hole and then shoot into town all spattered with wet mud. As the car skidded around a corner and came to a halt near the curb, people naturally ran up.

The driver then proceeded to distribute novelty heralds. These were little "Across the Continent" games which can be played with dice and pins.

Contribution to Policemen's Organization Secures Helpful Cooperation

Los Angeles, Cal.—In the opening "In The Name Of The Law" at the Mission theatre, the management agreed to contribute $1,000 from the receipts of the first week to the Los Angeles Police Relief Association and members of the entire force got back of the picture and boosted. The police department band of forty pieces paraded the principal business streets of the city on the evening of the opening and the use of Sunlight Arcs in front of the Mission theatre on Broadway used to take motion pictures of the crowd served to attract thousands of people.

For the first time in the history of the Mission theatre the lobby was used for display material. In the center was a ten foot enlargement of Ralph Lewis in his makeup of the picture and also enlargements of letters of endorsement from the Mayor and Chief of Police of Los Angeles. The management of the theatre had banners hung across the street in several places and more than one hundred life sized cut-outs were on display in shop windows.

All members of the production director Emory Johnson and members of the cast were present at the opening and were introduced.

Mask Over Theatre Front for "Love's Redemption"

Owensboro, Ky.—Arch Bamberger, of the Empress theatre, began his campaign on "Love's Redemption" the Sunday before the showing on Wednesday and Thursday with a mask placed over the front of the theatre. The mask, as painted on compo board by a local artist, contained a scene of the beach at Jamaica, where the greater part of the story takes place, with Ginger, Norma Talmadge's screen figure in the story, in the foreground.

Inside the foyer display for "The Love's of Pharaoh" put in one week in advance, by De Sales Harrison, Manager, Howard theatre, Atlanta, Ga.

Local Angle Opens Newspaper Columns to Strand Theatre

SYRACUSE, N. Y. The Strand Theatre gobbled nearly a thousand lines of free publicity out of the Syracuse Herald with an essay contest on "Our Leading Citizen."

With the cooperation of Harry L. Royster, Paramount exploiter from Buffalo, the newspaper was sold to sponsor the contest. The paper asked for essays from their readers proposing some local light as the "leading citizen" of the town. The three best essays were to bring $10 each in cash prizes.

The contest ran six days, four of which were given over to the publication of typical letters. The first two days were used for the announcements.

The idea of the contest hit home with every reader. The American public is extremely concerned about honors and distinction, and Syracuse proved no exception. The whole town watched the Herald to see whose name was singled out for the headlines.

Allen Eddy, news editor of the Herald, was found to be an old associate of George Ade, author of the story, and was, of course, selected as one of the judges. Royster and one other completed the jury.

Royster, who wrote the copy, took care that the theatre and the picture should not be forgotten in the competition. The prize was called "The Thomas Meighan-George Ade Prize for the Best Essay on 'Our Leading Citizen.'"

United Cigar Store Window Coralled for "Borderland"

Columbia, S. C.—For the first time in Columbia the window of the United Cigar Store was secured by the Imperial theatre for display in connection with "Borderland." The window would have been vacant for about three days, as the store's next display had not arrived, so Mr. Irvin induced the store manager to permit him to decorate it, putting in an attractive display of sixteen stills and a card about the size of a one sheet.

Columbia was also the first town in the south to play "Borderland," which Mr. Irvin accentuated in his advertising and publicity, alleging that the Imperial constantly endeavored to give its patrons desirable pictures at the earliest possible moment. Otherwise, the advertising was largely concentrated on newspapers and played up the star, the leading man and the nature of the story.

Hidden Gold Stunt Pulled on B'way

New York Exploitation for "Monte Cristo"
Gets Big Spread in Metropolitan Papers

NEW YORK'S theatrical district experienced a "gold" scramble this week that brought "Monte Cristo," playing a second week of an indefinite run at the Forty-fourth street theatre, an unusual amount of publicity.

For days advertisements in the various dailies heralded the coming to New York of the "Count of Monte Cristo," who was to share his vast fortunes with the people of the metropolis by distributing certificates of different denominations in many nooks and corners within 300 feet of the theatre building. Those finding the certificates, which represented sums of $1, $5, $10, $15, $25, $50 and a grand prize of $100, were to cash them in at the box office of the theatre.

Promptly at noon Friday, August 25th, the "Count," attired in the costume in which he appears in the picture, drove up to the front of the Forty-fourth street house and announced to the large throng awaiting him that the money certificates had been hidden and that the "gold rush" was on.

Within less than five minutes more than 15,000 treasure-seekers were engaged in the scramble and more than 100,000 others were interestedly witnessing the rush, as men, women and children pushed, fought and searched about the Times Square district of New York for gold.

When the battle was over, $250 worth of certificates had been brought forth from their hiding places and exchanged for their cash equivalent by the Count of Monte Cristo at the theatre lobby. All during the search the Count drove about the streets encouraging the people to look for the money.

Following the stunt large advertisements were used to tell New Yorkers about the successful finders and the rewards that resulted from their labors.

Despite the difficulty press agents have had in breaking into the columns of New York's dailies, The Times, the leading and most conservative newspaper, devoted a half-column to the details of the stunt, and the other New York papers gave the stunt big spreads.

"Who Is 'The Masquerader' "? Capitol Theatre Asked Patrons

St. Paul, Minn.—The Old Raffles stunt has been modernized with the coming of the automobile; and accordingly we see the masked marvel seated in a seven passenger touring car.

In the case of the Capitol Theatre, St. Paul he covered the main streets the week before actual advertising and announcement of the picture began. St. Paulites were asked to guess who "The Masquerader" was; and interest in this First National picture was inaugurated even before the fans had any idea it was coming.

"The Masquerader" happened to be a tall, well formed gentleman, immaculately dressed who might have aroused interest in many feminine hearts even without a mask. With this equipment, plus a touring car and liveried attendants (borrowed from the Capitol Theatre) he proved a vortex of curiosity. The papers caught onto it as a story and the theatre gained several columns of free publicity.

Weather Forecast Applied to Advertising "The Storm"

DANVILLE, Ill. Thomas P. Ronan, manager of the Home Theatre Co., controlling the Terrace, Fischer and Palace theatres, might qualify as a forecaster in the Weather Bureau. Last week he devised a novel exploitation stunt for "The Storm," with surprising results.

Two girls, employed for the purpose, called up every telephone subscriber in town and delivered the following message: "This is a Warning—'The Storm' is Coming!" The girls would hang up immediately, thus avoiding any conversation with the person called. This proved so effective that the manager of the telephone company was inundated with calls for further information on the predicted weather disturbance.

The following Sunday, the day on which the picture opened its run at the theatre, one of the worst thunder storms of the year struck Danville. Despite a terrific downpour punctuated by lightning flashes and thunderbolts, the house played to capacity business and continued to do so.

Another means of exploitation employed by Manager Ronan was the snipping of "snow birds"—several hundred cards, furnished by the local exchange, tacked on a pointed lath and struck in the ground. These cards, reading, "The Storm is Coming" were "planted" a week in advance and proved effective in calling attention to the run of the picture.

Amarillo Uses Freak Stunts on "Reported Missing"

Amarillo, Tex.—Manager Rogers of the Mission Theatre created lots of additional interest in "Reported Missing" by appealing to his patrons with freak stunts and novel types of advertising.

First, he had a ballyhoo that stopped everyone. A local Aeroplane company loaned the theatre the use of an old plane body, which was built upon a truck and carried banners about being the plane that rescued the couple in the picture. This stunt worked fine and was kept on the streets during the run also.

Novel banners hung in front of the theatre, all stressing the unusualness of this picture.

Improvised Slate in Lobby Attracts Interesting Comments

Griffin, Ga.—Some lobby displays are just announcements, some have prologue value and occasionally a manager gets both prologue and "contest" value in his display. Such was the desire of Manager A. H. Cobb, Jr., of the Alamo theatre, when "School Days" was the attraction.

In the latter case, the lobby display was tested out as being efficiently a sales attractor. Manager Cobb built a large slate about 6½ x 8, of beaver board. Instead of covering the face of the slate with cut-outs and titles, he left the biggest part of it blank and had lettered across the top "$5.00 for the best comment on 'School Days'—Not over ten words. Write comment and name below, after seeing the picture."

Mr. Cobb states that the children fell for it immediately and began writing their comments after the first show. It was a bit harder to get the grown-ups started but with a little persuasion they tried it and before the engagement was over the board contained comments from many of the most prominent citizens in Griffin. The front side wouldn't hold them all so Mr. Cobb painted the back side black and let them write on that. A crowd always collected when anyone started to write a comment.

The effectiveness of the slate was increased by a rear view cut-out of Wesley Barry placed just in front of the slate as though he were reading the comments.

Savoy Theatre's Lobby Display Exploits Picture at the Noble

ANNISTON, Ala. An advance lobby display, featured in the lobby of the Savoy Theatre which is temporarily closed, put "Polly of the Follies" show over at the Noble. The lobby was closed in on the sides with lattice work, and a stage effect was produced by the use of dancing girl cut-outs arranged against a background of draperies. This was illuminated with footlights and overhead lights at night.

A banner clear across announced "Constance Talmadge in Polly of the Follies" at the Noble Theatre such and such a date.

This display was left standing during the entire two-days' run.

Decorations Lend Tropical Note to Run of "South of Suva"

Ft. Smith, Ark.—For "South of Suva," Manager J. B. Robertson decorated the lobby of the Palace theatre to represent a tropical South Sea Island by the use of flowers, leaves and a rope dyed green to represent vines. There were also three parrots, made of paper and stuffed with cotton. They were hung in wire rings, which were also decorated to fit a tropical setting.

During the same week Manager Robertson appealed to the American Legion through postcards, worded to sell the attraction, "The Dictator." The copy started out: "Enlist today. Join the army of 'The Dictator,'" etc.

Enlargements for "Smilin' Through" in N. Y. Plaza

New York.—Colored enlargements supplied the basis of the attractive lobby display used by the Plaza Theatre, New York, for "Smilin' Through." They were placed at each side of lobby, surrounded by trellises and roses covering the edges of the pictures. The cost was less than five dollars but the simple arrangement was responsible for a great deal of patronage that was drawn in by the display.

Leo Brecher, managing director of the Plaza, and Milton Chamberlain, resident manager, assisted by S. Charles Einfeld, put in the display.

Bobbed Hair Girls Extended Invitation to see "Bobbed Hair"

Atlanta, Ga.—During the first two days of the four days run of "Bobbed Hair," manager G. M. Phillips, of the Rialto Theatre, admitted all girls with bobbed hair free, between the hours of eleven and one. This created sufficient stir among the flappers that on the second day seven hundred and fifty took advantage of the offer, while on the first day only two hundred and fifty claimed admittance on bobbed hair.

The three Atlanta papers carried special stories on the stunt.

Lobby Front for "One Clear Call" Plays Up Highlights of Production

Amarillo, Texas.—Manager R. C. Sullivan, of the Fair theatre, reports that an effective yet inexpensive lobby front was devised for his house during the run of "One Clear Call." The incident of the riding clansmen, in the picture, was played up by a board front that borrowed a photograph of a klansman's gathering, and emphasized the words, "One Clear Call," "Ku Klux Klan" and "1,000 Riders," in bold lettering.

Six sheets and cut-outs of the masked rider stood out boldly at each side of the entrance and on the sidewalks. Eight masked riders also rode during the picture's run.

Masked Riders Parade for "Smilin' Through"

RACINE, Wis. Manager McKivett of the Bijou Theatre, has a new idea that worked for the showing of "Smilin' Through." He used the masked riders—ordinarily associated with "One Clear Call" for his exploitation.

It was part of a campaign tie-up with the Journal News to photograph the best smiles in the city. The masked men traveled around in their automobiles camera ready to jump out at any moment and snap what gave evidence of being a logical contender in the "Best Smile" exploitation. The campaign aroused tremendous interest and the Bijou gained about 200 inches of free publicity space.

Colorful Lobby Decorations Exploit "Reckless Youth"

Atlanta, Ga.—Manager Phillips of the Rialto theatre, took his cue from the hotel part scenes in "Reckless Youth" and dressed his lobby in green colors, as though for a big celebration.

In the center of the lobby was hung a large Japanese lantern. Running out from this in eight directions were wires with two lanterns hung on each. Then vari-colored strips of crepe paper were twined around the wires giving the effect of a large dome. Masses of confetti were draped and thrown over everything in the lobby and colored balloons were suspended at various points. All of the lanterns were lighted with electric lamps.

Mr. Phillips got up a special novelty herald with an attractive cut and good catch lines.

Fulton Theatre Exploitation Aided by Local Editor

Jersey City, N. J.—The publicity and exploitation work for Fred Merten's Fulton theatre is handled by A. S. Pittenberg, who recently devised a plan to circulate publicity on "Our Leading Citizen," as follows:

The editor in chief of a daily was sold on the question, "Who Is Our Leading Citizen?" to the extent that he invited readers to tell in a limited number of words who they thought was the local leading citizen and why. From numerous answers, the better ones were published over a period of ten days, the reading space devoted to these letters amounting to over three hundred inches. Like other towns, Jersey City had its several political and popular leaders whose admirers are legion, consequently the opinions were of great variety.

The offer was open a week before the picture was shown and continued for three days after. Of course, all regular display advertising was tied up with the contest, but a supplementary stunt was used in connection, which kept up the interest.

The man who was the subject of the first prize winning letter was asked to be guest of honor upon the occasion of awarding the prizes and to speak on the subject of good citizenship.

The next day front page space, with cuts, was devoted to the "Leading Citizen" contest by every Jersey City daily. This is significant in view of the fact that the Fulton advertises only in the paper which conducted the contest. Also a business-getting board of judges was selected, including a prominent member of the clergy, a well known and respected philanthropic worker—a woman—and a principal of a large local school.

"La Paloma" Serenades Folks And Attracts Patrons

Columbia, S. C.—When the Imperial played "The Dictator," Manager Warren Irvin took his cue from the posters and dressed a tall blond young man in a South American costume. He wore a high straw sombrero, white shirt and trousers and a red sash. Of course he carried the proverbial guitar—and he could play it, too.

The day before the opening and during the opening this man strolled about the streets strumming on the instrument.

The first day he wore a sign reading, "I Am 'The Dictator.'" On the second, it was changed to read, "See Wallace Reid in 'The Dictator' at the Imperial Now."

Spanish Atmosphere and Art Gallery at the Rivoli

NEW YORK. Spanish atmosphere and an art gallery of stills featured the Rivoli Theatre lobby for "Blood and Sand" when the picture was given its world premiere in New York.

John C. Flinn and Lewis Gardy, who had charge of the exploitation for Dr. Riesenfeld's house followed the Paramount lobby suggestion and gave a brilliant yellow and red flash to the Rivoli front. These Spanish national colors are the most successful attention-getting combination on record.

A ball-shaped frame-work of wire was fastened mid-way up the front and was covered with the red and yellow bunting. Streamers in the two colors flowed down to the marquee. The under side of the marquee was hung with American and Spanish flags.

The foyer was hung with red and yellow bunting, which also decorated the dead radiators. A copy of Spanish newspapers with headlines over a bull fight, stories were also shown. Two large heads of bulls were hung on the walls.

Circus Stuff and Two Ballyhoos for "Love's Boomerang"

Memphis, Tenn.—The circus front animated by two clever clowns is reported to have sold "Love's Boomerang" for Manager H. B. Clarke of the Majestic theatre. The clowns did their stunts out on the sidewalk. They always kept a crowd looking on.

Toy animals borrowed from a department store occupied a table in front of the box office and were arranged to resemble a miniature circus ring. A large card was tacked on the table with ad copy for the picture.

Teaser Want Ad Used with Other "Bachelor Daddy" Advertising

Savannah, Ga.—Manager John G. Evins, of the Odeon theatre, started his campaign on "The Bachelor Daddy" with teaser ads originating in Spartansburg, which were used by A. C. Cowles. They were worked along these lines:

"Wanted: Well known local man to become the bachelor daddy of five small children. Inquiries treated as strictly confidential. Phone 974."

These ads were run for three days and the interest created was remarkable. Not less than seventy-five people phoned the theatre, and many called the newspaper to find out what it was all about.

A big lot of children's clothing was borrowed from a local dealer and suspended on wires in the lobby. Cut-outs of Meighan, Joy and the five kids were arranged in the lobby. The title was spelled across the marquee by letters painted on square pasteboard boxes.

A tie-up was made with a shoe store by which they put in a complete window display for "The Bachelor Daddy" in return for 100 passes. They distributed these passes to their customers after mentioning the picture and the passes in their ads for two days.

Atmospheric Setting Effects Exploit "Over the Border"

MALESTER, Okla. In the front of the lobby of the Palace Theatre sat a large bottle labeled "Moonshine." Just across the dividing line representing Canada and the United States sat a barrel marked "Canadian Club" with another sign, "Take your choice—Canada or the United States." The division post between the two countries was covered in snow, also several cedar trees in the lobby were given the touch of winter by being covered in imitation snow. Across the sidewalk was painted a large white line on one side the letters, "The Dominion of Canada" on the other side, "United States." About the only thing lacking to fully carry out each country's possessions were their national flags.

The main thing about Manager Settle's exploitation was the fact that he played up an atmospheric setting for this snow and ice picture. The lighting effects were of such a color that they added coolness to the entire display.

Personal Appearance of Beauty Tied up with Rialto Program

HOUSTON, Texas. A double bill was offered to the patrons of the Queen Theatre during the week of "I Am the Law."

In the lobby of the theatre were five cut-outs of leading characters in the picture. All were dressed in furs and northern paraphernalia, which together with the ice and snow effects gave the theatre a cool atmosphere, which was certainly in demand just now.

All safety zones and permanent blocking places around the town were heavily billed with signs, "I Am the Law." Others read, "Be Careful—I Am the Law."

The program was double barreled, consisting of the feature picture, "I Am the Law" and the personal appearance of Miss Edith Mae Patterson. Miss Patterson won the beauty contest held recently by several Eastern judges.

Unique Advertising Exploits "Robinson Crusoe" Serial

CALGARY, Alberta, Canada. A combination page to introduce the initial episodes of "Robinson Crusoe," at the Regent Theatre, appeared in the Calgary Herald.

There were twelve advertisements on the combination page and 30 free tickets to the Regent Theatre were offered in a contest in which the general public was invited to designate what articles they would like to have with them in case they were shipwrecked like "Robinson Crusoe."

The advertisements on the "Crusoe" page included those for drugs, hats, chocolates, musical instruments, flour, washing machines, bread, bicycles and confectionery. Many replies were received by the newspaper's contest editor.

Political Campaign Tie-up for "Our Leading Citizen"

Sumter, S. C.—The town was in the throes of a hot political race for city council at the time "Our Leading Citizen" was due. So, as Manager Oscar White is somewhat of an opportunist, he decided to cash in on this and play up the political angle.

The lobby was turned into a campaign headquarters with desks, chairs, telephones, a typewriter, and cards with campaign slogans. There was also a large banner across the front in addition to the usual lithographs and lobby photos. Many ladies availed themselves of the chance to sit in a comfortable chair and use the telephone.

Slips made up to look like the regular city ballots were printed and distributed all over town. They got a laugh by carrying the line at the bottom, "Vote Early and Often."

On opening day Mr. White secured a Mitchell car from the local dealer and this was bannered and driven around the streets. The banners read, "Vote for Our Leading Citizen at the Rex theatre Today."

"Smilin' Through" Adapted to Needs of $2,000,000 Drive

TACOMA, Wash.—The title "Smilin' Through" has been used in numerous ways but it remained for Manager C. C. Pratt of Jensen and Von Herberg's Rialto Theatre, Tacoma, Wash., to adapt it to a $2,000,000 hotel drive. They used it on street cars, ballyhoo signs and in a huge banner stretched fifty feet across the street directly in front of the theatre. Tacoma civic pride was aroused over the building of a new hotel. The Rialto theatre took up the cry with the command: "Come 'Smilin' Through' for the New Hotel." The campaign had the co-operation of the Tacoma Ad Club and furnished wonderful exploitation for the theatre. The usherettes were decorated in fancy costumes, imitating court pages with the "Smilin' Through" ribbon across their blouses.

Combination of Ideas Used to Exploit "My Boy" in Savannah

Savannah, Ga.—Through the efforts of Manager J. G. Evins, of the Odeon Theatre, a newsboys' parade was arranged, permitting the lads to parade through the streets with drums and bugles exploiting "My Boy." Each boy was placarded with a window card and a banner headed the procession. In connection with this, Manager Evins used a ballyhoo of a very small boy dressed as Jackie Coogan. In the center of his lobby, Manager Evins featured a cut-out from the twenty-four sheets while on one side a one sheet was displayed in a barrel, and on the other a tub carrying another cut-out from a one sheet. Window displays were not overlooked, one being secured in the most prominent shoe store and the other in a large clothing store.

Theatre Ties Up with Hotel in Exploiting "Arabian Love"

Niagara Falls, Ontario.—An arrangement between the management of the Web theatre and the Clifton Hotel, resulted in combined efforts in securing publicity for "Arabian Love," and for an evening at the hotel preceding the opening of the picture, which was advertised as "An Arabian Night." The plan included the holding of a musical soiree and dance at the Clifton Hotel in the ballroom the evening before the opening of "Arabian Love." For a week prior the hotel inserted ads in the Buffalo and Niagara Falls, N. Y., newspapers and issued also two thousand invitations. A musical comedy celebrity, who was a guest at the hotel, opened the evening with a rendition of operatic selections and afterward appeared in the musical prologue at the Web theatre arranged for presenting the picture. In the lobby of the hotel was a huge frame in which were pictures of the soloist, and carried also wording that advertised "Arabian Love," as well as the fact that the singer would appear in a special prologue at the Web theatre. In addition, the invitations and advertising carried this announcement.

The leading stores in Niagara Falls carried photographs of the singer and stills from "Arabian Love" in their windows. A special canvas of all men's and women's clubs both in Niagara Falls, Ontario, and New York, was made. Cut-outs decorated the front of the theatre, in addition to frames with photographs and lobby cards of the picture. During the day these cut-outs were affixed to the back and sides of a large touring car which was driven throughout the town and Niagara Falls, N. Y. The "Arabian Night," was further heralded by stories in the papers. The ballroom, attractively decorated with Oriental drapings and color schemes, was filled with hotel guests and visitors from Buffalo, Lockport and Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Attractive ads were designed expressly for this picture. They consisted of a large web in the centre of which were the words, "Arabian Love," with suitable wording at the top and bottom, followed by four lines of verse.

New McVickers Displays Un-named Stars to Appear

Chicago, Ill.—Stars, nameless, but not unknown, arrest the attention in the 24-sheet stand which is being used to bill the opening of Jones, Linick and Schaefer's New McVickers Theatre. In the left corner of the stand is a stunning head of Gloria Swanson more than six sheets in size. In the top background are figures of Thomas Meighan as he appears in "Manslaughter," Rodolph Valentino in "Blood and Sand," Dorothy Dalton in "The Siren Call," Theodore 'Roberts as Uncle Josh in "The Old Homestead," Agnes Ayres in "Borderland," and Valentino as the "Young Rajah." The big catch line in white letters is "For You." The rest of the text announces that the new theatre will be devoted exclusively to Paramount Pictures.

Advance Teasers for "The Dictator" Used on Slides and Newspapers

Houston, Texas.—Some days in advance, teaser slides were run in the local theatres and newspapers heralding the coming of an attraction at the Queen theatre. It finally proved to be "The Dictator." A tie-up was arranged with several merchants securing space in their windows for art displays and window cards. These read: "We are the Dictators in Style and Value. See Wallace Reid, also a Dictator, at the Queen." The local hotels cooperated by displaying one sheet frames and allowing heralds to be placed in the reading rooms. At the head of the main street where every automobile turns to come to town, there were two large signs which carried the title of the picture, a sales line and the name of the theatre.

In Spartansburg, S. C., in the lobby of the Rex Theatre, this huge "slate" appeared, advertising "School Days"

Ratings on Features Explained

Exhibitor Reports in Percentages is the result of giving figure ratings to word box office and entertainment value reports from exhibitors, and by arithmetic reducing the total number of reports to percentages.

The key ratings accepted for use are:

Poor	Fair	Average	Good	Big
20%	40%	50%	70%	100%

To arrive at the rating of a picture, the number of reports at each individual rating are multiplied by the key rating percentage, the whole is totaled and the sum obtained divided by the total number of reports received.

The rating is applied separately to the box office and entertainment value related by each report.

No picture will be included in the list which does not receive at least ten reports.

MEN AND EVENTS IN THE FILM CENTRES

With "News" Correspondents

ITEMS OF THE EXCHANGES AND THEATRES

KANSAS CITY

The Film Booking Offices of America has opened its headquarters for exploitation in the middle western division in Kansas City. Harold Horne of Omaha, a veteran in the exploitation field, has been placed in charge.

Films, valued at more than $10,000, stolen from the Kansas City Pathe branch during the last year, have resulted in two arrests, with more expected to follow. Although the office has not been burglarized, films, mostly old ones, constantly have been disappearing, much to the mystification of Harry Graham, branch manager. Investigation revealed that Roy Ballinger, a motion picture theatre operator of Independence, Mo., a suburb of Kansas City, had been selling films to a film broker. Upon arrest Ballinger testified that he had purchased the films from Luther Lawton, a negro janitor in the Pathe office. Lawton, after being cross examined by the police, admitted he had been stealing the prints and selling them for small sums, according to the police.

Samuel Harding, owner of a chain of motion picture theatres in Kansas City, Omaha and Oklahoma City, has gained control of the Wichita theatre, Wichita, Kas., by acquiring the majority of stock and a sub-lease on the building. Mr. Harding, who is president of the Overland Amusement Company, plans big improvements on the house, which he hopes to make the largest in Wichita.

"See yourself in the movies." That line was featured in all advertising of the Pantages theatre in Kansas City last week. Motion pictures of the audience, to be shown at the theatre the following week, were widely heralded and succeeded in drawing good crowds.

INDIANAPOLIS

Most all of the picture houses have changed policies. The Colonial was the first to change, opening, with Wallace Reid in "The Dictator" and doing a wonderful business.

The Circle is adding 15 pieces to their orchestra, making a total of 40. Several of the houses that cut down their orchestras for the summer, are engaging more men than they had last season.

The Keith interests failed in their effort to get Loew's State theatre for vaudeville, it is reported. There are reports to the effect that "Blood and Sand" will open the house September 17th.

Mique O'Brien, dramatic critic of the Terre Haute Tribune, who is spending the week-end in Indianapolis, says that 16,000 coal miners work in and around Terre Haute and the city was just beginning to feel the effects of the strike when it was settled. The railroad situation is more serious than the coal strike ever was in the coal mining section. All the movie houses in Terre Haute kept open all summer and apparently made expenses at least.

OKLAHOMA CITY

The Oklahoma Exhibitors Association will convene at the Skirven Hotel, Oklahoma City, Okla., September 7-8 and a large number of exhibitors and visitors are expected to attend. Future legislation at the hands of the coming sessions of the Oklahoma Legislature will be discussed.

The Palace theatre at Oklahoma City will reopen on August 27th, with pictures and musical comedy as the policy. The Orpheum theatre at Oklahoma City is scheduled to reopen on September 16th with high class vaudeville and pictures as the attractions.

The Stage and Screen Club of Houston, Texas, at its luncheon had Mayor Holcome, M. E. Foster and W. E. Woods for one minute talks for their part of the program. Other features of the program were a reel of pictures, orchestral music and vaudeville stunts from the Isis theatre.

C. A. McFarland, city manager of the Southern Enterprises, is the president, and the membership already numbers several hundred.

T. B. Triplet has purchased the Olympic theatre at Lockney, Texas.

W. B. Wesley has accepted position as film salesman for Goldwyn with headquarters at Houston, Texas.

The Rialto theatre at Wilson, Okla., has reopened, after having been dark for the past several weeks. Sam Horton, an experienced theatre man, will manage the house.

CANADA

First National's "Strongheart" was chosen by the Allen theatre, Toronto, for the feature attraction for the opening of the "fall season" at the theatre, starting August 28. This picture was intended by Manager Ben Cronk as the special feature to be presented during the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto which opened August 26.

Mrs. Jennie Rappaport has sold the Crescent Palace theatre at 3265 Dundas street West, Toronto, to Bernard Press for $38,000. This theatre, which has long been successfully operated in the north-western section of the city, is of solid brick and stone construction with a frontage of 30 feet and a depth of 137½ feet.

Manager J. C. Kennedy of Allen's Regent theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, made a ten-strike by booking "Chain Lightning" for the week of August 28, this being race week for the Canadian Capital with the bang-tails performing at the Connaught Park Jockey Club, the local track. Manager Kennedy secured this picture immediately after it had been given its first Canadian run at the Allen theatre, Toronto.

The Family theatre, Ottawa, is being reopened on Labor Day under the management of Jack Soanes. This has been a moving picture house but it will be used for the presentation of stock drama. It is owned by Harry Brouse, also owner of the Imperial theatre, Ottawa.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Capitol theatre is the latest acquisition to the motion picture life of this city and will open on Labor Day. It has been renovated. The bills to be presented will be changed every two days, and two features and a comedy will be shown. The house is unique in that one price will be charged, 15 cents admitting to any seat in the house between 10:30 a. m. and 10:30 p. m. The theatre will be under the direction of the Strand and Modern theatres management with second run features.

Fay's theatre which shows a big feature picture weekly in connection with its vaudeville bill, beginning August 28 cut its lowest price of 17 cents to 10 cents to any part of the first balcony up to 5 o'clock.

The Rialto theatre has procured the sole rights to the six Fox features, which are to be shown at intervals during the fall at advanced prices, the top price being 55 cents. The first one, "Monte Cristo," is booked for Labor Day week.

BALTIMORE

The Strand theatre, a 500-seat downtown house, which has been putting on three shows a week for several months, will be restored to the basis of a first-run theatre early in September. The theatre will begin one-week showings, with admission prices at 25 and 33 cents compared to the present 17 and 25-cent schedule.

Two theatres in residential neighborhoods which have been closed for the summer have reopened—the New Gem, under the direction of J. Rabinowich, and the Good Time. Both theatres have been renovated and improved during the period when they were idle.

The possibility of this city having another new theatre in the next year or so is being forecast locally as a result of the association in the management of the Victoria with Fred C. Nixon-Nirdlinger of Jules E. Mastbaum and the Stanley Company of America.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

The Royal theatre has cut its admissions from 39 cents matinees and 55 cents evenings to 25 cents matinees and 40 cents evenings, in an effort to stimulate business. The same class of attractions are to be shown as heretofore.

Starting September 4th the Victoria theatre, Wilmington, N. C., will open with feature pictures, using the same class of service that has been shown in the Royal which will then house the tabloid shows. Road attractions will also be shown in the Victoria, the pictures being between road-show dates. The policy of the Grand theatre will vary very little, a little better class of attractions being shown there.

The Rialto theatre in Greer, South Carolina, has been sold by J. E. Barton to C. H. Stokes, a banker of that city. C. E. Davenport, its present manager, will remain in charge.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

Frank Rinks, formerly operator at the Gaiety, Princess and Vaudeville theatres of this city, was killed at Dixon, Ill., recently. Rinks was employed as electrician by the Heth Carnival Company. He was a member of the local motion picture operators' union and K. of P.

Springfield musicians are working only part time. The old wage scale expired on August 1. They worked until August 12 pending a settlement. Now they work only at night and on Sunday afternoon. It is understood they accepted these conditions rather than take a slight reduction in pay.

The Vaudeville is fast being made over into one of the city's finest playhouses. It is booked to reopen Sunday, September 3.

The Majestic opened for its regular season, Sunday, August 20. George Ecklund, former leader at the Gaiety, is now in the Majestic orchestra.

WESTERN NEW YORK

According to very reliable information, Harold P. Dygert is about to acquire the Strand and Andrews theatres in Salamanca, N. Y., and O. T. Schroepel, now in Fairport, is to manage both houses. A. B. Depauw is now manager of the Granite and Opera House in Newark, N. Y. Mr. Depauw will manage the Capitol in the same city when it opens around the first of the year. The Dygert interests will soon take over the Park theatre in Bath, N. Y. and W. L. Trask of Dansville will be named manager.

Buffalo's famous Shea's Hippodrome the past week celebrated its eighth anniversary with "Orphans of the Storm" as the feature film. The big Wurlitzer Hope Jones unit organ will be ready October 1. It will have four keyboards and pedal board, 209 stop-keys and 70 pistons. It is 32 feet long. The instrument is now being installed.

Some class to Hornell. Puts over a pre-release showing of Harold Lloyd in "Grandma's Boy." It happened at the Shattuck Opera House where Charlie Smith holds forth. All box office records broken and the town's laughing yet.

H. C. Flint is reported to have sold the Peerless theatre in Hornell, N. Y., to James Cranideas who controls several houses in Olean.

E. O. Weinberg, formerly manager of the Buffalo Strand and now in charge of the Mark-Strand in Syracuse, will be manager of the Troy Strand when that 2,400-seat film palace opens about January 1.

Ned Kornblite, David Cohen and Fred J. Gillen are the directors of the newly organized Endicott Theatre Corporation, which has been capitalized at $80,000. The company intends to build a new house in Endicott.

Al Beckerich, manager of Buffalo's Loew's State, has been named on the committee to pick the winners of the Enquirer's Beauty Contest. Al has not been feeling well of late, but this job ought to make him perk up a bit.

The Elmwood and Shea's North Park in Buffalo were both entered one evening last week by safe blowers who cracked the strong boxes in both theatres and got away with large sums. In the Elmwood, however, they missed about $500 in one compartment which they were unable to open.

The old Buffalo Empire managed for a long time by Sam Carver, who recently resigned to accept the post of exploitation manager at the Detroit Universal office, is now the home of burlesque once more and the name has been changed to the Garden.

ST. LOUIS

Harry Earl, for many years connected with the local staffs of prominent metropolitan newspapers throughout the country, is the new manager of the Rialto theatre. It opened for the season on Sunday, August 27 with Orpheum Junior vaudeville and motion pictures. The program changes twice weekly.

Charles Vollmer, manager of the Delmonte theatre, plans to have some movie star appear in person with each feature picture booked at his theatre this season. In conjunction with "Slim Shoulders," Irene Castle's Fashion Promenade is being given. The Delmonte opened on September 1.

Miss Ruth Lamar, 27 years old, 1516 Grand boulevard, St. Louis, an actress, while playing at the Elite Airdome Sunday, August 20, was struck on the head by a brick thrown into the theatre by one of a gang of boys. A few minutes previously the manager ordered the lads from in front of the airdome. Miss Lamar was treated at the City Hospital. Her condition is not serious.

New Sales for "Your Best Friend"

NEGOTIATIONS for the purchase of the Warner Brothers picture, "Your Best Friend," a Harry Rapf production starring Vera Gordon, were consummated with A. H. Blank Enterprises, Des Moines, and Balaban & Katz, of Associated Second National Pictures, Chicago, according to Harry M. Warner.

Blank has secured the rights to Iowa and Nebraska, and Balaban & Katz have purchased the territory of Northern Illinois. Both these organizations have also signed for the entire series of seven forthcoming Warner pictures, three of which are being produced by Harry Rapf at the west coast studios.

Foreign Buyers Seek Picture Rights

The Edward L. Klein Company, exporters and importers of Motion Pictures, New York, has received an unusual number of enquiries from Foreign Buyers for the rights to "Is a Mother to Blame," for which the Klein Organization controls the International distribution rights.

A number of deals are now being negotiated by foreign buyers for this attraction and from present indications the foreign territories will quickly be disposed of.

"Orphan Sally" For Sept. Release

It was learned at the office of the Lee-Bradford Corporation that their September release will be entitled "Orphan Sally." It was produced by the New Superior Productions, and features Flora Finch, Sydney Mason and Margaret Beecher. It was made from the original story by Maibelle Heikes Justice.

Equity Sells Canadian Rights "What's Wrong With The Women" Goes Through Famous Players Film Service

"WHAT'S WRONG WITH THE WOMEN?" Daniel Carson Goodman's production for release on the independent market through Equity Pictures Corporation, will be issued to Canadian exhibitors through the Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., of Toronto, Canada. This sale was consummated recently between Abbe Cohn, of the Canadian exchange and Louis Baum, vice-president of Equity, who is now on a tour of exchanges in the interest of the Goodman picture.

The opinion of Mr. Cohn on this unusual production coincided with those of Mr. Sam Zierler of New York, Sam Grand, of Boston; Joe Friedman of Chicago, and Ben Amsterdam of Philadelphia, four leading independent exchangemen who have already purchased the picture for their respective territories.

"It is seldom," stated Mr. Cohn, "That I have agreed so perfectly with the trade paper critics in their opinion of a picture. The reviews I had read on this picture naturally led me to expect one of the biggest independent productions of many years and I entered the projection room thoroughly convinced that the production would have to be 100 per cent. from every standpoint in order to enthrall me. I found it just that. Seldom have I seen a picture that shows such a keen knowledge of box office values on the part of its producer. There is an appeal here for every class of people, and people of every age. It is a story which leaves a profound impression upon the mind, yet first and foremost it is entertainment, not preachment."

Warner Series Rights Are Sold Washington Exchange Will Start Releasing First of Pictures At Once

HARRY THOMAS of the Thomas Film Company, Washington, D. C., has purchased from East Coast Productions, Inc., the rights of the J. B. Warner series for Delaware, Maryland, the District of Columbia and Virginia.

Thomas will start releasing the subjects in his territory immediately, starting with the first Warner special, "Big Stakes."

Clifford S. Elfelt, who is directing Warner, recently arrived in Los Angeles after a trip East to confer with Franklyn E. Backer, president of East Coast Productions, and wired Mr. Backer last Saturday, that production had been finished on "Flaming Hearts" and started on the next special, "Crimson Gold." All of the Warner series are being made from well known magazine stories. In each of them the star is seen opposite a well known leading woman.

Backer has been in conference most of the past week with various independent producers. The success of this firm in covering the State Right field and the fact that considerable activity is expected in this field commencing next month have caused several producers in this division of the industry to approach Mr. Backer and try to effect arrangements for East Coast to market their products.

Nigh Is Cutting "Notoriety" Special Staff Engaged to Eliminate Thousands of Feet from Picture

A special staff of six has been engaged by Lawrence Weber and Bobby North to assist Will Nigh and Ben Behrens, the director's associate, in cutting the 100,000 feet of film shot on the director's latest picture "Notoriety."

The job of eliminating footage from the thousand reels down to the finished length of the feature, which will probably be seven, is one of the tasks that confronts Will Nigh every time he finishes a new film. Nigh followed the same policy of over-shooting on all of his previous pictures, like "Why Girls Leave Home" and "Schooldays." The variety of scene and the great number of dramatic punches is proving quite a problem to the independent director, in his effort to cut the length down to exhibition size. But Nigh is a firm believer in the principle that it is better to have too much footage than too little.

Still on "Notoriety" are arriving in large number daily. To date over three hundred different scene stills are at hand and more are on their way. This will assure a wide choice for lobby and publicity purposes.

Specialists to Handle "Sure Fire Flint"

THE manner in which C. C. Burr intends exploiting Johnny Hines' latest, "Sure-Fire Flint," was disclosed this week when it was announced in the Affiliated offices that all exchanges that had contracted to distribute "Sure-Fire Flint" had arranged to engage special exploitation men to devote their entire time towards the intensive advertising and ballyhooing of this latest Burr feature.

This arrangement to devote their time exclusively towards the selling of the picture to the public.

The aids, 14inch walking dolls which bear the imprint, "Ima Walker Says Take a Hint and See Johnny Hines in 'Sure-Fire Flint'"; feather jacks which explode when hurled to the ground; specially prepared matches and match-boxes also bearing suitable imprint apropos of "Sure-Fire Flint."

Becker Will Direct Trimble Series

FREDERICK G. BECKER, who has just completed editing of the first of the series of "specials" featuring Arthur Trimble, the boy starlet, celebrated the event by signing a contract to direct the entire series, which will consist of twelve two-reel comedy-dramas, with just a touch of child lore.

The Trimble concern also announces that Robert Lee, who wrote the original story and continuity for the first release, has also signed an agreement to furnish stories for the whole series. The production staff will remain unchanged.

Warners Have Great Producing Plans

One of the largest and most ambitious producing plans attempted by an independent organization for the season of 1923 was made known by Harry M. Warner, of Warner Brothers. The Warner organization at this early date has planned to produce eighteen pictures for next year, and it is declared that when the titles of the eighteen stories are made known they will startle the industry.

To formulate the plans for 1923, Abe Warner left last week for the Warner coast studios to confer with his brothers, Sam and Jack, both of whom are at present producing several well known novels.

Burr Picture Ready Within Week

With the continuity of "Sure-Fire Flint" almost completed it is possible that prints on this latest Johnny Hines feature, produced by C. C. Burr will be in the hands of many exchanges before another week has passed.

The task of cutting some forty-thousand feet of negative on this production to five reels was entrusted to Director Dell Henderson, Johnny Hines, Dick Thorpe, production manager, and C. C. Burr with the result that the continuity to date is claimed to be the best ever turned out on any of the Hines pictures.

"Arrow Month" Plans All Set

Dr. Shallenberger Expects Sales Drive Well Under Way Within Few Days

THE plans for "Arrow Month" September—have now been perfected and Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of the organization, and his associates, expect to have the sales drive well under way within the next few days.

The first big event of "Arrow Month" will be the world's premier presentation, "Night Life in Hollywood," at Woods Theatre, Atlantic City, which will be backed up by as extensive an advertising and exploitation campaign as has ever been placed behind a feature. Arrow's Department of Advertising and exploitation will assist Mr. Dave Starkman, Manager of Woods Theatre.

Following the engagement of "Night Life in Hollywood" at Woods Theatre it will play an equally important engagement at H. C. Horater's Alhambra Theatre in Toledo, where once again the house management will be assisted by Arrow's staff of exploiters.

September will also see the beginning of the campaign on the William Fairbanks series, recently acquired by Arrow Film Corporation. The first of this series, "Peaceful Peters," has been completed by Ben Wilson in his Hollywood studios, and a print is now on the way East.

Camera work has been begun on the second picture, "The Sheriff of Sun Dog," under the direction of Lewis King.

A trade paper campaign has been mapped out for the William Fairbanks series which is said to be possessed of strong appeal and which should undoubtedly create a great deal of interest in the production. Arrow has also prepared, in conjunction with this campaign, a brochure of exceptional merit, and neither time nor expense were spared to make it beautiful in every sense of the word.

Urban Classics Being Finished

Fitzpatrick Concluding One-Reel Series on "Great British Authors"

A new series of Urban Popular Classics are receiving finishing touches at Urban Institute at Irvington, N. Y. where James A. Fitzpatrick is putting into shape his twelve one-reel subjects on "Great British Authors."

This is a companion series to the "Great American Authors." Fitzpatrick has just returned from England where he went early in the year to procure the material for the series.

The first reel in the series will be entitled "The Brownings." Besides its biographical contents it will contain dramatizations of "Pippa Passes" by Robert Browning and of "The Romance of a Swan's Nest" by Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

Alfred, Lord Tennyson, is the subject matter of the second reel in the series. Two of his poems

Robert Burns, to whom the third reel is devoted, will be dramatized through his "Auld Lang Syne" and "Comin' Through the Rye."

"The Lady of the Lake" from Sir Walter Scott furnishes the dramatic moments of the fourth reel, one which is especially rich in biography.

Out of the wealth of material on Robert Louis Stevenson, the director chose his poem "The Vagabond" as the best illustration of his subject's personality; also having in mind the limitations of the single reel within which length he is confining each subject.

The sixth reel, devoted to Shakespeare, is almost entirely autobiographical.

Foreign Sales Are Numerous

Lee-Bradford New Department Reports Disposition of Feature Pictures

ARTHUR A. LEE, President of the Lee-Bradford Corporation, announces that the company has recently opened a foreign department in charge of Frank Whittle. Although this department is comparatively new, they have been successful in making the following sales:

"Determination" has been purchased by the Belgo International Film of Brussels for Belgium. This picture was also sold to the Argentine American Film Corporation of New York for Argentine, Uruguay, Paraguay, Peru, Chile, Brazil and Bolivia. The Isidro Sanchez Film Company of San Juan purchased same for Porto Rico.

"The Unconquered Woman" has been sold to the Stoll Film Company of London for the United Kingdom, also to the Arrow Film Corporation of New York for Argentine and Cuba; to the Belto International Film, Brussels for Belgium; to the International Film Agency of San Juan for Porto Rico and to the Cine Bucareli for Mexico.

"Flesh and Spirit" has been purchased by the Sociedad General Cinematografica of New York for Argentine; also to the Isidro Sanchez Film Company of San Juan for Porto Rico and the Cine Bucareli for Mexico.

"The Curse of Drink" Territory Sold

DISTRIBUTION of "The Curse of Drink," a five-star romantic melodrama adapted from Chas. E. Blaney's famous stage play, is being rapidly disposed of by L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North. This week another important block of territory was sold—the Philadelphia district. The buyer was Ben Amsterdam. The section involved in the deal was Eastern Pennsylvania and Northern New Jersey.

The picture cast includes Harry T. Morey, Edmund Breese, Marguerite Clayton, George Fawcett and Miriam Batista.

"The Innocent Cheat" Well Received

"The Innocent Cheat," a Ben Wilson production released by Arrow Film Corporation and starring Roy Stewart and Kathleen Kirkham, has been creating a vast amount of comment wherever shown, according to the Arrow offices. This is the production which was so extensively exploited when it played B. S. Moss' Broadway Theatre.

The most recent triumph of "The Innocent Cheat" is indicated in the following telegram from Harry T. Diggs, publicity director of the State Theatre, Jersey City, just received by C. R. Seelye of Arrow Exchanges, New York City:

"The 'Innocent Cheat' exceeded all box office expectations. Opened to biggest matinee of the summer at our new million dollar State Theatre. Standing them tonight."

Foreign Trade Reported Picking Up

Louis Auerbach, of the Export & Import Film Company, reports that the usual summer lull in foreign business has been of short duration this season. Business is already beginning to pick up and a good fall season is expected.

HALLROOM BOYS COMEDIES

Chicago Premiere For C. B. C. Picture

THE premiere of "More To Be Pitied" will take place at the Randolph Theatre, Chicago.

This C. B. C. feature has been booked into the Randolph for a run, starting Sunday, September 3d. It is the first time in its film history that this theatre has booked an Independent feature.

The management declared, after seeing the film version, that it had been given excellent picturization, and that the cast was a strong one, including as it does Alice Lake, Rosemary Theby, J. Frank Glendon, Phila McCollough, Gordon Griffith and Josephine Adair.

"Why Do Men Marry?" Screened for Staff

The first special production of Unity Pictures, Inc., "Why Do Men Marry?" was screened for the staff at the Unity offices, New York City, during the week, the final cutting, titling and editing having been completed last week.

The work of Edy Darclae, who heads the all-star cast in this picture, was regarded as exceptional, not only by the members of the Unity organization but by all who witnessed the screening, and several of these were men prominent in the independent film field.

Canada Rights Sold on Hallroom Comedies

Canadian rights were sold this week on the new series of Hallroom Boys Comedies.

The C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, which is distributing this series of two-reelers, signed contracts with Regal Films of Toronto, whereby that company takes over the releasing rights to the 1922-23 series throughout Canada.

Local Concern Receives Foreign Pictures

Export & Import Film Company, which has connections in all the European capitals, has received from abroad several features which met with considerable success across the water, according to word from that office. These will probably be whipped into shape for American distribution.

Warners in Hays Organization

Elected To Membership In Producers and Distributors Association

WARNER BROTHERS were elected last week to membership in the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association headed by Will H. Hays, according to Harry M. Warner.

In explaining his reasons for joining the Hays organization, Mr. Warner declared that he is firmly convinced that Mr. Hays can restore the public confidence in not only the motion picture, but also in the producers and distributors of pictures.

"Early in the history of the industry," said Mr. Warner, "the motion picture public idolized both the screen entertainment offered them and the people who made that entertainment possible. For a number of years this continued, but gradually we noticed dissatisfaction was getting rife among the picture fans.

"We believe that Mr. Hays is performing a wonderful service to the industry. We believe that he is wielding a tremendous weapon in developing the educational as well as the entertainment value and general usefulness of the motion picture in the eyes of the public. We believe that he will safeguard the interests of all those concerned in any way with the industry.

"And in advocating the diffusion of accurate and reliable information about the motion pictures, in making known the great scope of this wonderful medium for the transmission of clean, wholesome and instructive ideas, he is performing a great service to the industry and to the American public. And that is why we joined Mr. Hays."

"Secrets of Paris" Due 'Soon

Picture Made from Eugene Sue's Famous Novel Is Nearing Completion

WITHIN the next two weeks the feature picture "The Secrets of Paris," based upon the romantic story of Eugene Sue's famous novel "The Mysteries of Paris," starring Lew Cody and including such well known screen favorites as Montagu Love, Gladys Hulette, Rose Coghlin, William Collier, Jr., Effie Shannon, Harry Southern, Walter James and Dolores Cassinelli will be completed.

While both Mr. Bennett and Mr. Burr are anxious to complete this feature with all possible speed in order to get it on the Independent market, ample time is being devoted to all the scenes. Mr. Bennett claims that "The Secrets of Paris" will be the finest acted picture he has ever produced.

This famous story by Eugene Sue is said to offer every opportunity for the producer. It is filled with many thrilling scenes and novel characters. Lovers of French literature will find that the screen story follows the book leaving out none of the interesting incidents for which Sue became famous. Mr. Bennett and Miss Farnum spent a year or more in making this screen version, and both feel they have completed their task in a most satisfactory manner.

The street scenes showing those haunts of the underground denizens of Old Paris are said to be most realistic. Having lived in the French capital a long time, Mr. Bennett not only secured pictures and photographs of those places, but he also secured several old prints of places that have long been torn down. It took weeks to build these scenes, and it is claimed any one who is familiar with Paris will immediately recognize them.

Star Purchases Rights To Own Picture

ONE of the most unusual bits of news sent out by state rights distributors for a long time is an item broadcasted by the Pacific Film Co., Inc., of Culver City, Cal., of which John J. Hayes is president.

According to Mr. Hayes, Reed Chapman, who, with Lillian Hall, is featured in "The Forest King," one of Pacific's outdoor features, has purchased the rights to Northern California and Nevada of "The Forest King" and is touring with the print, making personal appearances in all towns in which this sort of exploitation is practicable.

Predicts Scarcity of Good Serials

Louis Auerbach, vice-president of the Export & Import Film Co., Inc., in commenting on business prospects, predicts that there will be a scarcity of good serials this fall.

"The lengthy depression," says Mr. Auerbach, "scared producers for a long time, with the result that until recently it looked as if there would be hardly any new independent product this fall. Signs of business revival brought the motion picture men into activity again, with the result that the independent market is at the present time better equipped for record business than ever before.

"The Jungle Goddess" is the only new serial offered to independents this year. In the few territories where it has been released it is doing remarkable business."

Federated Radio, New Comedy Series

The Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., announce another two-reel comedy release that is to be known as the "Federated Radio Comedies," which are being produced by Ben Wilson at his Coast Studios. Wilson is now busy preparing for his second subject, entitled "Money Or My Life."

The Federated Monty Banks Comedies, as the Brand name implies, Monty Banks.

The Federated Jo-Rok Comedies—are being directed and the cast is led by Joe Rock. The first release will be called "Ali Baba," and the second, "Aladdin."

Activities of Exchange Managers, Exhibitors, Salesmen and Others

CANADA

W. A. Bach, former general manager of the Famous-Lasky Film Service, Limited, Toronto, has been appointed special sales representative of the Fox Film Corporation, Limited, Toronto.

Leon Bamberger, Toronto, who has been handling exploitation for Famous-Lasky Film Service, Limited, in Canada, has been appointed assistant to Claude Saunders, director of exploitation for Famous Players-Lasky, New York. Mr. Bamberger has already left Toronto for New York to take over his new duties.

George Faulkner, who recently left Vancouver, B. C., where he had been local branch manager for Regal Films, Limited, to join the head office staff of the Regal company at Toronto, has made another move to New York City where he has obtained a new position.

Meyer Fischer, Toronto, formerly Ontario branch manager for Regal Films, Limited, is now with the Canadian Universal Film Company, Toronto, with whom he is now busy as sales manager of Universal special attractions for the Province of Ontario.

Charles Stephenson, Bud Lennon, T. Scott, of Canadian Exhibitors Exchange, and I. Soskin, formerly with Famous Players Film Service, all of Toronto, are prominent exchange men who are interested in a syndicate for the acquiring of moving picture theatres in Canada, it is stated. The theatres are to be known as an independent chain, it is understood.

BUFFALO

The local Goldwyn exchange at 509 Pearl street will be ready on September 1, a month earlier than planned. Manager George A. Hickey has engaged H. L. Levvy and M. H. Goldstein as members of his sales force. Mr. Levvy was formerly with First National and Mr. Goldstein was with the same company in Albany. Levvy will cover Rochester and Goldstein Syracuse.

Harry Buxbaum was in town last week. He congratulated Manager Allan S. Moritz and his staff on their fine showing for Paramount week. The Buffalo boys are now in second place so are sure to get in the prize money.

Fred A. Zimmerman of Nu-Art announces the engagement of Sherman Webster as special representative covering the Rochester district. Mr. Webster has been with Select. Sam Zierler has been in town visiting Mr. Zimmerman and conferring on the fall output of Commonwealth.

G. C. Balsdon, assistant general manager of Vitagraph, was a Film Row visitor the past week. David Bader of Century Comedy studios, has been in town visiting prominent exhibitors.

T. C. Leonard, Universal's genial exploitation manager, has returned from a publicity drive on "Foolish Wives," in the Thousand Islands district.

CLEVELAND

The Film Booking Office, held a central western sales meeting in Cleveland this week, attended by General Manager Harry Berman, eastern division manager Joe Klein, the office managers and salesmen from the Buffalo, Detroit and Cleveland exchanges. Cleveland exchange manager M. Goldman was host.

M. J. Glick, formerly manager of the Universal exchange at Washington, D. C., is back at Cleveland, covering the nearby territory for F. B. O.

Bill Sipe, erstwhile Vitagraph salesman, has joined the Cleveland Film Booking Office's sales family and is a regular visitor among the exhibitors of Mansfield, Fremont and other middle state towns.

Sign seen in front of the Lincoln theatre, West 25th street, Cleveland: CLOSED ON WEAK DAYS. One who appreciates film conditions here during the summer has ventured the opinion that the Lincoln was probably not open at all.

KANSAS CITY

James Reilly is the new branch manager of the Kansas City Select office. Reilly's arrival in Kansas City last week was rather impromptu. To make certain that no delay would result from the railroad strike, Reilly, who was Select branch manager at Buffalo, N. Y., jumped into a motor car and spattered mud all the way to Kansas City. M. A. Tanner, formerly of Omaha, will be assistant to Mr. Reilly.

Joseph Desberger, former manager of the First National branch at St. Louis, now is on the job as branch manager of the Kansas City American Relcasing Corporation office.

Hugh Dierker, producer, visited Kansas City last week as a guest of C. C. Ezell and found a climate that would rival deserts of Mexico.

Two new Vitagraph salesmen started on the road last week for the Kansas City branch office—C. W. Allen and H. L. Brownfield. Allen formerly was booker at the Vitagraph office, while Brownfield decided to cease selling Fords and enter the film game.

Ten musicians from the Liberty Theatre, Kansas City, paid tribute to David Harding, part owner of the theatre, who was shot by bandits in an attempted hold up of the theatre, August 2, Wednesday, by going to St. Joseph's hospital, where Mr. Harding is recovering from a bullet wound in the back, and serenading him, much to the delight of the other patients in the hospital. Mr. Harding, who was not expected to live following the shooting, now is well on the road to complete recovery.

OMAHA

Succeeding T. E. Delaney as branch manager for Vitagraph in Omaha, C. A. Schultze, of Minneapolis, arrived in Omaha last week. Mr. Delaney accepted a position on the sales force of the Fox Film Company in Chicago. William Grant, a former booker for Paramount in Minneapolis, also went to Omaha as booker for Vitagraph. Carl L. Nedley was promoted from booker to assistant manager in the Vitagraph office in Omaha.

Sidney K. Meyer, manager of Fox Film Company in Omaha, was married last week to Miss Xenia Wolfson of Miami, Fla.

J. F. Connelly, a showman of wide experience, will handle Nebraska territory for W. & W. Hodgkinson company with headquarters in Omaha.

BALTIMORE

Guy L. Wonders, manager of the Rivoli theatre, has returned from a business trip to New York, during which he inspected a number of theatres and "told the world" about his new $50,000 Kimball orchestral organ.

Thomas D. Goldberg, manager of the Blue Mouse, Wizard and Strand Theatres, likewise has put concluded a visit to New York.

Harry L. Price, connected with the same chain of theatres, saw Lew Tendler battle Benny Leonard, and put in a little business on the side during his jaunt out of town.

ST. LOUIS

James P. Grainger, personal representative of Goldwyn's president, F. J. Godsil, was in St. Louis August 28 and 29.

Jack Weil has two new salesmen in his St. Louis Goldwyn organization. They are: J. King, formerly with First National in Kansas City and W. C. Ansell, who also came over from Kansas City.

R. E. Boswell, of Independent Producers, has been very successful with his road show on "Silver Threads Among the Gold." Joe Schrempp, formerly owner of the Knickerbocker theatre has charge. Theatres are booked on a percentage.

MINNEAPOLIS

Several shifts in the managerial line-up of Twin City theatres have been announced by Theodore Hays, general manager for the Finkelstein and Ruben corporation.

"Buzz" Bainbridge, formerly manager of the Shubert, is now production manager for the firm, with Charles F. Murphy, who for two years has been manager of the Strand, as assistant. Stan Brown, of the Loring theatre, formerly of Duluth, is the new manager of the Strand. Al Kaells, treasurer of the Shubert under Bainbridge, goes to the Garrick, where Shubert Unit vaudeville will replace motion pictures for the season. Ted Force, who managed F. & R.'s Park theatre at Brainerd, becomes manager of the Loring. Charles C. Perry has resigned as manager of the Capitol, St. Paul, to form his own Theatre Owners' Service company, and is succeeded at the Capitol by Stanley Siegelbaum.

DES MOINES

McCurdy, of Universal exploitation, knocked off Saturday afternoon to look 'em over at the State Fair.

Jimmy Shorgl, booking manager, thought there wasn't a suit in Des Moines good enough for him so he took a trip to Kansas City just to purchase one. Everyone admits that there's not another one in town like it, such as it is.

Freidl, publicity man for F. P., returned Saturday morning from several weeks spent in Omaha lining up advertising for Paramount week.

George Stephens is the name of the new booking clerk at the F. P. exchange. He's a Des Moines boy

"Fighting Blood" Hero Still Undecided

The leading man for the "Fighting Blood" series of two-reel subjects which will be produced by R-C Pictures and released through the Film Booking Offices of America, will be announced in a short time, states that company. Several of the leading screen favorites are being considered for the important role of "Gale Galen," who becomes "Six Second Smith" and eventually middleweight champion.

The "Fighting Blood" stories are from the pen of H. C. Witwer, whose initial series of prize fight stories have already been so successfully picturized.

International Notable in Picture Cast

Latest of the many international notables who have taken a flyer at acting in motion pictures is Lars Lithander of Stockholm, Sweden, who in 1919 won the Swedish championship for broadjumping with a horse, his leap being 27 feet.

Lieutenant Lithander, on leave from the Swedish "Royal Skanska," or crack Dragoon regiment, has just finished a role in "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew," the new Gloria Swanson Paramount picture.

Gloria Swanson Finishes "Mrs. Bellew"

Director Sam Wood has finished his Paramount production of "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew," starring Gloria Swanson, and with the same star already has started work at the Lasky studio on his next picture. The title is "His American Wife." It is an original story by Hector Turnbull, author of "The Cheat," and Monte M. Katterjohn has written the scenario.

"Slim Shoulders" At Capitol

New York House Conducting Great Exploitation Campaign On Castle Picture

ONE of the biggest advertising and exploitation campaigns in the history of the Capitol Theatre, New York, is being conducted this week in conjunction with the opening on September 3, of the new W. W. Hodkinson released production, "Slim Shoulders," starring Irene Castle, and the Irene Castle Fashion Promenade.

The exploitation campaign, which is being conducted jointly by the Hodkinson publicity department and the Capitol publicity department, consists of special posters on elevated stations, car signs in the subways and surface lines, special heralds, extra newspaper space and a number of window displays on Fifth Avenue, Broadway and Forty-second Street.

Second in importance to "Slim Shoulders" on the Capitol program for the week of September 3rd will be the Irene Castle Fashion Promenade, which is staged in conjunction with the picture. Six of the most beautiful mannequins in New York appear in the spectacle, wearing scores of costly imported gowns and wraps. Copies of beautiful evening gowns that Mrs. Castle brought back from Paris, chic street dresses and entrancing afternoon frocks are shown in the latest colors and styles. One of the most distinctive frocks in the display is fashioned from material of green gold and black Castle Co-keet with draped skirt of Castle Duvane, two new materials that are being brought out for the first time this season.

One of the most fashionable gowns in the display is an all silk evening gown of apple green satin crepe, the beauty of which is accentuated by the use of rhinestone ornaments.

Irene Castle, whose picture, "Slim Shoulders" (Hodkinson), is scheduled for the Capitol theatre, New York, week of September 3

Underwater Scenes in "Monte Cristo"

Underwater scenes are an interesting feature of the new William Fox super-production, "Monte Cristo," adapted from the famous novel by Alexandre Dumas and constituting one of the specials listed by Fox for the season of 1922-23.

Few scenes of this character have been used as a sequence or part of a dramatic narrative. Readers of the great novel will recall the sensational escape of Edmund Dantes from the Chateau d'If; how, after twenty years' imprisonment, he sews himself in a sack, is thrown into the sea as dead, rips himself free from the bag and makes his way to the island of concealed treasure.

The feat was successfully accomplished mainly because John Gilbert, playing Dantes, is an expert swimmer and diver.

Lichtman Honor Guest of Exhibitors

Al Lichtman, president of the Al Lichtman Corporation and vice president of Preferred Pictures, Inc., will be the guest of honor at a series of exhibitor gatherings to be held in three states the early part of September.

The meetings are being arranged by Harry L. Charnas, president of the Al Lichtman Exchange and of the Standard Film Service Company, to inaugurate the Lichtman service in Western Pennsylvania, Southern Michigan, Northern and Southern Ohio.

At these meetings, which will be held in leading theatres of the cities visited, "Rich Men's Wives," the initial release of the Al Lichtman Corporation will be screened, and Mr. Lichtman will outline the plans and policies of his organization.

Pyramid's Billboard Campaign

Extensive Advertising Planned for "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge"

PYRAMID Pictures, Inc., has announced its plan to devote a special 24-sheet campaign to each Pyramid production, beginning with its third, "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge." This 24-sheet campaign will be inaugurated in New York City and vicinity, and extended throughout the country gradually, according as details of the plan are completed in the home office in New York City.

"The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" will be released for exhibitors on September 10th, and before that date the 24-sheet stands throughout the five boroughs comprising the City of Greater New York will be carrying the 24-sheet designed for this production. This scene shows a dance in the Moulin Rouge, famous Parisian resort, in which a girl and a cloven-hoofed satyr participate, together with a detail showing the old wind-mill, which for so many years has been symbolic of the old Paris Moulin Rouge.

Billboards in Northern New Jersey and parts of Connecticut will also be used for the initial campaign and with the release on October 29th of Pyramid's George W. Terwilliger production, "Flapper Love," this feature also will be given a far-reaching 24-sheet campaign. The plan will be extended to include the new Ray C. Smallwood production, "When the Desert Calls," in which Violet Heming heads an all-star cast, and which will be released on October 8th.

"The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" was directed by Ray C. Smallwood, from a scenario prepared by Peter Milne and Garfield Thompson, and based on Paul M. Potter's original story used in the famous musical comedy of the same name. The cast includes Martha Mansfield, Joe Striker, Henry Harmon, Fred T. Jones, Tom Blake and Mario Carillo.

Pathe Serial Winning Exhibitor Praise

The statement of Elmer Pearson, general manager of Pathe, to the effect that the standardized, gun-proof and censor-proof Pathe serial was "here to stay," has been given wide publicity both in the trade press and in newspapers throughout the United States.

In evidence that the point was well made, Pathe refers to many approving responses received from theatre owners and managers, the following being quoted as an example:

From William D. Webb, manager Star Theatre, Corinth, Miss.: "I cannot help but write and tell you what a splendid serial 'White Eagle,' featuring Ruth Roland, is. We played the twelfth episode last night to a packed house. This serial seems to get better in each episode."

Capitol Shows Second "Makin' Movies"

THE Capitol Theatre showing of "Makin' Movies," beginning August 27, started the second of Pathe's Johnny Jones series of "juvenile business" comedies on its auspicious career. Following the pronounced success of the previous Johnny Jones release at the big Broadway house, "Makin' Movies" is reported to have received a warm welcome by the management.

All indications point, says Pathe, to even heartier exhibitor and public approval of this comic juvenile aspect of the film industry than has been won from the start by its predecessor, "Supply and Demand."

In the case of "Makin' Movies," the Hollywood preview was represented in West Coast newspaper reviews as "destined to break several long records for two-reel pictures."

Smallwood Add to Pyramid Cast

Ray C. Smallwood, who is directing "When the Desert Calls," for Pyramid Pictures, Inc., has added Huntley Gordon to his cast supporting Miss Violet Heming. The cast includes Sheldon Lewis, Robert Fraser and David Wall. "When the Desert Calls" was done in scenario form by Peter Milne from the story by Donald McGibney that appeared in "The Ladies Home Journal."

Serial Wins Approval in Singapore

Tan Cheng Kee & Co., Ltd., proprietors of the Alhambra Theatre at Singapore, number among their thousands of patrons of Pathe serial attractions at least one who is thoroughly conversant with present requirements in serial production. In a letter to Pathe dated at Singapore on July 12 and signed J. Morris, inclosing the current program announcement of the Alhambra Theatre, the writer expresses himself as follows:

"I congratulate you very much on the success of the Pathe serial, 'Hurricane Hutch.' In Singapore thousands are visiting the theatre nightly to see this serial."

Confiscated Liquor Stirs Anti-Drys

A current issue of Kinograms, Educational's news reel, created quite a furore in a big Baltimore theatre, according to a story in the Baltimore News. This issue of Kinograms contains scenes showing the destruction of a large amount of liquor seized in a prohibition raid. These scenes, according to the Baltimore News, brought a violent anti-dry demonstration from the audience.

Fox Announces Sept. Releases Specials Heading List Have Enjoyed Prosperous Runs Along Broadway

THREE giant specials head the September release program announced at the New York offices of Fox Film Corporation this week. They are "Monte Cristo," scheduled for publication September 3; "A Fool There Was," for September 10; and "Nero," for September 17.

"Monte Cristo," directed by Emmett J. Flynn, began an indefinite pre-release engagement at the Forty-Fourth Street Theatre, New York, on August 21.

"A Fool There Was," the Emmett J. Flynn directed version of Porter Emerson Browne's stage play of that name has already had the Broadway showing at the Strand Theatre. "Nero," produced at Rome, Italy, under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards, completes its New York run at the Lyric Theatre, September 1, after a most successful summer business which began on May 23.

Charles Jones will be seen in "West of Chicago," the screen adaptation of the story by George Scarborough and directed by Reeves Eason. It is a picturization of the strenuous events in the life of a western youth whose fortune and family have been attacked by an unscrupulous group of marauders. The picture will be released September 3rd.

"The Yosemite Trail" is the title of the Dustin Farnum vehicle. It was directed by Bernard J. Durning and is the screen adaptation of Ridgwell Cullum's story by Jack Strumwasser. It was originally announced under the title of "The One Way Trail." Release date is September 24th.

Florence Vidor Highly Praised Star Wins N.Y. Critics' Approval In Dual Role In "Dusk To Dawn"

CROWDS that packed S. L. Rothafel's Capitol, New York, the largest theatre in the world, at every showing on Sunday, the opening day, and have continued large on each succeeding day, greeted the new Associated Exhibitors attraction, Florence Vidor in "Dusk to Dawn," this week. Both audiences and reviewers gave enthusiastic praise to the popular star, notably to the charm she displays in playing a dual, or, is actually the case, a triple role, in this adaptation of Katherine Hill's celebrated novel, "The Shuttle Soul."

Said the Evening Journal: "The picture is very well done, with Florence Vidor playing both roles in a very pleasing manner. It is an interesting picture, absorbing and unusual."

Said the Evening Post: "Here is another young woman who understands the art of acting before the camera's merciless eye. It makes one hopeful for the wane of the star who is merely pretty."

Dual roles are not foreign to the screen but this is the first time we have seen one person give such decidedly different impersonations of two characters. The entire cast shows more than the average ability of the average motion picture cast. All together it is an enjoyable film of an unusual story which has received the right treatment."

Harriette Underhill said in the New York Tribune: "The picture is interesting. Miss Vidor is one of our favorites. Some one said the other day that he liked her work because she is a lady, and that is not such a poor explanation of her charm either."

Said Robert G. Welsh in the Evening Telegram: "Florence Vidor is seen in a thrilling drama which gives this charming screen star a dual role. Splendid work is done in the picture."

Lichtman Picture Well Booked Many Prominent Theatres Contract To Exhibit "Rich Men's Wives"

LEADING theatres throughout the country are booking "Rich Men's Wives," the initial release of Preferred Pictures through the Al Lichtman Corporation.

The picture had its Broadway premier at the Capitol Theatre during the week of August 20, and in addition to its presentation by S. L. Rothafel it has been booked by the foremost exhibitors in the United States, according to the Lichtman offices.

On September 11 it will start a ninety-six day run on the Loew circuit in Greater New York and early in October will be shown in Chicago through Balaban & Katz at the finest theatres in the middle west including the Chicago, the Tivoli, the Riviera and the Central Park.

In the not far distant future "Rich Men's Wives" will also play the entire A. H. Blank chain of theatres in Iowa and Nebraska as well as Frank Newman's large house in Kansas City, Missouri.

Durand Joins Cast of "Anna Ascends"

Edward Durand, who played Irene Bordoni's "papa" in "The French Doll" last season on Broadway, makes his debut in Paramount pictures with Alice Brady in the screen adaptation of her stage play, "Anna Ascends."

Pyramid Productions Under Way

WITH the release on September 10 of "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge," Pyramid Pictures, Inc., will have big pictures showing in the theatres throughout the United States. This is a record for achievement within one year, but the added success that has been won by Pyramid is in the fact that this company at the present moment claims two splendid stories in course of production in its Astoria, L. I., studios, namely, "When the Desert Calls" and "Flapper Love," besides having three stories in the scenario department being whipped into shape for early production.

These last three pictures planned are "Wife in Name Only," by Bertha M. Clay; "Captain Eri," by Joseph C. Lincoln, and a special temporarily titled, "What Fools Men Are." Pyramid's previous releases are "My Old Kentucky Home" and "His Wife's Husband."

Fairbank's Cameramen Have Strenuous Time

Arthur Edeson, chief cameraman for Douglas Fairbanks, and his assistant, Richard Holohan, fought a five-hour battle against death in a wind-lashed sea off the Southern California coast, this week, when they went to Abalone Point, nine miles below Balboa, Calif., to re-take a scene for "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," now being edited and titled for United Artists Corporation release.

After making the picture on the cliff two hundred feet high, Edeson and Holohan loaded their equipment into a small skiff in which they had been landed by two boatmen and the four of them started to row to the launch, "How Come," which was waiting off shore about a mile.

Once they had passed through the Breakers it quickly became apparent that they would founder before reaching the launch. An improvised signal of distress was raised, and despite the danger of going ashore, the pilot of the launch came in and rescued the four.

"Ching, Ching Chinaman" Being Pictured

When Edward J. O'Brien selected "Ching, Ching, Chinaman" as the prize story of the list of honor stories published in 1917, he must have had the remarkable picture possibilities of the Daniel Wilbur Steele plot in mind.

For the rugged New England shores, the atmosphere of mystery, the picturesque characters and the tremendous surprise climax that caused the tale to stand out as unique, all are being transferred to the screen with rare fidelity in the production being filmed by Tom Forman as a Special Picture, according to B. P. Schulberg.

Allied Releases Seen In Greater N.Y.

THE week beginning August 27th saw two releases of Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation playing representative theatres in Greater New York, day and date.

J. Stuart Blackton's "The Glorious Adventure," the first Prizma color photoplay, featuring Lady Diana Manners, started a run at the Brooklyn Strand, following an engagement at the Capitol theatre, New York, and Max Linder's sensational burlesque, "The Three Must-Get-Theres," opened at the Strand, New York.

After its run at the Strand "The Three Must-Get-Theres" goes into the houses of the Keith-Proctor-Moss circuit, where it will feature their bills.

"Rich Men's Wives" Does Well in N. Y.

The engagement of "Rich Men's Wives," the initial Preferred Picture which B. P. Schulberg presented at the Capitol Theatre, New York, through the Al Lichtman Corporation, during the week of August 20, was one of the most satisfactory the big Broadway house has had in months, according to announcement. The picture opened to packed houses on Sunday, with something in excess of 18,000 paid admissions for the day, and maintained a fast pace all through the week.

This showing at the Capitol, as well as those in the California, Los Angeles, and the California, San Francisco, and the U. S. Theatre, in Paterson, N. J., was in the nature of a pre-release. Actual release of the picture will begin with its showing on the Loew Metropolitan circuit the week of September 11.

Elsie Ferguson Back in "Outcast"

After a year's absence from the screen, Elsie Ferguson, Paramount star, has returned to make the picturization of her stage play, "Outcast," at the Paramount Long Island studio. Miss Ferguson's last work in pictures was in "Peter Ibbetson," in which she was co-starred with Wallace Reid, a year ago. Since that time she has appeared on the stage in "Varying Shore" and has toured Europe on a vacation trip.

Larry Semon Shown as "Dry" Detective

Larry Semon's new comedy, title for which has not yet been selected, is to have a down-town picture house showing in Los Angeles. In this new comedy Larry is a "dry" detective, deeply concerned in the operations of a gang of moonshiners on the Mexican border.

There are said to be some very elaborate and colorful sets, and the cast includes some new types.

"Kick-Back" F. B. O. Release

Star As Carefree Cowpuncher On Mexican Border Said To Offer Many Thrills

"THE KICK-BACK," the first Harry Carey production to be issued through the Film Booking Offices of America, is the current release of that company, following close upon the Emory Johnson police drama, "In the Name of the Law," which has been creating a sensation in every city in which it has been shown.

Carey's first F. B. O. production brings the star to the screen in a virile story of the West. One of its pre-season runs was at the Capitol Theatre, New York, where it was booked by Samuel Rothafel as a mid-summer attraction. Its cast includes Ethel Grey Terry as the leading woman, and Henry B. Walthall in the role of the "heavy."

Val Paul, who has sponsored Carey in past productions, directed the picture.

The locale of "The Kick-Back" is laid near the Mexican border, where Carey plays the role of a carefree cowpuncher, the proud possessor of the only water hole in that section of the desert. A commission to drive a herd of horses into the United States takes him across the Rio Grande, where he discovers that his papers have been forged and that the Mexican officials are seeking to arrest him. A tremendous thrill is said to be offered in this sequence. Carey engages in a hand-to-hand fight in the center of the river, which for sheer realism, has seldom been excelled on the screen.

"Blood and Sand" Going Big

Valentino Picture Threatens to Eclipse Success Scored by "The Sheik"

PARAMOUNT believes that its Fred Niblo production, "Blood and Sand," starring Rodolph Valentino, is destined to eclipse the sensational success scored by "The Sheik," and bases its opinion upon the great record which the picture has set up in New York, Los Angeles and Chicago during its pre-release engagements in those cities.

In New York, where "Blood and Sand" played to capacity throughout the past three weeks at the Rialto and for a simultaneous week at the Rialto, it was found necessary to terminate the run at its very peak, in order to make way for other important productions scheduled for those theatres. All records were smashed at the Rialto for first, second and third week attendance and receipts, while at the Rialto there was turn-away business at nearly every performance during the week it played there.

In Los Angeles, where the picture opened four weeks ago at Grauman's Rialto, it has taxed the seating capacity at all performances, Paramount states, and at the end of the fourth week the crowds were just as big as ever.

In Chicago, where "Blood and Sand" played the Roosevelt, the picture received the most unanimously flattering notices from the newspaper critics that have been accorded any picture in that city in more than a year, and the business throughout the run, according to Paramount, has more than justified the praise.

Strong Cast with Hamilton

"No Luck" Is Second of Series of Comedies for Educational Release

Lloyd Hamilton can boast one of the largest and best casts he has ever used in a comedy in the second of his series of feature laugh-makers for Educational, according to that office. Having delivered the first of the new Hamilton Comedies, "The Speeder," which Educational will soon release, Hamilton has plunged into work on the next subject, which he has tentatively titled "No Luck."

Heading Hamilton's support in the second picture is Ruth Hiatt, who made such an impression with her work in "The Speeder" that she was immediately signed for the next production. Miss Hiatt is a combination of the classic dancer and the modern flapper, her natural beauty and artistic training in esthetic dancing being combined with the characteristics of the up-to-date girl.

Two of the best known "kiddies" in motion pictures, Coy Watson, Jr., and Bobbie De Vilbiss, contribute largely to the fun. Lloyd Bacon, son of Frank Bacon, who occasionally lends his fine talents to straight characterization in the Hamilton Comedies, will be seen. Last but not least are Tom Kennedy and Tom McGuire. Kennedy has played the villain in scores of famous dramatic and comedy productions. Tom McGuire is an actor and comedian of long stage experience.

"A Tailor Made Man" Still Booming

FRED MILLER, managing director of the California Theatre in Los Angeles, reports that Charles Ray's "A Tailor Made Man," his first United Artists Corporation feature, is still booming along to big business at Miller's theatre, despite exceptional summer weather.

"A Tailor Made Man" is now in its fourth week. After playing two weeks at the California to capacity business, it was transferred to the Miller theatre for an indefinite run. "From present indications," said Mr. Miller, "A Tailor Made Man" will go into its fifth week, with a possibility of six weeks if weather conditions favor a run."

"The Storm" Sets New Record in Seattle

"The Storm," Universal's Jewel production, starring House Peters, of Langdon McCormick's celebrated stage play, opened to the biggest business ever experienced in the city of Seattle, reports from the Columbia Theatre indicate.

In the face of strong counter-attractions, "The Storm" played to more than 15,000 admissions during the first three days of its run, it is stated, breaking all records at the Columbia.

The opening day's attendance was 5,170, the second day's attendance 5,071, and the third day's 4,146, with a promise of larger crowds during the succeeding days of the week.

Charles Ray Becomes Radio Announcer

Charles Ray, producer and star of "A Tailor Made Man," his first United Artists Corporation release, which is having an unprecedented summer run in Los Angeles, recently joined the ranks of radio "announcers," when he read over the Los Angeles Examiner's radio James Whitcomb Riley's wonderfully appealing poem, "The Girl I Loved."

Afterward the management of the Examiner wrote Mr. Ray that they had received many letters from his admirers commenting on how splendidly his voice carried and how distinctly plain the words of the Riley poem were heard.

"Nanook" Producer Tells of Experiences

The extraordinary reception of "Nanook of the North" by the press and by the picture-going public all over the country, says Pathe, caused Robert J. Flaherty, its producer, to be early besieged by magazine editors for accounts of his experiences in photographing this epic of the frozen regions. The World's Work for September, just out, contains a handsomely illustrated article by Mr. Flaherty, entitled "How I Filmed 'Nanook of the North,'" describing incidents of absorbing interest.

"NEITHER SCREEN NOR STAGE—BUT LIFE'S WINDOW"

Stars of Associated Shine on Broadway

THE names of Associated Exhibitors stars and feature players loom large and bright in the incandescents in front of Broadway picture palaces these nights. For at least three straight weeks feature offerings of this company are the attractions in three of the biggest houses on the Great White Way.

During half of last week "When Husbands Deceive," with Leah Baird, was the photoplay feature at Loew's State.

This week the Capitol, the largest theatre in the world, is presenting the greatest of the Associated Exhibitors-Leah Baird pictures, "Dusk to Dawn."

On Sunday, September 3rd, the Mark Strand begins the run of the Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors super attraction, "Grandma's Boy."

24 Houses Run "Foolish Wives" Day and Date

What is considered a record for day and date booking is reported from Detroit this week, where "Foolish Wives," the Universal-Jewel-Von Stroheim special is being shown simultaneously in twenty-four theatres. This combination run follows a four weeks' run enjoyed recently by the picture in one of Detroit's leading theatres.

Among the two dozen theatres showing the million dollar picture to Detroit theatre goers are the DeLuxe, the New Home, the Crystal Park, the Myrtle, the Stratford, the East Side, the Library, the Lakewood, the Beechwood, the Priscilla, the Holbrook, the La Veeda, the Knickerbocker, the Grande, the Ferndale, the Virginia, the Brooklyn, the Strand, the Oakman, Boulevard, the Mack, the Farnum, the Merrick, the Blackstone and the Fairmount.

"Foolish Wives," perhaps more than any film of recent days, has been booked for day and date runs in many cities. In Jersey City, N. J., six theatres not only played the feature on the same days, but pooled the advertising and obtained great splurges in the local papers.

Clean Comedies Shown in Chautauqua

An example of the clean appeal of Century Comedies is afforded by their success at Chautauqua this summer, according to the Century office. The Chautauqua Institute, which holds its summer school about 70 miles from Buffalo, N. Y., controls not only the homes, stores and lighting, but the entertainment schedule as well.

College deans and instructors from every big University in the country lecture there and the best features and short subjects are run in the theatre this institution controls. Century comedies were used almost exclusively this summer and special advertising, billing, and exploitation were given the Baby Peggy and Brownie pictures.

Buy Carefully, Laemmle Warns

Universal President Advises Exhibitors To Look Before Purchasing

THE exhibitor who books pictures willy-nilly, and who does not look at what he is buying, will always be buried under a depression wave, in the opinion of Carl Laemmle, president of Universal. In a statement just made public at the Universal home office, he urges exhibitors to look at every picture they buy, no matter what the cost in time and trouble for its screening. This method, he asserts, is the only salvation for the exhibitors with the sick box office.

"The time has passed," he says, "when an exhibitor can be successful by booking shows for a whole year at a time, or by contracting for pictures which are not even made. The exhibitor of today cannot even afford to invest in any picture which he has not seen and with which his showman's judgment does not assure him a crowded house.

"The man who buys a pig in a poke usually gets nothing but the poke. It should be the self-constituted duty of every exhibitor to make of himself a committee of one to review all pictures submitted for purchase and to buy only the very best. Otherwise he might succeed, but only through unadulterated luck. The cards will be stacked against him."

Records For "Grandma's Boy"

Harold Lloyd Picture Is Having Extended Runs In All Parts of Country

"GRANDMA'S BOY," the Harold Lloyd — Associated Exhibitors super-attraction, produced by Hal Roach, is now in the 16th week of its record-smashing run in Dr. H. B. Breckwedel's Symphony Theatre, Los Angeles, already surpassing by two weeks the longest previous run of any picture, of whatever length or nature, in that city. The Los Angeles record for the continuous showing of a comedy, established by Harold Lloyd with "A Sailor-Made Man," was shattered nine long weeks ago.

Many other cities, meanwhile, are sharing figure-shattering honors with Los Angeles. When Calvin Heilig, on August 21st, started "Grandma's Boy" on its third week in the Heilig Theatre, Portland, Ore., the high water mark for the showing of a photoplay in the Oregon metropolis was passed. The picture ran fourteen days in P. Mortimer Lewis's Bijou Theatre, Atlantic City, which is three days longer than any film ever played in that seaside resort town before. Until "Grandma's Boy" appeared simultaneously in Homer Ellison's Princess and Rialto, each of them a large downtown theatre, no picture ever had divided its first run in Denver between two houses.

A telegram from Eddie Zorn, owner of the big Temple Theatre, Toledo, to President Arthur S. Kane, of Associated Exhibitors, tells of the smashing triumph "Grandma's Boy" is scoring in that city and of the upset it has occasioned in his booking arrangements.

Elaborate Sets For "Broadway Rose"

One of the most distinctive features of Robert Z. Leonard's forthcoming presentation of Mae Murray in "Broadway Rose," is said to be the beauty of the settings. Careful attention invariably has been expended on artistic settings for all of the Mae Murray photoplays, with the idea of making them not only beautiful, but accurate from the point of view of nationality.

Elaborate as have been the former Mae Murray releases, those who have had an opportunity of witnessing her latest, "Broadway Rose," at its recent private showing, are reported to be convinced that it excels anything that this star has ever attempted.

Standing Is Star in "Isle of Doubt"

"The Isle of Doubt," the six reel feature which Playgoers Pictures has announced for release September 10, is said to be admirably adapted to the abilities of Wyndham Standing, who is the star in the production. The story opens in New York City, with glimpses of life in "high" society, but transfers to the tropics, whose adventure and lure are said to be presented with all their wealth of charm.

Architectural Review Praises Sets

THE American Architect and the Architectural Review devotes a full page in its issue of August second to the lavishness and care displayed in the construction of the magnificent "sets" used in "Rich Men's Wives," a Preferred Picture being distributed by the Al Lichtman Corporation.

Stills from the production were used to illustrate what the paper considered a "fine example of motion picture architecture." The skill and accuracy employed in building the settings were commented upon from the point of view of experts along this line.

Ray Asked to Play Old King Neptune

Fancy Charles Ray, famous for his roles embodying virile youth, playing an old man part! He has one admirer, anyway, who thinks he could get away with it. Edward L. Bader, Mayor of Atlantic City, N. J., sent a message to the star urging him to take the role of King Neptune in that famous resort's annual pageant on September 6, 7 and 8.

Ray has a full appreciation of the honor, for only men of celebrity and achievement are considered for the place, but he had to decline.

Tanks Provide Water to Flood Town

Fifteen railroad tank cars, each with a capacity of 5,000 gallons, which were emptied and refilled six times, provided the flood water for the realistic climax to "The Town That Forgot God," the Fox special production for the season of 1922-23. The village, consisting of thirty frame buildings, was built at the foot of a hill near Fort Lee, New Jersey. A railroad spur along the top of the hill, and the fifteen tank cars were stationed on this track.

A system of hose carried the water from the tank cars to the inlet of a concrete moat built around the village. More than five miles of hose were used in filming the flood scenes. The entire seventy-five thousand gallons of water were turned loose into the well or moat at one time.

Sales Manager Sees Bright Future

W. B. Frank, general sales manager of Associated Exhibitors, returning this week from a trip that took him as far west as Cincinnati and south to Louisville, brought reports of a spirit of decided optimism manifested by exhibitors in Pennsylvania, Kentucky and West Virginia.

"There is no question but that business in these states is picking up," said Mr. Frank. "Evidences of the improved outlook were apparent in every city and town I visited, and they manifested themselves in more than one way. Not only are exhibitors willing to pay higher prices for big productions than they would have considered a year ago, but several regard business prospects as justifying the building of new theaters or the reconstruction or improvement of existing houses."

Engineering Feat Seen in News Reel

The last issue of Kinograms, Educational's news reel, shows some interesting glimpses of "The greatest engineering feat ever attempted in South America," and one of the biggest engineering jobs ever undertaken in the world. This remarkable engineering work is the razing by American engineers of Castle Hill, a mountain in the heart of the city of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

Private Showing For Rogers' Picture

A private showing of "The Headless Horseman or The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," was given at the Plaza Theatre, New York, last Wednesday morning. The film adaptation of Washington Irving's masterpiece was seen in ten reels and it is to be cut to seven.

Carl Stearns Clancy, the producer, explained that the showing was given so that his friends in the profession might make any suggestions which they cared to that would help the picture before the final cutting and editing which will be in the hands of Will Rogers, the star of the production, and himself.

Critics Favor Allied Picture

"The Three Must-Get-Theres" Gets Unanimous Approval Along Broadway

MAX LINDER'S "The Three Must-Get-Theres" ran away with all the honors on New York's Rialto, Broadway, this week, if the critics are to be taken as the criterion. This first production for the newly formed subsidiary of United Artists, the Allied Producers and Distributors' Corporation played the Strand theatre. There was not an unfavorable comment by either critic or public and the Strand theatre did a capacity business with the production, according to the Allied Producers.

"Do not miss this picture," is the way Harriette Underhill of the Tribune begins her review. "It is an extremely amusing burlesque on "The Three Musketers." Max Linder is 'Dart-in-again' and in his plumed hat he looks just like Irene Bordoni. In some places slow motion pictures are used with telling effect. Whoever directed this comedy got all the fun possible out of it and the titles are not only smart, they are clever."

The New York Times said, "It is good-natured and lots of fun, abounding in broad and whole-hearted mockery. Following Fairbanks in the story almost step by step, it parallels, rather than follows him. It never tries to be romantic, it is content to be a burlesque."

Fox Picture For Oct. Release

"A Little Child Shall Lead Them" Due To Open In New York Lyric Labor Day

OCTOBER 15th is the date set by the Fox Film Corporation for the release of "A Little Child Shall Lead Them," the sixth of the special productions announced by the Fox organization for the present season. The picture, which is scheduled to open at the Lyric Theatre, New York, on Labor Day, Monday, September 4th, is a heart story along the lines of the successful domestic dramas that have been shown by this company on Broadway and then made a triumphant progress in the picture houses of the country.

Following such important and highly esteemed productions as "The Fast Mail," "A Fool There Was," "Silver Wings," "Monte Cristo" and "Nero," it was necessary that "A Little Child Shall Lead Them" should be able to stand comparison with its predecessors. Everything points to a flattering result of the test, according to the Fox office.

Two more specials that will soon be placed in the hands of the exhibitor are "Lights of New York" and "My Friend, the Devil." This last named picture, which is a screen version of Georges Ohnet's celebrated novel "Doctor Rameau," has the well known Charles Richman in the leading role. Those who are familiar with the powerful situations contained in this work of the French author who wrote "The Ironmaster," will readily recognize its excellence as screen material.

Exhibitors Advertise Picture

"Nanook Of The North Is Given Wide Exploitation in Newspapers

ONE of the most unusual elements in the success of the Pathe feature, "Nanook of the North," is said to be the phenomenal amount of newspaper advertising taken by exhibitors. In San Pedro, Cal., a town of 20,000 inhabitants, four newspaper pages heralded the coming of "Nanook of the North" at the Victoria Theatre.

The same amount of space was taken in a leading Salt Lake City newspaper during the local run.

A cleverly constructed advertisement appeared in the Wenatchee Daily World, in the vicinity of Spokane. The newspaper covered the surrounding territory and twelve different towns all showing the photoplay at different times were including in the advertisement, telling of the date and place of the showing.

Ralph Lieber, business manager of the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, writes as follows:

"We have just finished with 'Nanook of the North,' and it certainly was a pleasure to have run this picture. It was universally well liked, and there were many of our patrons who came two and three times to see it."

"Sherlock Holmes" an October Release

Goldwyn's second release for the new season—John Barrymore in "Sherlock Holmes," to be released on October 9—has many angles of appeal to exhibitors and the picture going public aside from the name of America's outstanding dramatic genius in the title role of a picture about the most famous character in the world's detective fiction, according to the Goldwyn offices.

The leading woman is Carol Dempster. The arch villain is Gustav von Seyffertitz.

The Dr. Watson to Mr. Barrymore's Sherlock Holmes is played by Roland Young.

The villainess is beautiful Hedda Hopper.

Schulberg Cast Now Completed

Another strong cast of players has been completed by B. P. Schulberg with the announcement of the selection of Edith Roberts to enact an important part in his forthcoming Preferred Picture, "Thorns and Orange Blossoms."

Miss Roberts, who will be seen as the young wife in the Bertha M. Clay story, was selected as much because of her unusual gift for characterization as for the screen charm that has won her a niche of her own on the silver sheet.

The picture now is being screened with an all-star company that includes, in addition to Miss Roberts, Estelle Taylor, Kenneth Harlan, Arthur Hull, Carl Stockdale and Evelyn Selbie.

Marion Davies Returns For Interiors

Robert G. Vignola and his company have returned to Cosmopolitan Studio, New York, after a two weeks' location trip in and around Stamford, Conn., doing exteriors for his forthcoming production, "Adam and Eva." This is the Guy Bolton-George Middleton comedy which Vignola is now doing with Marion Davies in the leading role.

The interior scenes for this production, designed by Joseph Urban, will be taken at the company's studio in New York.

Two of the greatest character actors of the screen will be seen in "Ching, Ching, Chinaman," the second Preferred Picture for release through the Al Lichtman Corporation. When the cast for this story was chosen, the services of Lon Chaney and Walter Long were secured to portray two parts which required the highly specialized talents which both possess.

The production is now well under way. Tom Forman is directing.

Century Comedies For Eastman House

William A. Calihan, who manages the Piccadilly Theatre, the Regent Theatre, and other Rochester theatres, which are accounted the finest in the city of Rochester, N. Y., has signed up for the entire output of Century Comedies.

Special showings in the city's biggest clubs, and especially written articles for the papers are among Mr. Calihan's plans for getting behind Century Comedies.

Andree Tourneur Engaged for Universal Series

Andree Tourneur, noted as a screen beauty, has been engaged to play opposite Roy Stewart in the Universal two-reel "lumberjack" stories now being filmed under Robert Hill's direction at Fort Bragg, in Mendocino County, Cal.

First National Expects Big Season

ONE of the strong indications that the 1922-23 season will be a big one for motion pictures is embodied in telegrams received by Floyd M. Brockel, supervisor of exchanges for Associated First National Pictures, Inc., from branch managers and salesmen throughout the country who have been holding sale conferences in their various districts. One of these telegrams, sent during the First National Central District meeting at Cleveland, is as follows:

"Unanimous opinion managers and salesmen attending Central District Conference that First National releases announced for Fall excel by far and previous lineup for similar period. These, in combination with distribution plan outlined by District Manager Bandy, assure certain success. Entire staff jubilant over prospects for greatest business in history of organization."

"Grandma's Boy" Song For N. Y. Strand

Big exhibitors throughout the country are welcoming the new song, "Grandma's Boy," which was inspired by the Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors feature comedy of the same name, produced by Hal Roach.

Joseph Plunkett, managing director of the Mark Strand Theatre, New York, expressed a desire to hear the song and promptly arranged for its use in the elaborate prologue with which the Strand will welcome "Grandma's Boy," during its run there, beginning September 3.

The song, which is set to fox trot music, is by Herb Crooker, Jean Haves and Pete Wendling, and promises to be a decided hit.

Goldwyn Gets Booking Requests

Announcement of Release Order Brings Quick Response For Showings

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION states that since the announcement of the order and date of release of the first eight of its twenty big super-features for the new season, the requests for bookings in first run theatres of the first release have been heavy.

The first of the releases is the new Rupert Hughes' "Remembrance," of which Goldwyn expects a record that will surpass that of its companion picture, also by Mr. Hughes, "The Old Nest." "Remembrance" was conceived in the same vein as "The Old Nest," but tells another side of the story of home—that of the unsung Father of the family.

With Rupert Hughes' reputation as a writer of "best seller" screen stories to back up its claims for "Remembrance," Goldwyn sent its selling force into the field prepared for a great response. Already the response is setting in and "Remembrance" will be soon shown in a host of big cities.

Exhibitors are confident of the picture's appeal to the public, not only because of the success of all previous Hughes photoplays, but because of the special cast engaged—Claude Gillingwater, Patsy Ruth Miller, Cullen Landis and Kate Lester—and because of the localized newspaper advertising campaign which Goldwyn is going to conduct in connection with the big city showings.

Mack Sennett Discusses Comedy

Story and Action Essential, As Well As Elimination of Slap-Stick Hokum

STORY and action are what count in up-to-date comedies, according to Mack Sennett, whose productions are released through First National. Sennett said:

"The American sense of humor, which without doubt is the keenest in the world, demands nourishment. There is no known medium through which laugh-making can hope to continue its present day progress and receive the wide national distribution, other than the screen, to which the major portion of the public have learned to look for its entertainment."

"The producer of comedy, much the same as the producer of drama and comedy-drama, must consider more seriously the worth of story material and at the sacrifice of other picture making detail, insert more 'reason' for doing things. One thing most necessary to overcome, to more firmly establish comedy films as a part of the 'big theatre' program is the immediate elimination of a lot of the old style slapstick hokum and play up in its place, an appealing story of love, romance or adventure—something with a plot behind it. The old method of hooking up a series of time-worn gags to a mere thread of a story is worn out.

"There is no sensible reason why comedy entertainment, whether it be of the two reel variety or of longer length, should not be treated with the same serious consideration as is the more heavy material given to the screen."

"Rich Men's Wives" on Broadway

"Rich Men's Wives," the initial release of Preferred Pictures through the Al Lichtman Corporation, which S. L. Rothafel booked for a week's run at the Capitol beginning August 20, is proving a powerful antidote for the usual hot weather depression.

The box office reported that the crowd storming the theatre when the picture opened on Sunday surpassed any previous attendance this summer, the receipts paralleling the average winter performance.

Drives 1,500 Miles to Paint Scenery

Christian Von Schneidau, who for the last six months has been painting portraits of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, has left Los Angeles to motor fifteen hundred miles to Crater Lake, Ore., where he will paint several canvasses.

Von Schneidau, who is rated as the most celebrated Swedish painter in America, is anxious to study light vibrations in the Crater Lake country where, due to the altitude and peculiar light conditions, an altogether new and complex field for study is offered.

"Trouble" Wins Praise of Exhibitor

A. P. Desmoreaux, manager of the Strand Theatre, Madison, Wis., has written to Associated First National Pictures, Inc., regarding his experience in showing Jackie Coogan in "Trouble," a First National Attraction.

"I am pleased to advise you that this picture gave one hundred per cent satisfaction and I cannot think of any picture shown here in the past that received as many favorable comments from the public as this one," he says in his letter.

Loew's Warfield Theatre Embodies Many Commendable Features

Building Cost $1,250,000 With Seating Capacity For Three Thousand

SAN FRANCISCO'S latest theatre, the Warfield, was erected by Marcus Loew at a cost of $1,250,000. The structure also includes a nine-story office building. The Warfield is one of the most beautiful and pretentious houses in America. It has a seating capacity of 3,000 and combines everything that goes into the "personality" for the modern playhouse. G. Albert Lansburgh was the architect.

On entering the auditorium proper, its great roominess is very noticeable, being furnished in marble walls, and decorated with crystal clusters of electric lights, plaster work, leaded glass, and paintings. The ventilating system installed is known as the Duct System. The huge blowers located on the floor line at each side of the stage and facing the auditorium feed fresh air from the conducts on the floor. The outlet to this air is given by means of small mushrooms placed under each seat. The used air is drawn out of the building through the ceiling. Because of this perfect ventilation, smoking is permitted.

The stage is exceedingly well equipped with every conceivable device that saves time. The sliding "tormentors," or wings, in the front just behind the arch are new to the local stage, making it unnecessary to raise the curtain in order to bring on the piano or any piece of property for special concerts. The "tormentors" are

Slow Burning Film

THE Ontario Fire-Fighters Association, comprising the fire departments of municipalities throughout the Province of Ontario, in annual convention at Brantford, Ontario, adopted a resolution submitted by the Toronto delegates calling upon the motion picture industry to adopt at once the exclusive use of "slow-burning film." The resolution referred to "the present expensive burden of inspection, regulation and surveillance of motion picture theatres placed upon public fire and safety departments" because of the nitro-cellulose film now commonly in use and declared that the attitude of the motion picture industry was unwarranted and indefensible. The mover urged that it was the "moral duty" of the industry to adopt slow-burning film.

Col. John A. Cooper of Toronto, secretary of the Canadian Motion Picture Distributors Association, declared in an interview, in reply to the Fire-Fighters Association, that "producers were willing and anxious to use slow-burning film" but that the latter was yet in its early stages of production. Col. Cooper drew attention to the types of projection machines now in general use which prevented heat from reaching the film and also outlined the safeguards which are to be found in all projection rooms of theatres.

A great many controversies have been, and undoubtedly will be, instigated by the merits of non-inflammable film versus flammable film. Great progress has been made in the development of the non-inflammable films and it seems quite probable the future will see its universal adoption. However, at present, there are several drawbacks for general use in the theatres due to certain particular physical characters of the film. There is no question of the great advantages this industry will reap when the time comes for the universal use of a film that burns very slowly.

taken forward and the piano brought on from the entrance to the stage. In this way the audience cannot see what is going on behind the curtains.

The orchestra and balcony chairs are designed for the maximum comfort and great care was given the loge and box seats to insure their popularity with the patrons. The mezzanine floor is decorated with a great deal of art work and is also furnished with large easy chairs, beautiful rugs, draperies, lamps, and other effects.

The projection room is equipped with all the latest devices to insure the criterion in screening the picture.

The ladies' and men's rest rooms are also salient features of the Warfield, decorated with colors and furniture befitting the style of the house. The patrons will find it a pleasing place to rest in these rooms.

The $100,000 Moller organ will furnish the accompaniment for a large orchestra.

Every seat in the theatre is accessible to an exit. There are many exits, all of which improve the looks of the house rather than spoil the appearance. Persons can reach any seat without climbing an unnecessary step, and may leave the same way.

Comfort and convenience have been demanded by Marcus Loew in the construction of the Warfield.

The opening of the new Warfield was marked by the appearance of thirty screen stars, never before brought together on one stage. The stars were brought to San Francisco on a special train and were dined and generated at the Palace Hotel. The most prominent of the stars who assisted in the opening were: Mary McAvoy, Lois Wilson, Mary Miles Minter, Bebe Daniels, Billie Dove, Lila Lee, Theodore Roberts, Thomas Meighan, Fred

Texas Dealer Reports Good Business in Usual Dull Season

THE R. D. Thrash Company, Texas distributors of Motiograph projectors, Gardiner velvet gold fibre screens and Greenwood changeable electric signs, reports several complete installations for the month of July which is usually the dulllest month in the year in the Texas theatre equipment budget.

Indicating their belief that a revival of business will be seen this Fall, a number of Texas exhibitors are constructing new theatres, and completely overhauling those now in operation.

The recent installations of the New Model Motiograph projectors, and other equipments, include cities in nearly every section of the State. It would seem that improvement in conditions is not local but general.

The Gen theatre, Texarkana, has completed installation of two new model motiograph projectors, Gardiner velvet gold fibre screens and specially built lobby display, and reports a capacity business for the past thirty days.

J. M. Vivion, Princess theatre, Denton, Texas, has just completed the installation of new model motiograph, and reports a nice summer business.

Hall Brothers, Radio theatre, $150,000.00, opens at Beeville, Tex., August 1st, with new model motiograph, Gardiner velvet gold fibre screen and complete equipment installed by R. D. Thrash.

Mr. H. T. Hodge, owner of a string of theatres in West Texas, has placed his order with the Thrash Company for complete equipment including new model motiograph projectors, Gardiner velvet gold fibre screen, motor generator and specially built lobby frames and decorations for his new Palace theatre, now under construction at Abilene, Tex.

C. K. Goss directs the sales and service efforts of the Thrash Co., personally supervises the installation of every projector in the Texas territory.

The Royal theatre, Waco, Texas has installed new projectors, and is undergoing a complete overhauling and increasing its seating capacity.

A. A. Kelley, Sunshine theatre, Brownwood, Texas, recently opened a new theatre, motiograph equipped, and reports conditions are fine in that section.

CONFIRMATION of the cabled announcement from Berlin that Dr. Lee de Forest had perfected his Talking Motion Picture Film, and that he would shortly sail for this country in order to give a public demonstration of his invention, has been given at the De Forest Radio laboratories in Jersey City by Mr. Charles Gilbert, President and General Manager of the De Forest Radio Telephone and Telegraph Company. Mr. Gilbert stated that the De Forest Phonofilm or Talking Motion Picture Film was made possible by the De Forest Audion lamp otherwise named the triode or three element vacuum tube, now used universally in Radio, the first patents for which were taken out by Dr. Lee de Forest in 1906.

British Exhibitors Importing Machines

British exhibitors are becoming more and more sold on American built projectors, and a number of the latest model Motiograph Projectors have been installed in English moving picture theatres, one of the latest installations being at the Majestic in City Square, Leeds, where two of this type machine are now being operated, and it is reported are giving great satisfaction.

The Motiographs were purchased on the recommendation of Ike Collins, the well known New Castle exhibitor, who has them installed in his entire chain of theatres.

RIALTO THEATRE
MACON, GA.

C. K. HOWELL, Architect

"That looks like a good Movie House"

THAT'S what most people would say when they saw the Rialto Theatre pictured above. A certain percentage of them would step up to the box office—others would remember this theatre and return when they wanted to see a good picture.

A theatre-front like the Rialto's attracts patrons. It is a permanent advertisement that suggests quality programs and pleasant surroundings. And this distinctive appearance has been obtained simply and inexpensively by the effective use of Terra Cotta as ornament and trim.

Terra Cotta gives real architectural distinction at less cost than any material of equal worth. And as Terra Cotta can readily be had in any shape or color it can be used for the most intricate ornamentation as readily as for the simplest—made to harmonize with any style of architecture.

And remember that Terra Cotta is permanent—proof against weather and time. It is thoroughly fire-resistant—its colors are fadeless and unchanging. When dust and grime settle on its surface, an easy washing with soap and water makes Terra Cotta clean and bright—freshness and color completely restored.

We have prepared some interesting literature on the use of Terra Cotta in theatre construction which give many valuable facts. We suggest you write for it. Address National Terra Cotta Society, 19 West 44th St., New York, N. Y.

Kenosha Audiences Delighted by East India Organist at Orpheum Theatre

MUCH interest has been aroused in Kenosha, Wisconsin by the appointment of Dr. Hyland Eiman Slatre-Wilson to preside at the big three manual Barton Orchestral Organ installed in Saxe Brothers' half-million dollar Orpheum Theatre.

Dr. Slatre-Wilson is one of the best educated musicians in the United States. His education was begun in the public schools of Syracuse, New York and continued at the college of the City of New York, the State University of New York and under such masters of music as Leschetizky, Marescalchi, Consolo, Vitale and others in piano, violin, voice orchestration and composition.

From his youth Dr. Slatre-Wilson took up the study of the organ and at the age of fifteen became city organist of the All-India University of Bombay, India, his native land. For the succeeding few years he was one of the leaders of East Indian musical world. He organized the 150 piece Emin D'Nalyh Orchestra, named after him. (Emin D'Nalyh is Dr. Slatre-Wilson's family name).

Dr. Slatre-Wilson comes from a long line of great East Indian educators. To one of his ancestors is credited the founding of Theosophy. About ten years ago Dr. Slatre-Wilson returned to the United States with the internationally famous Dr. John Alexander Dowie of Zion City, Illinois. Dr. Dowie at that time was building the Zion City tabernacle and planned to install one of the best pipe organs in the United States to be used in connection with a large choir and extensive musical festivals. Dr. Slatre-Wilson was placed in charge of the organ selection and installation and himself designed one of the best Cathedral Organs in the United States, which even now is a famous feature of Zion City. The organization and establishment of the great Zion City Choir, whose singing has brought pleasure to hundreds of thousands in dozens of cities, was also a work of Dr. Slatre-Wilson.

Moving to Kenosha, Wisconsin, Dr. Slatre-Wilson founded the Conservatory of Music, which he conducted with great success until the opening of the Orpheum, when he took his place at the console of the Barton Orchestral Organ installed there. The combination

Dr. Slatre-Wilson's musical skill and the widely versatile three manual Barton Organ has captivated Kenosha's music loving "movie" goers, and the Orpheum is crowded daily and nightly. The delicately shaded, thousand-toned melodies pouring from the dozens of throats of the Barton Organ in response to the touch of Dr. Slatre-Wilson's gifted fingers is a revelation both of human skill and instrumental perfection.

In explanation of the marvelously intricate improvisations and minute tonal gradations with which Dr. Slatre-Wilson delights Orpheum audiences, he modestly gives great credit to the Barton Divided Manual. "I was greatly surprised," he says, "to find that in spite of the fact that more tonal combinations and a richer expression are possible with the Barton than I have ever been able to find heretofore. I was able to play it readily on sight, without a minute of study and I find it a constant inspiration in my daily striving to gain further mastery of organ playing."

Ralph Pecorelli Joins Staff of New Duart Laboratories

RALPH PECORELLI, who was a pioneer in this industry and has specialized throughout his career in the laboratory industry, will now cooperate in running the new Duart Laboratory which has recently opened in New York City for the purpose of specializing in the development of negatives and first prints. All the work done in this laboratory is to be done personally by a small staff of experts who have specialized in laboratory work for a number of years and in this way hope to give the producer and distributor the criterion in the finished product. An idea of the vast experience which Ralph Pecorelli has had in this important phase of the industry may be best gained from an interview that the News representative had with him:

"I started among the pioneers in this game as a mere helper in the laboratories of the American Biograph Company in Hoboken, N. J.,

Ralph Pecorelli, who has joined the staff of the new Duart Laboratory. Pecorelli started his career in this industry in 1907 in 1907, and there worked from the capacity of helper through all the various departments of the laboratory, especially devoting a great deal of study to developing and timing. At that time I was working with Allen & Schultz and other men who at that time were considered the most expert in their time. I was given complete charge of the plant in 1912 and remained in that capacity to 1919, at which time I became connected with Universal in the capacity of inspector and remained with this company until 1920. I then became affiliated with the late Mr. Karger, at that time head director of the Metro Film Corporation, where I was given charge of their first prints and negatives. In my present connections with the Duart Laboratory I feel that I will find a splendid opportunity for the expression of my ability in the art of developing and printing as I will aid in the actual work myself.

"Very few producers and directors today actually understand and recognize the importance of the developing of the negative and the making of the first print. It is only through the combined efforts of both the cameraman and the darkroom man that a high-class negative is turned out. The inside man has to be just as expert and capable in his line as the cameraman is in his. Either can spoil a scene and thus necessitate its remaking. A great deal depends on the manner in which a negative is developed. Negatives which are developed with imperfections may, in many instances, turn out fairly commendable first prints, but when used for general use in the laboratory for release work they are found to be lacking in the qualities which are necessary for good release work. Too much stress cannot be laid on the desirability of perfection in the negative.

Al Young, who is also well known in this industry and who has had a great amount of experience in the laboratory, will work personally on all the work submitted in this laboratory. Young first started his career in this industry with the Erbograp Laboratories, where he received a very thorough knowledge of laboratory work through assembling, cutting and editing.

There are no music fools

You can't fool people with poor music—they may stand it while they are there, but they will never come back to hear it over again. Your public will pay you for good music. Even jazz lovers are attracted by that wonderful strain of melody that haunts the Barton Orchestral Organ syncopation, and the real music lovers find endless enjoyment in the great variety of harmony made possible with the Barton Divided Manual.

It costs less to have the right music—the Barton Organ, an instrument of a thousand emotions, can be yours for the same cost or less than an imitation. It makes a big house out of a small one and makes the big house a leader.

National Anti-Misframe League Forum

Dear Editor:

I have heard several arguments on the crossing of the light rays as they go from the aperture to the screen. Some claim that all the rays cross inside of the objective lens, while others say they all cross just in front of the objective lens at the place where the light beam is narrowest. I've been having an argument about this myself and I claim they all cross at the narrowest part of the beam directly in front of the objective lens.

If there is any reason to believe that this is not so, that is, I mean any good reason so I can either prove I'm right or wrong, I'd like to know about it.

I suppose a lot of the fellows have got all "het up" in this argument at some time or other and maybe they've looked up or tried some experiments to show I'm right or wrong. Anyway, I'd like to know what the others think on this question.

I've been having pretty good luck with my film lately.

I find that a little study on my work makes it easier for me and I guess I also give better projection to my manager.

Hoping to hear from some of the boys who know how to answer my question.

Dear Sir:

I have been reading the Projection Department of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS for some time and I think the N. A. M. L. is of greater importance among all projectionists.

Every projectionist that thinks anything of his profession should belong to the League and film evil would be a thing of the past. I am sending in my application for membership and hope you accept it; also you will find stamps enclosed for membership button.

Hoping the Forum will soon bring many more members into the League,

Very truly yours,

AS a motion picture projectionist who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the projection-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in reasonably good condition, according to conditions of film when received. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother projectionists and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

Organ Console Placed on Elevator

The Cataract Amusement Company opened their new million dollar Strand Theatre on Saturday, Aug. 26th. No expense has been spared to make this the most complete and modern theatre in the country.

Among the unusual features in this new theatre is the elaborate Marr & Colton Concert organ which will be played by the well known organist Mr. Geo. Bouchard and will be the principal feature in each days program.

The organ console is placed on a push button controlled elevator which brings the console and organist in plain view of everyone in the audience when the musical program is being rendered. Upon completion of this part of the program the elevator descends to the floor level of the orchestra pit which is its normal position.

The organ is placed in three sound proof chambers at the right of the stage, being so arranged and placed as to fill every part of the theatre with its splendid tone. The many new features in connection with this organ have excited much favorable comment.

The MOTION PICTURE NEWS has received a post card from J. H. Hallberg sending his best regards and telling how he is enjoying his first real vacation in several years. From the view on the card, we certainly agree with H. J. that he would find it difficult not to enjoy himself among those surroundings.

Organ installed in the Niagara Falls Strand theatre by Marr & Colton has its console placed on a push button controlled elevator, the arrangement for this apparatus is shown in the view above. When the musical selection is rendered the organist and console are brought in view of the audience

Exhibit of Optical Instruments

Arrangements are now being completed for the exhibit of optical instruments and apparatus to be held at the National Bureau of Standards, Washington, in connection with the annual meeting of the Optical Society of America, October 26-28, 1922.

The leading manufacturers of optical equipment have already signified their intention of participating. However, the exhibit will not be limited to standard commercial types. Individuals and research laboratories are also invited to exhibit special research apparatus. Brief descriptions of instruments and their purposes supplied by the exhibitors will be printed in the program and published later in the minutes of the meeting in the Journal of the Optical Society. The exhibit of new apparatus will thus constitute just as definite a contribution to science as a paper communicated to the meeting. The authors of papers communicated at this meeting are urged to supplement their papers by an exhibit of apparatus in case such an exhibit is suitable and practicable.

Niblo, Conrad Nagel, Ruth Roland, Claire Windsor, Viola Dana, Shirley Mason, Jack Mulhall, Walter Hiers, Malcom McGregor, Lupino Lane, George O'Brien, Hobart Bosworth, Dan Mason, June Elvidge, Clara Kimball Young and Matt Moore.

Viola Dana, the star in the "Fourteenth Lover," which was screened for the opening week at Loew's Warfield, appeared at every performance for a week.

"We find," said Marcus Loew, "courteous ushers are a great asset to picture houses, the same as good pictures are, and our policy will be to have the most courteous ushers and usherettes obtainable, as well as the best pictures in the market. As usherettes we demanded, firstly, courteous ones; secondly, sensible ones, and, thirdly, no bobbed-haired, painted or flapper-like maids."

Fred G. Weiss, formerly manager of Loew's Garden theatre at Kansas, will be the manager and Kenneth P. Behr, of New York, and Arthur Frahm will be assistant managers.

"Fortune's Mask"

Vitagraph—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

THE fact that the action is kept moving swiftly is a saving grace in this picture. One doesn't stop to consider the impossibility of many of the situations. Earl Williams has been given a good role in this picturization of a popular O. Henry tale. He gets a lot out of the character of "Dicky Maloney," who returns to his father's land to "kick out" the gang of intriguers. The selection of Patsy Ruth Miller for the principal feminine role was a fortunate one. Patsy makes an ideal senorita and she is one of the bright spots of the picture.

The settings, while not elaborate, are adequate. The costuming is correct in detail, especially the uniforms of the officials. There must have been a rush on the medal market when this picture was made. The sessions of the cabinet resemble an Odd Fellow grand lodge. There is some quick love making in the film. This at least speeds up the action. "Dicky" meets the heroine and marries her all in the course of a few feet of film.

We have seen some stories that Patsy is one of the few actresses who has never been kissed on the screen. This production puts the damper on that story. The way "Dicky" knocks the police and "army" about the landscape will amuse the proletariat. He just pushes the "army" about at will. He also shows some of our embryonic second story workers how easy it is to get out of a cell. The action is a trifle too obvious in spots, but the climax is a real surprise and well worked up.

Oliver Hardy as the Commandante is amusing at times. There are a few thrilling moments, especially the capture of the spy and Dicky's escape from jail. "Fortune's Mask" is a fair program picture.

The Cast

Ramon Olivarra, alias "Dicky Maloney".....Earle Williams
Pasa Ortiz.....Patsy Ruth Miller
Losada.....Henry Hebert
General Pilar.....Milton Ross
Madame Ortiz.....Eugenie Ford
Vicenti.....Arthur Tavares
Espiration.....Frank Whitson
Chief of Police.....Oliver Hardy
Captain Cronin.....William McCall

Adapted from O. Henry's "Cabbages and Kings." Directed by Robert Ensminger. Scenario by C. Graham Baker. Photographed by Steve Smith.

The Story—The familiar tropical republic plot. The president is murdered. His son is brought back from the States incognito. Under the name of "Dicky Maloney," he becomes the idol of the people. After a series of thrilling adventures, the son is acclaimed the "man of the hour"—and president.

Classification—A fast moving romance with a tropical locale, filled with the impossible, but nevertheless entertaining.

Production Highlights—The murder of the president starts the picture off with action. Patsy Ruth Miller's characterization of the senorita. The capture of the spy. "Dicky's" escape from jail. The surprise climax. Some fair exterior sets.

Exploitation Angles—The tropical atmosphere of this picture will give you an opportunity to decorate your lobby in Spanish fashion, palms, flags, ticket-taker dressed in uniform of Central American officer, the main feature of which is usually about a million medals and a bright sash. Dress your girl ushers as Spanish senoritas. A Spanish dance prologue will be appropriate. The star's popularity and Patsy Ruth Miller's following.

Drawing Power—Suitable for second class, downtown houses, neighborhood theatres and small towns.

"The Heart of a Texan"

William Steiner Production—Five Reels

(Reviewed by D. I. Gest)

THERE is nothing startlingly new in "The Heart of a Texan," a typical Western melodrama of the cattle-rustling days. However, there is plenty of action crowded into its five reels and it should take well with lovers of Westerns.

Neal Hart in the chivalrous role of "King" Calhoun has many opportunities to display his ability as a two-fisted fighting man and with the shooting irons.

The plot of "Heart of a Texan" is too apparent, and too inconsistent at times, from a strictly technical viewpoint. But those things are too deep for Western fans. Action is the thing with them and there is action aplenty in "The Heart of a Texan."

The Cast

King Calhoun.....Neal Hart
Pete Miller.....William Quinn
Ma Jackson.....Sarah Bindley
June Jackson.....Hazel Maye
Link.....Yakima Conutt
Comanche Horse.....Ben Corbett

Author—James Britton. Scenario by Paul Hurst. Directed by Paul Hurst. Distributed by William Steiner Productions.

The Story—King Calhoun, son of an old Texan family, learns that outlaws are preparing to raid the Jackson ranch and carry off June, the beautiful daughter of Ma Jackson. Previously Calhoun had saved the girl from the leader of the outlaws. With volunteers recruited from neighboring ranches Calhoun prepares to defend the Jackson home. Amid the attack he rides off with a dummy. The outlaws, thinking he has June, pursue. Learning of his ruse they are determined to kill him, but he gets back to the ranch and saves June as his men rout the outlaws.

Production Highlights—The seige of the Jackson ranch. Calhoun's flight with the dummy as the outlaws give chase.

Classification—Western melodrama filled with the usual stock situations.

Exploitation Angles—Bill this as a vigorous type of western melodrama. Make use of the title for a tie-up with your paper. A cowboy executing lariat stunts will help in a prologue.

Drawing Power—This will please the average follower of Westerns. Neal Hart has a following and in using his name prominently where you are sure of him—you should get adequate returns. Don't promise them anything big.

"The Light in the Dark"

First National—5600 Feet

(Reviewed by Lillian Gale)

"THE LIGHT IN THE DARK" may be described as a thoroughly satisfactory production founded upon a worth-while story, incorporating a popular theme, from which the title is taken—a photoplay teeming with romance and equipped with enjoyable melodramatic incident.

Surrounded by a flawless cast, Hope Hampton delivers the best characterization of any role assigned her to date. She has been supplied with a starring vehicle that offers a star part which has brought out evidence of her ability as an actress to compare favorably with her acknowledged beauty. Miss Hampton's improvement over previous efforts is bound to command favorable comment.

Foremost, considering the production as a whole, is the introduction of a color process unprecedented in perfection. It is used, in this instance, to accentuate the sub-plot or integral story from the main theme. It is likely to create a sensation and inasmuch as it registers color as accurately as the eye, it illustrates Miss Hampton's natural coloring and displays this attribute to extreme advantage. Needless to say, the photography is necessarily A-1 to keep an even pace with the reel of color work.

The story is an interesting departure from the cut and dried starring vehicle, inasmuch as it has required a cast and real players. For instance, the role of Tony Pantelli, a thief by nature and choice, but with a heart of gold, is a "made to order" for Lon Chaney, who delivers his usual splendid performance. Then comes a toss-up for favor between Dore Davidson, who makes a small part stand out with marked distinction and Edgar Norton, valet to a man of wealth and fancies, ably portrayed by E. K. Lincoln.

This picture will appeal, primarily, to patrons who seek altogether clean entertainment, but which has not suffered a loss of character because of an attempt to avoid censors. It is romantic enough for the young, serious enough for the studios and produced with marked consideration for picture goers who demand the best.

The Cast

Bessie MacGregor.....Hope Hampton
J. Warburton Ashe.....E. K. Lincoln
Tony Pantelli.....Lon Chaney
Mrs. Templeton Orrin.....Theresa Maxwell Conover
Mrs. Callerty.....Dorothy Walters
Detective Braenders.....Chas. Mussett
Peters.....Edgar Norton
Jerusalem Mike.....Dore Davidson

Story by William Dudley Pelley. Directed by Clarence L. Brown. Photography by Alfred Ortlieb.

The Story—Has to do with accident of poor girl, who finds home with rich people responsible for misfortune. Brother of rich woman trifle's with affections of the girl, tires and seeks diversion abroad. Poor girl, forced to fight for existence, meets professional thief in third-rate boarding house where she lies ill. Meantime, rich man has returned with cup alleged to have healing power, which introduces the theme of the Holy Grail, and illustrates the power of Faith.

Classification—Romantic, historic, yet thoroughly modern drama, cross between society drama and life in the underworld.

Production Highlights—Entire reel which tells integral story of Holy Grail. Another big moment when police raid pawn shop. Well worked up suspense when Tony makes second theft of cup.

"East Is West"

(Schenck-Talmadge-First National—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS play was bound to reach the screen! The favorite story of the unbreakable barrier of East versus West—the fact that it had an unusually long run on Broadway, the fact that it contains a fine romance and atmosphere—these qualities which build popularity have made it one of the hits of the season as a photoplay. It is easily Constance Talmadge's finest achievement and her greatest portrayal since the mountain maid in "Tolerance." Frances Marion's script adheres to the original in all the important episodes and incident. If there is any departure it is to give scope to the camera—such as collecting the Chinese atmosphere and the enchanting scene of the love boat when the heroine is placed on the auction block to be sold to the highest bidder.

The picture carries so much charm, so much opulence, that even if you saw the play you are certain to call the new version a greater achievement insofar as its background and atmosphere are concerned. The story of the Chinese girl who escapes from a horrible marriage through the aid of a friendly American youth is familiar to most everyone. How she reaches San Francisco—how she learns American manners and slang—how she nearly becomes the property of the influential king of Chinatown, Charlie Yong—how she is rescued again by her Occidental benefactor and taken to his home and accepted by his parents when it is proven that she is a white girl stolen from missionaries—these points are well established in scenes of perfect continuity.

The photography is of a de luxe quality, and through it Constance Talmadge radiates a gifted expression. A black wig cut in Chinese fashion enhances her features. She will delight her following and establish a greater audience for her pictures than ever. Sydney Franklin has brought forth the glamour of the East in vivid style. His Chinatown is truly atmospheric. And the manner in which he guides the players shows that he had his eye upon the correct dramatic values. Witness Warner Oland as Charlie Yong, the "heavy" of the story. This capable character actor, who can interpret the Chinaman more realistically than any other player, will receive an ovation everywhere. Some scenes could be shortened, particularly those which emphasize the comedy relief of the dance hall and Ming Toy's penchant for chewing gum.

In all it is a picture which should make a barrel of money. It carries the breath of romance and charm and we catalogue it as a sure-fire hit. Dust off your S. R. O. sign.

The Cast

Ming Toy.....Constance Talmadge
Lo Sang Kee.....E. A. Warren
Hop Toy.....Frank Lanning
Billy Benson.....Edward Burns
Jimmy Potter.....Nigel Barrie
Mr. Benson.....Winter Hall
Mrs. Benson.....Lillian Lawrence
Charlie Yong.....Warner Oland

By John Hymer and Samuel Shipman, Scenario by Frances Marion. Directed by Sydney Franklin. Produced by Joseph M. Schenck. Distributed by First National.

The Story—Ming Toy, supposedly a Chinese girl, escapes from her evil guardian through the aid of an American youth. She reaches San Francisco and is introduced as the charge of a friendly Chinaman. Her beauty attracts king of Chinatown, but when he attempts to take her away, the American youth arrives and befriends her. He places her in his home and his parents become reconciled to his desire to marry her when it is proven that she is a white girl.

Classification—Romance taking in the Orient and Occident. Based upon elimination of barrier of East versus West. Considerable love interest and some melodrama.

Production Highlights—The star's best performance since "Intolerance." The fine work of Warner Oland as Charlie Yong, approaching George Nash's portrayal in stage play. The fine atmosphere and photography.

In the Weber and North offering "The Curse of Drink" Harry Morey, old favorite, is the central figure.

West of the Pecos

William Steiner Production—Five Reels

(Reviewed by D. I. Gest)

"WEST OF THE PECOS" gives Neal Hart plenty of opportunity to show his versatile accomplishments. The story is one that has often been told of the West, the troubles of the early settlers with the outlaws and claim jumpers of the prairie schooner days. But it is very well done. Helen Mayo handles her part very well as does the little prairie child.

The story, scenario and direction were all by Neal Hart and of course he has the star part of Jack Laramie, the hero. Hart has a large following among the picture fans, especially in the small towns and neighborhood houses, and they most certainly should have no fault to find with their idol in this one. There is much vigorous action and thrills aplenty.

There is plenty of beautiful scenery throughout the picture. The drama is handled with pleasing directness and is not long drawn out.

The Cast

Jack Laramie.....Neal Hart
Chuck Wallace.....William Quinn
Joe Madison.....Max Wessel
Mrs. Osborne.....Sarah Bindley
June Osborne.....Helen Mayo
Wolf Bradley.....Ben Corbett

Story and scenario by Neal Hart. Directed by Neal Hart. Distributed by William Steiner Productions.

The Story—The United States marshal in the southwest learns that a man and son have been killed in a raid by outlaws on their home and that the bandits have carried off the daughter, June Osborne. He rushes his best man, Jack Laramie, to the scene under orders to round up the band at any cost. Jack en route rescues a little girl, whose parents have been killed while crossing the prairie to stake out a new home. Laramie drops into a cafe and there learns the identity of the outlaw gang and the place where June is imprisoned. That night he descends upon the cottage, shoots June's captor and later brings about the arrest of the other bandits. He claims June for his bride and they decide to take the little prairie girl into their home.

Production Highlights—The rescue of the little girl on the prairie by Laramie. His raid upon the cottage where June is held prisoner. The round up of the outlaw band.

Classification—Western melodrama featuring the outlaw raids and the stamping out of villainy by government agents. Love interest and thrills abound.

Exploitation Angles—Since Neal Hart has a definite following among small town patrons, be sure to play him up. Bill it as an "up and at 'em" western, filled with characteristic action and thrills. Use your cowboy quartette for a prologue.

Drawing Power—Likely to please small town and neighborhood houses. If public is not tired of usual westerns this one will get over.

"Remembrance"

Goldwyn—5650 Feet

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

IT is with a deep feeling of reverence that we take our pen in hand to comment on what will undoubtedly be one of the most talked of pictures of the new season. Here is a feature so far above the usual run of filmplays that it sets a new standard. There is only one word applicable to it and that is—masterpiece. This is a photoplay in which "Dad" comes into his own. The screen has been inundated with mother stuff. It is therefore eminently fitting that father should have a chance. Well, he gets it in "Remembrance," which is one of the finest things Goldwyn or any other company has ever contributed to the literature of the silent art.

A niche in the film hall of fame must needs be set aside for Claude Gillingwater who as John P. Grout, the "pop" of the story, gives the shadowstage one of its truly great characterizations. This veteran actor makes the role a living, breathing thing. One moment our eyes are moist, the next we are taking part in the rare humor of the comedy moments. This is life stripped bare—life as it is undoubtedly lived in thousands of homes in this land. We predict a real reform around these thousand fireplaces after some folks see "Remembrance." If ever a film drove home a lesson, a forceful moral, it is this one.

All praise to Rupert Hughes for his entertaining story, his transcribing of it to the screen and his flawless direction. The cast is one of uniform excellence. Kate Lester does some of the best work of her long career. Patsy Ruth Miller's smile and charming personality shines throughout the action.

"Remembrance" has been mounted with unusual care in every detail. The sub-titles are unusually expressive and well worded. The scenes during which "Pop" is hanging between life and death and in his delirium tells mother of the old days and how he longs for a word of love are moments that set the heart strings strumming. We recommend "Remembrance" as a 100 per cent. picture. It has everything.

The Cast

Mrs. Grout.....Kate Lester

By Rupert Hughes. Directed by Rupert Hughes. Scenario by Rupert Hughes. Photographed by Nobert Brodin. Art director, Cedric Gibbons.

The Story—Like many other "Pops" John P. Grout has grown old and had almost walked into bankruptcy trying to keep his family in style and his sons out of scrapes. One day he became seriously ill and in his delirium calls on God to save him so that he can work and keep his children out of the poorhouse. When Dad is on the verge of death the family seek the great light. The doctor pulls him through, but the near passing of "Pop" has been the cause of a complete reform of every member of the family.

Classification—A wonderful drama of life as it is lived in many American homes. Characterized by masterful acting on the part of every member of cast.

Production Highlights—The work of Claude Gillingwater as "Pop." The fine support given him. The exquisite comedy moments. The Drawing Power—No matter what the size of your theatre, you can put this one on. Large houses should easily be able to show it a week or longer. This is one of the pictures which signalizes the return of real art in the fifth industry.

"Saved By Radio"

(Russell Productions—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE radio has found its way into the plot of a motion picture in "Saved By Radio."

It is an "up and at 'em" type of story. A sequence of three is given up to a grand melee with George Larkin as the hero, in the midst of every fight, sending out a good right or left, occasionally allowing himself to bite the dust, and emerging triumphant according to the ethics of heroism. The plot introduces a few crude touches—one of which should be stricken out. It shows the hero, pleading with a physician, who no longer practices his profession, to save his mother's life. The doctor refuses and his obstinacy results in his being dragged by the scruff of the neck through the village street and compelled to show some humanity.

We dare say this touch will not please the members of the medical profession who witness it. We also offer the idea that a doctor, whether retired or not, would not so far forget the ethics of his calling. When he enters the sick chamber, there is not a particle of dust on his clothes though he has just been forced to make a dusty trip. This is a jarring note in a melodrama which carries considerable thrill. The doctor has his enemies, yet when the youth, a product of the village made threats against him the natives become exceedingly wrathful and cause the sheriff to imprison him because the medic has disappeared. They do this notwithstanding the presence in their midst of a disreputable stranger and his hirelings. This is also a jarring note though it will likely pass unnoticed because of the physical action which accompanies nearly every scene. There is a punch to the picture—some corking good stunt scenes executed by Larkin, and the atmosphere is first rate. Ditto the photography. The acting is adequate though the star becomes too enthusiastic here and there. The love interest is a side issue. What puts the offering over is the climax and the fact that most of the players are right up on their toes every minute. Call it an adequate audience picture.

The Story—Retired doctor seeks monopoly of shipping enterprises and discharges his honest foreman for interference with his plans. The youth had merely attempted to save his employer from being mulcted by a crooked schemer. When doctor is kidnapped by enemies, the youth is locked up because he made a threat against him. He gets a two-hour reprieve to hunt down the crooks and saves his erstwhile employer by means of radio.

Classification—Melodrama based upon virtue versus villainy, with hero emerging triumphant after overcoming several obstacles. Physical action introduced and incident relating to radio activities.

Production Highlights—Scene when hero climbs down rope over cliff. The radio scenes. The pursuit of the villains escaping in fast launch. The hydroplane scene. The dive of Larkin off the cliff.

Exploitation Angles—This one carries immense exploitation possibilities by means of the radio. The radio stores of your town may be linked up. And if your theatre is equipped with one, by all means use it. Bill it as a fast and exciting melodrama.

Drawing Power—Should draw in all neighborhood houses and especially among followers of the radio. Fans who like them packed with stunts will eat it up.

"Top 'O the Morning"

Universal—4627 Feet

(Reviewed by Lillian Gale)

THIS is built along tried and true lines, works toward a perfectly obvious ending, the culmination of the romance between the rich young American and the Irish colleen who is sort of a princess in disguise and never develops any great amount of suspense but it is the kind of a picture that most of the fans have always voted first class entertainment, so the matter of appraising it is largely one of comparison with what has gone before.

The role of the Irish lass who emigrates to America where her pater has acquired some money and an upstage second wife who doesn't like the stepdaughter, gives Gladys Walton an opportunity for her particular style of portrayal and in it she is winsome, nice looking and vivacious. Harry Meyers as the hero is seen in a less favorable light, since his part gives him little to do. Harry Carter, appearing in the role of the heavy, is somewhat mis-cast.

The production is very well done all the way through. The scenes laid in Ireland are realistic and artistic. The sets for the interiors are all up to standard and the acting of capable cast is excellent. Several storm sequences are more than good.

All in all, this picture ought to get by as light entertainment, suitable for the average fan who likes his pictures clean, wholesome and not too complicated as to story.

The Cast

John Garland.....	Harry Myers
Dot Garland.....	Doreen Turner

Directed by Edward Laemle. Story by Anne Caldwell. Scenario by George Randolph Chester and Wallace Clifton. Photographed by Charles Stumar. Produced by Universal.

The Story—Irish colleen comes to America, where her father is successful, but finding the surroundings of her new home distasteful, runs away. She finds a position with a young widower, whom she has previously met in Ireland, falls in love with him and when the matter of stealing of some bonds of which her brother has been unjustly accused is cleared up, and in which she inadvertently becomes implicated is cleared up, finds that the widower is also in love with her.

Classification—Romantic drama, with a counter plot having to do with the theft of some bonds and an innocent person suspected of stealing them.

Exploitation Possibilities—The Irish atmosphere of the story. The leading characters in the picture, Miss Walton, Harry Myers and Harry Carter. The stage play from which the feature was adapted. Chance for atmospheric prologue and lobby display.

Drawing Power—Recommended for family and fan trade.

"The Valley of Silent Men"

(Cosmopolitan-Paramount—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE'S James Oliver Curwood for you! A glance at the title is sufficient to inform you that you are in for one of his Northwest Mounted formulas. If you have become surfeited with the theme of "get your man" at least the picture offers ample compensation in the most marvelous collection of scenes ever found in a snow feature. Frank Borzage, undoubtedly said to himself "Let's see, this is an ancient idea, why not concentrate entirely upon background?" And he took his company to the Canadian Rockies—up to the country around Banff, and allowed them to work out the faithful pattern against its majestic mountains and glaciers.

The pictorial appeal of "The Valley of Silent Men" is everything here. It actually dwarfs the story which concerns a couple of Mounties chasing a Mountie and the girl of his choice. Borzage has hidden the rusty machinery of the plot fairly well. He starts you off tingling with suspense because of the man hunt. The heroic corporal has been wounded by his "man" and thinking his rescuer is guilty of murder assumes the guilt when he believes his end is near. He miraculously recovers and with his recovery the heroine is introduced. She effects his escape. Since his superior officer is a deadly enemy the latter sends two Mounties in pursuit.

And here comes the pictorial appeal. The rugged mountains, the vast expanse of snow, the treacherous glaciers remarkably beautiful in their ice formations—these fascinate the spectator. The fugitives are lost and nearly succumb but eventually reach a cabin. The Mounties are about to take them back to camp when the girl's father makes a dying confession that he committed the triple crime out of revenge for his wife's death. This touch is arbitrary and wholly convenient. Curwood seldom varies in his plots. Consequently the steady follower of his stories can anticipate the end far in advance.

But hats off to Borzage and his settings. And Alma Rubens makes an attractive heroine. Lew Cody is the hero and you'd never know that once he scoffed at true love when portraying male vamp parts, so easily and naturally does he play his role here.

With Hearst newspaper publicity, a popular author, a fine cast and a tried and true theme, what more can the exhibitor ask for?

The Cast

Marette Radison, a Canadian girl.....	Alma Rubens
Corporal James Kent of the R. N. W. M. P.....	Lew Cody
"Buck" O'Connor.....	Joseph King
Pierre Radison, the father.....	Mario Majeroni
Inspector Kedsty, of the Mounted.....	George Nash
Jacques Radison, the brother.....	J. W. Johnston

By James Oliver Curwood. Scenario by John Lynch. Directed by Frank Borzage. Photographed by Chester Lyons. Produced by Cosmopolitan. Distributed by Paramount.

The Story—Corporal of the Mounted is suspected of murder. While convalescing in friend's cabin, he thinking death is near, assumes the guilt. The Inspector arrests him later, but a girl rescues him and together they escape. A short time after the Inspector is mysteriously murdered. The Mounted pursue the fugitives and capture them. Their freedom is assured when the real assassin confesses to the triple murder.

Classification—Northwest Mounted formula based upon the pursuit of innocent parties. Typically Curwood.

Production Highlights—The majestic scenery caught by Borzage in Canadian Rockies. Truly awe-inspiring. The good work of cast. Scene when fugitives escape over glacier.

Exploitation Angles—Curwood has his followers. So use his name in all billing. Concentrate upon most marvelous scenery ever presented in snow picture. Use title, use ballyhoo and atmosphere.

Drawing Power—Good for all downtown houses and neighborhood houses. Scenery will be advertised by word of mouth.

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

Adds good photography to picture interest—gives that truthful, accurate reproduction that is only possible when the reproductive scale of the positive material parallels that of the negative. That's why Eastman Positive Film carries quality through to the screen.

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base—now available in nine colors, is identified throughout its length by the words "Eastman" "Kodak" stenciled in black letters in the transparent margin.

From Camera to Screen

EXCUSES don't rectify errors. Producers want the best possible work from a film laboratory, not explanations why such excellence is lacking. They want clear durable negatives; honest sample prints giving truthful production records; release prints of highest quality, that last. To obtain this the same laboratory should handle a production from the camera to the screen. Then the responsibility is undivided.

THE foremost producers of the West rely upon THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES for complete service. They realize the advantages of our superior equipment, our fine, new plant, and our efficient organization. They appreciate the meaning of our slogan: "Unlimited Facilities For Quality Work." They know our treatment brings out all the artistry the director and cinematographer have put into a negative.

THE trouble with most costume pictures is that the characters are not made to seem real.

In "To Have and To Hold," George Fitzmaurice has slain the costume bugaboo for once and all.

The people are as real as yourself. The story is so exciting, so full of action, romance, heart-interest and thrills, the people are so human, the cast is so great, the production is so elaborate, that everyone who sees it will have the time of his life.

The novel has been loved for twenty-five years, and it's the greatest action story every filmed.

It's one of the four biggest of the season.

First Run on Broadway

THAT'S THE RECORD FOR

EARL HURD COMEDIES

Presented by C. C. BURR

ONE OL' CAT, the first of the series, during the week of August 20th played its third consecutive week, first run, at the RIVOLI Theatre, and also played day-and-date at the RIALTO Theatre.

FRESH FISH, the second of the series, during the same week of August 20th played its second consecutive week at the STRAND Theatre.

EARL HURD COMEDIES are humorous combinations of living actors and animated cartoons. The cartoons are made to leave the drawing board and mingle in fun and play with living actors.

The series of six are now ready for inspection. Contract for these special one-reel novelties immediately if you want the best in Short Subjects for 1922-23.

Rupert Hughes'

Appealing Drama of American Family Life

YOUR audience is sold on Rupert Hughes!
They like his brand. It hits folks where the heart is.

That's what made "The Old Nest" a box-office wonder that still continues to reap profits.

Rupert Hughes has now written an even bigger drama of American home life, a tender, thrilling yet humorous story of father who pays the bills.

It has the Hughes heart wallop. It has the Hughes audience angle. It has tears, laughs, fights, frolics.

IT HAS EVERYTHING!

If you know a winner when you see it—
That's "Remembrance." Go and get it!

Oh Boy! What a Picture!

Stronger than "The Old Nest"

A picture you will remember forever !

It Has Everything That a Woman

Dirigo Films Inc.
presents

If there happens to be some mean, crabbed, flint-hearted fellow in your city or town who "just hates children" or some poisonous old viper of a woman who sends her children out begging on the streets—well, they won't like "Timothy's Quest." But everybody else will and you will. It's all ready for you to screen to prove how much you'll like it.

KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN'S

Story of the Heart

TIMOTHY'S

Directed by Sidney Olcott

This is the perfectly cast picture—the sweetest story of the entire year in pictures. Helen Rowland, James Depew, Marie Day, Vivia Ogden, Margaret Seddon, Bertram Marburgh—your hats will come off to them for their splendid acting.

derful Picture Should Have

Kate Douglas Wiggin, the beloved author, will weep for joy when she sees her famous story as a motion picture. Her characters now have walked out of the covers of a book. The characters now have walked out of the book and are living beings. Here is a story of the heart, in our opinion, bigger, sweeter, finer than "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." Nobody makes a better picture than "Timothy's Quest" because it can't be done.

QUEST

Scenario by Katherine Stuart

Let us tell you how carefully this famous story was made—the story of two slum children who fled the city to "adopt a mother" and softened an embittered spinster's heart.

Kate Douglas Wiggin watched every phase of converting her story into a picture.

Katherine Stuart, who did "The Cinderella Man," a famous picture, did the continuity.

Sidney Olcott, a refined and human director who loves children, has directed it.

All who have touched it have put their hearts into the picture.

It is big, human, fine. You'll play it in your theatres.

What Tissot, the great painter did twenty years ago when he went to the Holy Land at the order of Samuel S. McClure to paint the lands where religious history began, has been exceeded by this remarkable expedition conceived and financed by the Cincinnati organization of which Albert Krippendorf is President and J. E. Holley, Treasurer and General Manager.

Dr. Holley, who had made two extended trips in previous study and preparation, led the Geographic expedition and was instructed to "get everything to be had" before he returned. This he did, bringing back the most amazing and enthralling motion picture panorama the screen has ever known.

The Voice

Every city, every hill, every river, every sea, every place having mention in the Bible was filmed; Damascus, Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Nazareth, Hebron, Beersheba, Gaza, Joppa, Caesarea, Tyre, Samaria, Shiloh, Jericho. Every mountain and valley, in all more than 1500 places having connection with any part of the Bible, were photographed and it was done with a purpose: to prove that an educational film may be made with tremendous magnetic entertainment values.

If Abraham, or Jacob, or David, or Solomon or Jesus or any other Bible character has been at any of these spots this great series contains pictures of each and all of these places. And not only the places but the people, their habits and customs; whether they work or play, whether they sow, reap or grind; shepherds, peasants, farmers, merchants; every type and their environment are shown in these unusual pictures.

In Canada: Canadian Releasing Corporation, Limited

American Releasing Corporation will distribute, beginning in October at the rate of one each week, fifty-two one reel pictures produced in the Holy Land and showing the actual scenes of every significant place mentioned in the Old and New Testaments. These are so assembled and titled that they eliminate every shred of doctrine, creed or preachment and they are embellished and beautified, with Prizma natural-color and otherwise, to make them both interesting and entertaining.

The time has arrived for the theatre-owners of America to begin a systematic endeavor to build up their businesses by creating new screen audiences. The body of people who will be drawn into theatres by these features are what may be termed the religious and educational forces of the nation.

presents

Of the Land

of the Cradle of Religious History

These amazing pictures will not be booked for private or public showings in any other places until the theatres of the country have had ample opportunity to present them as much as they wish.

We are positive that when these engrossing pictures are run in your theatres that every moral and religious factor in the country will recognize for the first time that there is a real desire on the part of exhibitors to be constructive in the selection of their programs.

We believe that the presentation of these productions will cause a reaction against censorship and the increased agitations for Sunday closing. These pictures on your screen are an evidence of your good faith in making an endeavor to broaden the appeal of your theatre by catering regularly to the conservative, and best elements of your community or neighborhood.

The protection of theatres for a long period against any form of non-theatrical showing is granted by us because it will place in the hands of theatre-owners a subject that will do more to alleviate all of the destructive criticism of motion pictures and the theatres that show them than any single factor ever before known in this industry.

THE MOHICAN'S DAUGHTER

From the Story of Jeess-Uck
by JACK LONDON

Directed by S. E. V. Taylor
Produced by P. T. B. Inc.

EXHIBITORS are getting good box-office results from this Jack London story. This isn't a matter of our saying so; it's a matter of printed record that you read in the box-office report departments in the trade journals.

In Amusements, Minneapolis, you find this:

"Well directed and with a good plot, this picture drew better than any picture we have played in two months. Print in perfect condition."

In Exhibitors Herald you read:

"They surely like this one. I have cleaned up with both of the 'Mohican' pictures—Taylor's Jack London story and Tourneur's. Where does anyone get the idea that an Indian story fails to draw patronage? Play this one without fail."

In Moving Picture World you find:

"A mighty good picture that brought us the business in the middle of an extremely hot spell. We advertised moderately; the patronage was out of proportion to the limited effort we put forth on the story."

This is a business builder and you ought to play it at once.

Lewis J. Selznick offers

16 only

but — the biggest and best sixteen pictures of the year — and time

FOR the year 1922-23 the Selznick Pictures Corporation will produce only SUPER SPECIAL PHOTOPLAYS.

The Star Series, or Program Plan, has been abandoned.

SIXTEEN SUPER SPECIAL PHOTOPLAYS are already definitely planned and in production. It is the aim of Lewis J. Selznick to make these sixteen photoplays the biggest and most important group of pictures of the year.

In their decision to divert from the Program Plan to a policy of SUPER SPECIALS only, the Selznicks are but following the dictates of a demand that is both unmistakable and insistent. No man championed the Star Series system with more vigor than did Lewis J. Selznick at that time when the Star Series enjoyed its early vogue; no man was quicker to realize the present necessity of its abandonment.

Because they represent the definite result of a Selznick production plan which has been many years in the making, Selznick's SIXTEEN SUPER SPECIALS will unquestionably fit present-day exhibitors' needs better than any other group of attractions being offered in the industry.

To this end the Selznick company has been carefully building and perfecting a producing organization capable of excelling in any task, no matter what its magnitude, which may be laid out for it.

For years the Selznick company has kept a vigilant watch over the literary field in its determination to secure the best stories for photoplay production which have been flashed across the market.

Quietly the Selznick company has been outlining scenarios which insure now the has come—novel screen treatment—no matter what the screen situation, and has been experimenting with new technical ideas involving the most advanced methods of lighting and scenic investiture.

With acute care and discrimination the Selznick company has been entering into contracts with screen notables ideally suited for the various parts they are being called upon to play in these SIXTEEN SELZNICK SPECIALS. Every Selznick Picture produced during the season 1922-23 will have in its cast stars of the first magnitude, chosen without restrictions from the motion picture industry at large.

All these careful preparations which have been in the making, not for months but for the past three years, will enable Lewis J. Selznick, first in the industry to advocate screen plays of a real Broadway character, to continue his leadership in the industry by making not only "big" pictures, but the kind of "big" pictures which will insure the exhibitor record business at his box-office.

In this booklet the Selznicks tell you of the first eight of this group of SIXTEEN SUPER SPECIALS. In view of the tremendously big scale upon which each of these features will be produced, it would be well nigh impossible to announce with accuracy the details of a year's entire output. Announcements covering the remaining eight pictures will follow in due time. Selznick Pictures will continue to be distributed by its releasing organization, Select Pictures Corporation. Following its announced policy, Select will also distribute such other high-class product as may be arranged for with the better Independent Producers.

HODKINSON PICTURES

The Practical Fulfilment of a Picture-Ideal

FOR the first three months of the new season, the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation makes one of the most important announcements in its history—an announcement that constitutes in a practical manner the fulfilment of a picture ideal.

In presenting the features and short subjects listed on the succeeding pages, we have sought to give expression to the sense of responsibility which we have always felt toward the Exhibitor, a responsibility that begins with good product and ends only when the full service implied by a HODKINSON CONTRACT has been faithfully and expeditiously performed.

That the Hodkinson policies have met with the full recognition of the Exhibitors of the country is best evidenced by sentiments such as the following which are continually making their appearance in the Box Office Records of the trade press. They are typical of the Exhibitor-attitude toward Hodkinson product and Hodkinson service:

"Have played a great many Hodkinson Pictures, and each one has proved to be a good attraction."

R. H. Durham,
Mission Theatre,
Mt. Vernon, Wash.

"Hodkinson Pictures are the most satisfactory, clean and entertaining, and at a price, too, exhibitors, that enables you to make money."

L. L. Connor, Victory Theatre,
Cambridge, N. Y.

"Hodkinson Pictures are the talk of Bristol. We have never had a poor picture or a poor film since we began receiving prints from your Boston office."

William F. Eddy,
Star Theatre,
Bristol, R. I.

"All Hodkinson Pictures are good, and their prices are right. They don't ask you to give them a share of the theatre to pay the rental."

Charles Holtz,
Princess Theatre,
Danforth, Me.

"I find all Hodkinson's are above the average."

J. E. Higgins,
Majestic Theatre,
Cullom, Ills.

"The fine condition of Hodkinson prints invariably makes it safe to run them even a bit old."

Fred. Hinds,
Cresco Theatre,
Cresco, Ia.

"Hodkinson paper and photographs show up well."

A. S. Kelsted,
Rialto Theatre,
Hood River, Ore.

And so we might go on for many pages. It is significant that not only have Hodkinson Pictures demonstrated their audience-values, but when the Exhibitor goes out of his way to mention the condition of prints, the square-dealing prices and the effectiveness of paper and accessories, it is proof positive that he is getting more than so many feet of film when he buys a Hodkinson Picture, that an element of service goes with the sale which makes for satisfaction.

1000% ADVERTISING VALUE

"Affinities" is an ideal showman's picture. It's a rip-snorting comedy-drama tremendously rich in entertainment values.

It was written by Mary Roberts Rinehart, the author of "Affinities," whose books are known to millions.

It has Colleen Moore, one of the great shining lights of today's galaxy of popular screen stars.

It has John Bowers, that versatile young actor, who has climbed to such heights of popularity that his name has become a great power at the box-office.

"Affinities" has all those values that go to make a big money maker.

"Mind Over Motor" is one of the famous Mary Roberts Rinehart "Tish" comedies that became tremendously popular through the medium of the Saturday Evening Post. Very few writers of today have such an enthusiastic following as Mary Roberts Rinehart.

Her name has become a powerful box-office factor in the moving picture business. Additional advertising value has been added to "Mind Over Motor" through the selection of Trixie Friganza, who plays the lead in this exceptionally amusing photoplay. The American public from Coast to Coast remember Trixie Friganza as one of the greatest comedienues that ever graced the musical comedy stage.

With a good picture and two such business getting names, exhibitors are assured of more than satisfactory returns at the box office.

Next Issue dated OCTOBER

Covers pictures released between March 1 and September 1, 1922

As a subscriber to the NEWS you will receive a copy.

The GUIDE plus a file of the NEWS means that you know everything about every picture released between these dates.

NEW FEATURES

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS on all pictures released for one year—this is arranged on a percentage basis. It is the most complete chart ever compiled. It tells exactly the success of every picture.

An EQUIPMENT SECTION for ready references for the busy theatre man—when you want something you know where to get it.

The entire book is built to help the theatre man. It will save him time and give him all the actual information on all pictures before he books them.

This is what the theatre man wants most.

To the Producer—

THE BOOKING GUIDE is now an integral part of MOTION PICTURE NEWS circulation. The subscription price of MOTION PICTURE NEWS was raised from $2.00 per year to $3.00 per year to include the GUIDE. Every theatre subscriber of the NEWS gets a copy of the GUIDE; 8615 of the last issue were mailed to the exhibitors. There will be a greater number of the next issue distributed.

The following excerpt from a letter received from a theatre owner is typical of the regard in which this publication is held:

“My file of the NEWS is complete back to January, 1921, and I use them constantly since I got the first GUIDE. Salesmen have to stick to facts with a fellow who has the GUIDE backed by a file of the NEWS.”

Play up the pictures that are not being currently advertised. Bring back to mind the campaign you carried on some time ago. Thousands of theatres who could not use them THEN—can use them NOW. Remind them of the “bets” they overlooked.

Dear Mr. Frank:

Upon viewing Harold Lloyd's latest, "Grandma's Boy", I was so overwhelmed and delighted with the general excellence of the production, that I selected it to be the principal screen attraction during the Brooklyn Mark Strand Theatre's Third Anniversary Week, September 10th to 16th.

Appreciating the extent of Lloyd's popularity, and coupling to that, the undeniable furore-creating possibilities of "Grandma's Boy", I feel quite certain that the picture will reach my fullest expectations.

Very truly yours,

Edward L. Hyman

The Isle of Doubt

Wyndham Standing, the star, George Fawcett, Dorothy Mackaill and Warner Richmond. These are the central figures of "The Isle of Doubt."

It starts on Park Avenue and ends on a tropical island where a faithless wife makes her final choice between husband and lover. It combines the appeal of a society drama with the lure and adventure of the South Seas.

The Motion Picture News, September 2nd, says, "This is a picture much above the average of those released by some of the veteran producers. It possesses a cast of the first water. Their names mean something when displayed in advertising."

The first of Playgoers Fall releases, now available.

And Finally

We laid the arguments—given in this series—before a prominent executive, the other day; and he said:

“Your contentions are sound and I agree with you. Furthermore, your principles will win out. The advertiser is buying space more carefully these days. The depression has taught us economy in every way—a new efficiency and seriousness of purpose. Here, in the office, we are just beginning to realize the use of a trade paper by linking it up with our department of distribution, sales and exhibitor service. You will see new methods shortly.”

Which is mightily encouraging.

It is a very simple matter after all—the use of a trade paper by the advertiser.

It should parallel his sales and service effort, that's all.

Right now he is sending forth his salesmen—through the exchange managers—to contract for his pictures. Later and repeatedly throughout the year he will put renewed selling effort in the individual pictures. He issues press-books on each picture; he sends out exploitation men—all to help the exhibitor resell the picture to the public.

All this effort is serious, vital, expensive.

All this effort is also the job of the trade-paper, contracting, play-date realization, exhibitor exploitation service, throughout the year.

But—all the trade paper advertising is permitted to do, in most cases, is merely to announce the picture. There's no further announcement, no further information, no exploitation service—after one month.

And all because the appropriation is spent at the start—because it is made short lived by division—

And by a division that is based upon anything but good advertising principles, economy and good service to the picture and the entire industry.

Midnight Shows for Overflow Crowds!

Read Balaban and Katz wire from Chicago:

“The Masquerader finished the biggest week’s business in the history of the Chicago theatre. Sunday, the last day’s showing, crowds were so immense we were forced to give extra midnight performances to almost full capacity. Never in our experience did a production give such complete satisfaction.”

"The Eternal Flame"

They ought to know a picture when they see one for they are all practical showmen and winners of the National Exploitation Contest last First National Anniversary Week

NORMA TALMADGE has scored another dramatic and artistic triumph!

Such was the consensus of opinion from the eight prize-winning Associated First National exhibitors, after witnessing her latest super-production, "The Eternal Flame," as guests of Joseph M. Schenck. The private showing was held for the exhibitors in Hollywood, which they visited on their tour.

"Miss Talmadge runs the gamut of emotions and reaches the pinnacle of her chosen work," said A. G. Stolte of the A. H. Blank Enterprises, Des Moines, Iowa.

"'The Eternal Flame' is screen literature," said Frank Steffe, after witnessing the preview. "I predict that in my locality it will have a long run and will do the screen an immeasurable good. It is a gem and there is not a slow spot in the 7400 feet."

"The film has a heart appeal that grips and holds one and I predict it will be a tremendous success," was the expression of Ben Davis of the Colonia Theatre, Norwich, New York.

"Marvelous acting and photography, backed by a heart interest story that has no equal, makes 'The Eternal Flame' a masterpiece as well as a magnet that will attract S. R. O. crowds," said Joe Burton of the Star Theatre, Toccoa, Georgia.

O. K. Mason, who represents the Regent Theatre of Wichita, Kansas, was equally vehement in his praise of the film. "It is a wonderful picture, excellently directed and photographed and replete with dramatic value that will please all," he said enthusiastically.

"A brilliant star and a picture the value of which is enhanced through the spending of large sums of money to give it the necessary artistic finish—a film that will satisfy audiences and make money for exhibitors," is the manner in which Alfred Gottesman characterized the picture.

Ralph Lieber, nephew of Robert Lieber, president of Associated First National and Business Manager of the Circle Theatre of Indianapolis, and Nick McMahon, Jr., of Ironton, Ohio, were equally enthusiastic in praising the picture to Mr. Schenck, who asked for candid opinions regarding the production.

Conway Tearle, who plays opposite Miss Talmadge, gives the best performance of his career, say these experts. They also praise Frank Lloyd for his fine direction; Frances Marion for her adaptation and titles, and Tony Gaudio for his photography. The story is adapted from "La Duchesse de Langeais," by Honore de Balzac.

You'll All Agree When You See It!

A FIRST NATIONAL ATTRACTION

Motion Picture News

Information—Please!

THE industry has turned its better side to the public, of late.

And the motion picture, in consequence, stands higher in public esteem.

Mr. Hays has helped a lot.

So has the National Board of Review, with its local efforts to harness the theatre up to its community forces.

The M. P. T. O. A. is going very seriously about its "Public Service" work.

The Better Films Committee campaign inaugurated by Southern Enterprises in Atlanta—and about which Turner Jones writes for MOTION PICTURE NEWS—is so successful that it will be extended not alone throughout the South but undoubtedly duplicated throughout other sections of the country.

All in all, a new seriousness of thought and purpose, manifest within the industry, is naturally making itself manifest to the public eye.

In other words, we are at last giving forth good publicity about ourselves.

Time was when all our publicity was bad.

We became known for stars' salaries, amazing extravagance, easy-made wealth, stock-jobbing, daring production and hectic advertising. It was mighty bad publicity.

Then the war came and the picture enlisted immediately, showed its prowess and became known for its good deeds.

But the stigma of bad publicity remains—to a degree.

In the average mind today two facts seem to stand uppermost—in many a mind they symbolize the picture industry—that we can afford to pay amazing salaries to stars and that we make heaps of money easily.

This is characteristic of the public mind; some generalization, easily received, thoughtlessly accepted, registers and remains with it.

And that is true, unfortunately, of the minds of the most influential citizens.

Today, the generalization has been pretty well broadcasted that we want to be and intend to be good.

But we cannot merely continue to extoll ourselves.

The kind of publicity that is now needed—so it seems, and forcibly so, to the writer—is informative publicity.

A lot of it. Definite figures and facts about the size of the industry and its operation. Definite facts about the making, the distribution and the exhibition of pictures.

The public doesn't know anything about it—except downright misinformation. And that's a very bad situation.

Let us say that the opinion prevails that we make pictures pretty much as we darn please. That isn't a favorable impression. It doesn't rest easily in the minds of mothers and parent-teachers' associations, women's clubs and other social forces for betterment.

But when you add to this the further belief that we make a lot of easy money at this job, that greed is at the bottom of it—well, you have censorship, that's all.

The American public doesn't like a combination like that.

Now, you can sit down with any individual or any association thus minded and get their sympathetic understanding by a simple fact recital of the economics of this business—which, boiled down, means the large risk and heavy struggle to make pictures that please the public well enough to pay.

* * *

What we need is an extensive outpouring of these solid facts.

It can be done. They are interesting enough. There was never so romantic a business as this to the general public.

Other campaigns, much more difficult, have been conducted successfully.

It can be done—

But we can't wait too long.

Wm. J. O'Brien

WHEN William Fox takes off his coat and goes after anything you can always count upon results.

He now is ready to announce Fox Educational Pictures. He had the idea in mind over two years ago; in fact, he was enthusiastic over it and it has been a pet hobby ever since. He addressed the last sales convention of the Fox Film organization at length on the subject and prophesied for the educational picture a very large and important place in the future of motion pictures.

Herbert E. Hancock, who headed the Fox's new department, was placed in charge of the new educational department about a year ago and he has been quietly working overtime ever since. He has a huge staff of camera correspondents covering the world. He issues a scenario on volcanoes, icebergs, flying fish, rubber, coffee, coral, pearls or what not, and in due time the material arrives from the four corners of the world for an up-to-date and complete treatise on a subject at once romantic and instructive.

A goodly sized library is already at hand and releases to the picture theatres begin this month.

We speak prominently here of this new enterprise because we regard it of great fundamental importance. This kind of picture brings the exhibitor, as we have stated before, in sympathetic touch with those community groups which today, unfortunately and wrongly, are often opposing him. And it is just this bridging of the gap—and only this—which will eventually eliminate censorship.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS' colossal production, "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," is to be sent out as a road attraction. This was to be expected considering its proportions. Harry D. Buckley is leaving Los Angeles this week to manage several companies through the principal cities. Headquarters, New York. Simultaneous premieres of the picture will be given in New York and Los Angeles, the film serving as opening attraction for Grauman's new Hollywood theatre. Who is Harry D. Buckley? We advise you that he was former manager of United Artists' exchange on the Coast.

FATTY ARBUCKLE has turned his eyes toward the setting sun. Due to an infection of his hand, the rotund Roscoe, who is now in Tokyo, has given up the remainder of his Oriental trip and will leave shortly for California.

* * *

J. D. WILLIAMS comes to bat with a splendid suggestion —that the 1924 convention of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association be held in Los Angeles. Why not? And why hasn't it been thought of before? The American Bankers met there last year. They enjoyed Studio Land and they learned a lot of practical things about the picture industry. It was a good idea all around. But surely this is a better one. If there's one subject the editors and publishers should know about and don't—and one that we want them to know all about—it is Hollywood and the motion picture.

Mr. Williams asks our advice. But why argue about such an all-around desirability. Let's start it now.

There's Harry Chandler of the Los Angeles Times, and Motley Flint and Frank Garbutt, and a host of others—The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, the Wampas, the Directors' Association, the Southern California Exhibitors' Association, etc. Let the ball start rolling and then let New York get busy!

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

WE are presenting Walter Long to you as a character actor who has made rapid strides since he chased Mae Marsh over the cliff in "The Birth of a Nation." Watch his work in "The Dictator," and "Blood and Sand," and you'll agree with us. Even with Wallace Reid and Rodolph Valentino as the stars, Long put his personality over.

THE National Board of Review uncovers its asterisk in its latest bulletin of meritorious pictures. It tells the world that the Board considers "Above All Law" (formerly known as "Mysteries of India") and "A Tailor Made Man," the Charles Ray-United Artists picture, as particularly exceptional achievements. Other features which are listed include Paramount's "Burning Sands," "The Siren Call," Hodkinson's "Hope," First National's "Skin Deep," and Pathe's "Dusk to Dawn" and "Till We Meet Again." There's a whale of a picture recommended to the adolescents. It is Elmer Clifton's production of the whaling industry among the Quakers, entitled "Down to the Sea in Ships."

THE Physioe Studios, New York, were damaged by fire last Tuesday night to the extent of $100,000. The buildings are located opposite Bellevue Hospital and the nurses and doctors were impressed on emergency duty calming some of the 1,300 patients who were frightened, and keeping order among those able to scramble to the windows for a look at the big blaze and the other dramatic effects such as the fireboats, the department searchlight, the busy firemen, and police reserves.

ABSOLUTELY Mr. Gallagher? Positively Mr. Shean. Paul Lazarus and Kenneth Hodkinson are congratulating each other—Paul having been made sales manager of United Artists and Kenneth, sales manager of Allied Producers.

ABOUT every blue moon an artist comes forward with his or her selection of the country's most beautiful women. Neysa McMein, whose name adorns more than one magazine cover as an artist of feminine pulchritude—whose covers have made her as popular as Gibson, Fisher or Christy—has selected what is, in her opinion, the ten most beautiful women in these United States. Of course we all know that no artist can penetrate into the private walks of life. Beauty flourishes there as much as it does upon the stage or screen or at Bar Harbor and Newport, though it doesn't have the value of publicity. In Miss McMein's list are included Alice Joyce and Mary Pickford. Her choice here will not be disputed.

Heywood Broun, who writes about anything and everything for the New York World, satirizes the artist in a way. He goes to the masculine sex and is stumped after selecting John Barrymore. He is forced to go to the ball field and pick Speaker, Sisler et al.

We rise to remark that he has overlooked the screen. And if you want ten dyed-in-the wool beauties—ten true types who would make Adonis turn green with envy we modestly submit for your inspection and blue ribbon, Bull Montana, Ben Turpin, Slim Summerville, Al Jennings, Walter Long, Tully Marshall, Zalla Pasha, Victor Potel, Louis Wolheim and Glen Cavender. Grace and piquancy, charm and winsomeness are theirs in abundance.

MAURICE BARBER, general manager and secretary of Cinema Finance Corporation, Los Angeles, is on his way to New York to engage in conferences with the different national distributing agencies, and with other interests connected with the picture industry, for the purpose of furthering the constructive work which has been accomplished on the Coast—that of financing and assisting the independent producer in the production of meritorious pictures. Mr. Barber's headquarters will be the Ritz-Carlton.

R. ROTHACKER postcards from London that he will sail for home this week. One of the high lights of his trip abroad is the flight from London to Paris.

AUTHOR! Author! Author! We hope this cry will bring Edward J. Montagne forward to take his bow when his mystery drama, "The Scarlet Hour," is given its premiere in the New York stage the current season. Mr. Montagne is an indefatigable worker. During the past few months he has written several original productions as associate editor of the Selznick scenario department as well as adapting many others to the screen. "The Scarlet Hour" is now in the hands of one of New York's leading theatrical producers.

THRILLS come high these days. Take Andree Peyre for instance. She has just sailed for her dear Paris after completing some punch scenes for the Pathe serial, "The Riddle of the Range," in which Ruth Roland is the star. Mlle. Peyre's record on two continents as an expert and fearless aviator was fully upheld by the exciting part she and her plane played in filming the serial.

W. O'MAHONEY of Educational is in Los Angeles for a short visit with the producing units of the company.

THE Motion Picture Directors' Association staged "Midsummer Night's Dream" a fantastic spectacle in the Hollywood Bowl, the night of the seventh. Major Maurice Campbell is the manager, Frederick Sullivan the producer.

ROSE SHULSINGER, former personal representative to Marion Davies and at the same time publicity writer for International, has deserted the screen temporarily. Miss Shulsinger is now serving in a similar capacity with Robert M. Matts, the owner and guiding spirit in various enterprises whose headquarters are in the Grand Central Palace.

THE weekly list of meritorious pictures submitted by the National Board of Review includes "Broadway Rose," Metro attraction suitable for adult audiences only. United Artists have one, however, which wins the asterisk—namely "The Man Who Played God." Another picture belonging to U. A. recommended for your consideration is "A Woman's Woman." Paramount is reckoned with in "The Valley of Silent Men," while Universal is considered with "Once to Every Boy," which is suggested for the adolescent mind. "Remembrance" is offered too. This is a Goldwyn. The short subjects completing the list are two Pathe reviews and two Educational comedies, "The Speeder," and "That Son of a Sheik."

ALMER R. PEARSON of Pathe has arrived in Los Angeles for a conference with the producing companies releasing under the Pathe banner.

Director Robert G. Vignola (center) directing a scene in "When Knighthood Was in Flower," Cosmopolitan production starring Marion Davies (on the director's right.)

PLAYERS of the screen and stage do not confine their activities to one branch of the industry any more. Time was when those identified with the spoken drama did not care to express themselves through the silver sheet—thinking that they would lose the public's esteem by sinking to what they called—THAT LEVEL. But that was in the long ago and with the exception of John Drew, David Warfield and one of two others who have gone on record as declaring themselves strict adherents to the spoken drama and faithful to the footlights, most of the acting gentry are willing to listen to reason when the camera calls.

Occasionally a screen celebrity has an opportunity of reaching the stage, although if he or she is popular with the picture public and there is no let down in production, there is no reason why the player should want to appear in the flesh. Then again a film player urged on by the voice within him to test his histrionic wares leaves the studio behind him and seeks an engagement in a play.

Here is Sessue Hayakawa who is about to be presented by the Shuberts in a stage play, the rehearsals of which will begin about October 1st in New York. If the play is anything like the memorable picture "The Cheat," one of the best features ever released even if it goes back several years—then the talented Jap is assured of success.

The screen can ill afford to lose such a talented actor. But what is the silent drama's loss, is the spoken drama's gain. It is safe to assume that some day—not so far distant—he will again respond to the camera and give us some of pantomime de luxe.

SCREEN stars do not always employ doubles for hazardous work. Witness the injury to Eugene O'Brien recently. The other day Jack Gilbert, the Fox star, while working in "Where the Heart Lies," was kicked in the face by a horse, necessitating a number of stitches. Production is expected to be resumed in about two weeks. We sincerely hope that Mr. Gilbert has not suffered a serious injury. The entire trade welcomes a speedy recovery.

THE fire chiefs have been in convention in Frisco. Sixty-five of them, including Smoky Joe Martin and Chief Kenlon of the New York department, took part recently in a comedy for the Fox weekly. The wives in the party played 'atmosphere.'

A CLEAR and concise statement of Thomas H. Ince's plans for the forthcoming season is issued in a parchment bulletin. Mr. Ince, over his signature, makes plain that his eight specials, "Skin Deep," "Someone to Love," "The Hottentot," "A Man of Action," "Bell Boy 13," "Jim," "The Brotherhood of Hate," and "The Sunshine Trail," carry the audience value of appealing novelty.

WOULD you know what has become of Ruth Stonehouse? She has been engaged by Premium Pictures Corporation of Portland, Ore., to be featured in its productions.

WHEN a ball player has an off day, one would think that he would give up the cares of business and go fishing like Shuffin' Phil. But you'll invariably find him idling away at a ball park talking shop. Which reminds us that actors are built from the same kind of clay. Douglas Fairbanks had no sooner completed the long grind of work on his "Robin Hood" picture than he wandered over to the Lasky lot and watched them "shoot" some scenes.

Fuel Situation in Theatres Is Not Alarming

News Survey So Far Fails to Show Serious Shortage of Heat Supply

R EPORTS from correspondents of Motion Picture News this week failed to disclose any seriously disturbing facts regarding the fuel supply for theatres this winter. Many theatres have a supply of coal on hand, others have a supply assured, and a large number do not use coal, depending upon municipal heat, oil, or some such source. Only in isolated instances, so far, has the fuel situation been such as to make closing likely.

Unless additional reports from correspondents change the appearance of the situation radically, there is little reason to anticipate any serious disturbance in the industry this winter due to the closing down of theatres.

Detailed reports received to date are as follows:

GREATER BOSTON, MASS.: Seven theatres, Scollay Square, Olympia, Washington Street Olympia, Central Square (Cambridge), Shawmut, Old Howard, Fenway and Exeter, have or are installing oil heat. Nine theatres, New Palace, Olympic, Waldron's Casino, Beacon, Park, Criterion, Loew's Orpheum, Washington and Community Playhouse (Wellesley Hills), are supplied with heat by other companies, and all but one of these is sure of an adequate supply. Nine houses, Bowdoin Square, Grand Opera House, Loew's State, Lancaster, Allston (Allston), Columbia, Melrose (Melrose), Medford (Medford) and Gordon's Olympia (Chelsea) have amounts on hand sufficient to run them well into November, with the promise of a further supply. Three, the Modern, Olympia (Newton) and Fellsway (Medford), have a promise of a supply. The Cobb has gas heat. The Globe has enough for a month, with a promise of more. Eight houses, the Star, National, Matapau, Hyde Park, Gorman's Elite (Walpole), Broadway (Chelsea) and Strand (Waverly), have little or none, and no definite promise of supply.

DES MOINES, IOWA: Coal mine at the edge of town, and there is no worry regarding shortage. H. M. Havner, controller of this mine, owns the building in which the Des Moines theatre is located. The Palace theatre building is owned by the Bankers' Trust Company, which, it is believed, will have no difficulty. The other theatres express no anxiety.

TAMPA, FLA.: Southern Florida has slight need of coal for heating purposes. Most theatres have only gas or electric heaters, and these are seldom used.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.: Four houses, Rialto, Emery, Strand and Shubert Majestic, burn oil. Six houses, Modern, Capitol, Victory, Fay's, Bijou, Gaiety, burn soft coal, but most of them have fair amount on hand, and none express any anxiety concerning their ability to get through the winter.

ALLENTOWN, PA.: Three houses, Colonial, Rialto and Lotus, have a supply on hand and say there is no danger of a shutdown. One, the Victor, obtains heat from a public utilities company. The Strand and Orpheum can burn the very small sizes of anthracite, which are available. Three, the Hippodrome, Pergola and Nedson, have none on hand.

BALTIMORE, MD.: Exhibitors are facing winter season with confidence. Metropolitan, large house under construction, is being

Interesting Facts Relative to Heating Situation

T HIS article is the first of a series to be published in MOTION PICTURE NEWS concerning the heating situation for the coming winter in the motion picture theatres of the country. Further data will be published from week to week, as correspondents' reports come in.

Every effort will be made to make this survey truly representative of actual conditions, by obtaining reports from cities of all sizes and from every section of the country.

rushed for fall opening. Victoria, damaged by fire, is to reopen. Eight others, the Parkside, Colonial, Ruby (formerly the Bunny), York (formerly the Pastime), New Gem, Good Time, Broadway Plaza and Elektra, are reopening. Ten theatres, Rivoli, Idle Hour, Lubin, Wizard, Blue Mouse, Clover, Harford, Apollo, Capitol and Broadway, obtain fuel from a public utilities company. Nine, the Parkside, Grand, Strand, New Pickwick, Walbrook, Rialto, Poplar, Sunset and Goldfield, have varying amounts on hand, and can start the season, at least. Two, the Horn and Aurora, have a full supply on hand. Three, the Grand, Crystal and Aurora, have none on hand.

ST. LOUIS, MO.: Absolutely no danger of coal shortage unless miners suspend work again. There are twenty-one large mines within an hour's drive by truck, and theatres anticipate no difficulty. Eight houses, the Missouri, Casino, Lincoln, Olympia, Comet, Erber's Avenue and Cherokee, have large supplies on hand; in many cases the entire winter's supply. Nine houses, the Shubert-Jefferson, Orpheum, Grand Opera House, Columbia, Strand, American, Rialto, Retina and Melba, are heated by public utilities companies or other buildings, and are amply protected.

CLEVELAND, OHIO: Situation not acute just at this time. Ten downtown houses and many small houses get their heat from the Illuminating Company, including the Stillman, Allen, State, Mall, Orpheum, Strand, Standard, Corona, Gaiety, Cameraphone. Uptown, many theatres, including the Park, Alhambra, Monarch, Circle, Keith's 105th street, all of the houses in the Euclid-East 105th street district, Loew's Liberty, Superior avenue and East 105th street, Manhattan, Superior avenue, get their heat from the city. Reports from neighborhood houses, now being collected, are less favorable. The Wind-a-Meer has none and no prospect of getting any. Exhibitors in eastern Ohio are so near the mines they can always get coal on very short notice.

CADILLAC, MICH.: Lyric, only picture house open, has several weeks' supply on hand, and can burn wood if necessary.

CUMBERLAND, MD.: Supply on hand to run until March. Coal can be trucked in from mine fields if necessary. No shutdowns are anticipated. Three theatres, the Maryland, Capitol and Belvidere, are heated from other sources, and are certain of heat. Two, the Crandall and Leader, are uncertain of supply. The Liberty and New theatres are sure of a supply. Within a fifty-mile radius the situation is as follows: Frostburg, Md.: This is a coal mining center, and all three houses, the Opera House, Lyric and Echart Mines, are sure of a supply. Lonaconning, Md.: Mines one mile away. Opera House and San Toy both sure of supply. Mount Savage, Md.: Majestic sure of supply. Westernport, Md.: Star theatre sure of supply. Piedmont, W. Va.: Opera House and Majestic each sure of supply. Keyser, W. Va.: Music Hall sure of coal from Piedmont.

FARGO, N. D.: Municipal heating plant furnishes heat to practically all houses, and little difficulty is anticipated.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.: Theatres will be able to operate right through winter. Nine houses, Gaiety, Princess, Majestic, Lyric, Vaudette, Amuse-U, Capitol, Strand and Savoy, are furnished heat by the local light, heat and power company, which will be able to give service through winter. The Chatterton and Empress have their own heat, but will have no difficulty. Theatres in the district around Springfield will have slight difficulty, if any, as they are in the heart of a coal belt.

Cleveland Musicians Out; Operators May Go

The threatened strike of motion picture theatre musicians in Cleveland, Ohio, was put into effect this week. On Monday there was no music in any downtown house, with the exception of Reade's Hippodrome, which met the demand of the musicians for a wage of $60 a week. This strike affected all Loew houses.

A general strike of operators also threatens. The Cleveland operators have demanded an increase of wage approximating forty per cent.

The executive committee of the operators' union addressed an open meeting of the Cleveland exhibitors last Thursday afternoon in the Exhibitor League rooms, Cleveland Film Exchange building. An open forum was maintained, questions from the audience being answered by the operator representatives. Thursday night the committee of exhibitors were guests of the operators, where, before a full meeting of operators, the question of wage increase was further discussed. The matter rested with the exhibitors offering the operators an increase of 10 per cent, as opposed to their 40 per cent demand. So far as can be ascertained, the operators have made no definite answer to the exhibitors' proposition at this time. If no agreement can be reached it is expected that there will be a general operators' strike.

Robert Vignola's Mother Dies in Albany

On Labor Day, at her home in Albany, N. Y., the mother of Robert G. Vignola, Cosmopolitan director, died, following a long illness. There was no hope of recovery and the end was not unexpected. The director was at her bedside, as were the other members of the family. Mrs. Vignola is survived by her husband, three sons and a daughter. Interment was in Albany.

Means of Winning Back Community Confidence Discussed by Expert

By Turner Jones

IN the first of this series of articles the general principle was laid down that legislation, patronage, regard and agitation, all reflect the public's knowledge of the facts concerning a given industry. We have all heard and read enough of adverse publicity concerning Hollywood. We have seen taxes raised until here in the South we pay 14.3 per cent of our gross income because of the stories of exorbitant salaries paid and excess profits made within the industry. We have seen censorship laws written upon the statute books of certain states more because of immoral advertisements than because of immoral pictures.

We have built up for ourselves an unenviable reputation which must be lived down. The same tools with which it was built can be used to destroy it, but it will require harder work and every theatre manager will have to contribute his part in honest effort. The prejudices of the people are assiduously cultivated and kept alive by the self-seeking politician, the damagogue and the irresponsible agitator. They are a small and militant minority, but powerful in their influence in the absence of refutation.

We must take the public frankly, candidly and avowedly into our confidence in making it conversant with the facts and problems of our theatres, companies and industry. Our problems must be laid before the public in a favorable manner; we must teach the public constructive means of securing better pictures through cooperation; we must tell the truth about company and industry.

First, we will pick out some of the more glaring cases where an understanding on the part of the public is needed and then will deal with the methods to be used.

During a period of deflation in many businesses our patrons can't understand why we do not immediately reduce admission prices. In some cities ordinances have been passed regulating admission charges. Would a city council be so quick to take this action if the councilmen and the public know that:

Since 1912 Advertising has increased 300%; Union labor has increased 60%; Light, power, fuel increased 80%; Film rental, due to public demand for the luxurious, 350%.

And finally that patronage since 1912, in proportion to population and number of theatres, has decreased 200%.

A certain element of the public desires censorship, because of the large number of children, in the formative period of life, who attend the theatres and see unsuitable pictures. Would not selection and special performances appear a better solution if this element were advised that:

13% of the audiences are under 15 years of age?

28% of the pictures produced in 1921 were suited to this age and that where standardization is impossible that selection will and does work?

The enormous salaries paid stars; excess profits realized by exchanges and theatres; and the fact that we are the "fourth" industry, serve as adequate reasons with legislators for increased taxes. Legislators have an under-

Public Should Know Facts Regarding Business

TELLING the public the truth about the motion picture industry as a means of regaining the confidence and co-operation of the community is recommended in this article by Turner Jones, Public Relations Representative of the Southern Enterprises, Inc., the third of a series of articles written exclusively for the MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Some of the methods employed with great success by Southern Enterprises are here outlined, and can be profitably employed by almost any exhibitor at the present time.

The fourth and last article will be published next week.

standing of business and would like to know:

That very few stars receive the exorbitant salaries we read about, but that a large percentage of these so-called salaries cover production costs, or are received as royalties, etc.

That the margin of profit on the dollar taken in by the theatre is often smaller than that of a soda fountain; that few theatres are today on the right side of the ledger; that the theatre is a local investment and makes local expenditures which compare well with the average retail concern and is therefore as reasonably interested in the development and prosperity of the community.

That the motion picture industry, from the standpoint of value of product at place of manufacture, not only is not the fourth industry, but ranks far down the line.

Many producers, we are informed by reliable sources, have to pay 30 to 60 per cent. for money. Banks are not normally avoiding good business propositions and would listen more favorably to the producer if they were not so unfamiliar with our industry and if they knew:

That our stability is such as to have sustained only a 25% decrease in attendance in 1921 and 5% in 1920.

That we have one of the widest markets known to modern distribution; a risk and profit equalled in few new industries;

That the liquidity of a film compares most favorably with merchandise and is not a frozen credit, etc.

That the demand for our product is next to that of food, etc.

Above are sufficient examples of the broad and growing need for frank statements of fact to the public. Many of our troubles arise from lack of knowledge and misunderstandings, as suggested above, but many more arise from the "mud-slingers." That troubles arising from all three causes can be effectively settled by means of publicity is evidenced by the recent action of the Maryland Bottlers Association. These Bottlers suffered a material decrease in sales at the beginning of each summer, when sales should normally increase, due to the "mud-slinging" of the various city sanitary departments relative to sanitary conditions of the bottling establishments.

The Bottlers Association framed a bill providing sanitary regulations for bottling and had it passed by the state legislature. They then took full pages in the newspapers of the state telling the public what they had done, why it had been done, and something about themselves. They have experienced no trouble in this connection since that time. This is a striking example of squealing the "mud-slinger."

We are considering here in the South a program of work similar to that of the Maryland Bottlers, but it is first necessary that a firm foundation be built before such spectacular methods are used.

In order to lay this foundation we employed two excellent speakers and sent them into the leading cities of the Southern states where they appeared before civic organizations of men and women, religious and educational bodies. Their subject was the motion picture in general. They dealt with its history, growth, uses, problems, and possibilities. They encouraged Better Films Committees and told of accomplishments in other cities.

This can be done in a given city by a local manager equally as well. Civic organizations are interested in the motion picture, they are interested in the policies and aims of local business enterprises and they will listen to you, but you had better know your subject from the time Edward Muybridge photographed the famous trotter "Occident" down to the title of the picture you have booked for the next week, because they ask questions and lots of them.

This is the logical method of creating the necessary interest for follow-up work. It does no good to distribute literature among uninterested people. The next important element of the community to be interested is the newspaper. The editor is interested in advertising and how much free space you get, but seldom is he interested in the policies of your theatre, the problems of your industry, the kind of publicity he accords motion pictures in his news columns, etc.

This can be accomplished best by personal visits which have nothing to do with business, but rather seek his advice upon your relations with the community. Every editor thinks he knows the public better than the public knows itself and will appreciate requests for advice.

If an editor publishes a detrimental statement about motion pictures, which we feel is unjustified or untrue, an interview is sought immediately. Our representative does not abuse the editor, nor call the paper names. He remembers that the editor is human and subject to error, but we do not ignore an injustice. We have found this policy effective in many instances.

We do not use all of the free space accorded us by the papers for "readers," but from time to time devote a portion of it to items of legitimate news about the industry in general which are calculated to give the public a better conception of us. With this end in view we issue a press bulletin, called "One Reel—Issued When We Have News." In this news-letter we do not attempt to exploit an individual picture, theatre or company, but try to sell the motion picture and the industry as institutions.

To do this we clip from trade journals, and elsewhere, items which show the industry co-operating with worthy organizations such as the Red Cross; new and constructive uses of the motion picture in educational, civic and scientific fields; quotations from prominent men and women favorable to us; etc. The theatre manager can accomplish the same end by turning these clippings over to his local newspaper as legitimate news stories.

The manager can also serve the same purpose by giving interviews from time to time concerning the policies of his theatre; the type of pictures which he desires to present; the type of pictures which the public seems to want: the good pictures which are poorly attended. In this way he may hope to bring public sentiment to recognize that progress is dependent upon the patronage and cooperative encouragement of the best.

During an emergency, or time of peculiar agitation, we have found it profitable to take paid advertising space in the newspapers in order to present our side of the question. This policy was most effective in an Alabama city when an evangelist had organized a boycott of the theatres because the theatres refused to close on Sunday at his request.

Another striking example of this method of gaining public sympathy and understanding is that of the Templar Motors Company. Following a business depression of one year ago, it was common talk in Cleveland that the Templar Company was nothing more than a stock-jobbing concern. The Company not only found all sources of credit closed to it, but had difficulty in securing agents to represent it.

The Templar officials decided upon a most drastic campaign of newspaper advertising under the general heading of "Templar Truths," in which they told their story of how they started with plenty of money, how the banks then turned them down until they faced financial starvation. By the time the last ad ran they were enabled to state in display type "The sun is beginning to shine," and today it is shining rather brightly on Templar. There are many methods of securing such constructive publicity.

Where Better Films Committees have been established we find that the local papers permit these committees to edit a short column once a week. This column is usually placed upon the society page, where the theatre could not even buy space, and it offers an excellent opportunity to bring "constructive news" of the industry before the public.

Last year, by working through the state officials, we succeeded in having Motion Pictures designated as the subject for high school debates throughout Georgia. We then prepared, in brief form, material which would be helpful once disseminated, and distributed these little pamphlets to more than two hundred high schools. The results were most gratifying, in that the affirmative won in the vast majority of instances.

Whenever a person or a company decides to attempt to influence public opinion, beautifully printed pamphlets and leaflets attract

Paramount Going Ahead on Valentino Plans

COMPLETE ignorance is professed at the West Coast studios of Famous Players-Lasky regarding any break between that company and Rodolph Valentino, according to a wire from the coast.

Allan Dwan has been engaged to direct Valentino in "The Spanish Cavalier," from a continuity by June Mathis, and Nita Naldi, who appeared with him in "Blood and Sand," has been engaged to play opposite.

It is stated at the studios that Valentino went east on a three weeks' vacation, and that he is expected back in a week.

Meanwhile, Guggenheim, Untermeyer and Marshall, attorneys for Famous Players, have sent a letter to Will H. Hays, which he in turn forwarded to the members of his association, requesting that other companies refrain from entering into a contract with Valentino, pending the hearing of an application for an injunction.

Valentino's contract with Famous Players, including renewal options, has about two and one-half years yet to run.

the first attention. There is probably no quicker way of alienating sympathy and goodwill than to load people up with a mass of literature before their interest is sufficient to cause them to read it. Unread literature is propaganda, while a sympathetically read pamphlet will be a statement of the case.

We have used many methods to awaken this essential first interest. Conferences, to which your entire proposed mailing list is invited, serves to lay a splendid foundation. Individual managers may talk to patrons and friends. A speaker may talk before various organizations, the interest of which is desired. A questionnaire, asking for opinions or criticisms upon different phases of the motion picture, may be mailed rather indiscriminately and a mailing list for literature can then be compiled according to replies.

Once a propaganda mailing list has been compiled we find that the choice of literature, and the use of a minimum amount, is of supreme importance. Today we use only four pamphlets in all and never send more than two to one person. One is the Findings Report of the Southeastern Conference for Better Films, referred to above: a small pamphlet which serves as a guide book for Better Films Committees; a speech of the writer delivered at the Forty-Ninth Annual Conference on Social Work, at Providence, R. I.; and a brief story of the beginning, development and progress of the motion picture.

It does little or no good to distribute literature which denies an idea fixed in the public mind, which offers only reasons against some plan, or is purely negative in its sense. All propaganda must be essentially positive and constructive to be of any value. Everything of this kind which we use is aimed at the community as a unit, written sincerely, so formulated as to avoid the danger of arousing a controversy, and distributed only when our company is ready to stand behind every word of it.

In this office we maintain a file of influential citizens in the leading communities where we supervise the operation of theatres. On each card is indicated the attitude of the individual towards us specifically and towards the industry generally. In this way we are enabled to concentrate upon those who disagree with us and attempt to win their friendship and support. A red tab upon the card of opponent serves as a constant reminder and challenge. Personal interviews, correspondence and appearances before civic organizations are utilized in this work to the fullest possible extent.

There has been a great deal of talk within the industry about using the screens to fight our battles and some costly mistakes have been made in this connection. We believe that the quickest possible method to have the motion picture industry classified as a "public utility" and consequently to lose every vestige of liberty and control, is to throw the screen openly into politics. On the other hand, there is no more powerful method of presenting legitimate facts concerning our industry.

We have adopted the plan of presenting in the form of a trailer a brief, pointed statement, signed by the company, each week. These trailers are routed from theatre to theatre just as a picture would be handled and run for one week at each house regardless of the local policy. The trailers deal with the same subjects discussed above. For example

"An honest tale speeds best being plainly told"—King Richard III.

From week to week we will present: "plainly told" message to our patrons.

This theatre is operated under the supervision of the Southern Enterprises, Inc.

It is our desire to offer entertainment which makes a clean and wholesome contribution to the life of this community and—

To guard against any tendency which may jeopardize any phase of that life.—Southern Enterprises, Inc.

The Photoplay has well-nigh replaced street carnivals, dance halls, cheap vaudeville, and dime novels.

Justice Ben B. Lindsey, of Denver, foremost authority on juvenile delinquency, declares: "All of my experience in the juvenile court is that movies are positively in the interest of morality and good citizenship."

Southern Enterprises, Inc.
"Life is too short in which to make two reputations—" One reason we exhibit only pictures passed by the National Board of Review.

It is not our policy to exhibit pictures based on scandals, criminal acts, or starring people whose sole value is notoriety—such attractions place undue premium upon lawlessness and immorality.

Southern Enterprises, Inc.
By placing before our audiences week after week, facts concerning our industry, policies of company and theatre, and the ideals of the theatre, we hope to accomplish some very real results. When this plan has had time to work out a bit and make its first impressions we expect to discuss specific problems, such as censorship, Sunday laws and taxation.

While we have not progressed far enough as yet with the use of the screen to say definitely what the results will be, we are satisfied that this is the proper and effective approach to the question and are satisfied that any attempt to throw the screen openly into politics will result in legislation, not only to forbid such practice, but to regulate us far more drastically than has been attempted as yet.

Los Angeles as "Dollar-A-Week" Man Saw It

By O. K. MASON, Manager Regent Theatre, Wichita, Kansas

THE past has brought to practically every exhibitor many hardships and discouragements. In fact, I, at times, almost lost confidence in the stability of the motion picture industry and wondered if it would not be policy to take up some other line of endeavor which held out more opportunities for the future.

However, at the most discouraging time of the year, the hot summer season, it was my good fortune to be one of the men who made the trip to Los Angeles as a guest of First National to tour the studios. I am only sorry that all my fellow exhibitors could not have been with us, for this trip has taken from my mind all doubts as to the ultimate future and success of the picture industry, for no business can possibly fail that is backed by the enormous amount of capital, and far more important, the enthusiasm, brains and talent that predominate throughout this organization.

It was a revelation to me to see the un-

Cleveland Film Men Elect New Officers

New officers for the next six months were elected by the Film Board of Trade of Cleveland on Monday, Aug. 28, as follows: Robert Cotton, Fox manager, president; E. C. Holah, Hodkinson, vice president; C. E. Almy, Metro, secretary and treasurer. Howard Christman remains as office secretary.

Following the election of officers, means of preventing the bicycling of film were discussed.

The meeting day has been changed from Friday to Monday.

ending effort and sincerity of purpose that enters into the making of pictures; producers, directors, camera men, actors and everyone connected with the studios seem to be wrapped up in their work and no detail is too small to receive their closest attention.

Instead of a mad scramble of extras, shouting directors and all the hurly-burly we read about, I found an air of business-like efficiency prevailing in every department. One cannot help but feel that the producers realize the importance of their position in the industry and are thoroughly aware of the fact that the future of the business depends upon their ability to give the exhibitor real honest-to-goodness box office attractions. For years we have heard the old story of "fewer and better pictures," but I am sure that in many instances this year will see it a reality.

I could not bring this to a close without at least trying to place in words my appreciation of the wonderful hospitality extended to our party by the First National and every one of their producing organizations, for no crown king of Europe could possibly have received more attention and a heartier welcome than was extended to the dollar-a-week men on their never-to-be-forgotten trip through the First National Studios.

Universal Improving Foreign Distribution

Branch Offices Opened in Continental Cities; "Direct to Exhibitor" Service Planned

DECLARING that the European exhibitor is just where the American exhibitor stood ten years ago because of war stagnation and inefficient distributing methods and expressing it to be his purpose to "re-establish, rebuild, and improve the motion picture situation" abroad, Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Film Manufacturing Company, who is now on the Continent, announced this week well-defined plans to establish throughout Europe a distribution system for Universal product similar in scope and operation to the Universal distributing system in the United States. Branch offices have already been opened in some of the leading Continental cities with native managers in charge. Home talent was engaged in most instances because of their acquaintance with sectional conditions. The European exchanges will be under the direct supervision of Universal's Export Department, of which James V. Bryson is the manager.

In the announcement of the inauguration of Universal's European distributing system it was pointed out that the meaning of "direct to exhibitor" distribution is practically unknown in Europe, film being in most instances distributed through middle men or commission men. These operators, it is explained, very often wait until the picture is well out of date and at bottom price before buying. This results in months' and even years' delay in the exhibition of popular American-made productions. It is well known that, due to the "block" method of booking, the showing of American pictures abroad often takes place from a year to eighteen months subsequent to the date of release in America. In the Universal system of distribution now being established there will be the same liaison between exchange and theatre owner, it is declared, as marks the American distribution field.

■ Dominion Firemen Demand Non-Flame Film

THE Dominion Fire Chiefs' Association, comprising the heads of fire departments in cities and towns throughout Canada, adopted a resolution at its annual convention at Chatham, Ontario, on August 29 calling upon the Dominion, provincial and municipal Governments to take legislative steps to prohibit the use of nitro-cellulose moving picture films in theatres and otherwise after January 1, 1925.

This action followed closely upon the adoption of a similar motion by the annual convention of the Ontario Fire-Fighters' Association, a provincial organization, which met recently in Brantford, Ontario.

Universal further plans to release pictures in Europe practically at the same time as the American release dates. It has been found that all pictures in production in America get certain advance publicity in European trade and fan publications. Usually the force of this publicity is lost because of the long wait between the production period and the exhibition period for the average European theatre. Under Universal's new plan, prints of Universal pictures will reach the European exchanges while the production news and publicity is at its crest, it is declared.

"After four months of study of the European conditions, and after having met and talked with motion picture men in most of the prominent cities of the Continent, I have come to the decision that American capital and aid is needed to re-establish, rebuild and improve the motion picture situation over here," comes the word from Mr. Laemmle.

"I find the public of Europe just as alert and anxious to patronize motion pictures as the public in America, and I find the showmen of Europe just as brainy and capable of being first-class showmen as the exhibitors back home, but I find them hampered by conditions over which they have no control.

"The European exhibitor is just where the American showmen stood ten years ago. This is partly due to war stagnation and partly due to the present European distribution system. And it is my firm belief that if European motion picture men hope to bring conditions up to par with American conditions, they must depend upon American capital, American cooperation and to a great extent upon American films, just as American exhibitors once pulled themselves out of a tough hole depending upon European producers.

"Remembering that it was European film that gave me my start in the motion picture business, and that I owe everything to the European motion picture men who helped me then, I am ready today to return that obligation, and I am pledging Universal support to the European exhibitor in the form of direct and economical service. I aim to make it possible for any European exhibitor to walk into a Universal exchange near his home and book any Universal picture

Black Theatres Lease Quincy House

The Black New England Theatres, Inc., have leased for a long period of years the Quincy Theatre, at Quincy, Mass., to the Hancock Theatre Company, of which Fred Murphy of that city is President.

Mr. Murphy's company operates the theatre that was formerly conducted in opposition to the Quincy theatre.

Capitol Theatres' Chain Managers Meet

An important conference of prominent moving picture theatre men took place at Winnipeg, Manitoba, on August 28, when the heads of the Capitol theatres' chain in Western Canada, operated by the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, gathered with N. L. Nathanson of Toronto, managing director of the corporation, for a final discussion of season's plans and preparations which were to take effect throughout the chain on September 1.

Those present at the conference included Oral Cloakey, manager of the Winnipeg Capitol; J. Muir of Vancouver, B. C., supervisor of Famous Players' theatres in British Columbia; Harry Dahn, manager of the Regina Capitol; John Hazza, manager of the Calgary Capitol and supervisor of other houses, and Henry Nathanson.

Another large film conference in Winnipeg recently was the sales convention of the Canadian Universal Film Company, which was conducted by Clair Hague of Toronto, general manager of Canadian Universal. Those attending included Harry Bernstein of Winnipeg, district manager for Western Canada; George Law, Western representative; Robert Scott, Vancouver branch manager; W. A. Sault, Calgary manager, and W. A. Schwartz.

Beware Confidence Man Impersonating Von Herberg

J. G. Von Herberg, of Jensen & Von Herberg, First National franchise holders of Seattle, Wash., has sent out a warning that a confidence man is traveling around the country representing himself either as Mr. Von Herberg or his brother.

"This man is visiting exhibitors in the East and Middle West and also business men in other lines, such as architects, builders, etc., and I have received three communications in the past few days from those he called upon," said Mr. Von Herberg. "To some he pretends to be my brother and to others he impersonates myself. He has been active around Detroit and New York during the past two weeks. The man's object is to raise money under false pretenses, and persons in the industry are warned against him."

Palmer Photoplay Concern to Produce Pictures

PRODUCTION of motion pictures will be undertaken shortly by the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, in addition to its present activities in the sale of scenarios and the training of writers in screen technique. The offices, which have been located in Los Angeles, were moved on September 1st to the Palmer Building in the heart of the studios in Hollywood.

The corporation offers $1,000 and royalties for acceptable scenarios. To those who can create screen material, even to those who lack a wide reputation or previous experience, a minimum of $1,000 cash will be paid, together with perpetual royalties on the profits of the picture. This arrangement permits photodramatists, for practically the first time, to share in the success of their own creations on the same basis as the novelist and the playwright.

Seek to Collect Music Fee in North Carolina

J. H. MANNING of Raleigh, N. C., has been appointed as North Carolina representative of the American Society of Composers and Authors, and the society is now making its first attempt to collect its fees from the theatre owners of the state.

Reports indicate that the society is meeting with strong opposition, the theatre owners declaring that they will use tax free music only.

The Atlanta office of the society has had a "spotter" around the state of Georgia, and he has found a number of infringements against taxable music, it is said.

Central Theatre Closes as a Picture House

The Central theatre, Broadway and Forty-seventh street, which has been operated by Andrew J. Cobe during the last year as a motion picture theatre for the first run showing of Universal pictures, this week closed its doors as a screen theatre. Its owners, the Shuberts, want it during the coming season for regular stage productions.

During its tenancy by Universal, the Central housed such big pictures as "Foolish Wives," "The Storm," "Human Hearts," "Conflict," "Wild Honey," "No Woman Knows," "Man to Man" and "The Fox."

Mr. Cobe, a veteran theatre manager, has specialized in colorful prologues, lobby displays and street stunts.

Southern Enterprises Retains Exchanges

Notwithstanding persistent reports to the contrary, Southern Enterprises will retain operation of the five exchanges in the South for the distribution of Paramount Pictures.

That is the substance of a statement of Y. F. Freeman, vice-president and general manager of the concern, who also added that there will be no change in policy or personnel of the present organization.

The organization will even be further extended by the opening of an exchange in Memphis, Tenn., to handle distribution in that territory.

Real Picture Romance in Atlanta

Miss Anna Eugene Aiken, publisher of the Weekly Film Review of Atlanta, Ga., and Willard C. Patterson, manager of the Metropolitan and Criterion Theatres, Atlanta, have announced their engagement, the ceremony to take place early in September.

Both Miss Aiken and Mr. Patterson are well known both locally and nationally for their motion picture work. Mr. Patterson being known as the "Wizard of the South."

Wilmington Sunday Lid Is Slightly Lifted

Wilmington, Ohio, has just experienced its second "blue Sunday." Mayor Greene last week closed up everything in the town. This week he has slightly loosened the reins. He will now permit the operation of taxicabs, and the operation of gasoline stations "in cases of necessity."

Hope to Avert Operators' Strike by Arbitration

The expiration of an agreement, under which Baltimore projection room operators have been working, is said to have been followed by a demand for increased wages. The establishment of an open shop has been predicted by some of the exhibitors in the Maryland city.

The present scale is 85 cents an hour, with time and a half for supper hour work. The union demands call for 95 cents an hour with the same overtime provision, while exhibitors of the city, represented by the Exhibitors' League of Maryland, are insisting on a reduction of the scale to 65 cents an hour.

Agreement was reached between Frank H. Durkee, president of the League, and George Kingston Howard, head of the union in Baltimore, it is understood, to appoint an arbitration committee by the decision of which both sides would abide. One member was to be named by each group, with the understanding that should they be unable to agree a third man will be selected by both.

The exhibitors are prepared, it is understood, to replace union men in many instances with non-union operators, and begin at once upon the training of other men.

Missouri M.P.T.O. Out for Lower Film Rentals

Another blow of the hammer will be struck upon the head of lower film rentals in an effort to drive this problem to the goal at the fall convention of the M. P. T. O. Missouri, for which a number of cities are bidding earnestly and for which a date and place will be announced soon. The selection of the city for the convention will depend largely upon the plans of Will Hays and Sydney Cohen, both of whom are expected to attend. St. Joseph, Joplin, Sedalia, Excelsior Springs, Booneville and Popular Bluff have entered a lively bidding contest for the convention and one of the largest attendances in recent years is anticipated.

A new feature in the way of a convention probably will be introduced, that of holding a state convention of Missouri exchanges in conjunction with the exhibitors' meetings. It is believed that such a meeting would be a great step towards a harmonious state of co-operation between exhibitors and exchanges. The suggestion, which came from Harry Graham, president of the Kansas City Film Board of Trade and manager of the Pathe Kansas City branch office, is regarded with great approval.

Globe Sees Encouragement in Loew Situation

THE financial department of the New York Globe has the following to say regarding the condition of Loew's, Inc.: "Resumption of dividends on Loew's is reported as the incentive for the advance in the stock. The company's programme of construction was completed last April except for a theatre in San Francisco. This, however, is now in operation. The company is thus relieved of the burden of these unproductive commitments which have now become remunerative producers. Since August, 1921, it has strengthened its position by paying off $2,200,000 bank loans and reducing its construction loans from approximately $1,100,000 to $150,000. The total loans paid off is said to be in the neighborhood of $4,500,000."

Cosmopolitan Leases N. Y. Criterion

THE Cosmopolitan Corporation, presenting Cosmopolitan Productions, has leased the Criterion theatre, New York, from Paramount and will take over the house on September 10. The first attraction will be Cosmopolitan's picturization of the famous romantic play, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," starring Marion Davis. It will remain at the Criterion indefinitely.

The Criterion's present attraction will close at midnight on September 9, and immediately an army of craftsmen, under direction of Joseph Urban, will proceed to remodel and redecorate the theatre to correspond with the period of the picture.

A "Punctured Prince" Will Feature "Bull" Montana

Work has been begun at the Metro, Hollywood Studios, on "A Punctured Prince," the second of a series of eight comedies, featuring "Bull" Montana. Hughie Fay is directing the series.

"A Punctured Prince" is an original story by Hunt Stromberg in which the hero rises from a restaurant cook to the top of the social ladder.

J. R. Lockwood has charge of the camera work and Coy Watson is assistant director. Del Andrews is production manager.

Webb Completes Whitman Bennett Contract

Kenneth Webb, who, during the past two years, has directed for the Whitman Bennett organization, has concluded his contract with that concern. After a two weeks' motor trip he will announce his future plans.

New Concern Will Aid Independents

Aronson Launches Organization Devoted to All Branches of Service

NEWS of interest to independent producers of motion pictures is contained in the announcement by Alexander S. Aronson of the launching of an extensive business organization devoted entirely to important services to the independent producer seeking adequate distributing arrangements.

Aronson resigned as General Sales Manager and Vice-President of Goldwyn Distributing Corporation earlier in the year to perfect the details of his own company to render service to independent producers in placing product for distribution, controlling sales, auditing, field selling and in other departments that combine to make his organization unique in the field and a complete business aide to producers.

Because of his intimate knowledge of all the factors that concern distribution not only by the old line distributors but also by independent distributors, and in the state right market, Mr. Aronson is qualified to place product to advantage and with the highest degree of security to the independent picture men. In addition to arranging distribution this unique organization will control all sales by the approval of contracts, by enforcing play dates and through a competent auditing staff in the field it will check up local exchanges so that the independent may secure what is coming to him from each booking.

Mr. Aronson states that his organization will work actively in the field watching every first run situation and conferring with the distributor's selling force in the exchanges so that product may be placed in the theatres with the maximum benefit to the producer and so that unsold territories may be followed up.

A capable foreign department will look after the distribution of world rights on independent product, and in this important field the producer will know that he has sold his pictures to the utmost advantage. Other departments of the new company include exploitation in which competent men will thoroughly exploit product requiring this sales stimulation and will act in conjunction with the exploitation departments of the releasing organizations.

Another department will concern itself with the booking of stars or featured players for personal appearances over periods of weeks or months, either with or without accompanying productions.

A. E. to Release "Face to Face" September 17th

Playgoers Pictures announces the release on September 17th of "Face to Face," a mystery drama in five parts. The central figure in the production is Marguerite Marsh. Playing opposite Miss Marsh is Coit Albertson. Edna Holman, Joseph Marba, Frances White, Richard Stewart and William Kendall are other popular players who have important roles.

"The Famous Mrs. Fair" Has Been Purchased by Metro

METRO announces the second of two purchases of theatrical hits. The first was "Captain Applejack," the Walter Hackett play, upon which actual studio work has been begun. The second, just announced, is "The Famous Mrs. Fair," by James Forbes.

Fred Niblo will direct both photoplays which will be presented by Louis B. Mayer for distribution by Metro.

To Handle Series of Biblical Films

American Releasing Contracts For 52 Geographic One-Reel Subjects

CONTRACTS have been signed for the distribution of a series of fifty-two one-reel motion pictures of the Bible produced by the Geographic Film Company, Inc., of Cincinnati, and taken by an expedition that for many months has been in the depths of the Arabian desert beyond the Tigris and Euphrates rivers, it was announced this week by American Releasing Corporation.

What Tissot, the great painter did twenty years ago when he went to the Holy Land at the order of S. S. McClure to paint the lands where religious history began, has been exceeded by this remarkable expedition conceived and financed by the Cincinnati organization of which Albert Krippendorf is president and J. E. Holley, treasurer and general manager. Dr. Holley, who had made two extended trips in previous study and preparation, led the Geographic expedition and was instructed to "get everything to be had" before he returned.

Every city, every hill, every river, every sea, every place having mention in the Bible was filmed: Damascus, Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Nazareth, Hebron, Bersheba, Gaza, Joppa, Caesarea, Tyre, Samaria, Shiloh, Jericho. Every mountain and valley, in all more than 1,500 places having connection with any part of the Bible, were photographed, and it was done with a purpose: to prove that an educational film may be made with tremendous entertainment values.

This series taken by Dr. Holley's expedition is called basically "The Voice of the Land," and it consists of fifty-two reels to be released at the rate of one each week for a year, embellished throughout in Prizma natural-color photography. This is not a sectarian series of productions; it is a vast, cumulative history of the very cradle of civilization's foundation period or era.

To dispel the idea that this huge work is designed for religious or sectarian distribution, announcement is made by American Releasing Corporation that the churches and organizations of America, with a first interest in the series, have not only preferred but insisted that the series shall be sold to and shown in the regular picture theatres first, ahead of showing anywhere else, and American also announces that no individual one-reel production out of the series can be shown in or be offered to any non-theatrical channel of presentation for four months from the release date of each individual unit of the program.

Selznick Picture Playing at N.Y. Criterion

"Love Is an Awful Thing," Selznick's latest Owen Moore comedy special, opened an engagement at the Criterion theatre, New York, on Sunday, September 3rd.

"Love Is an Awful Thing" was directed by Victor Heerman, who is also the author of the story. The cast includes Marjorie Daw, Snits Edwards, Alice Howell, Charlotte Mineau, Katherine Perry and Douglas Carter.

Neal Alexander Is Engaged by Warner Brothers

Something of a precedent in motion picture production was created this week by S. L. and Jack Warner and Harry Rapf, when Alexander Neal, well known comedy scenarist, was added to the scenario department. Neal is a specialist in injecting the requisite amount of humor into serious screen plays.

He has been delegated to the task of placing light touches into "Brass," the Charles G. Norris novel of marriage and divorce; "The Beautiful and Damned," F. Scott Fitzgerald's tirade against the modern flapper; "Main Street," Sinclair Lewis' novel of rural America, and "Little Church Around the Corner," by Marion Russell.

Lesser On Way to New York for Road-Show Campaign

Sol Lesser is expected to arrive in New York within a few days with plans for a road-show campaign with Jackie Coogan's latest picture, "Oliver Twist."

According to the announcement, the film executive will establish headquarters in his New York offices, and the picture will be released about the first of October.

It is said that plans are under way to organize from thirty to forty road shows which will tour the country simultaneously, leaving New York, Chicago and Los Angeles at the same time. Practically every principal city in the United States and Canada will be visited with the Coogan production during the holiday season. Picture houses will not be played exclusively, as arrangements will be made to show the picture in many legitimate houses as well. The booking will be open to all.

"Oliver Twist," directed by Frank Lloyd, is in eight reels and will be released in that length. The cast of players supporting Jackie Coogan includes Lon Chaney, Gladys Brockwell, George Siegmann, Lionel Belmore, Carl Stockdale and a host of others equally as popular.

Jess Robins to Produce on Coast; Not in New York

Jess Robins, the Vitagraph producer, will make his next feature on the coast instead of in New York, as originally planned. Edward Horton, who played in the principal roles in "Too Much Business" and "The Ladder Jinx," two of Jess Robins' productions for Vitagraph, will again play leading man in the forthcoming feature.

Scenes from "When Knighthood Was in Flower," Cosmopolitan production starring Marion Davies under the direction of Robert G. Vignola, which is scheduled for premier at the Criterion theatre, New York, on September 14th.

Paramount Office at Sioux Falls and Wilkes-Barre

PARAMOUNT announces the opening of two new exchanges, one at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and the other at Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

The Wilkes-Barre exchange is located at 62-66 State Street and is under the management of Earle W. Sweigert, formerly sales manager at the Philadelphia office, and Edward J. McMullen is office manager. The Wilkes-Barre territory is included in the Philadelphia district, of which W. E. Smith is district manager.

The new Sioux Falls exchange will be under the management of A. B. Leak, the territory being included in the Minneapolis district, presided over by Philip Reisman, district manager.

Harry Carey Begins "The One Man" for F. B. O.

Harry Carey has started production on "The One Man," his third starring vehicle for F. B. O. release, at the R-C Studios.

"The One Man" is an adaptation of a story of the same name by Elizabeth Dejeans, which has appeared in the "Blue Book" magazine. Vola Vale is cast in the leading feminine role, and Cullen Landis plays one of the important roles.

In the supporting cast are included Myrtle Leadman, Charles J. LeMoine, Winifred Bryson, Joseph Harris and Donald MacDonald. The cast is not yet fully completed.

"The One Man" is being directed by Val Paul, with William Thornley and Robert McGrasse in charge of the cameras. Beatrice Adams has adapted the story.

Scenes from "Burning Sands," a George Melford production for Paramount, with Wanda Hawley, Robert Cain and Milton Sills.

Pathe Lists September 17 Releases

"Snub" Pollard Is Introduced as Star in Hal Roach Comedy Titled "365 Days"

THE Pathe release schedule for September 17th will introduce "Snub" Pollard as a Hal Roach comedy star. The title of Pollard's first starring vehicle is "365 Days," a fantastic story in which Pollard is said to register effectively in his characteristically humorous vein. "Come and Get Me," another of the Range Rider Series, featuring Leo Maloney, is set for the same date. The September 17th episode release of Ruth Roland's serial, "The Timber Queen," is titled "Human Vultures." A daring leap from the back of a horse to the neck of a maddened bull in an effort to impede the animal's pursuit of the hero is represented in the Pathe announcement as a high-light of the episode's thrills and Miss Roland's hazardous work.

"Bone Dry" is the title of the Hal Roach comedy featuring Paul Parrott. This subject presents the comedian as a detective among a gang of desperate "moonshiners." "The Two Explorers," in which Tom Cat and Jerry Mouse make a balloon voyage, is the title of the Aesop's Film Fable for September 17th. "Trouble and adversity are the true tests of character," is the moral of the fable. "Count the Votes" is the Harold Lloyd re-issue. In this subject Harold acts as a "pinch hitter" for the reform party and not only escapes annihilation on the part of the toughest gang in the town, but neatly turns the tables on them.

Pathe Review No. 173 presents an exciting adventure with a bear in the Rockies. "The Alchemy of Sunlight" shows the actual growth of a plant recorded in "speed visibility" motion pictures. "Shadow Shapes," a black and white little drama, enlivens with "a little nonsense now and then." The great cathedral of Milan is pictured as a veritable epic in stone. The beautiful Pathecolor offering represents the ocean grottoes at Morgat, Brittany, called "The Palaces of the Sea Gods."

In "365 Days" Pollard is the chief of half a hundred heirs of an eccentric rich uncle who insists that the whole bunch, married and single, make their separate homes on a small plot of ground for a period of one year. The heir who sets the best example of domesticity and good nature in these trying circumstances will come into the bulk of the old man's wealth. Space on the lot is too limited, and the other heirs prove so greedy that the hero and his little family find only anchorage for a captive balloon, which supports their house and "grounds." In this situation, "Snub" Pollard's comic tribulations all through those "365 Days" are easier imagined than described.

In "Come and Get Me," with Leo Maloney, hard riding and hard fighting with bare knuckles, together with the exercise of a quick wit, enable the hero to get the better of an intriguing "straw boss" of the ranch, and win the owner's daughter. When his rival accuses him of robbing the owner's desk is when the hero says, "Come and Get Me." General acceptance of the invitation makes this a notable opportunity for Leo Maloney to ride and fight his way through to a triumphant denouement.

Rockett - Naylor Company Changes Name

The company picturing "The Life of Abraham Lincoln" announces a change in its corporate name from Rockett-Naylor Productions, Incorporated, to the Rockett-Lincoln Film Company.

David H. Naylor, Jr., retires from the presidency and all connections with the company and is succeeded by R. R. Rockett as president, while Al. Rockett succeeds his brother as vice president.

"Snow Shoe Trail" F. B. O. Release

Jane Novak Star of Chester Bennett Production Now Being Offered

"THE SNOW SHOE TRAIL," a Chester Bennett production starring Jane Novak, is the current attraction offered by the Film Booking Offices of America, the picture being scheduled for mid-September release. "The Snow Shoe Trail" is the third of the F. B. O. "Box Office Ten," with which that company is opening the Fall season.

Following "Colleen of the Pines," this new Chester Bennett production will, it is stated, further enhance Miss Novak's reputation as a star in her own right. It is a story of the Northwest which combines a goodly number of society scenes in the earlier reels. The star plays the part of a young girl of a large American city who goes to the North in search of a fiancé who has disappeared. Her adventures in the land of the big snows form a large part of the action, which is brought to a thrilling climax by the rescue of the star from the brink of the falls. Incidentally, no "doubles" were used in the filming of this scene, Miss Novak and Roy Stewart, who plays the leading male role, performing the feat in the icy waters themselves, to furnish the necessary thrill.

In supplying Miss Novak with such a leading man as Roy Stewart, Mr. Bennett has answered the demand for a popular male player opposite the star. While the star now has a steady and unflinching following in every city in the country, the appearance of Stewart will be an added attraction, inasmuch as he has often appeared as star in his own productions and has created a definite box office value for his name.

"The Snow Shoe Trail" will follow Harry Carey's "The Kick-Back" on the F. B. O. schedule. Reports from exchanges indicate that Miss Novak has already increased her following in "Colleen of the Pines," and that the advance interest in "The Snow Shoe Trail" is unusually great.

New Appointments to Paramount Exploitation Staff

Claud Saunders, Director of Exploitation for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, announces the appointment of Russell B. Moon, D. H. Finke and Harry C. Eagles to the Paramount exploitation staff.

Moon was former publicity director for the Navy Recruiting Office, and has been assigned to the New Haven territory, succeeding Fred E. Walters, who has been transferred to Indianapolis.

Finke, a former up-state New York exhibitor, has been sent to Albany. Eagles was formerly accessories manager of the Paramount exchange at Seattle, and has been given charge of the exploitation in both the Portland, Ore., and Seattle exchange districts.

"One Week of Love" Will Head Selznick Schedule

"One Week of Love" has been selected to introduce the 1922-23 program of "Selznick Specials." This subject, which is now being cut and titled on the West Coast, co-stars Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle. The subject is reported to have been "lavishly produced." The sets, which are stated to be "out of the ordinary," and artistic lighting effects are represented to be among the features of the production.

Scenes from "The Bells of San Juan," Fox production starring Charles Jones.

Pre-Release Bookings for New Arliss Production

Several important pre-release bookings for George Arliss's feature, "The Man Who Played God," are reported by United Artists' Corporation which will release this production. The general release date has been set for October 8th.

These bookings cover the Eastman theatre, Rochester, N. Y., for the week of September 10th, and the Strand theatre, New York, for the week of October 1st. Other bookings include the Strand theatre, Brooklyn; the Strand, Syracuse; the Strand, Albany; the entire Keith-Proctor-Moss circuit, and the Walter Reade circuit of houses.

"The Man Who Played God" was adapted by Forrest Halsey from Jules Eckert Goodman's play, "The Silent Voice," which was founded on the Gouverneur Morris story of the same title as the picture. Harmon Weight directed this Arliss feature, with Edward C. Morrison assisting. Clark Robinson was the art director, and Harry C. Fishback cameraman.

Child Players in Important Roles in "Penzie"

Several children who have already appeared in screen productions will be included in the cast of "Penzie," which is now in production at the William Fox studios, New York, with Mary Carr in the leading role. As already announced, Miriam Battista, the eight-year-old player who appeared in "Humoresque," will be presented in an important role. Jerry Devine, who gained recognition as one of the children in the prologue of "Over the Hill," and Ernest Hilliard, who has been seen in many recent features, will also appear in children roles.

In "Hungry Hearts," Goldwyn production, screen favorites are found. They include Bryant Washburn, E. A. Warren, Rose Rosanova, Helen Ferguson and Otto Lederer

Pathe to Distribute New Short-Length Series

BEGINNING late in the fall, Pathe will distribute a series of short-length productions presenting striking scenes from important industries in real life. The pictures are reported to have already won the endorsement, in the course of their previews, of the heads of a number of the West Coast industries because of their fidelity and realism in depicting "the gigantic operation of men and machinery." The pictures are further declared to be "designed solely for absorbing public entertainment."

The three subjects thus far delivered are titled "The Price of Progress," "The Royal Chinook," and "Fleeced for Gold." "The Price of Progress" shows the daring chances taken by the foresters in felling the giant trees and getting the timber out of its native environment and ready for shipping, according to the Pathe statement. This subject, and others of the series won the hearty approval of Hamilton Wayne in the Sunday Oregonian of August 6th for both their scenic and educational value.

These pictures are being made by the Fred Kiser Studios, Inc., of Portland, Ore.

British Rights Is Sold on "Rich Men's Wives"

David Tobbutt, of the W. and E. Film Service of London, has secured the rights on "Rich Men's Wives" for the United Kingdom. He concluded the final arrangements with the Al Lichtman Corporation before his departure for England on the Aquitania August 22. He stated that it was the best picture he had seen during his visit to America.

Scenes from "Notoriety," production directed by William Nigh, produced and distributed by L. Laurence Weber and Bobby North.

Universal's Schedule For September

"The Storm" and New Frank Mayo Subject Among Five Features on the List

UNIVERSAL announces five feature releases for the month of September. The schedule is headed by "The Storm," a Jewel production starring House Peters. "Top o' the Morning," starring Gladys Walton, has been set for September 4th. The next release is the Hoot Gibson picture, titled "The Galloping Kid." For September 18th has been scheduled Frank Mayo's new production, "Caught Bluffing." "Confidence," starring Herbert Rawlinson, has been set for September 25th.

"Top o' the Morning" is an Irish romance, showing Miss Walton in the role of a fanciful Irish girl who comes to the United States. It was directed by Edward Laemmle. In "Top o' the Morning" Miss Walton is supported by Harry Myers, William Welsh, Dick Cummings, Harry Carter and others.

The Hoot Gibson picture, "The Galloping Kid," which follows "Top o' the Morning," on the Universal release schedule, already has favorable comment, despite the fact it is the first five reeler ever made by its director, Nat Ross. It was adapted from the story, "Misfit Becomes Chaperone," by William Hamby, and concerns the escapades of a happy-go-lucky cow-boy who falls heir to the job of chaperoning the lively daughter of a wealthy rancher. Edna Murphy plays the role of the girl. Others in the cast are Lionel Belmore, Leon Barry, Jack Walters and Percy Chandler.

"Caught Bluffing," Frank Mayo's new picture, is a feature production, directed by Lambert Hillyer from a story by Jack Becholdt, and is laid in Alaska. Edna Murphy plays opposite Mayo, in a supporting cast which includes Wallace MacDonald, Ruth Royce, Jack Curtiss, Andrew Arbuckle and others.

In "Confidence," the Herbert Rawlinson picture, the picture going public will have the first opportunity of seeing Harriet Hammond, popular bathing beauty, in a leading woman role. It is her advent into serious drama, and reports from Universal City indicate she has done well in her part. The picture is from the pen of Bernard Hymen and was directed by Harry Pollard. Among those in the cast are Hallam Cooley, Lincoln Plumer, William A. Carroll, Gerald Pring and others.

"Top o' the Morning," "The Galloping Kid," "Caught Bluffing" and "Confidence" form an important group in Universal's "Winning Nine," the first nine Universal Attractions to be released in the 1922-1923 program. "Don't Shoot" and "Paid Back," two August releases, and "The Long Chance," "The Girl Who Ran Wild" and "The Lone Hand," three October releases, complete the "Winning Nine."

"Drifting" to Be Made Into Picture

"DRIFTING," William A. Brady's stage success of last season, has been bought by Universal and will be screened as a Universal-Jewel, it is announced at the Universal home office. It is very probable that it will be used as a starring vehicle for Priscilla Dean.

"Drifting" was written by John Colton, formerly a member of the Universal scenario staff, assisted by Daisy H. Andrews, now deceased.

Alice Brady created the first stage role of "Cassie." She was followed in the role by Helen Menken. The leading male role was played by Robert Warwick.

Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle, in scenes from "One Week of Love," first for release on the 1922-23 Selznick program.

Paramount to Film In East and West

*Each Production Will Be Made
In Studio Best Adapted to Its Story*

FOLLOWING the announcement of the reopening of the Paramount Long Island Studio, the full scope of the new Famous Players-Lasky production scheme was brought out this week with the further announcement that, hereafter, each Paramount picture will be made in the studio best adapted, by reason of equipment or location, to the filming of it. If the story requires scenes in the east, the Long Island studios will be the production headquarters; if it requires a western setting, it will be filmed in the Hollywood studios. If it requires both, then both studios will be utilized.

One picture to come under this new scheme will be "Java Head," which George Melford will produce following "Ebb Tide," which is now drawing to a close at the Lasky studios. "Java Head" is generally conceded to be the best story ever written by Joseph Hergesheimer, the well known novelist, and author of "Tol'able David," the Richard Barthelmess success. The interiors for this will be taken at the Long Island studio and the exteriors at Salem, Mass., where the story is laid. Leatrice Joy, Jacqueline Logan and Raymond Hatton will be among the featured players. The author will collaborate on the continuity with Waldemar Young.

Several examples of this combining of resources of the Paramount company have been evident recently. Jack Holt and Joseph Henabery, his director, made all of the New York exterior scenes for "Making a Man" in New York and then went to California to film the remainder of the picture because better production facilities for the type of scenes required were to be found at the Lasky studio.

"Back Home and Broke," the George Ade story which Thomas Meighan will do for Paramount under the direction of Alfred Green, will be made at the Long Island studio because the story has Eastern atmosphere which can be obtained easily from the East Coast base of operations.

Pola Negri, who was originally scheduled to work in the East, will go to California to play the leading role in "Bella Donna" under George Fitzmaurice direction, following out the plan for perfect locations for all Paramount pictures. The Egyptian and desert scenes for this picture can be made with much more facility and fidelity in California than in the East.

Sam Wood already has started Hector Turnbull's "His American Wife," starring Gloria Swanson, and the Lasky studio schedule calls for the starting on September 4 of "Sacrifice," by Stephen French Whitman, starring Mary Miles Minter under the direction of Charles Maigne.

First National to Handle Strongheart Film

"BRAWN OF THE NORTH," the second picture starring Strongheart, the dog star of "The Silent Call," will be released on the First National franchise basis, according to announcement this week from Associated First National Pictures, Inc., confirmed by Laurence Trimble and Jane Murfin, the producers. The release is set for early in November.

Almost seven months were spent in the actual filming of the second starring vehicle for the dog that made such a remarkable impression in "The Silent Call." The story was written especially for Strongheart by Mr. Trimble and Miss Murfin and the locale was selected with special attention to the scenic possibilities.

Miss Murfin and Mr. Trimble, who directed the picture, which was filmed in the high Sierras, came to New York as soon as Mr. Trimble returned from location to negotiate the contract which has just been made with First National.

Picture Producing Company Formed by Friedgen

J. Ray Friedgen, well known film man, has entered the rank of producers as president of Effanem Photoplays, Inc., a New York concern, it was learned this week.

The first production, "When the Cows Come Home," has been completed at the Lincoln studios, Fort Lee, N. J., with a cast including Maurice Costello, Robert Elliot, Gladys Leslie, Norma Shearer, Ernest Hilliard, Edna May Spooner and Charles Ascott. Distributing arrangements will be announced shortly.

Conrad Nagel Chosen as Pola Negri Lead; Other Lasky Plans Announced

THE selection of Conrad Nagel to play opposite Pola Negri in "Bella Donna," which George Fitzmaurice is to produce on the coast as soon as the famous Polish star arrives, was announced this week by Jesse L. Lasky at Hollywood. Nagel will portray the easy-going, unsuspecting and devoted husband of the fascinating Mrs. Chepstow in the Robert Hichens story, a role for which he is believed to be admirably fitted.

Mr. Lasky also announced that Betty Compson's next picture will be from an original story by Julia Crawford Ivers. The title is "The White Flower," and the scene is laid in Honolulu. All the location scenes will be made in Honolulu and vicinity.

A third announcement is that "The Covered Wagon," by Emerson Hough, is to be the next James Cruze production following the completion of "Thirty Days," in which Wallace Reid is starred. Jack Cunningham is now doing the continuity and a cast of featured players will soon be chosen. Among the many big features in the epic picture will be the start of three hundred and fifty wagons westward from Westport Landing, now Kansas City; incidents of travel across the prairies, with a big buffalo hunt and attacks by Indians, and the final stages of the great gold rush to California. The book will be followed closely, Mr. Lasky said.

Ben Wilson Productions Released Through Federated

MOTION PICTURE NEWS regrets the error which appeared in a caption on page 1003 in the issue of August 26. In describing "Simple but Pure," and "Family Affairs," Ben Wilson productions for Federated, through error the caption read "for Arrow." We acknowledge and herewith correct the error.

Fox Special at N. Y. Lyric Touches Social Problems

"ALITTLE CHILD SHALL LEAD THEM," the Fox special feature which opened at the New York Lyric Theatre on September 1st for an indefinite run, has met with general approval from the public and the newspaper critics.

The story is by a writer who chooses to disguise his identity under the signature of "Mr. X," and deals with the social life and problems in the average American home.

The ever-present subjects of race-suicide and birth-control are dealt with frankly, but not in a manner to make them morbid or unpleasant.

The production was directed by J. Searle Dawley, and the scenario was prepared by Paul H. Sloane.

A large cast of characters includes the following names:

Roger Lytton, Peggy Shaw, Florence Billings, Frederick Miller, M. Hatesoka, Earnest Hilliard, Robert Agnew, William T. Hays, Dorothy Allen, Adelaide Prince, Niles Welch, Marie Reichardt, Florence Haas and Jimmy Lapsley.

Assoc. Exhibs. Will Release "Till We Meet Again"

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS will release "Till We Meet Again." This subject was produced by the Dependable Pictures Corporation, of which Morris Kohn is president. Negatives and prints are now in the hands of Associated, and it is likely that the picture will be made available in October.

The production is in six-reels and was directed by Christy Cabanne. The cast includes Mae Marsh, Norman Kerry, Martha Mansfield, Walter Miller, Julia Swayne Gordon, Cyril Chadwick, J. Barney Sherry, Tammany Young, Danny Hughes, Fred Kaligren, and Dick Lee.

The production is reported to have been made on an elaborate scale and to have a story carrying a peculiarly dramatic appeal with a strong element of sympathy pervading it and interest working up to a powerful climax.

Sessue Hayakawa Will Act on Stage This Season

Sessue Hayakawa will abandon screen work, at least during the coming season, and will make his debut in the spoken drama on Broadway late in the fall. The Japanese star is returning from a vacation in his native land and is scheduled to arrive in San Francisco September 12th.

He plans to begin rehearsals in New York about October 1st. It is understood that his stage role will closely follow those characterizations that have marked his work on the screen.

Elinor Glyn Takes Scenes in Paris for Goldwyn

Elinor Glyn, who has been visiting Paris, recently, took a number of atmosphere scenes in the French capital for the picturization of her story, "Six Days," which has been accepted by Goldwyn for production. These atmosphere scenes will be used where needed during the course of actual production of the story on the West Coast. No director has yet been announced for the subject.

Scenes from "Bow Wow," Mack Sennett's comedy, in which John Henry, Jr. (right) appears in an important child role.

Some of the scenes in "The Galloping Kid," starring Hoot Gibson, directed by Nat Ross, for Universal.

Paramount's September 10 Releases

"Blood and Sand" With Rodolph Valentino and "Valley of Silent Men" Set

ON September 10, Paramount releases Fred Niblo's production, "Blood and Sand," with Rodolph Valentino; and the Cosmopolitan production, "The Valley of Silent Men," with Alma Rubens.

Paramount points to the records "Blood and Sand" already has made during pre-release engagements in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles in justification of its claim that it is in the way of proving one of the greatest box-office attractions of recent years.

In this thrilling story of a bullfighter's life and loves, Valentino is admitted by all to have risen to the greatest heights of his career. Moreover, it is claimed, Fred Niblo has applied his directorial genius with even more telling effect than in "The Mark of Zorro" and "The Three Musketeers." The story, which was written by the Spanish novelist, Vicente Blasco Ibanez, author of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," and the stage version by Tom Cushing, were adapted by June Mathis, who wrote the scenario of "The Four Horsemen."

Thrilling and authentic bullfight scenes are incorporated and the picture abounds in picturesque Spanish types, chief among whom are Lila Lee, in the leading feminine role, and Nita Naldi, who plays a Spanish vampire, both of whom are featured in the east. Others who do effective work are George Field, Walter Long, Rose Rosanova, Leo White, Charles Belcher, Marie Marstini, Gilbert Clayton and George Periolat.

Cosmopolitan's "The Valley of Silent Men," which has just finished an engagement at the New York Rialto, has been hailed as the ideal picture of the Canadian Northwest, with its endless snows and forests. The story was written by James Oliver Curwood and the scenario by John Lynch. The director was Frank Borzage, producer of "Humoresque" and "The Good Provider."

In this romance of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, Alma Rubens has the role of a French-Canadian girl—a part which has given her a fine opportunity to reveal her charm and talent as an actress. She is ably supported by Lew Cody—not as a villain this time, but as leading man—and Joseph King, Mario Majeroni, George Nash and J. W. Johnston.

The picture abounds in beautiful mountain and river scenery, some of which was photographed in the Rockies and some in Northern Quebec.

Geo. R. Meeker Made Sales Chief for Cosmopolitan

GEORGE R. MEEKER has been appointed general sales director of Cosmopolitan Productions, succeeding James R. Grainger, now with Goldwyn.

Mr. Meeker, who has been for some time connected with the production department of Cosmopolitan, has had a long experience in motion pictures, beginning with the time when Klaw and Erlanger took over the Biograph. Mr. Meeker was with Paramount from the time of its organization and originated the first screen magazine, the "Pictograph," of which he was editor-in-chief. He resigned to go with the World Film Corporation, first as special representative and later as manager of the Philadelphia exchange. He resigned this position to distribute government pictures, and at the end of the war returned to the World Film Corp. as general manager. In association with Tony Sarg, Mr. Meeker started the Tony Sarg Almanac, and managed it until joining Cosmopolitan.

June Mathis Will Prepare Continuity for "Ben Hur"

A. L. Erlanger announces that June Mathis, who wrote the continuity for "The Four Horsemen," "The Conquering Power" and "Blood and Sand," has been engaged for the picturization of Goldwyn's production of Ben Hur. Miss Mathis will not only write the scenario but will collaborate on the production and edit the film when the picture is completed.

As recently announced in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, the making of "Ben Hur" by the Goldwyn organization will be conducted on an elaborate scale. The players will be sent to Palestine and to Italy for the making of exteriors in the locations described in the Wallace novel. Interiors will be made at the Goldwyn Studios in Culver City, Cal.

New Supervisor in N. Y. Office for Goldwyn

S. Eckman, Jr., vice-president of Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, who for several months past has been supervising Goldwyn's Eastern branches, will take up active supervision of the Metropolitan district and adjacent territory with headquarters at the New York exchange.

George S. Jeffrey, formerly associated with Famous Players in Canada, will actively manage the New York exchange under the supervision of Mr. Eckman.

George Larkin Leading Man in "Saved by Radio"

In the issue of September 9 on page 1250, appeared a trio of scenes which should have been captioned "George Larkin and others in 'Saved by Radio' a Russell Productions, Inc., six reeler." Instead, our error identified the leading man as William Russell, and referred to the picture as a "Fox" production.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS desires to acknowledge and hereby correct this error.

Archers Compete for Doug. Fairbanks Trophy

THE forty-second annual meeting and shoot of the National Archery Association of the United States, held at Cooperstown, N. Y., August 22 to 25 inclusive, was made the occasion of an effective tie-up for Douglas Fairbanks' new production for United Artists' release, "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood."

For this tournament Mr. Fairbanks donated a handsome Robin Hood trophy, competition for which occupied one entire day of the meeting. The trophy was won by Dr. Robert P. Elmer, Wayne, Pa., who was successful in this contest against a field of seventy competitors. Dr. Elmer holds the Fairbanks trophy for one year, when it will again go into competition. Any archer who wins the trophy for three successive years holds it permanently.

The tie-up was made by S. Edward Manson, working with Louis C. Smith, national secretary. Handsomely engraved four-page programs were gotten out by the Association and mailed broadcast to members, newspapers, magazines, and all publications which might be interested in the archery meeting and competition for the Fairbanks trophy. The meet itself was covered by a dozen syndicate camera-men and news stories and photographs were sent and published broadcast.

Randolph, Chicago, Books Independent for Run

"MORE TO BE PITIED," C. B. C. Films' feature, went over as a success on the occasion of its premiere at the Randolph Theatre, Chicago, last Sunday, where it opened for a run.

This showing and the record it achieved was unusual in that it is the first time the Randolph has booked an independent feature, and it was chosen as a signal honor for a holiday week-end—opening in Chicago the day before Labor Day.

The all-star cast includes Alice Lake, Rosemary Theby, J. Frank Glendon, Philo McCollough, Gordon Griffith and Baby Josephine Adair.

"Hound of the Baskervilles" F. B. O. Picture in Capitol

"The Hound of the Baskervilles," a screen adaptation of the famous Sherlock Holmes novel by Conan Doyle, will be the feature attraction at the Capitol theatre, New York during the week of September 10th. The "Hound of the Baskervilles" is a Film Booking Offices of America release, which has been scheduled for early distribution through F. B. O. Exchanges.

The picture features Ellie Norwood in the role of Sherlock Holmes, the greatest detective of all fiction. The screen version follows the novel in every detail and as a result the suspense is such that the mystery is kept until the final moment.

Ford Sterling Signed for Neilan Picture

Closely following his announcement involving the acquisition of Hobart Bosworth for "The Strangers' Banquet," Marshall Neilan has just signed Ford Sterling for the part of Al Norton in the Donn Byrne story.

Sterling is another player in the Neilan cast who has starred in his own right. Among other players now appearing in this picture who have starred in their own pictures are Hobart Bosworth, who has held up his own pictures; Rockcliffe Fellowes, Thomas Holding, Claire Windsor and Stuart Holmes—not to forget "Teddy," the Sennett dog.

Export and Import Co. Have Acquired "Othello"

The Export and Import Film Company announces that, in conjunction with David Howells, they have acquired the American rights for the European production, "Othello."

The work of editing and cutting the film to program length has been begun and the distributors say that a Broadway run has been assured them.

Emil Jannings, who starred in "Deception," "Passion" and the "Loves of Pharaoh" is the featured player and is said to be supported by a capable cast.

Change Title of "Wreckage" to "Stormswept"

The title of the first Robert Thornby production for F. B. O., which was produced under the working title of "Wreckage," has been changed to "Stormswept." It is an original story by H. H. Van Loan, and is enacted by an all-star cast, including Wallace and Noah Beery, Virginia Faire and Arline Pretty.

Murray Garsson Will Make "Way Down South"

"Way Down South," the novel by Harry P. Diggs and Adelaide Leitzbach, has been purchased for film purposes by Murray Garsson, according to a recent announcement.

Miss Leitzbach, who wrote the stage play, "The Night Call," is preparing the scenario and the production will be under the personal supervision of Mr. Diggs.

The story deals with a present day romance of Southern chivalry coupled with intrigue and mystery.

Mr. Garsson plans to make a number of other feature pictures and makes the statement that he will lend financial aid to responsible directors and players for the making of worthwhile pictures and will aid in the distribution and exploitation of such production.

"Vanity Fair" to Be Next Ballin Subject

Hugo Ballin is to produce "Vanity Fair," it is announced. He will commence casting for this special next week. Mabel Ballin will head the all-star cast.

The selection of the Thackeray novel for a subject is the result of an announcement made by Mr. Ballin some time ago in which he stated that he would make no more so-called "program pictures" but would devote his time to specials, owing to the success of "Jane Eyre," "East Lynne" and "Married People." Mr. Ballin, in his announcement, asked the public to select the subject for this forthcoming special. The result is "Vanity Fair," styled by Thackeray himself "a novel without a hero."

"Barbed Wire" Is Not an Arrow Picture

In a review of the Jack Hoxie starring vehicle, "Barbed Wire," appearing on page 1163 of the issue of September 2nd, credit was incorrectly given to the Arrow Film Corporation.

"Barbed Wire" was produced by Anthony J. Xydias and distributed by Sunset instead of Arrow, as stated.

Educational Will Release "Enchanted City"

EDUCATIONAL FILM EXCHANGES, Inc., will release Warren A. Newcombe's single-reel production, "The Enchanted City," within a few weeks, by arrangement with Howard Estabrook, it was announced this week.

This subject was shown at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, and following this run has received most enthusiastic praise from magazines, newspapers and trade publications as a new type of picture which, as one critic expressed it, "establishes a new standard of comparison for moving pictures."

"The Enchanted City" is a love fantasy, the story of a dream told by a youth to his beloved as they sit on a cliff by the sea. The story is told by means of a series of paintings by Mr. Newcombe.

Mr. Newcombe had already won fame in the art field of motion pictures before he made "The Enchanted City," and his name and work are associated with some of the greatest of recent feature successes, including "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," "Passion," "Kismet" and "The Inside of the Cup."

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Nice People—

Went over very big. Played to good audiences through very warm week. (Middle West.)

Very good picture. Business warrants holding over for second week and possible third. (Middle West.)

Good picture, but business only fair. (East.)

Her Gilded Cage—

Gloria Swanson's popularity aided the production in playing to a lively week's attendance. (Middle West.)

The Bonded Woman—

Patrons considered it one of the most entertaining and pleasing pictures of the year. Drew excellently throughout the week. (Middle West.)

The picture was a disappointment. Play did not show Betty Compson at her best. Not up to average of entertainment. Only fair business. (Middle West.)

The Ordeal—

Poor and uninteresting; no plot; held up for three days. (Middle West.)

The Young Diana—

With cooler weather, this one did a good business for a week's run. (Middle West.)

Good picture. Business good though somewhat affected by heat latter part of the week. (Middle West.)

If You Believe It, It's So—

Strong cast helped put this one over. Business fair. (Middle West.)

The Siren Call—

Not up to Dorothy Dalton's best feature. Played to fair business. (Middle West.)

South of Suva—

There was much interest in Mary Miles Minter's return to the screen. The vehicle was well received and the box office receipts good. (East.)

Travelin' On—

Did satisfactory business in house which generally wins a fair audience. Some seemed leary that it was a second run. (Middle West.)

While Satan Sleeps—

Just fair. Nothing over ordinary; pretty good business considering "Fair Week." (Middle West.)

Picture's all right. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Deuce of Spades—

Attracted good business all week, but Ray admirers expected a better story. (East.)

The Woman He Married—

A good drawing card. Good weekly attendance. (Middle West.)

The Masquerader—

Great picture. Capacity houses every performance. Extreme heat, latter part of week had no effect on business. (West.)

One of the big pictures of the season; did big business for week. (Middle West.)

Kindred of the Dust—

Splendid feature which kept house crowded despite heat. (West.)

Domestic Relations—

Picture drew well. Business good. (West.)

Trouble—

Great for grown ups and little folk. Splendid performance. We did very well with it, with help of good publicity and exploitation. (Middle West.)

Grandma's Boy—

Did only fair. (West.)

Fool's First—

Considering the rainy weather and the diversion the State Fair occasioned, this picture did good business. A feature with general appeal. (Middle West.)

Love Never Dies—

Fine romance, full of human interest and did fair business for week. (Middle West.)

GOLDWYN

When Romance Rides—

A very good program picture. Fair attendance. (Middle West.)

METRO

They Like 'Em Rough—

Caveman stuff with considerable pep. Star well liked and seemed to meet with general approval. Business all right. (Middle West.)

The Prisoner of Zenda—

A wonderful picture. The kind that stands out pre-eminently. At the end of the second week, we sold out completely. Could have played another week, easily. (Middle West.)

This second day copy was used by the Strand theatre, Cleveland, on "Monte Cristo."

The Five Dollar Baby—

Pleasant entertainment that requires no strain on the mind. Viola Dana is decidedly popular here. She always draws well. Strong accompanying bill helped put over a pretty big week. (Middle West.)

The Stroke of Midnight—

Excellent picture, but only played to fair business. (Middle West.)

FOX

A Fool There Was—

A fine picture. Average box office attraction. (Middle West.)

The Ragged Heiress—

Bad picture and business to match. (East.)

Strange Idols—

Disappointing. Business not good. (Fox.)

A Connecticut Yankee—

On second run showing it did fine business. The week averaged up well though it didn't start out as big as expected. The local critics liked it. (Middle West.)

Shackles of Gold—

Not so good as a picture, but it did satisfactory business. (Middle West.)

Monte Cristo—

Our patrons liked this one. Box office receipts satisfactory. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

The Storm—

A regular thriller, which played to the best business of the month. (Middle West.)

Paid Back—

Great picture. Biggest week we've had this summer. Had to put up ropes on opening day to keep crowds in order. (West.)

Good picture. Business up to standard. (West.)

The Delicious Little Devil—

With very little advance advertising and despite extremely hot weather, box office receipts exceeded expectations. Heard many favorable comments after the performance. (South West.)

HODKINSON

Slim Shoulders—

Opened the season with it to record house attendance. Everybody seemed pleased. (Middle West.)

The Gray Dawn—

Fine story of early California days with action and suspense. It pulled the business. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

The Three Must-Get There's—

Fairly good burlesque which played to satisfactory business. (Middle West.)

Orphans of the Storm—

Put on for a few days and did a nice flop. Too heavy for modern day audiences, especially when shown second run. (East.)

First time at popular prices. Almost a riot, had to stop selling tickets. Couldn't begin to take care of the crowds. Holding it over another week. (Middle West.)

F. B. O.

Gay and Devilish—

An average picture. Receipts about as usual. (Middle West.)

SELZNICK

Her Only Way—

A revival with Norma Talmadge. Held up for four days. (Middle West.)

VITAGRAPH

Divorce Coupons—

Corinne Griffith always attracts good sized audiences to this house. An interesting story helped to put this one over to very satisfactory figures. (South West.)

STATE RIGHTS

The Broken Silence—

Average northwest police story. Business slightly off. (Middle West.)

The Man From Hell's River—

An average picture to average box office returns for the week. (Middle West.)

The following letter is typical of hundreds received from exhibitors voicing the same sentiment relative to the BOOKING GUIDE.

 CASTALIA, IOWA

Motion Picture News, Inc.
 New York City, New York.

Dear Sirs:

I am in receipt of the copy of the BOOKING GUIDE published by your concern which was mailed for my inspection; for which I thank you. In expressing my opinion regarding a publication of this nature, I need only state that the days of "hit and miss" booking of pictures is past forever and a live exhibitor of today would as much think of buying wearing apparel with his eyes shut as to buy pictures without first ascertaining their real worth.

Your GUIDE incorporates certain features that make it of inestimable value—such as the release dates, length of productions, etc.; that are indispensable to a real exhibitor.

Again thanking you, I am,

Yours truly,
 (signed) V. G. Bollman.

Miniature barnyard "set" in the lobby of the Strand theatre, Asheville, N. C., to exploit the coming of "My Old Kentucky Home"

Tie-up with Jeweler Exploits "The Man Unconquerable"

Sumter, S. C.—With $700 worth of real pearls as the keynote of his display, Manager Oscar White of the Rex theatre, sold this picture at about 40 per cent above average receipts. Manager White borrowed the pearls from a local Jeweler and placed them in a large case lined with black satin. The case was placed on a frame in the front of the lobby. The frame stood about 3 feet high. Covering the front of the frame was a combination display banner with seven $1.00 bills and a revolver fastened to it. Just above the bills and the revolver was the line, "These Did Not Conquer Him." On the lower part of the banner was a 1-sheet cut-out and the line, "... Pearls Made Him a Million, But a Girl Made Him a Man."

Hanging above this display was a large banner giving star, title and play dates. A card crediting the jeweler for the pearls displayed was tacked on the box office.

Mr. White says, "The pearls made quite a display, one that caught the eyes of everybody, especially the women and children. The lobby as a whole was effective and got away from the 'Samson, strong man' impression created by the Title."

Street ballyhoo, showing the method used by the management of the Istrione theatre, Jackson, Miss., in exploiting "Across the Continent"

Buses and Candy Aid in "Forget-Me-Not" Exploitation

EXPLOITATION for "Forget-Me-Not" which opened July 23rd, at the Criterion Theatre, enlisted the support of the Fifth Avenue Coach Company which operates the fleet of stages in the city, and of the United Candy Company. Both of these influential business organizations gave their assistance in making the Criterion presentation of the photoplay a success.

A representative called upon the head of the Fifth Avenue Coach Co., and suggested that the buses not used during the early afternoon be employed to transport the children to and from the theatre. The plan met with a hearty response, and not only were the buses provided, but each of the large number of the vehicles which form an important part of New York's transportation system carried a large announcement that the orphans would share in the receipts of the picture.

When the officials of the United Candy Company learned of the move, they volunteered to supply the young guests of the Criterion with chocolates. Representatives of the company have appeared at each of the "orphans' matinees" and have met an enthusiastic response from the lucky youngsters.

Almost daily, at two o'clock in the afternoon, as many as ten of the green automobiles stop in front of the theatre, and the children are led into the theatre. The trip to the playhouse is something in the nature of a triumphal parade, as a prominent feature of the event is the appearance of a boys' band of twenty-five musicians at its head.

Worked Dance and Theatre Together Putting Over "Sonny"

Worcester, Mass.—Because he controls a dance hall as well, Manager Daniels of the Olympia theatre, Worcester, Mass., arranged a special "Sonny" dance for his hall at the same time that the attraction played his theatre. The combination proved a hit and made the title of the picture a byword in Worcester.

You don't have to control the dance hall to do this. If the locality and patronage make it advisable the tie up could be easily effected with any hall in the neighborhood.

Doubles Stunt Wins Publicity for "The Masquerader"

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—From ex-President Wilson to Marcelline all well known men have had doubles. The Stillman theatre took this angle for its exploitation partly because it had a human interest-appeal and partly because it was especially appropriate to the plot of the picture it was exploiting, "THE MASQUERADER."

Especial interest was placed upon local celebrities in staging this stunt for the First National attraction. Mayor Kohler, Tris Speaker and others were made targets for the doubles. The Cleveland Press concocted a humorous story in which a man, apparently Tris Speaker, walked out on the diamond before the big league game started and ordered Pitcher Guy Morton to play shortstop and the moundman, unquestioning in his obedience, started to do so. The story wound up with the denouement that the order was given by a stranger who was a perfect double for the Indians' manager.

The Masquerade Manager of the Stillman theatre sponsored the stunt. "Doubles" for famous Clevelanders were invited to send their photographs to him and if he recognized them they were sent passes to "The Masquerader." The stunt won about 100 inches of newspaper space.

Hart Exploits Importation; Dwells on its Being Foreign-Made

EL PASO, Tex.—In all of Manager J. M. Edgar Hart's advertising of "The Sheik's Wife" he stressed that it was a novelty attraction, showing how different the foreign pictures are, compared to the American. Hart began by dipping all the lights in his marquee and foyer in Oriental colors, blue, mauve, yellow, pink, green and orange. Then he used red draperies with the gold arches and crescents. Moorish arches, three altogether, combined with the plush tapestries and draperies adorned the entrance to the theatre. On the floor of the lobby was painted a scroll medallion with a portrait of the Sheik and the wife, kissing.

Efforts to Sell Town on Singularity of Attraction

Charlottesville, Va.—Manager H. W. Twyman, of the Lafayette theatre, wanted to sell the idea that "Beyond the Rocks" was more than "just another picture."

He figured the best way to convince people it was a different picture was to bill it differently. For months he had been taking three columns in the newspapers for press sheet ads and lay-outs. He knew that that had to be changed, too.

With the co-operation of Leslie F. Whelan, Paramount exploiter, an open letter to the people of Charlottesville was drafted. This occupied the regular newspaper space and gave all the salient advertising points: Gloria Swanson supported by Rodolph Valentino in an Elinor Glyn story. There was a subtle suggestion that the crowd better come early if they wanted seats.

Mr. Twyman got Whelan to conduct one of his celebrated resemblance contests. The exploiter tied up the Daily Progress for front page publicity. The girl most resembling Gloria Swanson received a season's pass to the Lafayette. Other prizes were also passes.

Improvised Stage in Lobby Presenting "The Man From Home"

Ft. Worth Texas.—The lobby front that Manager Harry Gould arranged for "The Man from Home" at the Hippodrome, is reported to have increased business to an extent to have made his investment worth while.

The display consisted in a stage effect, with drops and scenery, and the paintings were all in the proper perspective. What made the display so attractive and have such excellent attention value was the striking colors used by the artist in painting the blue sky and the costumes, or bathing suits on the girls. The contrast was very noticeable.

Also in the lobby were exhibited several gilded frames, with insert cards, these being the regular accessory frames and stock cards, but arranged artistically around the lobby together with large vases of flowers.

Atmospheric Lobby Display Exploits "I Am the Law"

Montgomery, Ala.—In exploiting "I Am the Law" Manager W. A. Doster, of the Strand theatre, made his principal appeals through atmospheric lobby display and ads in the papers which he terms "dramatic."

An atmospheric snow scene display in miniature was arranged in the center of the lobby. Against the rail in front of the box office was hung a snow covered landscape drop. Cotton batting on the floor was arranged in snowdrifts and branches of cedar trees were set upright and sprayed with white. The 11x14 lobby cards were set around in this space on small easels and gave the effect of miniature signboards.

The title was strung across the front of the lobby in cut-out letters against a background of artificial icicles made from beaver board.

A 24-sheet cut-out was mounted in a frame on top of the marquee four days in advance.

A series of "dramatic" teaser slides was started two weeks in advance and on the two days prior to opening "dramatic" ads were run in the papers.

Exploiting "Nanook of the North" in Memphis, Tenn., the picture playing the Pantages theatre

Unique exploitation idea, carried into lobby display at Keith's Hamilton theatre, New York, exploiting "The Storm"

This unique window display exploiting "The Crossroads of New York," was arranged by the management of the Cozy theatre, Topeka, Kansas

Ballyhoo Starts Word-of-Mouth Advertising

Roanoke, Va.—Manager Elmer D. Heins believes in word-of-mouth advertising, and with the co-operation of Harry Swift, Paramount exploiter, saw that he got it for "If You Believe It, It's So."

They located a neatly dressed old man with a square-trimmed white mustache—in fact, a respectable and attractive person. He has lived in Roanoke all his life and knows nearly everybody on the streets.

He sauntered up to the first acquaintance and said: "'If You Believe It, It's So.'"

"What on earth are you talking about?" "I'm talking about a picture, 'If You Believe It, It's So.' It's playing at the Rialto theatre, and is just about the best you ever saw."

The old man kept it up all day, and after he got a good line perfected he grew bolder and tried it on strangers.

Window display employed by Andrew Cox, manager of the Reynolds theatre, Union City, Tenn., in exploiting "My Boy"

Genuine Flappers Employed to Exploit "The Married Flapper"

BALTIMORE, Md. Flappers were appealed to as competitors in "flapping" when the Garden Theatre, one of the Whitehurst chain, ran "The Married Flapper." During the contest, which was to determine the three most successful flappers from the point of view of the audience, the Garden reports gratifying results.

George A. McDermit, of the Whitehurst interests, and Miss Hattie K. Morrell, of the Universal publicity department in Washington, carried out the contest. Prizes of an ankle watch, a gold cigarette case and a manicuring set were offered the three winners, and young women were urged to register at the theatre in order to enter.

Prior to the showing of the picture at evening performances the flappers were called upon to promenade across the stage, and the audience did the judging in accord with time-honored "amateur night" procedure. As a touch of fun a man dressed as the utmost in burlesque on flappers likewise took part in the promenade.

Atmospheric Lobby Brings Egypt to Florida

Jacksonville, Fla.—Manager Guy Kenimer, of the Arcade, reports that he sold "The Loves of Pharaoh" with the aid of a lobby.

The front was dressed to represent a big archway with Egyptian figures covering the front. Under it, looking into the theatre, was a large reproduction of the treasure house, which plays an important part in the picture.

Mr. Kenimer worked a newspaper essay contest which forced the participants to see the picture first. "What Were the Loves of Pharaoh?" was the topic. This is not an easy subject, as superficially it seems that Pharaoh had only one love—the slave girl. But, giving it a little thought, one perceived a second one: Pharaoh's undying love for himself.

Red Carnations as Favors on "Sonny"

Lafayette, Ind.—Manager H. H. Johnson of the Luna Theatre played upon the appeal to mothers of veterans in his presentation of "Sonny." He had ushers stationed at the entrances who asked every woman entering: "Are you the mother of an overseas veteran?"

Women answering in the affirmative were given a red carnation for identification. From the stage Mr. Johnson announced that at the conclusion of the performance a reception would be held for these mothers and their families. Patriotic melodies were rendered during a brief intermission and the curtain was raised on a stage decorated with flags and a huge punch bowl and service set in the center.

Showing how Manager G. R. Stewart, of the Iris and American theatres, Casper, Wyoming, used a cut-out to exploit Buster Keaton in "The Blacksmith"

Lobby of the American theatre, Colorado Springs, Colorado, as it was dressed for the run of "Nanook of the North"

Leads in "Wildness of Youth" Appear in Person in Prologue

ASBURY PARK, N. J. "Wildness of Youth," a production recently completed by Ivan Abramson, with Mary Anderson and Joe Striker in the leading roles, was given a premier showing at the Main Street Theatre. By special arrangement it was possible to secure the two leading players to deliver a prologue for the presentation. A set, as nearly like the one in the picture as possible was staged, and the youthful players enacted an important scene from the picture, using words to contrast the difference in acting for the stage and for the screen.

Natural Resources Make Up for Lack of Scenic Artist

Spartansburg, S. C.—The lobby of the Rex theatre is long and narrow, which fact was used by Manager A. C. Cowles for "The Dictator."

A week in advance Mr. Cowles covered both sides of his lobby with signs painted in water colors, which gave off "Wallace Reid in 'The Dictator'" in enormous letters.

The night before the opening Mr. Cowles and his assistants made a thatched straw hut of the box office and a jungle roadway of the lobby itself. Tall bamboo was cut from the brakes and lined both sides of the lobby, meeting at the top in "natural" archway. Ferns and small potted palms were arranged along both sides, and a large artificial palm stood on each side at the front. The box office was completely masked with cane and wheat straw.

Window display arranged by the Star theatre, Stanley, Wisconsin, advertising "My Boy"

Orphanage Tieup For Meighan Picture

Amarillo, Tex.—"One of the best selling angles for a Tommy Meighan picture continues to be his love for children," says Manager Ross Rogers of the Mission Theatre, who got the whole town interested in the "Bachelor Daddy" by giving a free showing to the inmates of the local orphanage.

Local automobile companies not only endorsed the project but donated enough trucks to transport the youngsters to and from the theatre. Mr. Rogers gave the agencies permission to banner their trucks with advertising matter, and the agencies came back at him and let him put on announcements of the picture.

Naturally a hundred kids piled on each truck didn't maintain the decorum of a church and they transferred their conveyances into noisy ballyhoos for the picture. The trucks gave the kids a ride through town.

A confectioner also saw a chance of combining good philanthropy with good publicity and set the kids up to ice cream cones and candy.

The newspapers took advantage of the news angle of the stunt and the theatre, the picture, the agencies, and the confectioner got front page stories.

Ready Made Tie-Up With Navy Used For "Hurricane's Gal"

Des Moines, Ia.—The U. S. Navy has started after recruits again, and the exploitation men are right on the trail of the recruiting Sergeants.

The fact was put to the test when "Hurricane's Gal" was the attraction at the Des Moines Theatre. It was known that some of the sensational scenes of the picture were made with the co-operation of the Navy Department in the use of torpedo destroyers and hydroplanes so the theatre based their advertising on the strength of it and decorated every prominent square of the city with bill posters reading: "See the Navy in Action All This Week in 'Hurricane's Gal' at the Des Moines Theatre."

Copy on the regulations for enlistment in the navy accompanied the poster for the picture and a vigorous recruiting campaign backed up the exploitation and completed the tie-up.

A Bank Account Points to "Our Leading Citizen"

KANSAS CITY, Mo. When it comes to effective exploitation, manager Frank L. Newman, of the Newman Theatre would advise that while he doesn't stage a campaign on every picture he plays, when he does, he aims to get results. Therefore, when about to play "Our Leading Citizen," Mr. Newman negotiated with the Fidelity Trust Company of Kansas City, to set aside $30,000 to redeem for $1 issued by the theatre to each person who saw the picture. The checks were redeemable if deposited at the Trust Company with a $10 savings account. The line "Start Saving Today and Become 'Our Leading Citizen.'" Thomas Meighan will show you how in his latest Paramount picture," was used in the advertising which Mr. Newman reports brought the results he expected.

Coogan Head and Three Sheet Make Lobby for "My Boy"

Stanley, Wis.—A triple display of Jackie Coogan heads above the box office in a triangular shape and the cutout from the three-sheet, furnished the lobby display arranged with limited resources by Tom Foster of the Star theatre during the run of "My Boy." The arrangement was neat, attractive and inexpensive, illustrating what can be done for very little money.

Twenty-four Sheet a Basis for Lobby Decoration

CHICKASHA, Okla. The accessory twenty-four sheet acted as the basis of the display in the lobby of the Rialto Theatre for the picture, "Reported Missing." This paper was mounted upon beaver board and then erected in the lobby directly in front of the box office. A spot light was made to play upon the life saver carrying the picture of Owen Moore.

Nursery in Theatre Lobby Exploits "The Bachelor Daddy"

Salisbury, N. C.—For "The Bachelor Daddy," manager A. B. Cooper put in a nursery lobby display in the Strand Theatre.

The back and sides of the lobby were hung with dark colored cloth draperies as a background for the display. A new style baby crib was placed in the lobby and a 3-sheet cut-out of the star and the youngest of the children was arranged to look as though he were just about to put the baby in the crib. Cut-outs of the other four children were looking toward this cut-out. To one side was a child's size Victrola and scattered about the floor of the lobby were building blocks, dolls, and toys of various descriptions. At the extreme sides of the lobby were special still frames with a cut-out head of the star and cut-outs of two small children. Stills showed through openings cut in the beaver board.

Window display, a part of the exploitation used by manager Andrew Cox, Reynolds theatre, Union City, Tenn., for "My Boy"

Exploitation for "I Am the Law" Begins 3 Weeks in Advance

Memphis, Tenn.—Manager Thos. G. Coleman started his campaign for "I Am the Law" by placing in the back of his lobby three weeks before opening cut-outs of the six figures from the 24-sheet. And at the same time he put on display a 6-sheet panel containing dramatic ad copy and listing the entire cast. It was illustrated with figures from the 3-sheet and had the play dates displayed prominently. This advance display told the cast and kept the play date before his patrons at all times.

Two weeks in advance the special trailer furnished by the Exchange was started. Also, 500 block one sheets were posted all over the city. These were made locally and contained only the title printed in bold red letters.

One inch teaser ads were run in the three daily papers for three days before the picture opened. And 2,000 heralds were very carefully distributed over a period of several days to secure the maximum efficiency from this form of advertising.

The lobby display was of the "snow and ice" type.

Decorations to Match Title "The Green Temptation"

Dallas, Texas.—Beginning one month in advance, a teaser card was tacked around town. It was blank except for a green splotch in the center. The following week the card read "Watch for it! Alluring! Fascinating! The green!"

The third week similar teasers started in the newspapers, following up what had been done in billposting around town. Then the last week appeared "The Green Temptation" at the Palace theatre in place of the teaser cards, and the papers carried advertising telling about the cast and the production.

In the theatre every light and almost everything was painted green. The lighting effects in the dome of the house were all green and even the orchestra lights were in green. All art displays in and about the theatre were in green, while exhaust fans kept green tissue paper streamers flying in the breeze, seeming to beckon people to come in. The streamers were effective to the extent that they were used for other attractions in different colors.

Miniature Trail in Lobby Offers a Fitting Display

EVANSTON, Ill. One week before W. G. Sturdivant, manager of the Hoyburn theatre, Evanston, Ill., opened with Rex Beach's "The Iron Trail," he put a table, three feet by seven, in his outer lobby. On the front, hanging down, was a big sign, "The Iron Trail." The top was covered green, and there was a background representing a forest view, on which was another sign, "Rex Beach's 'The Iron Trail.'" On the table was an electric train, running on a miniature track, with a station, two bridges, semaphores, tunnel, etc.

Horse Race on Broadway Advertises "My Dad"

New York, N. Y.—Stopping traffic on Broadway at a busy intersection during the noon hour and drawing the eyes of thousands to the theatre where "My Dad" was showing, was the result obtained during the run at the George M. Cohan theatre.

For the first time in its history, Broadway saw a horse race, between high-class race horses mounted by actual jockeys. Four horses, each carrying their respective colors, were started at the barrier and raced at full speed between crowds that lined the sidewalk and part of the street from Forty-fifth street to the entrance of the George M. Cohan theatre, where they crossed the tape almost neck and neck. Of course each horse carried a banner in plain sight advertising "My Dad," which was then beginning its second week at the Cohan theatre.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 752 S. WABASH AVE.

L. Rudolph, former owner of the Virginia, Empress and Ravinia theatres, the Portray Film Company, and who also was interested in the Ziegfeld Studios, Chicago, has purchased the five hundred seat Violet theatre at 24th and Vliet streets, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. He will conduct the house as a first-class picture and vaudeville theatre, and is installing a magnificent Hope-Jones organ, which is now being completed by the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company of Cincinnati.

Pietro Cavallo, assistant conductor and manager of the new McVicker's orchestra, is in Los Angeles to hear the playing of two violinists, who may be engaged for this theatre's orchestra if their work proves satisfactory. Mr. Spitalny, musical director of the new house, announces the engagement, for the new orchestra, of Frank Crisafulli and Mateo Manna, who have played for the last six years for the Chicago Grand Opera Company.

The Paramount Pep Club, fifty strong, journeyed to George Ade's farm in Indiana, a week ago, by autos. The day was spent in playing golf, base ball, croquet, tennis, while many of the ladies of the party donned their bathing suits and swam in the pool on the farm. A big chicken dinner was served at noon and a light lunch in the evening just before the party left for Chicago. Mr. Ade, according to the Pep Club members, lived up to his reputation as an ideal host, and according to reports nobody came "Back Home and Broke," but all returned voting him to be "Our Leading Citizen."

Nat Wolf is again in Chicago, having returned from Dallas, Texas, to take a position as salesman with First National, and is covering the west side territory.

Edward Grosman, who a year ago left the Chicago office of Paramount to accept the managership of the Denver exchange for the Associated Producers, will again make his headquarters in Chicago, having been appointed manager of the Al Lichtman Corporation in this city. In his present position he will work with J. L. Friedman, of the Celebrated Players, Mr. Friedman having the Al Lichtman franchise for Illinois and Indiana.

Herb Given, district manager for Paramount, reports the largest number of bookings for the fifth annual Paramount week, September 3rd to 9th, in the history of the Chicago exchange, and with theatre business on the up-grade, predicts that this week will also surpass previous ones in the box office receipts at numerous theatres, which will show Paramount pictures.

Peck Collins, whose purchase of the Marquette theatre, at La Salle, was recently announced, has renamed the house, Peck's theatre, and arranged to run First National pictures four days a week.

A district convention of First National managers and salesmen from exchange centers of the territory, brought a throng of First National sales experts to Chicago Thursday and Friday of last week. District Manager Seery presided at the conferences, which were held at the Congress Hotel, and plans for the Fall and Winter campaigns were mapped out. Sam Katz addressed the assembled managers and salesmen at the opening meeting, and District Manager Seery presided at the sessions. The convention closed with a very successful dinner party at the Marigold Gardens on Friday night. Managers present included: E. J. Eichenlaub, Chicago; Harry Weinberg, Des Moines; H. J. Fitzgerald, Milwaukee; R. E. Bradford, Minneapolis; E. L. Alperson, Omaha; E. C. Rhoden, Kansas City, and Harry Weiss, St. Louis.

Hail stones during the terrific storm of last week broke more than one thousand electric globes on the front of Ascher's Commercial Theatre, but failed to keep away the crowds who wanted to see Universal's "Storm," and this theatre is reported to have done over five hundred dollars business during the evening. "The Storm," according to reports coming in from both city and country territory, is proving one of the big box office successes of the year.

"Nanook of the North," a remarkable picturization of Eskimo life in the Arctic, which has won unstinted praise from reviewers throughout the country, is scheduled to open at Orchestra Hall this week end for an indefinite run. An orchestra of fourteen pieces will render the musical setting for this epic of the frozen north, and a male quartette will sing Eskimo songs and other selections. Ben Garretson, popular publicity expert, will be in charge of the exploitation and advertising of "Nanook of the North," during this run.

The chief of the Bureau of Fire Prevention and Public Safety has notified all Chicago moving picture theatres of three hundred seats and over that all persons employed as stage firemen or fire guards must appear at the chief's office to be qualified and receive a license, as provided for under an ordinance passed by the city council on May 3rd of this year. The license fee is five dollars, and it is understood that the city authorities will close up houses which have not complied with the Bureau of Fire Prevention order by September 10th.

Business Manager Leserman, of Universal, has returned from a tour of Illinois rural centers and reports business greatly improved, and that exhibitors in these farming communities are planning to keep their houses open two or three days a week instead of one, as they have been doing for some time past. The excellent crops, according to Mr. Leserman, have changed the attitude of the farmers, who are now spending money more liberally and attending the moving picture shows in ever increasing numbers. As an evidence of the way exhibitors regard the outlook, Mr. Leserman exhibited contracts which he had secured from seventeen of the twenty towns he visited.

Cecil Maberry, of Goldwyn, is in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, this week arranging for opening of a Goldwyn exchange in that city. Joe Hickey, who has been a salesman in that territory, has been promoted to manager and will have charge of the new exchange.

Al Gallas has accepted a position with Select's local exchange and will cover city territory for Manager Eddie Silverman.

E. W. Penrod, formerly Universal branch manager at Indianapolis, has arrived in Chicago to take up his new duties as assistant manager of the local Film Booking Offices of America branch.

Carl Miller is preparing to open his Spencer Square theatre at Rock Island, on September 3rd, and will inaugurate his Fall and Winter season with a series of Paramount pictures. The Spencer Square has been thoroughly decorated and many improvements installed during the time it was dark.

Gus Stathis, of the Casimir theatre, on Milwaukee Avenue, is reported to have purchased the Elston theatre, Elston and Belmont Avenues, from John Gilbert, and will continue to operate it as a moving picture house.

James R. Grainger, personal representative of F. J. Godsol, of Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, left Chicago for the west coast early this week, after spending several days in conference with chiefs of the local exchange. He expects to visit the leading picture centers of the country before returning to New York City.

G. A. Durlam has been appointed branch manager of Paramount's Milwaukee exchange, as successor to A. E. Bernstein, recently resigned. Mr. Durlam had been connected with the Paramount exchange at Minneapolis.

colony, has left for Minneapolis, where he succeeds J. F. Cubberly as manager of First National's exchange. Among important positions held in Chicago by Mr. Bradford, was that of manager of the local Paramount exchange, and as sales manager of Celebrated Players Film Corporation.

Reports that Lubliner & Trinz will add another modern and beautiful theatre to their large circuit have been confirmed, and the new house will be erected on Belmont Avenue just west of Lincoln. Work of razing the present building on the site, to make way for the new building, will be started shortly.

An important theatrical transaction was recently consummated at Kenosha, Wis., whereby the Orpheum Theatre Company secures the lease on the Rhode Opera House for a period of ten years.

A consideration in the amalgamation of the Orpheum; Majestic and Rhode theatres, it is the acquisition by Joseph Rhode, former owner of the Opera House, of a block of stock in the Orpheum Theatre Company. Mr. Rhode also was elected a member of the board of directors of the Kenosha Orpheum Theatre Company, and will replace John E. Saxe, of the Saxe Amusement Enterprises, Milwaukee.

The following is the personnel of the company officers: Thomas E. Saxe, president; S. M. Tullgren, vice-president; H. M. Vale, secretary-treasurer; Fred L. Dayton, assistant secretary, and A. B. McCall, trustee.

The new board of directors is made up of the following men: Thomas E. Saxe, S. M. Tullgren, Edward Dayton, H. M. Vale and Joseph G. Rhode.

The deal was put through by Edward and Fred Dayton, well known promoters and realty operators, who will in future have charge of the realty division of the Orpheum Theatre Company.

The three theatres will be under the management of Joseph Rhode and Jack Quinlan.

The Rhode Opera House will pursue virtually the same policy as in former years, and opened this season, August 26, with "The Storm," the successful Universal feature.

Carter De Haven has started on a novel tour of the country, which will take him from Washington to Maine and from the Canadian border to the Gulf, during which Mr. De Haven will be host at luncheons in twenty-seven important key cities of the country.

Mr. De Haven has not been away from his coast studios on a vacation trip for two years and his present journey will be in the nature of a vacation and at the

Activities of Exchange Managers, Exhibitors, Salesmen and Others

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Eight girls employed in the Washington exchange of First National, were recently the Saturday and Sunday guests of Phillip Miller of the Republic theatre, Annapolis. They left Washington at 2 o'clock Saturday and were entertained overnight at the Cavel Hall Hotel. Sunday they visited the Naval Academy reservation, had a chicken dinner, Maryland style, and attended the Midshipmen's hop. Miss Risdon and her sister, Mrs. Estes, were the official chaperones of the party.

Following their recent get together at the Arlington, the sales force of the Washington First National exchange went to New York for a conference at the home office. Among the local delegation were Manager Lou Bache, Sales Manager Charles Tyson, and the salesmen, John Golder, Frank Greenlagh, Harry Levy and E. A. Sherwood. They returned in time to be at their desks here Monday.

Walter A. Pinchbeck, who has been connected with the Globe Amusement Company for some time, and who has been manager of their Republic theatre ever since it opened on May 30, 1921, has tendered his resignation to that company. The resignation is to take effect September 6. Although no successor has yet been appointed, an early announcement is expected.

Mr. J. L. Cathrot has joined the Metro sales force, covering Maryland and Delaware for the Washington office. He was formerly manager of the Washington office of Wid Gunnings.

KANSAS CITY

E. E. Sprague, an exhibitor of Goodland, Kans., has announced that he will file suit against Paramount, under the Kansas anti-trust law and prosecute under the federal statutes, in an attempt to obtain an injunction preventing Paramount from doing business in Kansas, as a result of a contract on "The Sheik." Sprague charges that the picture, which was shipped to him, had 500 feet of film missing, the remainder being, as he termed it, "junk." A sales representative immediately made a new contract with Sprague but the company repudiated it, according to Sprague.

"Home Again" is the slogan of Howard E. Jameyson, former advertising manager of the Liberty and Doric theatres, Kansas City, and more recently managing director of the Butterfly theatre, Milwaukee. This time "Jamey" returns in the capacity of exploitation manager of the Kansas City Universal branch.

Jack Pickford and his wife, Marilyn Miller, were in Kansas City Tuesday on their way from California to New York. Mrs. Pickford, during the earlier part of the journey, was ill, but had recovered sufficiently to beam her radiant smile upon the few admirers who greeted her.

Sid Rosenthal, manager of the Mid-States Distributing Company, is covering the Missouri and Kansas territory in an effort to find out what type of pictures exhibitors desire before he departs on a buying trip to New York. Rosenthal's headquarters probably will be made in Kansas City.

"Somebody loves a fat man!" That is the gospel which Walter Hiers preached to audiences at the Newman theatre, Kansas City. Walter obtained some "bang-up" publicity in Kansas City when he broke the ice by telling the initial crowded house about his "wife-to-be," Miss Adah McWilliams, out in California, and Frank L. Newman incidentally enjoyed packed houses during Walter's stay.

CAROLINAS

The entire trade in the Carolinas mourns the death of C. E. Peppiatt's little two year old child. It is said that Mrs. Peppiatt is taking the death very hard, and it has been necessary for Mr. Peppiatt to place a substitute in his office temporarily so that he may take his wife away for a time.

Martin F. Schnibben, manager of the Opera House, Florence, S. C., is visiting friends and relatives in Wilmington, N. C., his former home. He says that rains have materially damaged the tobacco and cotton in his territory and is expecting a tough fall season.

Jack Elwell, Metro's Carolina salesman, is again in his territory after spending the week end in the office. He was to be accompanied by Sam MacIntyre, Metro manager, but it was necessary for him to go to the hospital for a slight operation.

Well known "Bill" Wassmann is now traveling the Carolinas in the interests of the F. B. O., making tie-ups with the city officials whenever possible on their police picture, "In The Name Of The Law."

BUFFALO

There was a big shift in Buffalo's Film Row this week. It leaked out that George A. Hickey is leaving the management of the local Goldwyn office to enter a wider field of work for the same company. In fact, rumor hath it that George will be nothing less than district manager in charge of the Boston, Philadelphia and Washington exchanges. Mr. Hickey is one of the most popular exchange men in western New York, where during the some ten years or so of his connection with the business, he has won a host of friends all of whom will be sorry to hear of his leaving. At the same time they will be glad to know that he is "going up." Mr. Hickey's successor will be Thomas W. Brady, better known as just plain "Tom," who has been holding down the Hodkinson exchange management and who has been manager of several other large exchanges in Buffalo in past years. Tom will take up his new duties on September 9. Fenton Lawlor, a member of the Hodkinson sales force, it is reported, has been recommended as Mr. Brady's successor.

M. A. Chase, district manager for Universal, with headquarters in Buffalo, has returned from a trip through the territory, and reports "The Storm" set in all the key cities. Mr. Chase says that he has not seen such smiling faces on exhibitors in the last two years. He takes this as a sure sign that business has "turned the corner."

The Buffalo Paramount office is leading the country in the sales contest. Every member of the exchange is on tip toe, but there's four weeks to go so it's necessary to keep going "on high," if all those boys expect to get the new auto they've been figuring on. Allan S. Moritz has received a wire from Harry Ballance congratulating him on the showing of the Queen City boys.

C. W. Anthony, Vitagraph chief, is wearing a very broad smile these days. There's a reason. Business is coming in as it never came before and the office force is working like bees trying to keep up with the rush. Looks like good times have returned, eh, C. W.?

E. M. Hopcraft, Associated Exhibitors' representative, has returned from a long trek through the wilds of the territory with his pocket filled with contracts. Howard Boyle, formerly connected with Hodkinson, started this week as an Associated Exhibitors' salesman.

ST. LOUIS

Harry Weiss and his hustling First National gang are back from the convention of branch managers and salesman held recently in Chicago. The contract grabbers now with Weiss are: Lester Bona, H. D. Dwyer, Billy Weiss, S. Andrews and L. A. Laurent.

Recent changes in the local sales organization are: J. J. Delson, Chicago, now Eastern Missouri salesman for F. B. O. J. Behmyer, formerly with Vitagraph, now Southern Illinois salesman for F. B. O. Johnny O'Brien, Southern Illinois for Fine Arts. Paul Haynes from Pathe, Salt Lake City, to Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee and Arkansas salesman for Vitagraph. J. F. Duthrie from Vitagraph to Select. J. Hickman from F. B. O. to Associated Exhibitors. W. O. Bloomberg from Select to Boston, where he became assistant to R. C. Fox, manager of a string of New England theatres.

Sam Werner of United Film Service has "Where is My Wandering Boy Tonight" for Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri. He will open his sales campaign very shortly.

Floyd Lewis plans to move his Select exchange to 3332 Olive Street. The place is now being whipped into shape. The recent opening of the Universal and Fox exchanges in that block has attracted the attention of other exchange managers and is expected that several other offices will migrate to that vicinity within the next few months.

Manager Milton Simon of the local F. B. O. arranged a banquet in honor of Carter De Haven at the Melbourne Hotel roof garden Wednesday evening, September 6. All St. Louis fildom was there. The affair was very nicely arranged.

"Jack" Underwood of Enterprise hit the tall grass during the week. He reports that business is on the mend. Looks for big fall and winter, especially in Illinois. Miners are working, and every one is happy.

CLEVELAND

F. F. North has recently been named manager of the Detroit office of First National. North was formerly Detroit manager for Famous Players.

Harry Scott, who was First National exchange manager in Detroit is now manager of the Detroit Pathe office.

Paul Tessier, veteran exchange manager of Cleveland, has just been appointed exchange manager for Film Booking Offices in New Orleans.

Miss Rickey Labowitz, private secretary to Famous-Players' local manager, Eddie Fontaine, has just returned from a two week's visit to New York and all eastern points of interest.

GOLDWYN

F. J. Godsol, here, announces his intention of producing "Vanity Fair."

R. A. Walsh and the "Captain Blackbird" Company arrived from Tahiti and report excellent cooperation from the French government. They had a narrow escape in gale while at sea in small vessel and also claim a "find," the discovery of a native girl named Nua Nua, who gives promise of being a Pickford of the South Sea Islands and may be brought here to play in pictures. Interior scenes for "Captain Blackbird" will require three weeks at the studio.

All scenes for "The Christian" have been filmed, is the report of director Maurice Tourneur.

HAL ROACH

"Doctor Jack," starring Harold Lloyd, shipped Pathe, will be the first release under the new Lloyd contract, according to decision of Hal Roach and Elmer Pearson. The Snub Pollard comedy, entitled

"Newly Rich," directed by Charles Parrott, has been shipped, also.

Tom McNamara, who has written stories for previously made "kid" comedies, is now directing "The Rascal Kid" company.

James Davis is back at the Studio after weeks of absence because of ptomaine poisoning. He is now directing Paul Parrott Company in a cannibal story. The sixth "kid" comedy, entitled "Saturday Morning," was shipped last week.

R-C PICTURES

The following have been added to the cast of the Chester Bennett production of "Thelma," Harry Lonsdale, Lila Leslie, Wedgwood Nowell, June Elvidge.

Ethel Clayton's first starring role in an R-C production for F. B. O. will have the permanent title "A Three Cornered Kingdom."

WARNER BROTHERS

William Seiter, director, has selected the following cast for "The Beautiful and Damned": Harry Myers, Clarence Burton, Walter Long, Tully Marshall, Charles McHugh, Parker McConnell.

Sydney Franklin begins production of "Brass" next week.

Olga Printzlau is writing an original story and continuity under the title "The Little Church Around the Corner."

METRO

Allan Forrest, Lillian Leighton and Claude Gillingwater have been engaged to support Viola Dana in "Emmy Lou," which will be directed by Harry Beaumont.

Irving Willat has returned from a search for exterior locations at Monterey for "All the Brothers Were Valiant," in order to begin on this production starring Billie Dove.

Members of the "Quincy Adams Sawyer" Company are back from two weeks on location on the Columbia River in Washington.

The Bull Montana comedy "A Punctured Prince" is complete.

UNIVERSAL

"Forsaking All Others," a Collier's Weekly story by Mary Lerner, will be made an all star Jewel production, to be directed by Emile Chautard. Colleen Moore has been engaged for the lead, while other roles are being cast, gradually.

William Desmond will be the lead in "Around the World in Eighteen Days," a serial, under the direction of Reeves Eason.

Edward Laemmle is back from Europe and will direct the serial "The Trail Blazers" starring Art Acord.

Lucien Hubbard, author of the original story entitled "Drifting," the next starring vehicle for Priscilla Dean, is also preparing the continuity.

The next starring role for Gladys Walton will be "The Run Away Girl," which will be directed by King Baggott.

Rupert Julian will direct Lon Chaney and an all star cast in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

Dorothy Wallace James, Montgomery Flagg poster girl, arrives from Honolulu to play in Von Stroheim's "Merry Go Round."

Helen Ferguson has been selected as leading woman for Frank Mayo in "The Hot Head," to be directed by Edward Sedgwick.

PICKFORD-FAIRBANKS

"Monsieur Beaucaire," Booth Tarkington's novel and stage play, has been decided upon as Doug's next.

Elmer Harris is now writing continuity for "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," which will be the next production for Mary Pickford.

"Tess of the Storm Country" will be a regular release by United Artists, opening about the same time in New York as Fairbank's "Robin Hood," now in final editing.

Art Rosson is now engaged in the final editing of "Garrison's Finish," starring Jack Pickford, which will be the first release of Allied Producers through United Artists Exchanges. Jack will possibly make one picture in New York before he returns to the west coast.

UNITED

Kate Lester and Frank Hayes have been added to the cast of Selznick's "One Week of Love." For this production, one of the largest sets ever erected at United is being used, representing a country estate mansion, with swimming pool, sunken gardens and spacious surroundings.

Principal Pictures announce cast of Irving Cummings production "Chicago Sal" to include Milton Sills, Alice Lake, Ralph Lewis, Richard Headrick and others.

Fred Hibbard Productions will make a series of twenty-six comedies, featuring Jimmy Adams, for Educational, under the direction of Fred Fishback, formerly of a Century unit.

INDEPENDENT

Harry Garson has engaged Elliot Dexter, Helen Jerome Eddy, Arthur Hoyt, Lloyd Whitlock and Barbara Worth as principals for the film version of James Whitcomb Riley's poem "An Old Sweetheart of Mine." Continuity for this production, under way, was written by Luis Leighton and Hope Loring.

Schulberg Productions have purchased an original story by Larry Evans, titled "Are You a Failure" for the next Tom Forman production, which is now being cast. Continuity for same is being prepared by Eve Unsell. A stage play from this story has been contracted for and after picture is released, the story will be published in a magazine.

Victor Schertzinger is making the last scenes for the Katherine McDonald subject, "The Lonely Road," and Louis J. Gasnier is now editing "Thorns and Orange Blossoms."

News from Chicago

Ascher Brothers are planning to pay more attention to music and short subjects, as part of their new policy for improving the presentations and conduct of their numerous theatres. Orchestras will be increased in size, as well as quality and in several houses entire new orchestras installed. Harry Hoxford and his Hollywood entertainers are now the star feature of the Commercial, which is proving very popular with the audiences. The feature picture at this theatre is being played by the organ, the entertainers rendering the overture and playing selections during the short reel. Lois Mannon and her orchestra have been transferred from the Oakland Square theatre to the Frolic, and other changes are in prospect. Ascher Brothers have arranged to play forty-one Paramount pictures at all their houses during the year and this week started showing "Orphans of the Storm," which will be screened at all the houses of the Ascher Brothers circuit, for a four day run, being an innovation as to length of run, a similar prolonged booking never having been attempted before in all their houses.

"Chain Lightning"

Arrow—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A SCREEN author can never go very far astray in public approval when he places a story in the sunny South, introduces an impoverished family and brings forth a racehorse for the big highlight. You will naturally ask: "Where have I seen this plot before?" True, it has served long and faithfully in fiction. The pathos? Wait. The Southern gentleman, suh, must always belong to an old, established family. He must become involved in financial difficulties, and his total assets must include his charming daughter and her fast steed.

Work it out for yourself. Must you know that the girl returns to find that her horse has been sold to her father's bitterest enemy—a man who has never recovered from being jilted by her mother in the heyday of his youth? So the plot narrows down to the Derby with the major putting up his last penny on Chain Lightning. The crooked jockey attempts to make advances to the girl. And with her refusal to entertain his advances, threatens to "pull" the horse. So to relieve her father's worries, she consents to the jockey's plans, though she escapes in the nick of time to ride the horse under the wire a winner.

Racehorse stories usually make sure-fire audience picture. And "Chain Lightning" lives up to its anticipated highlights. The racing scenes are filled with color and thrills, and there are sufficient elements of a dramatic nature to provide a first rate entertainment. Heart interest? Oh, surely. And romance—to say nothing of villainy. You may know how this story will develop from the opening caption and scene, but notwithstanding its familiarity of plot, it manages to hold the spectator's interest. The atmosphere is well suggested while the interpretation is well taken care of by Ann Little as the girl and Norval MacGregor as her father.

There is no chance of failure when the daughter wears the family colors. Which suggests to us that many owners of fast steeds which have developed into "platers" should turn their jockeys out and bring on the girls.

The Cast

Peggy Pomeroy.....Ann Little
Major Pomeroy.....Norval MacGregor
Red Rollins.....William Carroll
Colonel Bradley.....Joseph Girard
Bob Bradley.....Jack Daugherty
By J. Grubb Alexander. Scenario by Agnes Parsons. Directed by Ben Wilson.

The Story—Southern family becoming impoverished and involved in scandal, the father is forced to sell his daughter's racehorse. The noble steed is entered in the Derby and it is all planned to run a crooked race. The girl, however, rides the horse and wins.

Classification—Racehorse story carrying the usual plotting of villain to conduct a crooked race. Some romance and a note of pathos as the scene is laid in the South.

Production Highlights—Able work of cast. The race track scenes which look like the real thing. The love interest. First rate details.

Exploitation Angles—This title is a good one and can be linked up for advertising in several ways. Play up the race track element and mention that it carries several thrills. Put one of your employees in a jockey uniform and let him parade the streets on a race horse.

Drawing Power—Will please neighborhood audiences everywhere.

The Educational comedy entitled "Pardon My Glove," includes the two scenes above.

"Rounding Up the Law"

Aywon Film Corporation—Five Reels

(Reviewed by D. I. Gest)

THIS is a fair sort of Western in which Big Boy Williams as Larry Connell is pretty much the whole works, although Patricia Palmer as Doris Hyland appears to advantage.

The plot has been used in all its angles, times innumerable, but is one that always has a certain appeal to the lovers of Western films. Williams gets a kick into his work, furnishing sufficient thrills and excitement to carry through the five reels. His stunt in jumping from his horse to overpower the sheriff following his arrest for the hold-up of "Branch" Doughty is cleverly done.

The blowing up of the sheriff's office by Larry and his gang as Larry rescues Doris from Branch furnishes an exciting climax for the picture.

The directing and photography in "Rounding Up the Law" are satisfactory. Some of the out-door shots are excellent. The poker game in which Larry wins the sheriff's ranch is featured, but is decidedly not an innovation. Westerns appear incomplete without a draw poker game or two.

Exhibitors who cater to patrons who delight in Westerns should satisfy with this one.

The Cast

Larry Connell.....Big Boy Williams
Doris Hyland.....Patricia Palmer
"Bull" Weyman.....Chet Ryan
"Branch" Doughty.....Russell Gordon
Judge Hyland.....William McCall
Produced by Charles R. Seeling. Distributed by Aywon Film Corporation.

The Story—Crooked sheriff and his pal, run their border town as they see fit until hero blows in one day and wins the sheriff's ranch at draw poker. The latter is determined to get back his property at any cost and hero is equally decided to keep it. Hero decides to fight the pair with law instead of guns. Villain escapes and hires a lawyer, but is later captured by the sheriff. Then follows his thrilling escape, the rescue of the girl and the blowing up of the sheriff's office. Romance and order triumph.

Production Highlights—Larry's rescue of Doris Hyland, picking her from the back of a runaway horse. Larry's leap from his horse in overpowering Sheriff Weyman to escape after his arrest. The blowing up of the sheriff's office.

Classification—Western melodrama punctured with customary action which takes in fast riding and quick gun-play. Is similar to other pictures of Big Boy Williams.

Exploitation Angles—If you have played the other Big Boy Williams pictures, this one will surely get over. It gives this virile star plenty of opportunity to show his skill in the saddle and with the customary two guns. Use your usual exploitation ideas.

"Heroes and Husbands"

First National—Eight Reels

(Reviewed by Stuart Gibson)

DESPITE a rather trite title—which, it must be admitted, nevertheless fits the picture to perfection—"Heroes and Husbands" is a really fine dramatic narrative, well acted, well directed and well photographed. It is woven of considerably more subtle material than many features in these days of balderdash and hokum. The theme isn't a new one—what theme is?—but it has been done with a series of unusual, original twists and the consequence is a picture of far more than ordinary merit. Taking 100 as par, its percentage would be pretty near 99 per cent.

Katherine MacDonald is one of the stars who knows how to act, and her supporting cast in "Heroes and Husbands" has helped her wonderfully. The work of Charles Clary and Charles Gerrard is very good indeed, and Nigel Barrie plays a rather unsatisfying hero in a manner to make him as pleasant as he can be made.

Dealing as it does with a young novelist and playwright who makes of her house-party companions the characters in her new play and through her manipulation of them succeeds in straightening out several complicated lives and love affairs, including her own, the story gives opportunity for several bits of subtlety which are aptly cared for by the intelligent acting and direction.

The play has a "big punch" in it—when the heroine stands with smoking revolver, having shot quite unintentionally one of her fellow guests—and this "punch" is the climax of a sequence of scenes which lead up to it with action which takes the breath time after time. Despite the latter fact, there is none of the customary thrilling which winds up with a lady's hair over her shoulders, a naked shoulder, or a surprised amour behind the drawing room curtains.

The Cast

Susanne Danbury.....Katherine MacDonald
Walt Gaylord.....Nigel Barrie
Hugh Bemis.....Charles Clary
Martin Tancray.....Charles Gerrard
Agatha Bemis.....Mona Kingsley
Annette.....Ethel Kay

Story by Charles A. Logue. Directed by Chet Withey. A First National Attraction.

The Story—Susanne Danbury, novelist, goes to a houseparty where the man whom she loves, the man who loves her, the woman who loves Susanne's lover and the husband of her rival all are assembled. By pretending they are characters in her play and carrying out this pretense, she moulds them under her fingers. Rehearsing the pretended climax, she shoots her rival's husband with a pistol "fixed" for the latter to use upon the man she loves. Her arrest brings confession from the man who loves her, and after that the tangled skein is unraveled through the shock which comes from the shooting.

Classification—Straight drama of love and life, laid among wealthy folk.

Production Highlights—The rich scenes in the houseparty. The highly dramatic sequence when Katherine MacDonald takes the deadly pistol after it has been trice aimed for firing—and fires it. The confession of Tancray. The splendid acting.

Exploitation Angles—Katherine MacDonald is in herself a big card. Women ought to grab a line like this—"If you saw the man you love succumbing to the charms of a married woman, how would you get him back?" The idea of a play within a play likewise ought to appeal.

"The Man Who Played God"

Distinctive Production—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

EXHIBITORS who have open dates around the coming winter holiday season should lose no time in booking this outstanding production. Here is a picture that carries the message of the Yuletide season—give to others that you may be happy yourself. It is a delightfully refreshing story that's off the beaten path of screen literature. It has a powerful moral. It shows us that no matter how wretched we ourselves may be there are others in this world in more dire straits. Real happiness for ourselves is to be found in helping those less fortunate. Theatregoers will remember Otis Skinner's fine work on the stage in "The Silent Voice," the play on which this picture is based. As John Arden, the famous musician who loses his hearing and becomes a hypochondriac, only to be made into a different man and happy again through the joy he gets in helping unfortunates who roam into the park opposite his secluded apartment, Mr. Arliss gives us a characterization of wonderful appeal.

The production has been excellently mounted in every detail, although the story is the thing here and lavish settings are not needed. One forgets all but the intensely interesting theme. We are taken through some dramatic moments when Arden renounces God and decides to take his own life. Saved by his butler he is made to see the beauty of helping others. Arden, through his knowledge of lip reading which he has studied while in seclusion in New York and with the aid of a pair of field glasses, is able to ascertain the things which are troubling other folks. Righting the sorrows of others he forgets his own misfortune.

The Yuletide spirit of the story is what makes the offering an especially valuable one for the midwinter season. Ann Forrest as the wife is as attractive as ever. The other players are adequate. "The Man Who Played God" is an example of what the public is yearning for.

The Cast

John Arden.....	George Arliss
Margery Blaine.....	Ann Forrest
Carter.....	Ivan Simpson
Philip Stevens.....	Edward Earle
Mildred.....	Effie Shannon
Little Girl.....	Miriam Battista
Little Boy.....	Mickey Bennett
Young Woman.....	Mary Astor
Young Man.....	Pierre Gendron
Old Woman.....	Margaret Seddon
Old Man.....	J. D. Walsh

Adapted from Jules Eckert Goodman's play and based on the story by Gouverneur Morris. Directed by Harmon Weight. Scenario by Forrest Halsey. Photographed by Harry Fischbeck.

The Story—John Arden, a famous musician, loses his hearing and as a result goes into seclusion. He studies lip reading, and "hears" unfortunates in the park tell of their troubles. He finds that others also have their sorrows. Eventually he interests himself in aiding these poor folk and through the joy which this aid brings to others he is made into a different man.

Classification—A dramatic treat sending home a real sermon in film form and carrying the message of "peace on earth, good will to men." Excellently portrayed by a remarkable cast.

Production Highlights—The masterful characterization given the role of John Arden by that distinguished artist, George Arliss. The excellent moral of the picture. The work of the cast. The scenes showing Arden aiding other unfortunates. The scene in which he offers his wife her freedom. The regaining of his hearing in the church.

Exploitation Angles—Play up Arliss in blazing letters. The picture offers an opportunity of putting on a private showing for the deaf institute inmates of your city. Also the wonders of lip reading may be made the subject for a newspaper article by the specialists of your city. Play up the fine production and cast. You can go the limit on superlatives here.

Drawing Power—Put this one on any time in any house and with proper exploitation, it should be a box office winner.

"Back to Yellow Jacket"

Arrow Film Corporation—Six Reels

(Reviewed by D. I. Gest)

"BACK TO YELLOW JACKET" has a happy combination from an exhibitor's standpoint. It is a Peter B. Kyne feature story that has been published in the Cosmopolitan Magazine; while Ben Wilson, the sponsor, has built up considerable of a reputation as a producer through years of arduous work, and Roy Stewart, Kathleen Kirkham and Earl Metcalf, who have the principal parts, have a large following among the movie fans.

"Back to Yellow Jacket" is a story of the great outdoors—of the West in the pioneer days. There is plenty of action and Wilson has directed it smoothly, swiftly and unerringly toward the most dramatic climax.

While Carmen, the wife, in disobedience of her husband's command attends a public dance with "Flush" Kirby, notorious gambler, and previously had asked William Carson, an old admirer to carry her back East with him, there is nothing in the play to offend the most fastidious. It is not over-sexed, in any sense. Even as a public dance hall girl, Carmen does not forget her vows. When she saves Carson as her husband, Jim Ballantyne, is about to blow him to pieces, thinking that he was the man who caused Carmen to desert her home, the wife has no difficulty in explaining all.

"Back to Yellow Jacket" should please, and is especially adapted to the smaller towns and neighboring houses.

The Cast

Jim Ballantyne.....	Roy Stewart
Carmen, his wife.....	Kathleen Kirkham
William Carson.....	Earl Metcalf

Author—Peter B. Kyne. Director—Ben Wilson. Distributed by Arrow Film Corporation.

The Story—Carmen, wife of "Sunny Jim" Ballantyne, prospector, defies husband and attends public dance with "Flush" Kirby, notorious gambler. Following quarrel she vainly asks William Carson, an old sweetheart, to take her East with him. Ballantyne after battle with Kirby finds Carmen has left for parts unknown. Later he returns from desert mine and meets Carmen, now a dance hall girl. Believing Carson, his pal, the wrecker of his home and father of Carmen's boy, he returns to mine to kill him. Carmen arrives in time to prevent tragedy.

Classification—A drama with plenty of action and sufficient heart appeal.

Production Highlights—The battle between Jim and Kirby in dance hall after Ballantyne brands Carmen with cigar. Jim's return to Yellow Jacket to find Carmen a dance hall girl. Carmen's timely arrival at mine to prevent Jim from blowing up his pal, William Carson, who he believes wrecked his home.

Exploitation Angles—Play up the author. Cash in on the Cosmopolitan circulation. Stars are sufficiently popular to be used prominently in advertising. Title and locale can be utilized for street ballyhoo. A mining camp lobby should go well.

Drawing Power—Should go especially well in the neighborhood houses and in smaller towns.

"Little Wildcat"

Vitagraph—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

VITAGRAPH seems to be having a difficult time finding an ideal story for Alice Calhoun. Whether it is because her sponsors think her more adaptable for ingenue roles and don't go to the trouble of looking for dramatic stories with vital characterizations—the fact remains that this fragrant personality whose charm and talent endeared her to picture patrons everywhere in "The Little Minister," has not as yet found a play which may be ranked with Barrie's quaint study. True, "Little Wildcat" comes the closest.

Its characterization is far more important than its plot and while both have been used a score of times, the star's interpretation of a tough little street gamin who is transformed into a gorgeous creature of society will win her many superlatives among the writing gentry, and a host of new friends among the picture public because of the vitality, enthusiasm, and genuine talent for character expression which she puts into her role of Mag. One would never think such a transformation possible. And while it is a credit to Miss Calhoun, the plot isn't always convincing because the old life is seldom referred to and never investigated. However, it is interesting most of the way and doubtless the seamy side of life as depicted in the early reels will score more readily than the society episodes.

A practical judge argues in his club that these street waifs can never rise above their training and environment. A sentimentalist—call him a humanitarian—argues that all they need is a chance. So he adopts this gamin and straightway makes her into a lady. And Alice Calhoun is just as easy—just as sure in this study as she is when playing the wildcat of the slums. The role brings her right up to the front. And the time is ripe to scour the literary field for a real, dramatic story. There are little touches which are needed here. As she goes through the transformation her guardian should have found her some girl friends for the sake of companionship. She cultivates all the graces too quickly. Which sort of indicates that the picture suffered in its editing. The author uses the war for dramatic substance. And the heroine as a nurse rescues the youthful judge, who is unaware of her identity until the conflict is over. He has worshipped a memory and it becomes a reality eventually. Thus he is forced to admit his argument is false. The picture is well staged, carries good atmosphere, and is capably played by the cast.

The Cast

Mag o' the Alley.....	Alice Calhoun
Judge Arnold.....	Ramsey Wallace
Robert Ware.....	Herbert Fortier
"Bull" Mulligan.....	Oliver Hardy
Mrs. Wilding.....	Adele Farrington
Mr. Wilding.....	Arthur Hoyt
Jack Wilding.....	Frank Crane
Pete.....	James Farley
Captain Carl Herman.....	Henry Hebert
Babette.....	Maud Emery

By Gene Wright. Scenario by Bradley J. Smollen. Directed by David Divad. Produced by Vitagraph.

The Story—Girl of the slums is rescued from her environment by humanitarian who adopts her. Her benefactor has saved her from prison term, the judge condemning her from the argument that such types are not worth saving. War breaks out and she enlists as nurse and rescues the judge. He does not know her but worships her memory. Eventually he is forced to admit that his theory is wrong when he falls in love with her.

Classification—Heart interest story tinged with romance. Carries atmosphere of slums and that of society.

Production Highlights—Star's fine performance getting into character throughout. Her costumes. Scenes of slum life. The good atmosphere.

Exploitation Angles—Ballyhoo the star as having her best picture since "The Little Minister." Play up title and describe it as a highly interesting study of character in the making.

The Timber Queen

Every retailer knows that it's fine business to sell fifteen of an article at one time, instead of one.

His selling effort is no greater. His overhead is no greater. He has insured against having the balance of the business, with its profit, going to a competitor. With a good article he has pleased the customer and more than pleased himself.

You can do just that thing with "The Timber Queen." Give it a good send-off in your advertising. Get your people in for the first episode.

They are sold for the whole fifteen.

It's a great big Western serial, beautiful, thrilling, splendidly produced. It will live up to every good thing you say of it.

Two reel Western Dramas that any exhibitor can be proud to show—

WESTERN DRAMA is very popular for the reason that people like to be thrilled, like to see the life and romance of the last frontier.

The chief criticism of many Westerns has been due to the stories. People don't like to know beforehand how the picture is going to end.

The Range Rider Series have true feature stories.

Any one of them has enough story to fill a good five reel feature.

And each one has a real wallop for a finish.

Quality sticks out all over them like the quills on a porcupine.

"The Galloping Kid"

Universal—4783 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS is going to please them. Any story laid in the West which gets away from the usual cattle rustling will send any patron away satisfied. Ed (Hoot) Gibson has a breezy comedy melodrama here—one which places him in a likeable role—a happy-go-lucky drifter who, apparently, doesn't care what happens, and while it doesn't rely upon a display of armament or furious riding, the highlights are taken care of in some slices of intimate hokum.

The National Board of Review has recommended this picture as especially suitable for adolescents. But we rise to remark that it will please a considerable majority who voted for Cleveland or Blaine. It keeps going from the moment that Hoot seats himself on a baggage truck and waits for something to happen. And when he accepts a ten spot to drive a rancher's daughter to her home you sit right up and pay attention. There is an oily villain here whose life is threatened if he does not give up his attention to the girl. So he bribes our hero. Gibson doesn't care a hoot whether he gets over with her or not. He reaches the house and is employed on the spot to act as chaperon for the girl. But she is a little tease and before you know it she has trapped him with the aid of the crook—trapped him up among the rocky cliffs the erstwhile abode of the cliff dwellers.

And here comes the characteristic Gibson action. He learns that the villain is scheming to mulct the rancher out of his property. In reality the crook is a mining engineer determined to gain title to the girl's heart and to the cliffs for the sake of the platinum secreted in them. So he rounds up the hirelings and the chief arch-plotter. This is all presented in a happy-go-lucky fashion, the melodrama being evenly balanced with the comedy. And because he looks the drifter and drifts along in an indifferent way, the girl soon becomes interested. Hoot performs his duty, and the conclusion is a breezy touch since it shows him endeavoring to pass out of her life by riding the bumpers on a freight car. But he drops to the rails and—there is the girl waiting for him with a horse and buggy. A neat little Western and you'll agree with us that it offers variation from the usual pattern. The direction is particularly good—there being several novel incidents introduced.

The Cast

"Simplex" Cox.....Ed (Hoot) Gibson
Helen Arnett.....Edna Murphy
"Five-Notch" Arnette.....Lionel Belmore
Fred Bolston.....Leon Bary
Steve Larabee.....Jack Walters
Zek Hawkins.....Percy Challenger
By William H. Hamby. Scenario by A. P. Younger. Directed by Nat Ross. Photographed by Arthur E. Reeves. Produced by Universal.

The Story—Drifter is hired by crook posing as artist to take wealthy rancher's daughter from station to her home—the crook fearing for his life. The drifter is so fearless that the rancher employs him to act as chaperon for the girl. She makes life miserable for him. The crook double-crosses him, but the hero discovers his scheme and saves her father's property. As a result he wins the girl.

Classification—Comedy melodrama offering variation of usual western plot. Some thrills and plenty of romance.

Production Highlights—The adaptability of Gibson for his role of happy-go-lucky drifter. Scene when he is trapped in cliff. Scene when he captures the hirelings of the crook. The comedy moments. The pleasing work of Edna Murphy. The novel touches in the direction.

Exploitation Angles—There is a snappy title to this picture. So use it. Use a ballyhoo stunt with a cowboy galloping up and down the streets advertising the picture. Play it up as a breezy and interesting picture. And use a comedy angle in all your copy.

Drawing Power—This will get over wherever shown.

"A Ladies' Man"

Metro—3000 Feet

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

MOST motion picture audiences have seen Bull Montana in some of the biggest screen offerings, notably with Doug Fairbanks. Many have suggested that he would be good as a star. Well, here the Adonis of the shadow stage gets his chance and he makes the most of it. The film is in three reels and every one of them is packed with action fast and furious at times.

Bull as Oswald, the orphan, who makes his debut into society, gives the screen a character that is a distinct novelty, to say the least. His entrance at the "soup and fish" reception after ten years in the underworld, is a moment not soon to be forgotten. Bull is given ample opportunity to display his athletic prowess and in the scenes in which he rids a house of "ghosts," he demonstrates that he wields a wicked right and left.

The comedy has been given a very attractive mounting—high class in every way. The cast contains several names well known in screenland. Myrtle Lind is an attractive leading lady, but we would have liked to see someone other than Claire McDowell as the mother. We have always associated Claire with the better things in filmplay and it was a distinct shock to see her here. Snitz Edwards overdoes his part as an ex-jockey.

The novelty of Bull Montana in evening clothes has its appeal. Bull also stages a dance with Edwards that is amusing, but the throwing of a dozen or so "ghosts" down a clothes chute is the fun climax of the picture. "A Ladies' Man" is a novelty. Novelty is scarce on the screen at present. Moral—book this one.

The Cast

The Orphan.....Bull Montana
The Millionaire.....Charles Mailles
His Wife.....Claire McDowell
His Niece.....Myrtle Lind
Her Fiance.....Stanhope Wheatcroft
The Rival.....Frank Kingsley
Ex-Jockey.....Snitz Edwards
Hard Boiled Egg.....Chuck Reisner
His Offspring.....Dicky Reisner

Story and direction by Hunt Stromberg.

The Story—Oswald, an orphan, runs away from home at the age of ten. Years later he returns to his wealthy foster parents after growing into a real underworld bully. Naturally, parents and guests are shocked, but they all take him to their arms when he throws out a couple of burglars. Then he's called upon to rid an aunt's home of "ghosts." He does. He wins the beautiful girl.

Classification—A fast moving comedy with the handsomest man on the screen tossing humans about the landscape.

Production Highlights—The fine setting given the picture. The cast of well known stars. The scenes in the gymnasium and the "ghost" episodes. The society reception and the dance executed by Montana and Snitz Edwards. The fast action in the last reel.

Exploitation Angles—Tell them Bull Montana has reached stardom at last. The gymnasium scenes offer an opportunity for a tie-up with your sporting goods store. The title offers a hint for some good stunts. Might dress up the biggest, toughest guy in town in evening clothes and put him on the street.

"The Woman He Loved"

Frothingham-American Releasing—5200 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHEN WILLIAM V. MONG, the character actor, started out to write his own story here, he had the best intentions in the world of contributing one of those human, soul-stirring dramas of a persecuted life. His characterization is sound enough, and he gets down to the core of the persecution in showing a Jew leaving Russia at the height of a pogrom and suffering all sorts of mental worries before he gets on his feet and smiles happily over his new found prosperity and the fact that racial discrimination has been eliminated.

Mr. Mong covers too much ground. When he bobs up as a stray peddler in New York's Ghetto, his wife leaves him, taking with her their little boy. This upsets him so that he migrates to Chicago, San Francisco and finally settles down as a Colorado farmer. Years elapse and the neighboring rancher voices his opinion of Jews in general and the erstwhile peddler in particular. Meanwhile the child has been adopted by a wealthy family and is in love with the neighbor's daughter. The Russian suffers again when his buildings burn so he returns to his peddling activities in Gotham's Ghetto. What of the wife? Her conscience returns when the philanderer is taken in custody by the law, and soon after a reconciliation is effected. And the father and son are reunited when the former saves the youth's fiancée from disgrace in a conveniently melodramatic scene.

The trouble with this picture is its reliance upon the long arm of coincidence. Where it scores is in the detail and characterization. Mr. Mong, always dependable in his portrayals, manages to get a deal of humanity and pathos into his study of the Russian dreamer who would come to America and become a rich farmer. The scenes of the Ghetto are handled with a good eye for the atmosphere. And the human touch here is well established. Of course the actor-author's theme of the futility of race prejudice is carried on to the end. Thus the story serves a purpose after all, even though it loses in logic and dramatic force as a result of the convenient episodes, which bring his family back into the Jew's life.

The forepart of the story is much more genuine than the latter reels when Mr. Mong, thinking a punch is needed, supplies the melodrama. Still it may be labeled a human interest story because of its characterization and detail. And doubtless will please the steady patron.

The Cast

Nathan Levinsky.....William V. Mong
Esther Levinsky.....Marcia Manon
Jimmy Danvers.....Eddie Sutherland
Helen Comstock.....Mary Wynn
John Comstock.....Charles French
Max Levy.....Fred Malatesta
John Danvers.....Harvey Clark
David Levinsky (as a child).....Bruce Guerin
Rosie Romansky.....Lucile Ward

Story and Scenario by William V. Mong. Directed by Edward Sloman. Photographed by Antonio Gaudio. Produced by J. L. Frothingham. Distributed by American Releasing Corp.

The Story—Russian Jew suffers from pogrom in Russia but escapes to America. Ekes out living as New York peddler. His wife leaves him, taking with her their little boy. Some years later the father purchases a farm in the West but again suffers hardships through fire. Discovers his boy and is reconciled to his wife. He becomes instrumental in saving the youth's fiancée from disgrace.

Classification—Heart interest story based upon family separation. Much sentiment and character study here.

Production Highlights—The good effort of the author and featured player to make his story genuine. Atmospheric details of life in Ghetto. The heart interest note. Good work of cast.

Exploitation Angles—Play it up for its heart interest, mentioning the suffering of the leading character. If you have a Jewish clientele, this will go like a house afire. Atmospheric prologue will help in putting it over.

"Moonshine Valley"

Fox—5679 Feet

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

"AND a little child shall lead them!" Here we have another version of that ever popular theme. Its pure unadulterated melodrama, a red-blooded story which gives our old friend Bill Farnum opportunity to put over a portrayal of real dramatic power. The plot puts Bill right down in a wild outdoors locale and makes him wage a couple of fistic encounters with the villain that will please the most jaded movie fan.

The title is misleading. There's no moonshine in this one, whatever, unless that is what they are drinking in the one saloon set. The picture opens with action and keeps up a merry pace until the climax. There's some fine acting by Holmes Herbert and Sadie Mullen, the former as the doctor and the latter as the wife. One of the features of the picture is the work of Dawn O'Day, a three-year-old, who will certainly interest your feminine fans. Then there's a dog that's almost human and has some important action to put over.

The picture has its moments. Yes, there are several battles between the hero and the villain, one on the brink of a steep bluff and the other in the cabin at the close of the picture. Both will make fans sit up and take notice. The story is not an original one in theme, but its well done in this instance and Herbert Brenon's fine direction is evident throughout.

The outdoor views give us some attractive woodland shots, mountains, waterfalls, forests and long stretches of landscape. Most folks like Farnum in this type of picture and exhibitors who know their patrons like action can book this one safely. The story runs smoothly throughout, the subtitles are readable and the lighting effects up to the usual Fox standard.

The Cast

Ned Connors.....William Farnum
His wife.....Sadie Mullen
Dr. Martin.....Holmes Herbert
Nancy, a child.....Dawn O'Day
Jeanne, the dog.....Jean Bronte
By Mary Murillo. Directed by Herbert Brenon. Scenario by Mary Murillo and Herbert Brenon. Photographed by Tom Molloy.

The Story—Deals with the adventures of a man whose wife elopes with a doctor. A child is born to them. Later on she becomes lost and is found by the husband who takes her to his mountain home. The husband, now crazed with drink and his misfortunes since his wife's elopement, is reformed by the child. The doctor is killed in a fight with the husband, who is reunited with his wife.

Classification—A melodramatic tale of the eternal triangle type, containing a full quota of thrills and some fine natural settings.

Production Highlights—The strong characterization given by William Farnum. The appeal of Dawn O'Day as the child. The good supporting cast. The long shots of attractive outdoor views. The rescue of the doctor just as the carriage is about to plunge over a cliff. The fights between Farnum and Herbert. The work of the dog, who is a real star. The moments between the husband and the child. Some excellent photography and direction.

Exploitation Angles—Bill Farnum is a popular player. Play up his name. Tell patrons Bill is back again in the "rough stuff." There is also a talented child actress who should be given prominent space in the ads. Might dress the front of the lobby and box office in log cabin fashion with miner's tools placed about. Might put some old whiskey barrels in the scene also, labeled "Moonshine."

Drawing Power—If your audiences like melodrama, book this one. It's your old friend Bill Farnum at his best is the kind of picture for which he is best suited. Should go over most anywhere.

"Face to Face"

Playgoers Pictures—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

A YOUTHFUL burglar, with a drug-stained mind, intent on robbing a home, gets in through the bathroom window. Being filled with "snow" he is naturally in fine condition for seeing things. He sees himself reflected in the mirror which runs the entire length of the door. Alarmed he fires at the image, believing it to be another person. At the same time that the "dope" fires at his image in the glass, a wealthy man commits suicide. He, of course, being caught in the bathroom with a gun in his hand, is accused of the murder. It's rather meagre stuff with which to weave a five-reel story.

Marguerite Marsh in the role of a female Sherlock Holmes solves the mystery, although we must admit that the story does possess its moments of surprise. The picture is well staged with one exception. A jarring note is sounded when in most of the interiors we gaze through windows and see cotton decorating the railings without. One can always tell snow from cotton. The ice sport scenes in the beginning of the picture show some good camera work. Frances White is very much miscast as the "vamp." She is not the least convincing in the role. Miss Marsh is attractive, but is not called upon for much histrionic display. Joseph Marba is too theatrical in his interpretation of the "heavy." Coit Albertson as the son is adequate.

The story opens with the trial and then throughout the picture skips back and forth from the trial to incident of the action being explained by those on the witness stand. This makes for rough continuity. There are a number of legal inconsistencies during the progress of the investigation of the case and in the courtroom. There are some dramatic situations.

The Cast

Helen Marsley.....Marguerite Marsh
Grace Weston.....Edna Holman
John W. Weston.....Richard Stewart
Jack Weston.....Coit Albertson
Martin Hartley.....Joseph Marba
Cleo Rand.....Frances White
Bert Manners.....William Kendall
Reginald Warde Production. Playgoers Picture distributed through Associated Exhibitors.

The Story—John W. Weston, weighed down by the financial collapse of his company, takes his own life. About the same time as the fatal shot is fired, a dope crazed youth climbed through a window of the home, sees himself in a mirror, thinks it is someone else and also fires. He is caught with the gun in his hand. He is accused of murder. A chum of the dead man's daughter, however, frees the youth after solving the mystery and proving the guilt of the villain for stealing securities.

Classification—A mystery drama which is not overly convincing.

Production Highlights—Some attractive interiors. The winter sports scenes. The trial and the solving of the cause for the man's death. The pleasing personality of Marguerite Marsh.

Exploitation Angles—Play this one up as a mystery tale. The star is well known, but let them know that she is the sister of Mae Marsh. Go easy on lauding this to the skies, however.

"Love Is an Awful Thing"

Selznick—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE farcical complications are ample enough in this latest Owen Moore entry which is a fitting companion piece to his "Reported Missing," even if it doesn't depend upon a deal of physical action for its highlights. It mostly concerns getting into a dilemma and then getting out of it—and the course determined upon is more or less that of the grand pursuit. Naturally with all farcical stories—a word of explanation by one of the characters would have smashed the bubble. But then such a procedure would be against the ethics of this type of entertainment.

This bubble foams with breezy incident, giving Moore a happy role which he plays in a mocking manner. To be a true farceur it behooves the interpreter to wear a sober expression. "Love Is An Awful Thing" is broad farce throughout, yet it never slackens for want of a spontaneous episode. It becomes highly ridiculous and as a result the audience is kept in a gay mood most of the time. There are no gaps—the characters jumping on the scene to complete the incident without making it seem obvious. This is good farcical development. In fact the treatment of it is much better than the plot which concerns hoodwinking a girl so that she will not discover her fiancé's horrible past—a past which turns out to be quite devoid of sin.

Our hero has a troublesome time winning consent of the girl's father. Then when things look pretty, along comes a chorus girl from the misty yesteryear. He is caught at the station by his beloved and to make it appear that he is married to the aging chorine, he employs the superintendent's wife to appear much married to him. And the kids are introduced as evidence. This introduces a couple of counterplots, since the superintendent must be kept in the dark. The farce develops with a creditable pace right down to the altar where the bride is kept waiting as the groom dodges a process server and seeks to recover some damaging letters.

It's a grand and merry chase and a number of the episodes sparkle with humor. Occasionally a riotous moment occurs when the pseudo wife holds the scene or when the negro comedian Douglass Carter, playing a porter, puts over a Bert Williams touch. The feminine support is offered by Marjorie Daw, Kathryn Perry and Alice Howell. All give first rate performances. Arthur Hoyt makes a fussy valet and lawyer highly amusing. In all the picture is an enjoyable skit—one well played, directed, captioned, and photographed.

The Cast

Anthony Churchill.....Owen Moore
Judge Griggs.....Thomas Guise
Helen Griggs.....Marjorie Daw
Ruth Allen.....Kathryn Perry
Harold Wright.....Arthur Hoyt
Porter.....Douglass Carter
Marion.....Charlotte Mineau
Superintendent.....Snitz Edwards
Superintendent's Wife.....Alice Howell

By Victor Heerman. Directed by Victor Heerman. Produced by Selznick.

The Story—Youth about to marry sweetheart finds himself in considerable trouble when girl of former romance comes on the scene and attempts to make him keep his promise to wed her. To eliminate her he has another man's wife act as his own. This complicates matters, for his fiancée discovers the evidence and believes him a scoundrel. Explanations occur eventually when the bride is left waiting at the altar, while he dodges a process server and tries to steal some incriminating letters.

Classification—Farce-comedy which carries on complications of a young couple approaching matrimony. Plenty of speed, high jinks and adventure.

Drawing Power—Is entertaining enough for week's run. Will please most any class of audience except the congenital dumb-bells. And they don't matter, as they won't know what it is all about.

"A Broadway Rose"

Metro—Eight Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

MAE MURRAY can dance! There's no denying that fact. In this, her most elaborately mounted starring vehicle to date, the star's terpsichorean exhibitions are the real feature of the picture and they are given in settings of exquisite beauty and charm.

The story has been done before. We have all heard about the country girl who rises to ethereal heights on the Great White Way, falling in love with the millionaire's son, saying farewell to Broadway so that she may fully enjoy her romance, finding that she is unwelcome in the home of her husband and then realizing final happiness in the arms of her country sweetheart. It's all been done over again, but never has the idea been mounted in such lavish scenic investiture.

Monte Blue is ideal as the rural sweetheart. Monte never overacts and therein lies the secret of his success.

The subtitles are finely colored, being snappy and original. The camera work is unusually artistic and the lighting exquisite. The action could be speeded up if some of Mae's over-emotional moments were curtailed and the scenes in the theatre during the dancer's farewell performance edited.

The picture affords excellent opportunity for musical accompaniment, especially in the many dance scenes. Lovers of horseflesh will find delight in the tryouts at the big country estate track. The society tea is well staged and contains moments of real dramatic display on the part of the star. "A Broadway Rose" is a good box office subject. Folks in "the sticks" are always curious over the mysterious high life in Gotham. This picture will satisfy that curiosity.

The Cast

Rosalie Lawrence.....Mae Murray

By Edmund Goulding. Scenario by Edmund Goulding. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Photographed by Oliver T. Marsh.

The Story—A country girl wins favor on Broadway as a dancer. She loves Hugh Thompson. His parents, wealthy folk, oppose his infatuation. Seeking only happiness for herself and the man she loves, she consents to a secret marriage to avoid a break between Hugh and his family. The family, however, discovers the facts, and convince the son to break off with his wife. The dancer finds happiness with her country lover after a series of dramatic complications.

Classification—An elaborately produced romance of Broadway and the country featured by the dancing of Mae Murray.

Production Highlights—The elaborate mounting of the picture. The dancing of the star. The scenes of the theatre interior. The fine shots of the country estate and the horse tryouts. The humiliation of the little dancer at the Society Tea. The beautiful lighting effects. Miss Murray's striking costumes.

Exploitation Angles—Tell the folks they'll see Broadway life as it really is. Thousands will respond to that. Put over tieups with your fashion shops using photos of Miss Murray and her striking gowns as worn in the picture. The picture affords fine opportunity for a solo dance prologue copied after any one of the several in the picture. The distributing has prepared some attractive paper. Use it freely.

Drawing Power—Should go over in first class theatres. Especially good for the towns and should appeal to community house audiences.

"Burning Sands"

Melford-Paramount—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE vogue for romances of the Orient—of the call of the white hot sands is still upon us. "The Sheik" really established it because of Valentino and the idea is becoming as popular for screen fiction as the Northwest Mounted formula. There is no variation in "Burning Sands," which, of course, robs it of any real story interest. Merely placing a fugitive from civilization near an oasis in the desert and presenting him as one of nature's noblemen when the girl comes into his life is too simple. Even with the colorful background—the palms, the charging tribesmen, and all the other atmospheric details enhancing it the story is too obvious, too sugar-coated with sentiment and virtue to quicken the pulse and stir the imagination.

And with no variation the picture falters as entertainment among those who want something else than bringing two romancers together. "Burning Sands" is trite. It tells nothing. You look upon the luxury loving society girl charmed by the colorful tan and wardrobe of the hero. She seems to be ready for the big love and it comes to her because the worldly attractions of civilization are not there to beckon. The rugged simplicity and honesty of the Englishman who exiled himself are virtues enough to mould her life and love. There are some scenes of physical action, Milton Sills sees to it that interlopers with evil thoughts must be punished. And there is some rivalry between the heroine and a French dancer for the attention of the made-over Arab.

Since Mr. Melford made "The Sheik," he knew his background. And as far as the production is concerned the picture is complete with all the necessary trimmings and trappings. The picture carries no mean title. The mere mention of it at the table where the younger generation are seated will be enough to attract them to the theatre. But the story did not have the sale of "The Sheik." And naturally it won't be such a boxoffice attraction. Mr. Sills extracts every vital element from the characterization. His performance, almost convincing, and the picturesque background, offer some compensation for a mediocre story. The rest of the players are adequate.

The Cast

Muriel Blair, an English girl.....Wanda Hawley
Daniel Lane, a philosopher.....Milton Sills
Kate Bindane, Muriel's friend.....Louise Dresser
Lizette, a dancer.....Jacqueline Logan
Robert Barthampton, an English official.....Robert Cain
Mr. Bindane.....Fenwick Oliver
Governor.....Winter Hall
Secretary.....Harris Gordon
Ibrahim, an Arab.....Albert Roscoe
Old Sheik.....Cecil Holland
Hussein.....Joe Ray

By Arthur Weigall, Scenario by Olga Printzlaux and Waldemar Young. Directed by George Melford. Produced by Famous Players.

The Story—Young Englishman, tired of civilization, takes up his abode in the Arabian desert. The call of romance is heard and he charms a frivolous society girl from his own country and succeeds in winning her. Jealous French girl nearly disillusions her rival but true love finally conquers.

Classification—Romance of the desert based upon the customary formula—the white girl falling in love with the adventurous white man and willing to follow him to the ends of earth. Usual atmosphere.

Production Highlights—Milton Sills gives convincing performance. Atmospheric production by director who staged "The Sheik." Scenes on the Nile and in the desert. Good work of cast which includes Wanda Hawley, Jacqueline Logan, Albert Roscoe and Louise Dresser.

Exploitation Angles—Did you cash in on "The Sheik?" Then go after the crowd on this one. Title should attract them now that the Oriental story is in vogue. Put on your atmosphere in your music and presentation.

Drawing Power—Will please the romancers. Colorful production will get it over.

Reviews of Latest Short Subject Releases

"Ma and Pa"

(Sennett-First National Comedy—Two Reels)

BILLY BEVAN and Mildred June are featured in this latest release from Mack Sennett's laugh shop. The picture opens with a wedding, in which the rejected suitor figures conspicuously. Then, after Bevan has been struck by a boot with a brick in it, the action cuts to five years later, with Bevan pacing the floor with an armful of youngsters. Later, we see the children washed and hung out on the line to dry.

The rejected suitor returns and renews his advances. The husband returns, and some comedy business follows in which Bevan attempts to break down the door, although there is a large hole in the wall beside it.

The villain disposed of, Bevan, who is a paper hanger, goes to work. He meets a vaudeville actress, and arranges to paper her room. He does so, covering windows, doors and baseboard. The husband breaks in, and Bevan is thrown out.

She has promised him a job at the theater, however, and we next see him behind the scenes, where "Way Down North" is being presented. The usual mishaps follow, ending in the accidental starting of the wind and rain machine, which blows everything to pieces. The picture then ends with Bevan happily reunited with his family.

The best part of this comedy is in the first reel, and the scenes with the cute kids and small dog should go big in any house. Most of the comedy business is not particularly new, though there should be a fairly plentiful number of laughs. Mildred June appears to advantage. All in all, it is a good, average release.—L. C. MOEN.

"Their First Vacation"

(Carter DeHaven Comedy—Two Reels—Released through F. B. O.)

THE DeHavens, Carter and Flora, are back in the short subject field, being sponsored by the Film Booking Offices in a series of two-reel domestic comedies. The first is a refined, high-class laughgetter, with swift action and many spontaneous laughs. It should be a splendid supplement to the program of any first-run house in the country and is easily entitled to a generous space in the billing.

"Their First Vacation" brings the newlyweds to the country in search of hotel accommodations, and after some introductory gags in the hotel lobby, the action starts with an automobile trip, in the course of which occurs a breakdown and a kidnapping. The richest part of the comedy is the scene showing Carter tied to a log floating down a stream towards a sawmill. He is hoisted up the runway and the saw descends to where his feet would be if he did not draw them up. The log moves on and when the saw again comes into place he is nearly decapitated. And he is tossed into the mill, a talking, walking piece of lumber.

"Their First Vacation" undoubtedly gives the DeHavens an auspicious start in the short subject field. The story is by Mr. DeHaven himself and the direction by Mal St. Clair.—LAURENCE REID.

"In the Days of Buffalo Bill"

(18 Episode Serial—Universal)

DOESN'T this title ring with romance and adventure? Doesn't it convey to you a world of entertainment, touching as it does, upon the historical drama of America in the making—when buffaloes and Indians roamed the plains—when the pony express carried the mail across the Rockies—when Col. William F. Cody, later known as Buffalo Bill, established himself as the country's greatest scout? Universal should feel immensely proud over this achievement. It is a serial which, like the company's other continued stories of late, gets away from the exploitation of heroic daredevilry for the sake of a thrill. The excitement is there, nevertheless, and what is shown bears the stamp of authentic realism.

The historical values keep pace with the dramatic values and because of the glamour attached to the stirring days of the sixties and seventies, every spectator will respond and thank his stars that the screen has humanized this adventurous epoch. It's a picture of the great outdoors interspersed with views of Lincoln's cabinet, his signing of the bill for the great iron trail, now called the Union Pacific Railroad, and his assassination. These particular scenes have a place here and are executed with appreciation for historic records. Some of the cabinet incidents appear like fac-similes of the original plates.

"In the Days of Buffalo Bill" exudes romance and adventure. There is something doing every minute in the shape of vigorous action. And the suspense keeps pace with it. The prairie schooners, the raids of the Sioux, the exploits of Col. Cody and his fearless companions of the pony express, played with dash and enthusiasm by Art Acord, the vital moulding of historical facts coupled with just enough fiction to provide story interest—these are all incorporated here. The days of the Civil War are just far enough removed in the background of history to lend an irresistible glamor for the spectator. He will respond and your returns will stuff the money boxes.

The serial offers great exploitation values. You have your schools, your educational societies, and a hundred other tie-ups for putting the picture over. It will travel by word of mouth. Buffalo Bill lingers in the memory as one of the country's most picturesque figures. While he belongs to the ages atop Lookout mountain, his vivid personality has been humanized by Duke R. Lee so excellently that he lives again. There is love interest, sentiment, adventure, pathos, excitement, conflict—and other elements which quicken the pulse and enliven the imagination. Get it quick. Don't hesitate. Your failure to do so, is your loss and your competitor's gain. Give them real, moving history; give them vivid drama.

Universal deserves unbounded praise for its achievement. Educational, historical and dramatic values are present in rich array—all of them woven together in a vital fabric of America in the making. Robert Dillon, the scenarist, and Edward Laemmle, the director, deserve all the honors which are bound to be heaped upon them. It must have taken painstaking research to accomplish so much. And not a scene is out of place. The technical details are perfect. And the players (those who interpret the historical figures) have been selected for their adaptability.

"Pop Tuttle's Movie Queen"

(Plum Center Comedy—Two Reels—Released through F. B. O.)

OUR old friend Dan Mason, whom we last saw as the Skipper in the Toonerville Trolley series, has returned in a series of rustic comedies which Film Booking Offices is releasing, and judging from the first, he is going to hit a thousand per cent in the entertainment league. "Pop Tuttle's Movie queen" is the funniest rube comedy we have ever seen. It is the richest in gags, the cleverest in titles, and at the same time the most convincing in its story and characterizations. It is so easy to make a "rube" so thoroughly burlesqued that the effect is anything but funny, and the wonder is that Mason can keep from straining the credulity of the audience and still hit the laugh gong. Probably his long experience and the guiding hand of Robert Eddy, who directed him in the first of the Toonerville series, are the responsible factors.

"Pop Tuttle" hits the trail that "Chic" Sale blazed in "His Nibs" in this comedy, and in some scenes goes ahead of him. A good part of the action is laid in a small town movie "palace," where "Pop" is manager, billposter, projectionist and announcer. Scenes of New York during the Third Liberty Loan Drive and the latest Kalem drama are on the program. He proves his worth as an exploiter by introducing a "famous movie star in person." He atomizes the entire theatre immediately before the showing, and he fights the reformers who try to stop his show. His official capacity is that of bus driver, where an actress named Wilma Hervey acts as a splendid foil. Every title is a laugh. And a great many of the gags have never before been seen on the screen in any shape or form.

If the Paul Gerson Pictures Corporation, producers of these comedies, can keep up the pace, they are going a long way towards giving the exhibitor a short subject series that will command a big following.—LAURENCE REID.

"Felix Comes Back"

(Pat Sullivan—Winkler)

Pat Sullivan has produced another ingenious animated cartoon in "Felix Comes Back." His pet character, Felix the cat, annoys the town butcher by luring away the sausages, that the enraged shop keeper hurls him into the bay. Felix is swallowed by a whale and an animated Nanook digs him out up in the frozen north. Felix has a hard time saving himself from the unfriendly animals in this new clime but eventually he takes refuge in a cake of ice. Thus he returns to the butcher shop.

Sullivan's animation always has been about the best there is in this particular line of picture making. Furthermore he always seems able to introduce novelty into his work. He depends as much on novel business as does a comedian. The gag of using interrogation points in the action itself is still funny and Sullivan utilizes it just often enough to have it remain so. The Felix series ought to become as popular in its line as the comedies of the slapstick kings are in their lines.—PETER MILNE.

Live News From Producers

Conducted by EDMOND F. SUPPLE

"Heart's Aflame" Is Being Edited

WITH the production of "Hearts Aflame" as a big all-star special for Louis B. Mayer a new independent producer makes his debut in the person of Reginald Barker, long recognized as one of the greatest directors in the industry. Completed in the filming last week and now in the cutting and titling stages, the picture is predicted to be one of the outstanding box office triumphs of the fall season.

The story is based on Harold Titus' famous novel, "Timber," and was prepared for the screen by J. G. Hawks and L. G. Rigby. In the cast are Frank Keenan, Anna Q. Nilsson, Craig Ward, Richard Headrick, Russell Simpson, Richard Tucker, Walt Whitman, Martha Mattox, Stanton Heck, Ralph Cloninger, Irene Hunt, Joan Standing, Lee Shumway, John Dill and Gordon Magee. Percy Hilburn, who has photographed all of the Reginald Barker pictures of the past five years, was chief cameraman.

Tarkington's "Flirt" to Be Completed Soon

"The Flirt," Universal's Jewel production of Booth Tarkington's celebrated novel, is nearing completion at Universal City. The featured players are Eileen Percy and Helen Jerome Eddy, who are strikingly contrasted in the two leading roles.

Hobart Henley, the director, is drawing the production to a close after thirteen weeks of painstaking effort.

A. P. Younger prepared the adaptation and Virgil Miller photographed.

The final scenes probably will be made within a week.

Critic Lists Thrills in "The Fast Mail"

The following statistics were compiled by a motion picture critic after witnessing "The Fast Mail," Lincoln J. Carter's famous melodrama adapted to the screen by Fox Film Corporation.

"One hundred and eleven thrills that stand the hair on end—

"Seventy-eight dramatic moments that keeps one on the edge of the seat—

"A steeplechase that will beatify the most fastidious follower of the turf—

"Seven situations never before exhibited on the silent sheet—

"The blowing up of a river steamboat in which an actual vessel is destroyed and no miniatures used."

Selznick Feature on Broadway

"Love Is An Awful Thing," Playing at the N. Y. Criterion This Week

COMING to the Criterion theatre beginning Sunday is another one of those hilarious Owen Moore farces called "Love Is an Awful Thing." The story was written and directed by Victor Heerman and it is acted by a cast which includes many of the players who appeared in "Reported Missing" with some interesting additions.

Kathryn Perry formerly of the Follies, whose decorative qualities are well-known to the so called tired business men, appears in "Love Is an Awful Thing." After looking at her no one will agree with the title.

Another young lady who isn't hard to look at is Marjorie Daw.

She, too, will try to convince the customers of the futility of love. Marjorie is a protegee of Geraldine Farrar's and is a really intense "Gerry Flapper."

There is a real treat in store for those who have not yet seen Douglas Carter, the Western comedian of color. Not since the days of Bert Williams has there been so promising a negro laughmaker as this long, lean, lonesome looking native son of California. He is the last word in unconscious comedians.

Others in the cast who are known for their ability to inspire hilarity are Snitz Edwards, Alice Howell and Charlotte Mineau.

New Ince Special Is Announced

"Skin Deep" Will be Distributed Soon by First National Pictures

"SKIN DEEP," a melodrama produced from an original story by Marc Edmond Jones, will be Thomas H. Ince's next special production for distribution by Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

Coming as it does on the heels of "Hail the Woman," and following such exceptional box office productions as "Lying Lips," "Mother o' Mine" and "The Cup of Life," "Skin Deep" is expected to be one of the big attractions of the season. The Ince schedule for 1922 includes eight special productions.

The principal roles in "Skin Deep" are carried by Milton Sills and Florence Vidor, the latter of whom has won new laurels for herself as a result of the work she did as Judith Beresford in "Hail the Woman." The rest of the cast includes Marcia Manon, Frank Champeau, Charles Clary, Joe Singleton and Winter Hall.

The production was directed by Lambert Hillyer under the supervision of Mr. Ince. Mr. Hillyer, who made his debut in pictures as a cameraman for Mr. Ince in the old days at Inceville, returned to the Ince studios to write the continuity and direct this new picture. Mr. Hillyer's work as a scenarioist, as a writer of original stories and as a director is well known.

"Skin Deep" has been in the course of production for more than six months, and has reached the final stages of cutting to which Mr. Ince has devoted his personal attention. During the filming of

"Hungry Hearts" Pre-released

Special Presentation to be Given Goldwyn Picture at Capitol Theatre

"HUNGRY HEARTS" the Goldwyn picture about which such wonderful reports have been leaking out for several months past, is to receive its first pre-release screening at New York's Capitol Theatre soon. This is the photoplay of East Side immigrant life in New York made from the volume of short stories by Anzia Yezierska, bearing the same title as the picture.

E. Mason Hopper directed the photoplay and his many friends in the film world have been maintaining for months that he has gone his own remarkable direction of "Dangerous Curves Ahead" one better in the new film. He advised

The chief characters in "Hungry Hearts" are said to be acted with remarkably life like coloring by Rose Rosanova, E. A. Warren, Bryant Washburn, Helen Ferguson, George Siegman, A. Budin and a dozen others. Each role stands out like one's next door neighbor, so vividly and sympathetically is it rendered, yet without ever becoming obtrusive and getting in the way of another character.

S. L. Rothafel, manager of the Capitol Theatre, is arranging for one of his special presentations in connection with "Hungry Hearts."

"Rich Men's Wives" Opens on Loew Circuit

ON the strength of the business he did with "Rich Men's Wives," the B. P. Schulberg Preferred Picture, at the U. S. theatre in Paterson, N. J., Peter Adams has booked it into his big Newark theatre, at Newark, through the Jans Film Service, New Jersey franchise holders in the Al Lichtman Corporation. The picture will play the Newark the week of September 18.

"Rich Men's Wives" has been fully listed for showing in New England, the first runs including the Boston theatre, Boston; the Strand, Hartford, and the Rialto, in Providence, the Lichtman Corporation announces.

It has been booked into thirteen houses of the West Coast Theatres chain, and extensive dates are reported from the Minneapolis territory, where J. F. Cubberley is the Lichtman franchise holder.

"Rich Men's Wives" opens on the Loew Metropolitan circuit September 11.

"The Hot Head" Will Be Next Mayo Production

Frank Mayo has finished "The Altar Stairs" and will begin production immediately at Universal City on "The Hot Head."

G. B. Lancaster wrote "The Altar Stairs." It is a colorful cruise through glowing South Seas.

Louise Lorraine appears opposite the star. Dagmar Godowsky, his wife, has an exotic role as a native girl. Lambert Hillyer directed.

"The Hot Head" will give Mayo's versatility plenty of exercise. Mrs. George Randolph Chester wrote it and her husband, a staff writer at Universal City, prepared it for screening.

Gertrude Astor Appears With Earle Williams,

Work has begun on Earle Williams' new feature, "You Never Know," and a number of the opening scenes have been shot. Gertrude Astor is playing opposite Earle Williams. Miss Astor, whose clever work in "The Spenders," "The Lion Man," "Through the Back Door," and other successes, is vividly remembered, was selected for her eminent fitness for the part of Miriam Follansbee. George Field, another favorite heavy, who will be remembered in "Diamonds Adrift," will have the part of Medina, the gun-running South American revolutionist.

Fairbanks Portrait To Be Hung in Lobby

A PORTRAIT of Douglas Fairbanks, painted by the celebrated Swedish artist, Christian Von Schneidau, will probably be hung in the lobby of the theatre in New York where the initial showing of this famous producer-actor's latest celluloid, officially titled "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," is shown.

"Instead of the elaborate decorations which frequently adorn a theatre lobby," Von Schneidau explained, "it is planned to substitute the portrait against a background of rich plush drapes which will bring out its pictorial value to best advantage."

"Kindred of the Dust" Appeals to Chicago

"Kindred of the Dust," a First National attraction, produced and directed by R. A. Walsh, with Miriam Cooper as the star, did a tremendous business at its Chicago opening, according to a telegram received at the New York office of Associated First National Pictures, from Balaban & Katz. The telegram follows:

"Kindred of the Dust" opened Chicago Theatre today tremendous business. From our observation of the impression picture is making on our audiences First National has a worthy successor to the biggest dramatic production of this year. It is perfect in every detail and we cannot recommend it too highly.

"Balaban and Katz."

Goldwyn Prepares Sales Book on New Product

Goldwyn has prepared a 28-page book, for the use of its salesmen, which includes a brief printed and pictorial account of its productions for the season of 1922-23. In all ten productions are dealt with at length, while four features in or approaching production are more briefly considered. The salesman equipped with this literature has in a handy form in front of him a sample, or foretaste, of each photoplay which will give the exhibitor an idea of what it is like. Numerous stills giving highlights from each picture are reproduced, together with some line drawings, photos of stars, directors and authors.

More Sherlock Holmes Features Are Ready

"The Tiger of San Pedro" and "The Priory School" are the two subjects in Educational's series on The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes which are now being prepared for release. These pictures, from the original stories by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, will follow "The Copper Beeches" and "The Empty House," and will feature the same actors in the principal roles, Eille Norwood as Sherlock Holmes and Hubert Willis as Dr. Watson.

Strong Cast Supports Meighan "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow" Is Justification for Title

SELDOM is there found in a motion picture more justification for a title than will be apparent in "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow," the new Thomas Meighan picture which Alfred Green is now directing at the Lasky studio, says a statement from Paramount.

The idea suggested by the title is worked out in a series of vision scenes in which Meighan sees himself at the Durbar as Viceroy of India; as a high government official in London; as one of the principals in a romance with a Russian beauty, this time in New York, and as the leading figure in wild experiences in the South Seas.

Beatrice Joy, who played the feminine lead in Cecil B. DeMille's "Manslaughter," opposite Mr. Meighan, has the role of Rita, daughter of a trader in the South Seas, while Theodore Roberts, veteran of forty years of stage and screen, is seen in a modern semi-freebooting role and supplies both comedy and serious moments.

John Milner, who played the Governor in "Manslaughter," has the part of a philosopher, Professor Jansen; June Elvidge, former star in her own right, is portraying a society role as Lady Helen; Eva Novak, erstwhile star, has the part of Vonia, a Russian girl; Laurance Wheat, former star of stage drama and musical comedy, is seen as Larry Camden; Albert Roscoe is Jim McCleod, a bully and desperado; Alec Francis, specialist in father roles, plays Sir William deVry; Robert Brower, an old-time stage actor, has a typical role and Edward Patrick and Jacqueline Dyris appear in native characterizations.

Big Audiences Welcome Castle "Slim Shoulders" Please in New York and St. Louis Houses

"SLIM SHOULDERS," released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, and the "Irene Castle Fashion Promenade," booked in conjunction with the picture, opened to crowded houses at the Capitol, New York, and the Delmonte, St. Louis, last Sunday.

More than 5,000 paid admissions were recorded at the Delmonte, which constituted the largest day's business in the history of the theatre. The attendance at the Capitol in New York was greatly in excess of this, nearly 15,000 persons attending the opening of the big production in the metropolis.

Newspaper reviews in both cities were unanimous in their praise of the picture and the fashion revue.

"A Rogues Romance" Unusual Valentino and Williams are Coupled in Harry Van Loan's Thriller.

VITAGRAPH branches are reporting more demand for "A Rogue's Romance" than booking limitations will allow. It is an unusual picture in every sense, a feature in which two stars divide honors.

In "A Rogue's Romance," Rodolph Valentino is cast as The Ferret, a café dancer, and member of the underworld. It is considered dangerous to cross The Ferret, and yet Mons. Picard, a role assumed by Earle Williams, deliberately antagonizes this man, and engages in a fist fight with him. From that hour The Ferret hounds Picard, and cleverly informs the police of his every move. But Picard is always able to outwit the police, and make an exciting escape.

A girl induces Picard to turn his powers to the benefit of society, and this man, whose love for children has caused him to adopt three, aids the police in capturing a dangerous band of criminals. He is cornered often but in each instance he manages to elude his pursuers.

Earle Williams has climbed to popularity through years of hard work and clever performance. His films are always heralded with enthusiasm by picture lovers throughout the country.

Rodolph Valentino leaped to popularity almost over night. Aside from his ability as an actor, he has won an enviable reputation as a dancer. Perhaps there is no one in the profession who more vividly interprets the dance of the Apaches than Valentino. This dance is a feature of "A Rogue's Romance."

Other well-known and popular members of the cast are Kathryn Adams, Brinsley Shaw, Marion Skinner, Maude George, Harry Van Meter and Herbert Standing.

James Young, who directed the picture, is one of the outstanding directors of today. The story is from the pen of H. H. Van Loan.

Makes a Record on the Loew Circuit

THREE Educational pictures began a run in the Loew Circuit in and about New York City on September 4, setting a record for one distributing organization.

The pictures in this extraordinary run are "A Hickory Hick," a Christie Comedy featuring Bobby Vernon; "Fair Enough," a Christie Comedy featuring Dorothy Devore, and "Spooks," a Mermaid Comedy, with Lige Conley and Elinor Lynn.

With several prints with each of these subjects in use on the Loew Circuit, there is a total of 150 days' bookings for these recent Educational releases.

Two Reel Fairy Tales For Arthur Trimble

Three completed two-reel productions featuring little Arthur Trimble will be ready, before screening for release contract will be attempted, according to Director Frederick G. Becker, who is now hard at work on the second of the contemplated series of twelve pictures.

"The Strange Adventures of Prince Courageous," as the series will be known, will consist of twelve stories from the pen of Robert Lee. A touch of fairies and witches will attract the children to this series, states Mr. Becker, but an appeal to the adult class of patronage will not be sacrificed to this end.

May Tinee Lists These As Among the Best

May Tinee, motion picture critic of the Chicago Tribune, lists "Hurricane's Gal," and Mack Sennett's "Crossroads of New York," First National Attractions, among the best photoplays of July, in a long article which appeared in a recent issue of the Tribune. She writes:

"Hurricane's Gal"—was a whirlwind of a film—effective in a melodramatic, vivid sort of way, it was just one fight after another, with Miss Dorothy Phillips in the lead, being stormy and tender by turns—but always beautiful. The picture fairly SIZZLED, there was so much doing. The big scenes were well accomplished—so well that you forgave occasional faults of detail.

"The Crossroads of New York" was a "Mack Sennett" it was Mack Sennett at his best. It was Mack Sennett sending a chill up your spine, making you laugh like an idiot, bring you up standing with a handful of straight drama ably done.

A picture nobody should miss.

Tom Mix Starts Work on New Fox Subject

Work has been started on the forthcoming Tom Mix starring vehicle "An Arabian Knight," in the William Fox West Coast Studios. Claire Adams will play opposite the star.

"Hound of the Baskervilles" to Be Early Release

"THE HOUND OF BASKERVILLES," the film version of famous Sherlock Holmes novel of the same name, with Eille Norwood in the role of the great detective of fiction will be an early release of the Film Booking Offices of America, announces that company. It has been tentatively set to follow the first Ethel Clayton production. "If I Were Queen" on the F. B. O. Program.

This Sherlock Holmes picture is of feature length and follows closely the original story by Sir A. Conan Doyle, which is published as a complete novel. Because of this latter fact, states the F. B. O. the title has a definite box office value, inasmuch as the story is known under its own title and not simply as "one of the Sherlock Holmes stories."

Good Publicity Wins Against Heat Wave

"Queen of The Moulin Rouge," now in its second week at the Mission Theatre, Los Angeles, has overcome the hottest of the hot weather now prevailing in Southern California and is launched as a genuine success.

The quarter-page ads placed in every Los Angeles newspaper have done much to stimulate business. Careful study of the press sheet and advertising material prepared by American Releasing Corporation is shown in all the copy.

Filming "Thelma" in Santa Cruz Islands

Chester Bennett and his entire company producing "Thelma," Marie Corelli's story, in which Jane Novak is starring, for F.B.O. release, spent two weeks on the Santa Cruz Islands making exterior scenes for the production.

Among those who are on location in the islands are Bert Sprotte, June Elvidge, Wedgwood Noel, Barbara Tennant, Gordon Mullen, Peter Burk, Jack Rollens, Harvey Clark and Harry Lonsdale and a corps, from the production forces of the R-C Studios, where "Thelma" is being filmed.

Buster Keaton to Take His Family Abroad

Upon the completion of two more laugh fests for First National, Buster Keaton will take a long rest. Accompanied by Natalie Talmadge Keaton and Joseph, Jr., Buster will probably visit several foreign countries before returning to his studio.

Lillian Hackett to Support Baby Peggy

Lillian Hackett, Clyde Cook's former leading lady and less recently of musical comedy stage, has been engaged by Abe Stern to play an important role with Baby Peggy.

Fox to Release Educationals

Series of Six Short-Subjects Will Be Introduced on Sept. 24 Schedule

THREE short subjects, which William Fox Corporation describe as "entertaining-educational," were recently shown as a forerunner of a series of one and two reel contributions, to be released on September 24, in a series of six. The sample offerings were found to be engaging and informative, with traces of "educational intent" removed. Release dates for following series, will be announced, later.

The first, in one reel length entitled "Volcanoes of the World," described, vividly, these mounts of historical and geographical interest, from many interesting angles. Especially are the close-up views of lava being expelled from Mt. Vesuvius and other angry craters, out of the ordinary. And deserving of special mention, are the views of a cross section of a volcano, showing the process and the likely cause of volcanic eruption. The descriptive subtitles help carry out the plan of making an educational film really entertaining, while splendidly tinted views add to the beauties of the scenes.

Secondly, "The Story of Ice" serves as a balance to the foregoing. It tells of the interesting process of harvesting ice, showing modern improvements of electrical power in use in comparison with past-date methods. The proper storing of ice is one of the most important things to know about it. While this reel is not so interesting as the one devoted to volcanoes, (from a reviewer's standpoint) undoubtedly in some parts of the world it will carry an equal value in quality of entertainment and information.

"Alligator Hunting and Farming" is a reel with many thrills. These reptiles are seldom considered by the casual observer to stand for more than a species to decorate a zoo or to make a personal appearance for the benefit of children. But the alligator industry is shown in all its departments in the film devoted to a study of their "hatch" and how they develop into mild and tame companions, in captivity, or dangerous fellows to meet on their home-grounds.

Playgoers' September Releases

Three Productions Differing Widely in Theme and Locale Are Scheduled

PLAYGOERS' Pictures offers three big releases during September. First on the list is "The Isle of Doubt," a six reel offering in which Wyndham Standing is starred. This photoplay, adapted from the well known novel by Derek Bram, combines some of the characteristics of a high class society drama with the adventure and lure of the tropics. Besides Mr. Standing, the cast includes such popular players as Dorothy MacKail, George Fawcett, Warner Richmond, and Marie Burke. Hamilton Smith directed the production, which is on an elaborate scale. Release of "The Isle of Doubt" is set for September 10th.

September 17th will see the release of "Face to Face," another six reeler, which combines a baffling criminal case with an appealing romance. Marguerite Marsh and Coit Albertson are featured, with Richard Stewart, Edna Holman, Frances White, William Kendall, and Joseph Marba playing some of the other roles.

In "The Man She Brought Back," to be released September 24th, appear Earle Fox, Doris Miller, Frank Losee, Donald Russ, Harry Lee, Frederick Burton and Charles Mackay, each of whom has a fine record in pictures. This is a five reel feature, the work of Charles Miller Productions, and was directed by Mr. Miller himself. It is a drama of the Canadian Northwest Mounted that is said to be full of punch and heart interest, and which, in plot and handling, makes a wide departure from the usual run of even the best of former tales of that country of heroism and adventure.

Wears Royal Robes in Filming of Sue Story

There are many features in the Burr-Whitman Bennett production of the "Secrets of Paris," taken from Eugene Sue's famous novel, "The Mysteries of Paris," but the one that will no doubt appeal to the women picture-lovers will be the robes worn by Miss Gladys Hulette in the throne scene. The robes formerly belonged to the Marchioness of Ely, and were worn by that titled lady at the coronation of the late King Edward VII. of England.

Mabel Normand Expected Back From Europe

Mabel Normand, it is expected, will return to Los Angeles from her European trip during the latter part of September, when she will begin production on her next starring vehicle under the Mack Sennett banner. "Suzanna," her recently completed First National picture, will be released on November 6.

"Young Diana" Goes to Rialto from Rivoli

OWING to the signal success of Marion Davies in "The Young Diana," at the Rivoli, the picture has been held over for a second week on Broadway at the Rialto. With the sole exception of "Blood and Sand," "The Young Diana" carried off the record for summer receipts at the Rivoli. Miss Davies' surprising impersonation of the drab little spinster and her startling transformation proved the sensation of Broadway.

Cosmopolitan's picturization of James Oliver Curwood's popular story, "The Valley of Silent Men," with Alma Rubens as the feature player, also scored at the Rialto. Only the necessity of its making way for "The Young Diana" prevented its being held over another week.

Semon Comedy Showing Proves a "Riot"

Reports from Los Angeles on the pre-showing of the new Larry Semon comedy at the Rivoli are briefly that it was "a riot." As the Rivoli's patronage is made up of a rather dignified class of screen critics, and hard boiled as to comedies, Larry is pleased. Whatever the Rivoli thinks of it, the comedy is certainly full of action. As yet it has no title. Vitagraph has not settled upon anything quite explosive enough.

"The Isle of Doubt" to be Given Loew Time

"The Isle of Doubt," the Playgoers' feature in which Wyndham Standing is the star, has been secured for the Loew time in Greater New York, and is about to begin the round of its houses. The booking manager of Marcus Loew enterprises completed arrangements with Lester W. Adler, of Playgoers' New York exchange, this week. This feature, which is in six reels, is Playgoers' current release, September 10th being the date set for its first appearance.

Hope Loring to Help on Script for Preferred

The name of Hope Loring will appear as a collaborator with Eve Unsell on the script of "Ching, Ching, Chinaman," Wilbur Daniel Steele's prize story which Tom Forman is directing for Preferred Pictures.

Miss Loring is among the best known screen writers and aided in the adaptations of several successes made by Preferred Pictures.

Animal Comedy Coming In September

The September release in the Educational-Campbell Comedy series will be "A Ring Tail Romance," Charlotte Herriam, Doreen Turner, Laurence Licalzi and their animal friends, "Pal," the dog, and "Joe," the monkey, have the principal parts.

Al Lichtman to Tour South and Mid-West

AL LICHTMAN only recently returned from a tour of the country that took in all sections except the South, and on Thursday of last week he left for New Orleans to hold a conference with E. V. Richards, general manager of the Saenger Amusement Company and owner of the Lichtman Corporation franchise for the eleven Southern states.

Following his trip South Mr. Lichtman will visit some of the principal film centers of the Middle West as the guest of Harry Charnas, the independent distributor. A special party, including the trade paper editors, is being planned to accompany Mr. Lichtman on his Mid-West tour as guests of the Charnas organization.

Beginning Sunday, September 10, Mr. Lichtman will be the honor guest at a dinner of exhibitors in the William Penn Hotel at Pittsburgh. The next night a similar honor will be accorded him in Cincinnati; on Tuesday there will be another at Detroit; and on Wednesday the tour will wind up with a banquet in Cleveland.

Paramount Adds Stars To Cast of Picture

Two notable additions to the cast of Alice Brady's new Paramount picture, "Anna Ascends," have been made during the past week. One is Florence Dixon, who has been playing leading roles opposite Conway Tearle and Eugene O'Brien. The other is Hilda Moreno, the Spanish beauty and dancer of this year's "Ziegfeld Follies." Miss Moreno does a special Spanish dance in the "Fifty Club" scenes.

Educational Has Two on Opening Program

The opening program at the beautiful new Strand Theatre in Niagara Falls, one of the finest motion picture houses between New York and Chicago, which was opened August 26, included two subjects released by Educational. The first number on the program was "Syria, Land of Religious Hatred," a scenic subject, and the program closed with "Nothing Like It," a Christie Comedy featuring Dorothy Devore.

Estelle Taylor Next in Gasnier Production

In the course of a few months Estelle Taylor has emerged from obscurity into the limelight through her notable performances in "A Fool There Was" and "Monte Cristo," two widely known stories. She will next appear in "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," a Gasnier Production now being "shot" by Preferred Pictures.

Cosmopolitan Plans Premiere "Grandma's Boy," Chosen For Anniversary

Elaborate Preparations for Opening of Marion Davies Special on B'way

WITH some of the most elaborate preparations ever made for a motion picture showing on Broadway, the much-talked-of Cosmopolitan Production "When Knighthood Was in Flower," starring Marion Davies, will open Thursday, September 14, at the Criterion Theatre for an indefinite run.

Cosmopolitan Corporation, presenting Cosmopolitan Productions, has leased the Criterion from Paramount and will take over the house on September 10.

From advance reports "When Knighthood Was in Flower" will set a new record in screen classics, declare Cosmopolitan officials. Joseph Urban's settings are declared to be "marvelous," and no less an art authority than Sir Joseph Duveen of London has stated that the court scenes are "the most faithful reflection of the time of King Henry VIII of England ever made."

Supporting the star, Marion Davies, is a cast of brilliant screen players including Lyn Harding, famous English actor brought over from London especially to play King Henry VIII; Forrest Stanely, who has been Miss Davies' leading man in several of her screen successes; Pedro de Cordoba, Ernest Glendinning, Ruth Shepley, Johnny Dooley, William Kent, George Nash, Macey Harlam, William Norris, Gustave Von Seyffertitz, and dozens of others.

Unusual preparations have been made at the Criterion for the opening on September 14 and for the ensuing run. The theatre is being remodeled and twelve loges installed in the balcony. These will be specially reserved. The orchestra pit has been enlarged to accommodate fifty-two musicians. An original musical score has been composed by William Fred Peters. Victor Herbert has composed two numbers especially for the production. One is the Marion Davies march, the other "When Knighthood Was in Flower" waltz. A prologue has been arranged by Joseph Urban.

A special Marion Davies edition of the book "When Knighthood Was in Flower" has been prepared by Grosset and Dunlap. These books will be on sale in the lobby of the Criterion during the showing. There is to be a special showing of the picture for book salesmen from the leading big department stores from all over the country.

One thousand sixteen-by-twenty enlarged stills of scenes from the production printed in sepia are to be distributed to stores all over the country in addition to a number of twenty by twenty-four portraits of Marion Davies. Striking posters of Miss Davies in the costumes she will wear as Princess Mary Tudor have been painted by four of the leading artists of the country, Howard Chandler Christy, Frank X. Leyendecker, W. T. Benda and Carl Link, and will be used in connection with the advertising campaign.

Los Angeles Sees "Manslaughter"

Cecil De Mille's New Picture Meets with General Approval From Critics

CECIL B. DEMILLE'S new Paramount production "Manslaughter," scored a sensational success at its opening at Grauman's Rialto Sunday, according to a telegram received from Los Angeles at the home office of Paramount. One of the biggest crowds in the city's theatrical history waited for hours for the doors to open and and capacity audiences received the picture with tremendous applause.

The showing of a new Cecil B. DeMille picture has come to be an important event in Los Angeles, and invariably the newspaper reviewers are most searching and exhaustive in their criticism. Jeanie Macpherson's adaptation of Alice Duer Miller's novel, in which Thomas Meighan Beatrice Joy and Lois Wilson are featured, was no exception.

Epitomizing her detailed review, Grace Kingsley said in The Times: "The great American photoplay is with us at last. What other directors have been groping around after Cecil DeMille has at last really accomplished. This one stands beside 'Male and Female.'"

The Herald's critic said: "'Manslaughter' is a cinematic success by unanimous opinion. It is Cecil DeMille's greatest and most honest effort. This Paramount film will go down as one of the most vital works of motion picture art."

The Examiner said: "'Manslaughter' must be seen. . . . It is a mighty indictment of the spirit of the age. . . . There are many moments of forceful poignant interest."

THE Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors super-attraction, "Grandma's Boy," produced by Hal Roach, which began its New York run at the Mark Strand, Manhattan, September 3rd, has been selected by Edward L. Hyman, managing director of the Brooklyn Mark Strand, as the film feature for that house's third anniversary week celebration, beginning Sunday, September 10th.

Mr. Hyman and his associates are arranging a continuous gala demonstration, with special musical programs, the personal appearance of a number of picture stars, and the cooperation of city officials.

Mr. Hyman says in a letter to W. B. Frank, general sales manager of Associated Exhibitors:

"Appreciating the extent of Lloyd's popularity, and coupling with that the undeniable furore-creating possibilities of 'Grandma's Boy,' I feel certain that the picture will reach my fullest expectations."

Joe Bonner to Appear in Baby Peggy Cast

Joe Bonner, former vaudeville head-liner and now of the picture fraternity, is again appearing under the Century banner, this time in support of Baby Peggy in the Century Comedy she is at present working on, "The Little Match Girl." Bonner's last silver sheet appearance was in support of Colleen Moore in "Affinities."

Service Book for "Remembrance" Goes to Press

Goldwyn is soon going to press with its exhibitors' service book for the new Rupert Hughes picture, "Remembrance," which is the first Goldwyn release for the new season. It will be a sixteen page book of a larger size than usual and exhibitors will find it crammed full of exploitation and publicity features which are out of the ordinary.

Mary Carr in New Mother Role

Her Part in "Penzie" Will Differ from Former Character Delineations

MARY CARR, the Fox actress, who won international fame with her admirable portrayal of the sad and mistreated mother in "Over the Hill" and whose following successes "Thunderclap," a 1921 special, and "Silver Wings," a special on the current season's program which recently completed a summer run on Broadway, New York, have been distinguished by similar character delineation, is to be seen in an entirely different "mother" part in "Penzie," Paul H. Sloane's screen version of Florence Bingham Livingston's novel, "The Custard Cup," now under production at the New York studios of Fox Film Corporation with Herbert Brenon directing.

That motherly soul, famed in nursery rhyme, who lived in a shoe and had so many children she didn't know what to do, probably owned the oddest dwelling place of which history has any record. Mrs. Penfield, the optimistic heroine of the story has many of the characteristics belonging to the lady by the name of Hubbard. In the first place, Mrs. Penfield does not live in a house but in a barn, and, like her famous prototype, has so many children that (some times) she doesn't know what to do in order to feed and clothe them. But she never regrets the scrimping and saving and long hours of work that are necessary to keep her household comfortable and happy.

Ma Penfield's children are all adopted and are three in number, not to mention Filabuster Carsar, the homeless dog brought into the family by tender hearted Crink and treated as a friend and a brother.

The scenes with the children promise to be among the favorite episodes of the picture. Director Herbert Brenon has a particular fondness for building up "kiddie scenes," and takes infinite pains with the juvenile actors. Miriam Battista, Jerry Devine and Ernest McKay, who impersonate the three youngsters, respond quickly to the

"A Tailor Made Man" Scores

Philadelphia Critics are Unanimous in Praise of New Ray Comedy

"CHARLES RAY'S photoplay, as good as the charming comedy Grant Mitchell starred a few seasons ago," said the critic for the Philadelphia Public Ledger when this United Artists release was shown at the Aldine Theatre, Philadelphia. "Audiences who have made a study of Raydiology, so to speak, may be inclined to think this the best thing the young star has ever done."

"'A Tailor Made Man' is a noteworthy addition to the screen in every way," said the reviewer for the Philadelphia Inquirer. "In it Charles Ray does without doubt the best work of his career, and his portrayal of the title role leaves nothing to be desired. Every moment of the star's interpretation is a surprise. He plays with wit, charm, enthusiasm, mirth, sympathy and understanding."

ing to be desired. Every moment of the star's interpretation is a surprise. He plays with wit, charm, enthusiasm, mirth, sympathy and understanding."

"Witness the rejuvenation of Charles Ray," said the critic for the Evening Public Ledger. "In his screen adaptation of 'A Tailor Made Man' there returns the Charles Ray of old, honest, human and sometimes overpoweringly life-like. There are moments when Mr. Ray's nervousness in 'A Tailor Made Man' during his society debut is played so realistically that the spectators squirm in their seats in their desire to help him out. The cast is an extraordinarily good one."

Arrow Picture Pleases Author

"Peaceful Peters" is First of a New William Fairbanks Series

THE series of six William Fairbanks pictures which Arrow Film Corporation will release during the coming year has gotten away to a most auspicious start. The first picture, "PEACEFUL PETERS," was privately viewed by officials of the Arrow organization this week and they were unanimous in their praise of it. The direction of Lewis King is especially praiseworthy, as is the work of the entire supporting cast.

W. C. Tuttle, the author of "Peaceful Peters," is most enthusiastic about the way in which his story has been handled. He embodies his ideas in a letter which he sent to Mr. Ben Wilson, the producer, immediately after viewing the first showing of the picture. The letter follows:

My dear Mr. Wilson:

Just a line or two regarding a pre-view of "Peaceful Peters," which I witnessed at your studio a few days ago.

I was very well pleased with the picture, and it was a pleasant surprise to find that Mr. King, the director, had so closely followed the original story of "Peaceful." He has handled the theme in good shape, kept the action consistent and deserves much credit for the characterizations.

Quite a number of my stories have been put on the film, but I can truthfully say that none of the so-called Western leads have equalled the work of William Fairbanks.

Around World Trip as Universal Serial

JULES VERNE'S globe-trotting imagination suggested "Around the World in Eighteen Days," which will be Universal's next attempt to thrill and instruct theatre-goers in a chapter-play.

The story is being written by Carl Coolidge under the supervision of Robert Dillon, serial and short reel feature editor at Universal City. J. P. McGowan will direct it.

The title suggests speed. By aeroplane and racing cars, trains and boats, the hero dizzies-clips around the 25,000 miles circumference of the earth and winds up, quite naturally with a fortune and a bride.

Most of the picture will be filmed at Universal City where there are ninety-seven permanent foreign settings.

Ince Representative Sees Good Season

The motion picture industry is entering upon one of the most successful seasons enjoyed since the war, in the opinion of E. A. Smith, personal representative of Thomas H. Ince, who has just completed a tour of the country.

After talking with exhibitors in every section of the east and west, Smith is convinced not only that the business rapidly is returning to normal but that for worth while pictures there is a growing and insistent demand.

Dorothy Devore Has New Leading Man

"Let 'Er Run," the third picture in the new series of Christie Comedies, has been completed and delivered to Educational. It features Dorothy Devore, and marks the introduction of George Stewart, brother of Anna Stewart, who plays opposite Miss Devore. It is a race track story, with some thrilling race scenes in which Dorothy rides a jockey. "Let 'Er Run" will follow "That Son of a Sheik" and "Pardon my Glove."

Universal Stars Are Kept Busy

Priscilla Dean is finishing New Underworld Play by Tod Browning

REPORTS from Universal City indicate the early completion of a number of feature productions to be released later this fall as Universal Jewels and Attractions.

Priscilla Dean, whose current picture, "Under Two Flags," will be shown on Broadway in the near future, is two-thirds through her next production, "Lady Raffles," a London and New York underworld and society story written by Tod Browning, who also is directing it. After "Lady Raffles" Miss Dean will start work on "Drifting," a screen adaptation of William A. Brady's stage success.

Herbert Rawlinson is well into the production of "One Wonderful Night," a screen version of Louis Tracy's famous play. He is supported by Lillian Rich, Sidney Bracy, Sidney de Grey, Joseph Girard, and Dale Fuller. Stuart Patton, director of "Reputation" and many other Universal successes is in charge of the latest Rawlinson film.

Gladys Walton has just completed studio work in "The Lavender Bath Lady," a feature production directed by King Baggot. It is from a story by Shannon Fife, and was put into screen form by George Randolph Chester, the popular author, who now is a member of Universal's scenario staff. Baggot and his staff now are cutting and editing the picture, which will be ready for shipment to New York in a few weeks. It probably will be released late in October or early in November.

Hoot Gibson has started a new production under the direction of Nat Roos, Universal's newest feature director. It will be called "Ridin' Wild," and is from a story written especially for Hoot by Roy Myers, who also scenarized it.

"Grandma's Boy" Wins Critics

Lloyd Comedy At N.Y. Strand Ends Too Soon To Satisfy the Scribes

THE Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors feature, "Grandma's Boy," produced by Hal Roach, made its New York debut at the Mark Strand Theatre, Sunday, September 3rd with this result:

From 4 o'clock on until the close of the last Sunday showing the "S. R. O. in the balcony only" sign was displayed and the sole adverse criticism uttered by a newspaper reviewer was that the film was too short.

Joseph Plunkett, the Strand's managing director introduced the feature with an especially attractive prologue, in which the new "Grandma's Boy" song, composed by Herb Crooker, Jean Havez and Pete Wendling, sung by the Strand quartette, scored a hit.

Quinn Martin in New York World said: "Grandma's Boy" is the funniest screen comedy which we have seen this year. The really humorous situations in it are wholesome and original and seem to have a reason for being there.

Joseph Mulvaney in New York American:

"It's too short—that's what's the matter with 'Grandma's Boy,' and it's a vital defect. The hour in which the five reels were screened was the swiftest hour that most of us ever spent in the Strand Theatre.

Harriette Underhill in New York Tribune:

"Grandma's Boy" is entirely free from vulgarity and it is filled with surprises.

J. O. Spearing in New York Times:

"Grandma's Boy" is amusing nearly always and hilarious a good part of the time.

Bon Allen in Evening World:

"We have already claimed Harold Lloyd is one of the best if not THE best comedian in celluloid, and now we are surer than ever."

Evening Journal:

"Five reels of folly were screened and there was in every reel enough material for mirth to all out an entire farce."

Wallace Reid's Picture On "Classic" Cover

WALLACE REID has been voted the monthly favorite of Classic readers and in recognition of this popularity his portrait will appear on the cover of this popular fan magazine for its December issue.

This is the third consecutive month that Paramount players have won the popularity contest for Classic covers. Rodolph Valentino appears in the bull fighting costume from "Blood and Sand" on the cover of October Classic.

The November issue of Classic, now on the press, has May McAvoy on the cover. Miss McAvoy surprised even her warmest admirers by piling up the highest vote during the second month of the contest.

And now Wallace Reid has scored for Paramount because 975 of his admirers have been interested enough in their favorite to write to the editor of Classic to request that his picture appear on the cover.

Rupert Hughes Preparing "Souls for Sale"

Rupert Hughes is making rapid progress in preparing his latest novel, "Souls For Sale," for screen production. He expects to begin casting as soon as the continuity is completed.

Studio reports on "Gimme" indicate that this photoplay measures up fully to Goldwyn's big advance expectations of it and that it is another striking addition to Mr. Hughes' series of photoplays of life as it is lived by the average American family.

"Snub" Pollard Becomes Star

Pathe Launches Comedian in the Farce Comedy Entitled "365 Days"

IN the two-reel comedy called "365 Days," which Pathe has scheduled for release on September 17, "Snub" Pollard is converted by Producer Hal Roach into a full-fledged star. Exhibitors who have played, and picture patrons who have seen, Pollard screened in several scores of one-reelers with Harold Lloyd, are quoted by Pathe as manifesting active interest in published announcements that the one was so successfully following in the footsteps of the other. The long list of one-reel comedies featuring Pollard, with Marie Mosquini playing opposite, since Lloyd entered upon his multiple-reel career, are said to have further satisfied exhibitors that he was unquestionably real "star timber."

Never was a comic star kept so busy getting in and out of trouble. Along with forty or fifty other presumptive heirs of an eccentric and rich old "Grandpa" he is required to establish his home and continue for a whole year to live in amity with the whole bunch on a plot of ground barely large enough for a single cottage and garden. The fact that the bunch is composed of relentless "gimmes," makes the situation desperate for the hero and his young family. He finds just room enough to anchor a captive balloon from which his house and "grounds" are suspended.

As "the good grandson" with Marie Mosquini his "good wife," he is kept busy trying to avoid fights with all the other heirs, of whom "the hard boiled party," played by Noah Young, is the large, coarse and violent ring-leader. A visit of "Grandpa" and his lawyer on the 365th day plunges them into the thick of the critical battle among the "gimmes," of which the good grandson and his family bear the brunt. Just as the old man is "disowning everybody," the good grandson proves his peaceable intentions, a twenty-dollar gold piece is put in the gas meter and the balloon sails away from the "gimmes" carrying the house and its lucky inmates away with it—including Grandpa and his wealth.

P.B.Schulberg Announces Plans

Hopes to Form Stock Company of Well Known Stars and Players

"DETAILED plans for our features to be released shortly are maturing rapidly," announces B. F. Schulberg, president of Preferred Pictures and vice-president of the Al Lichtman Corporation, which is handling the distribution of his products.

"About six weeks after the general release date of 'Rich Men's Wives' set for September first, we will have ready for the public our second offering, the screen version of Wilbur Daniel Steele's prize story, 'Ching, Ching, Chinaman,' which Tom Forman is directing. The complete cast headed by Lon Chaney, Harrison Ford and Marguerite De La Motte has already been announced.

"The release of the Gasnier production of 'Thorns and Orange Blossoms,' featuring Estelle Taylor, Edith Roberts and Kenneth Harlan, will follow closely upon 'Ching, Ching, Chinaman.' Work on Bertha M. Clay's famous novel is already well under way."

"The next feature on our first year's program will be 'Are You a Failure?' Mr. Schulberg continues. "This is a screen original written by Larry Evans, a magazine writer of wide repute, which is bound to be a powerful film story. Tom Forman will direct it and for the leading masculine role we have chosen Harrison Ford because of his fine work in 'Smilin' Through,' 'The Old Homestead' and 'Ching, Ching, Chinaman.'

"We will probably schedule 'The Hero,' Gilbert Emery's distinguished play, to follow 'Are You a Failure?' According to our present plans Gasnier, who made 'Rich Men's Wives,' will direct it and we are attempting to secure the services of a stage actor of wide prominence for the title role.

"We are in close contact with the finest free-lance artists available and while we expect to draw from their ranks to fill the varying needs of our productions, we hope ultimately to form our own stock company of well known players.

"Glorious Adventure" Liked in Brooklyn

J. Stuart Blackton's Prizma color production, "The Glorious Adventure," featuring Lady Diana Manners, England's most beautiful woman, and the first all-color motion picture feature ever made, was received enthusiastically last week by large audiences at the Brooklyn Strand, and won praise from both public and critics.

"Rose of The Sea" Plays Two Big Houses Day and Date

"ROSE OF THE SEA," the First National attraction starring Anita Stewart, ran a week simultaneously at Loew's Park and Mall, two of Cleveland's first run houses. The Park seats 3,600, the Mall 1,400.

Joint ads for the two theatres were used. Small teaser ads were inserted in all newspapers first, leading up to quarter page ads on the Saturday preceding the week's run.

A special musical program was used at the Park in connection with the picture. This included a special overture by the Park symphony orchestra, under the direction of Mischa Giterson who came to Cleveland from Los Angeles to take charge of the Park orchestra. The overture and rest of the musical program was given prominent display in the ads.

Expert Says Stevenson Classic Is Well Cast

Fredrick O'Brien, author of "White Shadows in the South Seas," said to be the best selling book of travels ever written, was a recent visitor at the Lasky studio and viewed with the eye of an expert the making of scenes for George Melford's Paramount production of "Ebb Tide," the famous Robert Louis Stevenson-Lloyd Osborne classic of the South Seas.

Among the characters which Mr. O'Brien pronounced "absolutely true to type" were Huish, played by Raymond Hatton; Captain Davis, George Fawcett; Attwater, Noah Beery; and Herrick, James Kirkwood.

Three Goldwyn Pictures in Titling Stage

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION announced that three more of its "big twenty" productions for the coming season have reached the editing and titling stage.

The three productions now being edited are "The Christian," "Gimme" and "Broken Chains."

The pictures in Goldwyn's first list of eight releases entirely completed are Rupert Hughes' "Remembrance," John Barrymore in "Sherlock Holmes," "The Sin Flood," Peter B. Kyne's story, "Brothers Under the Skin," Anzia Yezierska's "Hungry Hearts," and "A Blind Bargain" with Lon Chaney. The other two are "The Christian" now being edited and "The Strangers' Banquet," which Marshall Neilan is filming at the Goldwyn studios.

Sam Grand Purchases "Jungle Goddess"

SAM GRAND, who purchased the entire New England rights to the Export & Film Company serial, "The Jungle Goddess," and who expected to release the wild-animal film in October, has now announced that he will release the Selig thriller immediately.

Business has been improving so rapidly in the East that Grand decided to start the fall season off with "The Jungle Goddess" instead of holding it over. Quite a long time has elapsed since the release of the last big independent serial in New England.

Louis Auerbach of Export & Import, stated that his company will cooperate with Grand to get his exploitation under way.

C. C. Burr, producer of Johnny Hines latest six-reel feature was four prominent exchangers who had bought "Sure-Fire Flint" for their respective territories extended their congratulations to the producer-distributor after viewing a private showing of this all-star production. Peculiarly enough these same exchangers who had bought "Burn 'Em Up Barnes," Johnny Hines' first starring vehicle, which is said to have proven a clean-up in all territories, unanimously expressed themselves as being of the opinion that "Sure-Fire Flint" surpassed "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" in action, story, cast and box-office appeal.

Prints on "Sure-Fire Flint" are now being rushed by the Lyman H. Howe Laboratories of Wilkes-Barre, and should be ready for distribution to all exchanges within the next ten days.

Poster Campaign Plan by Apollo Exchange

A big twenty-four sheet campaign that will cover New York City and the Greater New York territory is one feature of the exploitation being planned on "More to Be Pitied" by the Apollo Exchange.

Bobby North, of this company, which has distributing rights to the Greater New York territory on the first of the C.B.C. Film Sales Corporation Box Office Winners series announces that he has already contracted for some of the most prominent and valuable twenty-four sheet stands throughout the city and the upper part of the state.

Re-Issues Will be Released

Picture-Arts Announce List of Former Successes For State Right Market

THE Picture-Arts Sales Corp., Inc., a newly formed motion picture sales company, has just announced the immediate release of a group of strong five-reel pictures for the State Rights market. The pictures are the pick of various producing company successes of several years ago, and have been re-edited and re-titled and otherwise brought up to date for re-issue. The films feature such stars as Lon Chaney, Elaine Hammerstein, Dorothy Phillips, Hobart Bosworth, Rupert Julian and others.

Maurice Pivar, manager of the new concern, asserts he will release his product in groups of eight. The first group, consists of the following pictures:

"Two Men of Sandy Bar," by Bret Harte, starring Hobart Bosworth; "The Place Beyond the Winds," starring Lon Chaney and Dorothy Phillips; "The Co-Respondent," starring Elaine Hammerstein, adapted by Ralph Ince from the popular stage play; "The Bugler of Algiers," by R. H. Davis, starring Rupert Julian; "Fast Company," starring Lon Chaney and Franklyn Farnum; "From Broadway to a Throne," with Carter De Haven; "The Sundown Trail," starring Monroe Salisbury; and "The Terror" by Raymond Wells, featuring Jack Mulhall and Virginia Lee.

It is to be especially noted that these pictures, although bettered and brought to date, are being re-issued under their original names—the names by which they filled many a box office three or four years ago.

"The Picture-Arts Sales Corporation has selected these pictures with great care," says Mr. Pivar. "They represent the very best of hundreds of popular films. There is nothing old-timer about them. Only those have been chosen which pass the test of present day production standards.

"They are all well directed pictures made by popular stars from stories written by well known authors.

"Within a few weeks I expect to announce to the State Rights field another group of eight of similar merit at similar give-away prices."

"Fatty" Karr to be Featured

Comedian Will Be Starred in Series of Comedies to Meet Public Demand

BOTH Franklyn E. Backer of East Coast Productions and Bruce Mitchell, managing director of the T. R. Coffin Company, believe that the time is ripe for a series of two-reel comedies starring a fat comedian, as at the present time there is no such comedian on the screen. Exhibitors, according to reports, have felt keenly the loss of a comedy unit of this nature since the departure of "Fatty" Arbuckle from the screen. Exhibitors who have conferred with Mr. Backer and Mr. Mitchell are authority for the statement that their crying need today is for a good comedy unit.

"Fatty" Karr was placed under contract by Mr. Backer and Mr. Mitchell, and he will be the star of the new comedy series. "Fatty" has appeared in many big pictures among which are "Human Hearts," "Omar the Tentmaker," "Big Stakes," adapted from the American Magazine story, and others.

"All of the productions which I am now handling," said Mr. Backer, "have grown out of the demand of the exhibitors who wanted a definite type of picture which they, in turn, believed the public wanted.

"Several exhibitors wanted two-reel comedies with 'Fatty' Karr in the featured role, and that is why we are making them. They are to be produced by Bruce Mitchell, who is now directing the Dresent Comedies, concerning which there has been so much favorable comment. His cameraman is Vernon Walker, known as one of the most successful cinemaphotographer in the industry, and who has specialized in photographing comedies.

"In my picture, 'Big Stakes,' Fatty Karr showed himself capable of handling a comedy role with more than ordinary ability. Karr is a true comedian, and while he does not have to depend upon his sheer avoidupois to get his laughs, his peculiar physique undoubtedly intensifies his laugh-producing qualities. But we pin our faith to him, not because he is a fat man, but because he is admittedly a splendid actor.

"It was his hit in 'Big Stakes' that decided Mr. Mitchell to star him.

"Fatty" Karr will begin work immediately on the first two-reeler of the series, with Mr. Mitchell as managing director.

The first comedy will be ready for release by November first.

"The Curse of Drink" Sold Up-State

DEMAND for sure-fire melodramas brought about another sale of territory on "The Curse of Drink" feature this week. The picture stars Harry T. Morey, Edmund Breese, George Fawcett, Marguerite Clayton and Miriam Batista, and is being distributed on the state-right market by L. Lawrence Weber & Bobby North.

The buyer was the Grand North Exchange of Buffalo and Albany, operating in the upper part of New York State. Sam Grand of the Federated Film Exchange, Boston, bought the melodrama for New England and Ben Amsterdam of the Masterpiece Film Attraction, Philadelphia, for the Quaker territory.

Sydney Samson prepared the press-book on "The Curse of Drink."

Praise for "Rags and Riches"

Warner Offering Liked by the Los Angeles Critics at Preview Show

THE first pre-view presentation of the Warner Brothers picture, "Rags to Riches," featuring Wesley Barry, at the Symphony Theatre, Venice, Cal., elicited considerable praise from Art Meyer, of the Los Angeles Motion Picture Bulletin and Clem Pope, of the Symphony.

According to the review by Meyer, Wes Barry scores another triumph in "Rags to Riches." He declares that it is a splendid production with a wonderful moral, with plenty of thrills and humor. Clem Pope remarked after the picture was screened:—"It is one of the best pictures this year."

Meyer, in the Bulletin, said in part: "Warner Brothers have scored another triumph in 'Rags to Riches,' their latest Wesley Barry feature. It is a splendid production with a wonderful moral and does not lack thrills. One scene that shows Wesley and his pal on a railroad trestle in a machine with a train approaching them rapidly, furnishes some hair-raising feats. Wesley and his pal jump from the machine into the river below and the picturization is most vivid. There is some excellent camera work here.

"The supporting cast is most satisfactory. The photography is flawless and the director has not lost one single opportunity to bring out every detail in a splendid manner."

"Rags to Riches," a Harry Rapf production, was directed by Wallace Worsley. In the cast supporting Barry are Niles Redman, Eulalie Jenson, Gilbert Clayton, Elaine Manning, Lillian Leeds and "Snitz" Edwards. The story was adapted by Will Nigh and Walter De Leon from the book and stage play of the same name by Chas. A. Taylor.

Weber, North Planning New Studio

It was learned this week that the independent producing and distributing firm of L. Lawrence Weber & Bobby North are receiving estimates and blue-prints from architects and contractors on plans for a studio to be exclusively used for Weber & North productions during the coming season. The ownership of their own studio was considered an advisable step by the producers in view of the extensive program of releases planned.

Weber and North are understood to have selected a site for the contemplated studio fronting a wide area of lawn and stream, that will avoid special trips to outdoor locations.

"Only a Shop Girl" to Have All-Star Cast

Plans for the production of "Only a Shop Girl," the second of C.B.C. Film Sales Corporation's series of Six Box Office Winners are being rapidly completed and production will be under way almost immediately. The cast will be an all-star one.

"More to Be Pitied" is Booked for Altoona

"More To Be Pitied" will open for a run at the Victoria Theatre in Altoona, starting September 25th. The Quality Film Corporation of Pittsburgh negotiated the booking.

Will State Right "Notoriety"

National Distributors Bid, but Film Will be Sold on Independent Basis

INFORMATION from the offices of L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North this week set at rest the report that the producers of "Notoriety" were considering the release of that production through a national distributing organization. The producers will go ahead with their plans to sell territorial rights on Nigh's latest special, just as originally planned.

Weber and North have been announcing the independent distribution of "Notoriety" for the past month, although it is understood they were in possession of a number of offers of national distribution from other organizations. The interest shown by outsiders in Nigh's latest output was predicted by the producers when Nigh first signed with Weber and North. The director of "Why Girls Leave Home" and "Schooldays" in fact was asked to join the directing staff of some of the producers who are now bidding for "Notoriety," but preferred to work on his own, with a releasing firm that would specialize on his output, such as Weber and North.

The sale of territory will therefore begin. A number of buyers expressed their willingness to take "Notoriety" on its face value, but Weber and North have delayed closing any deal till the picture is cut down to its final form. This is expected in two weeks.

Graphic Issues Campaign Book

"Wildness of Youth" Subject of a 16-Page Press Book for Exhibitor

A SIXTEEN-PAGE press book replete with exploitation and advertising suggestions as well as ample press copy has been published in connection with "Wildness of Youth," produced by Graphic Productions, Inc., under the direction of Ivan Abramson and distributed through Graphic Film Exchanges.

The campaign book opens with an introductory word by Ivan Abramson as to the production merits of the picture and its appeal as a box-office attraction. Then follows three pages devoted to the exploitation of the subject with announcements of the exploitation novelties and accessories available on the picture. One of these novelties is gold-tipped whistle cigarettes. Each of the "cigarettes" is stamped with the title of the picture and carries the question, "Should Women Smoke?"

On the following pages are presented cuts of the advertising and newspaper mats prepared for "Wildness of Youth" and a brief resume of the story illustrated by striking moments from the picture. Pages ten to twelve inclusive are devoted to press stories of varying sizes, all descriptive of the theme or the cast personnel of the photoplay and providing space for the insertion of the theatre's name and the dates of the showing.

The campaign book concludes with a series of mats to be used in connection with a six-day teaser campaign; a special word of approbation from Ivan Abramson concerning the work of the late Bobby Connolly, "called to the Eternal Set by the Great Director General," since Bobby's participation in the production; and posters descriptive of the

Warner Offerings Have Good Bookings

THE big deals recently made by the Warner Brothers with representative showmen throughout the country assure first run bookings of the entire series of seven forthcoming Warner pictures.

The pictures include "Rags to Riches," and "Little Heroes of the Street," featuring Wesley Barry; "The Beautiful and Damned," the F. Scott Fitzgerald novel; "Main Street," by Sinclair Lewis; "Brass," the novel by Charles G. Norris; "A Dangerous Adventure," with Grace Darmond; "Little Church Around the Corner," by Marion Russell.

"Deserted at the Altar" Sold for N. Y. and N. J.

Phil Goldstone of Los Angeles, arrived this week in this city with his supreme achievement, "Deserted at the Altar," from the famous stage success by that name.

The cast includes such well known stars as Bessie Love, Tully Marshall, Wade Boutler, Barbara Tennent, Frankie Lee and Jackie Coogan's Dog, Queenie, and Bill Scott. Direction is by W. K. Howard and the production is in seven reels.

Immediately upon the arrival of a print here, it was screened for the Capital Film Exchange, and purchased by them for the territory of Greater New York and Northern New Jersey.

Herman Gluckman, manager of the Capital Film Exchange, said that he is arranging for a full twenty-four sheet showing in the city, and also contemplates a big subway campaign. He is arranging now for a trade showing.

"Hall Room Boys" Sold in New Territories

Eight states were sold this week on the new series of Hallroom Boys Comedies, including the states of Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, New Mexico, Washington, Oregon, Montana, and Idaho.

Exhibitors Approve "Arrow Month"

FROM every corner of the United States wires and letters have been coming into the home office of Arrow Film Corporation, according to their announcement, tendering assurances of support for Dr. Shallenberger and his organization from prominent men in the exhibition and exchange fields.

Every indication points out a triumphant success for "Arrow Month" — the project outlined by Dr. Shallenberger and his associates some weeks ago. That the exhibitors and the exchange men realize the timeliness of such a drive is evidenced in the letters alluded to above, of which the following, just received from Progress Film Company of Detroit, may be considered typical:

We are writing in observation of Arrow Month. We take great pleasure in announcing we have the following pictures set in first run so far and we will have a great many more in the next week.

Kalamazoo, Elite Theatre, "The Marshall of Money-mint." Saginaw, Regent Theatre, "The Marshall of Money-mint." Flint, Orpheum Theatre, "Desert's Crucible." Bay City, Wenonah Theatre, "Desert's Crucible." Detroit, Broadway Strand Theatre, "Desert's Crucible."

McKee Engaged by C. C. Burr

Lead in "All-Star Comedies" is Well Known on Stage and Screen

WITH the announcement this week that Producer C. C. Burr had signed Raymond McKee, popular legitimate actor and male lead to Shirley Mason in over a dozen pictures, to appear as the male star of the new series of two-reelers to be known as "All-Star Comedies," this enterprising producer gave vital form to his beliefs that the two-reel comedy when produced by an efficient organization that understands public and box-office psychology is invaluable to the exhibitor and deserving of concentrated thought in production. With this thought in mind, C. C. Burr intends making comedies that are all-star in every respect. Burr's success with the Torchy Comedies, featuring Johnny Hines are said to have made history in the comedy production market, and judging from the plans of this enterprising producer the All-Star Comedies will probably equal the record made by the "Torchies."

Production on this new series has already been started at Burr's Glendale Studio under the guidance of the same production staff that was responsible for the success of the "Torchies."

Raymond McKee, male lead of C. C. Burr's new venture, has been on the stage since he was three years old. As a youngster of No. 14 he was starred in one of the old melodramas called "Grit, the News-boy."

After a successful stage career his work as the juvenile attracted the attention of the old Edison Company and McKee was signed to a two-years' contract. Following service in the war, McKee appeared in "The Fortune Teller," with Marjorie Rambeau, after which he was cast in "The Phantom Legion," which played at the Playhouse in New York City. Then came the urge of the screen and a contract to appear as the male support of Shirley Mason in a dozen pictures, best remembered of which are "Love's Harvest," "The Little Wanderer," "The Flame of Youth," "The Lamp Lighter" and "Wing Toy."

C. C. Burr had been carefully noting the strides to stardom McKee was making, with the result that upon the completion of the "Torchies Comedies" featuring Johnny Hines, who has graduated into the feature fold, this enterprising producer immediately signed McKee to work in this new series which will be known to the trade and public as the "All-Star Comedies."

"Money or My Life" is Next Radio Comedy

The next Federated Radio Comedy is "Money or My Life"—and Ben Wilson, the producer, is surpassing all past efforts in this entertaining two reel comedy, it is stated.

Second National Issues Unique Press Book

SECOND NATIONAL PICTURES CORPORATION, which recently announced eight new pictures for release early in the coming season, in addition to the four already booking, has issued the fourth number of the "Exhibitor's Guide" as a press book for "Broken Shadows," picturization of the novel, "Nance," by Charles Garvice.

A feature of the new press book is the replacing of the conventional "Catchlines" and "Teaser Lines" with columns of "Shadows" and "Whys."

Joe Rock Has Another Satire Nearly Ready

Joe Rock, "Our Village Cut Up" with the 'million dollar smile' wires the home office of the FEDERATED FILM EXCHANGES OF AMERICA that he is on the high road to completing his second picture entitled "Aladdin"—another satire on Arabian Nights fairy tales. A most pretentious production is promised and even though a two reeler, it may be truly classified as a special feature. Winsome Billie Rhodes will again appear in the cast.

Selznick Prepared for New Policy : : :

THE announcement made some time ago that the Selznick Pictures Corporation had abandoned the Star Series, or Program Plan, of production and would, during the season of 1922-23, make only super-special pictures created a mild furore throughout the motion-picture industry. It also created a great deal of discussion in which the ability of the company to do the big things which it is setting out to do was a topic frequently referred to. The formal listing of the company's plans showing that such stories as Sir Anthony Hope's "Rupert of Hentzau," Robert W. Chambers' "The Common Law," Eugene Walter's "The Easiest Way," and others of like calibre are to be transferred to the screen is likely to start the same discussion anew.

Throughout the industry, from its earliest days, it has been pretty generally known that Lewis J. Selznick, whose name the company bears, is the fountain source of every important policy which the Selznick company undertakes. The decisions on these policies are not arrived at and passed upon in the perfunctory manner all too common in big organizations. It is only after an exhaustive examination of every conceivable detail which has to do with a particular policy that L. J. definitely makes up his mind. It would seem then that the Selznick plan for 1922-23 is best examined by a consideration of just what "L. J." has been doing and what preparations have been made for carrying out the new policy.

It is quite a tribute to the head of the Selznick company that a great majority of his associates in the trade—not only exhibitors but producers and distributors—are satisfied to accept each new announcement from the Selznick offices with the statement: "Well, if he says he's going to do it, he'll do it!" basing their conviction upon what the doughty boss of the fourteenth floor, of 729 Seventh Ave. has done in the past. There are, however, some "slants" of particular interest which are worth uncovering at this time.

There is the element of surprise in the Selznick announcement that the company's plan of producing only special photoplays is one that was long ago decided upon and a plan which has been worked out in detail for at least three years—surprise, for the reason that the Selznick organization seemed so solidly wedded to the Star Series idea to which they adhered so valiantly and so long. That the plan was decided upon long ago and that systematic preparations for it have been under way for a long time seems apparent, however, upon a little examination of the Selznick company's recent activities.

It will be recalled that in the earlier days of the industry it was Lewis J. Selznick, then identified with the World Film Corporation, who first advocated the presentation on the screen of the type of photoplays which were calculated to have the same kind of box-office draft as attractions on the so-called legitimate stage. It was during Mr. Selznick's days with the World Film that many of the big stage successes were first made into photoplays. This would seem to indicate that he has always been rather keen on the kind of screen entertainment which the exhibitor could well afford to make a fuss about—and, after all, this is exactly what is meant by the "super special."

When the present Selznick organization which comprises as its most active units the Selznick Pictures Corporation and Select Pictures Corporation, the former engaged solely in the production and the latter in the distributing end of the business was whipped into working shape Mr. Selznick was confronted with a lot of problems not so easy of solution. A producing organization qualified to do anything and everything which might be required of it—and to perform its tasks with an efficiency calculated to insure not only its own success but also the success of its patrons or customers—could not be born over night, no matter what the experience of the one man who was bringing it into existence. A distributing and selling organization sufficiently strong to cope with constantly changing conditions seemed equally difficult of establishing. A policy of steady, consistent development, Mr. Selznick says, seemed to be the logical one. "We were perfectly satisfied to creep a little before we walked," is the way the head of the company puts it. "That we didn't do much 'creeping' may have been the result of our having picked up in record time the kind of photoplay attractions with stars like Olive Thomas, Elaine Hammerstein, Eugene O'Brien and Owen Moore which the industry seemed anxious to buy from a selling organization built around the same chaps who had handed them Norma and Constance Talmadge, Clara Kimball Young, Alice Brady, and others. But mind you, now that those old chapters are closed, I'm perfectly willing to confess that we would have been willing to 'creep' and not to 'run' as we did—for we were even then in training for what we are setting out to do in 1922-23 and in subsequent years."

The trade has seen the development of the Selznick producing unit under the personal supervision of Myron Selznick, who has always borne the title of President of Selznick Pictures Corporation. It is only natural that that younger Selznick should be loyal to the interests of his father's organization. However, there is often a feeling upon the part of the younger generation that their elders are all right in their way but a bit old fashioned. Such a condition does not exist in the Selznick family. Myron Selznick has an admiration for L. J. which is unusual even between father and son. Therefore from the beginning he eagerly absorbed the knowledge his father had gained by actual experience.

This attitude proved to be invaluable to him when he was called upon to take entire charge of the supervision of the Selznick production forces. Just how splendid has been his training for the bigger things which the Selznick company had then decided to do "when the time was ripe" is evidenced by the Selznick productions which have been turned out during the past three years. With almost unflinching regularity each Selznick picture has been just a little bit better than its predecessor. For a year or more, L. J. Selznick says, the producing unit has been "rarin' to go" with the bigger things which were in prospect.

David O. Selznick, now Vice-President of Selznick Pictures Corporation, has contributed materially to the restlessness and the desire to do the bigger things ever since he has been working "across the organization," touching practically every angle of the business pertaining to both producing and distributing.

The development of the distributing end of the business, on the face of it, would seem to have been attended with fewer difficulties. In the case of Select organization it got under way very rapidly probably for the reason that the product provided by its producing units struck the buyers' fancy. In preparation for the sale of nothing but super specials, however, a lot of details had to be carefully worked out and this has been under way for quite a while, most actively since the accession of John S. Woody to the position of general manager of the Select company, directly in charge of sales.

In taking up their new policy, it would seem that the organization headed by Lewis J. Selznick, are splendidly fortified against anything other than the most successful results. The organizations are tight as the proverbial drum with the Selznick triumvirate—L. J., Myron and David—blazing the trail and men like Morris Kohn, Treasurer of the Select organization, and John S. Woody, General Manager of Select, at hand to aid materially in the big push.

Selznick Has Veteran Sales Staff : : :

THE somewhat radical change in the production plans of the Selznick Pictures Corporation will naturally affect the Selznick product. Each of the new big Selznick specials will be marketed individually, strictly on its own merits, with only the prestige heretofore established by Selznick productions to back it up.

During the early part of the current year, J. S. Woody, who needs no introduction to anyone connected with the picture industry, assumed the general management of Select Pictures Corporation. Since Mr. Woody's return to the organization (he having been a former cabinet member of the same company) but few changes have been made in the selling ranks. One or two new appointments were made, for the good of the service; here and there a branch executive has been transferred to some point where he was deemed to be more valuable to the organization.

Altogether, General Manager Woody's intimate knowledge of men-who-sell has stood him in good stead. The general character of every branch manager and sales representative now in the field for the Select Corporation reflects most favorably on their chief's ability as an organizer.

While there may be a new face or two in a few of Select's branch offices, as a whole exhibitors throughout the country will find it possible to do business during the ensuing season with practically the same men who have been serving them so well for a long time.

Select Pictures is proud of their representation on the selling line, as well it may be. And in turn it is quite apparent that "the boys" of the Select family manifest an unusual loyalty to the parent office. Such co-ordination naturally makes for an ideal combination, one devoid of the petty policies and little jealousies which unfortunately sometimes exist among the personnel of the larger corporations. Then again, the Home Office reposes an unusual faith in the ability and judgment of its representatives, thus affording the latter much more leeway than is customary. Of course, General Manager Woody has laid down, for each branch manager to follow, his own personal code of business ethics, which is well known to exhibitors everywhere.

Henry E. Wilkinson ("Wilkie") will be found in charge of the Albany Branch. Mr. Wilkinson isn't a newcomer to the distributing business and is also a veteran exhibitor having, among other positions of equal importance, held down the managing directorship of the Olympic theatre, Pittsburgh, subsequently coming to the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation as Sales Manager. Wilkie's engaging personality will be welcomed by exhibitors in Albany territory, where he is well known.

"Ezell" is a password in film circles down South—it's known from El Paso to Jacksonville and when its mentioned southern showmen hang out the welcome sign. John T. Ezell, who guides the destinies of the Select Atlanta Exchange, is an old-time Selectite.

John S. Woody, general manager of Select Pictures Corporation

Morris Kohn, treasurer of Select Pictures Corporation

Benjamin P. Rogers has been in charge of Select's New England affairs for several years and exhibitors in the Boston territory, where Ben has built an enviable reputation as a square shooting executive, swear by him and they'll all be genuinely pleased to know that he will be doing business with Selznick's "Big Sixteen" at the old stand.

Harry E. Lotz not only is a pioneer in the picture selling business but is a Select pioneer with it, having held the position of Western Division Manager for the corporation some three years ago. He returns to the organization and incidentally to his old home town, Buffalo. Exhibitors in that territory are already congratulating the company on the acquisition of Mr. Lotz, the latter being perhaps the most popular as well as the most widely known individual in that part of the country.

James U. McCormick is just plain "Mac" down in the "tarheel state" where the trade in general has come to look upon him as a fixture. Mac opened the Charlotte office for Select and has been there ever since, and any talk of transferring his genial personality from that field would certainly cause something in the nature of a riot.

Edwin Silverman grew up with the Chicago branch from boyhood—he started as a booking clerk five years ago and he's now manager, but the men he does business with never have stopped calling him "Eddie." Chicago claims Eddie as its own and well might they be proud of this forceful, progressive young executive.

Otto P. Hall, in Cincinnati, is in new territory, having spent the major part of his fourteen years in the picture business in New England and on the South Atlantic Coast. He's only been in Portown seven months but the host of there's nobody like him, because he'll go out of his way any time to deliver a little more than the contract calls for.

Albert W. Eden, familiarly called "The Antelope" out west where he previously did time in the service of Fox, Select and Realart, is a stranger in a strange land in Cleveland, but Al's willingness to please and his knowledge of taking care of exhibitor wants and disposition to co-operate will win a place for him in his new surroundings.

Every exhibitor in Texas knows Diaz Callahan. He did some fine work down there for the Fox and Realart Corporations and it will certainly be good news to his army of friends and well-wishers to know that he's back home.

James S. ("Jimmie") Hommel came back from the big fracas in France a first lieutenant and his friends still call him "The Loot." Los Angeles exhibitors will recall the smiling Jimmie as a Select salesman. Later Jimmie handled Robertson-Cole in Pittsburgh and now returns to his old stamping ground, Denver, which he has adopted as his home. Hommel is well known to Denver exhibitors, having also sold film for Select in that section.

James O. ("Jimmie") Kent is a Select landmark in Detroit; he opened the place some five years ago and is still the boss. Jimmie was formerly connected with the Harry Garson Enterprises and practically grew up in the business around Detroit.

Dudley ("Dud") Williston has a wide and favorable acquaintance in the Hoosier State. He earned promotion in Select ranks from salesman to manager.

James B. ("Jim") Reilly is absolutely brand new in Kansas City but he isn't new to the branch managerial end of the picture business, by any means. Jim dates his experience back to the old O. T.

Crawford days, fifteen years ago, when he introduced talking pictures throughout the South. Later he came to Illinois and entered the exhibiting business in Kankakee. He opened up the Realart Exchange in Cleveland and made a wonderful record there. Jim has always wanted to go to Kansas City, as he likes the place and the people out there—and exhibitors will learn to like him.

Oren F. Woody's able hands will hold the Select reins in Los Angeles. Woody returns to Select after an absence of three years, having previously managed the Denver office for the corporation. But he's a long way from being a stranger in the Los Angeles territory. Oren grew up in the business in the Pacific Coast region and knows exhibitors from Seattle to San Diego by their first names, and particularly do they know them throughout the Los Angeles territory.

Frank M. DeLorenzo, Milwaukee branch manager, won the promotion to this post some time ago because of the wonderful record he established in the selling ranks. Frank stands high in the eyes of exhibitors throughout Wisconsin and the peninsular section of Michigan. Exhibitors have found Frank the right kind and they like him.

John E. (Jack) O'Toole is probably the best known branch executive in the middle and northwest country. In Minneapolis, where he holds forth as Select Director-in-Chief, Jack actually numbers among his personal friends every exhibitor in the territory—it's a large order but Jack can deliver on it.

Frederick F. Goodrow needs no introduction to the trade in the Gulf Coast section. He has been extremely successful as Select's New Orleans manager for the past several years. They think the world of Fred in Dixey.

Henry Siegel has been Director of Sales in the New York territory since Select's inception and if there's anybody in the Manhattan, Brooklyn or Up-State districts that don't know Henry, he certainly can't be an exhibitor.

Nat Beier, who sells the New Jersey territory and has his office in Siegel's New York exchange, is a veritable Select trade-mark in the "skeeter State." Nat occupies a place in the hearts of the Jersey exhibitors that simply couldn't be filled by anyone else.

Charles D. (Charlie) Touchon has been doing big things for Select down in Oklahoma for a long time and he's built up a mighty fine standing with exhibitors out that way. They've had plenty of chance to look him over and he's long since been given the stamp of approval.

To exhibitors out Omaha way, there's only one Sherman T. ("Steve") O'Brien. Showmen all over the Middle West district will tell you that "the big fellow," as he is good-naturedly referred to, is just simply a part of that territory. That his ready wit, good humor and his wholesome Irish smile could be just as easily dispensed with as Farnam Street in Omaha.

Great Authors Secured by Selznick :

AN impressive feature of the Selznick Pictures Corporation 1922-23 season announcement is the calibre of the authors who will furnish the stories for the forthcoming productions. Any schedule which includes one or more stories from such literary notables as Robert W. Chambers, Sir Anthony Hope, Elinor Glyn and Eugene Walters must necessarily be admitted to have exceptional strength.

While Anthony Hope has written many other successful novels and stories, he is best known for "The Prisoner of Zenda," and "Rupert of Hentzau." It is the latter story which will be one of the series of really big specials of the coming year to be produced by Selznick. The tremendous success of "The Prisoner of Zenda" cannot but help increase the box office value of "Rupert of Hentzau," which is a sequel to it.

Robert W. Chambers needs no introduction to the American public. He is an author with a real value at the box office. For years he has been the best circulation builder the popular magazines have had. His appeal to the masses is tremendous. His works transferred into terms of motion pictures have repeated their magazine successes and invariably mean money to exhibitors.

The Chambers story which Selznick will produce is "The Common Law," an internationally famous work of unquestioned theatrical worth.

Eugene Walters is just such another as Robert W. Chambers. His field is the drama, and his plays have been among the outstanding successes for years. The name of Eugene Walters in front of a theatre is an asset. He is one of the writers who has the happy faculty of hitting the bull's-eye most every time. "The Easiest Way" was the play which brought Mr. Walters the greater part of his distinction. It is known to all theatregoers and generally acknowledged to be among the ten best American plays ever produced. It is this work the Selznick company will include in its 1922-23 program of "Sixteen Only."

Everybody knows Elinor Glyn. At the present writing she is more in demand for screen stories than any other living writer. Her recently produced stories, as everyone connected with the motion picture industry knows, have been among the biggest money-makers of the year. She draws on a par with an all star cast, first class direction and a generally lavish production, and there can be only one answer—capacity houses. "Her Unwelcome Lover," adapted from "The Reason Why," one of the best of all the Glyn stories, will be offered by Selznick during the coming season.

For the many followers of the motion picture industry who have learned to analyze everything they read from the standpoint of the photoplay, "Wine," written by William MacHarg, will have particular interest as one of the early Selznick super specials. "Wine" was published in the Cosmopolitan Magazine some months ago and the ink on the story was scarcely dry before a spirited bidding for the picture rights was begun. In the judgment of practically every person who read it, it stood out as exceptional photoplay material because of the timeliness of its subject matter and the vividness with which the story was told. The Selznick company was fortunate enough to be able to secure the right to do it in pictures.

"Rupert of Hentzau" Selznick "Pet" :

IT is being quite freely said around the Selznick offices that "Rupert of Hentzau" is to be the "pet" picture of the year. The enthusiasm which all those connected with the producing organization have for the picture has probably been transmitted to them by President Myron Selznick who seems to have come quite honestly by it through his personal contact with the distinguished English author and the intimate inside information he was given about the story.

Mr. Selznick came back to the United States with a cast definitely outlined in his own mind. He had been told many interesting things which had to do with the writing of the story and—most importantly—following his visit with the author, he had personally traveled through the beautiful country which is being reproduced on the screen as the background for the highly romantic action.

It is entirely right and proper to say that the Selznick company's "Rupert of Hentzau" has been "in production" for the past six or eight months. Ever since his return from Europe, Mr. Selznick has had a staff of men and women at work on the matter of locations, settings, and costumes. The value of their research work, conducted not only in this country but abroad, will be greatly in evidence when the finished photoplay is shown.

There are few even casual readers of fiction of adult age today who have not read and enjoyed both "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Rupert of Hentzau." And those who have read the books still retain in their mind's eye vivid pictures of the dashing Rupert, the romantic Rudolph, the charming Queen Flavia, and the other splendidly drawn characters. The biggest successes of their respective careers would seem to be assured Elaine Hammerstein, Eugene O'Brien, Owen Moore, and Conway Tearle through their being cast for the big Sir Anthony Hope picture.

While all of the pictures announced for early production by the Selznick company during the season of 1922-23 are of outstanding importance, just at this time the announcement that Sir Anthony Hope's "Rupert of Hentzau" is among them will probably be of particular interest. "Rupert of Hentzau" is the sequel to "The Prisoner of Zenda" which has just been given an elaborate screen production and is now meeting with great success.

President Myron Selznick, of the Selznick Pictures Corporation, was in Europe some months ago on a combination business and pleasure trip about the time the initial steps to produce "The Prisoner of Zenda" in this country were being taken. He was looking for stories calculated to fit into the 1922-23 Selznick production plan and found considerable activity on the part of several American companies over the purchase of "Rupert of Hentzau" to follow the more or less introductory "Prisoner."

The Selznick company entered the bidding and Mr. Selznick was fortunate in being able to get to Sir Anthony Hope personally with an offer which was accepted. In negotiating directly with the author, Mr. Selznick got considerably more than the screen rights to the story because of the author's personal interest in the production.

At a number of conferences the distinguished English author made many valuable suggestions as to just how he thought the story ought to be transferred to the screen. He very clearly outlined the cast for the production by describing just the kind of people he had in mind when he drew the characters for the story and gave Mr. Selznick the actual location of the beautiful section of Southern Europe which he had in mind when the story was written.

Woody Foresees Greatest Prosperity :

By J. S. WOODY
General Manager, Select Pictures Corp.

THE motion picture industry today has just reached the crest surmounting the toughest grade it has ever been asked to climb. As we pause at the top and look back over the arduous journey we have just completed, it prompts the hope that we will never again be compelled to make a similar pilgrimage.

Looking forward, it is quite apparent that we now stand on the very brink of the greatest cycle of prosperity ever conceived in the brain of the most confirmed dreamer. There is no great secret as to what will bring about this sudden and propitious change in conditions. It can be explained by three simple words—truly great pictures.

I predict for the season of 1922-23 the greatest improvement in the quality of motion picture entertainment attained since the advent of the multiple reel. The public will enjoy one great attraction after another, well into the New Year; all of our old patrons—augmented by a host of new friends—with increasing confidence will attend the theatres until the box offices literally hum with activity and the old S. R. O. sign again becomes a permanent fixture.

For the last six months every producer of any prominence whatsoever has been busily creating pictures especially designed to satisfy the public's abnormal appetite for productions worthwhile—each striving to outdo the other, in a frantic rush to fabricate something surpassingly great and distinctive.

This laudable activity is the saving influence—for this reason alone our business will advance once more. And so it must needs be with every form of entertainment. To lapse into the vernacular, "give them the goods" and they'll respond—whether it be pictures, circuses, boxing, baseball or racing.

Boxing, even at the height of the season, amounts to nothing in New York unless the attraction is there. The unknown display their fistic ability to empty chairs, despite a population of eight million. But give them Benny Leonard at any time of the year and you'll have to pay the speculator's premium on the tickets.

Then again, why did people journey from the four corners of the nation to Latonia to see Morvich defend his crown against real contenders? And why is stock on both St. Louis ball clubs now worth many times what it could be obtained for up to this season? The Boston teams are not drawing a corporal's guard anywhere, but what a difference there would be if either Boston club had as players Babe Ruth and a few other stars. Boston wouldn't have a park big enough to hold the crowds.

Our country today undoubtedly is a bit more prosperous than it has been, but this will mean but little to the box-office unless we have real honest - to - goodness attractions. P-I-C-T-U-R-E-S the biggest and best they have ever seen—that's the way to spell salvation. There's your tonic for our old customers' jaded appetites: they'll gorge themselves and come back for more—and there'll be an abundance to serve.

Select's offerings for the Season of 1922-23 will include stories from such distinguished authors as Sir Anthony Hope, Elinor Glyn, Eugene Walters and Robert W. Chambers. The program will also include a production which will mark the return of Theda Bara to the screen.

An excellent example of the manner in which Select proposes to produce its forthcoming offerings is the first production to be made "Rupert of Hentzau." In the cast of this picture are Elaine Hammerstein, Eugene O'Brien, Conway Tearle and Owen Moore.

Here you have a really famous author, a widely read story and a truly, All-Star Cast. Every one of Select's Sixteen for 1922-23 will have the same.

Select will not be confined to the releasing of the Selznick product and is at the present time engaged in preliminary arrangements for the handling of a series of special productions to be made by three of the really well-known directors of the industry. From these men we will get a series of specials in every sense of the word. They will produce independently and though each of them has been heretofore noted for extravagance and lavishness in production it is promised their pictures for Select will exceed all previous efforts.

Theda Bara, who has joined Selznick forces and will be starred in a production, now in the stage of preparation.

Selznick Has Veteran Sales Staff

Philadelphia representative from the day they opened for business until now. He'll never be known as anything but a Select trooper, and if there's any question about Max's standing in that community, try to say that hes not the greatest fellow in the world and get away with it. It can't be done.

David J. Selznick, who is at the wheel for Select in Pittsburgh, has won a myriad of friends in western Pennsylvania and West Virginia since he took over his executive responsibilities in the "smoky city." Try to find an exhibitor in Dave's domain who won't say he's a regular fellow and a high class business man.

James H. Curran, who presides over Portland, Me., for Select is another former salesman who elevated himself from the ranks to a managerial chair by sheer force of personality and application to his work.

Floyd Lewis arrived a long time ago. He's been at the head of St. Louis exchange organizations for ten years and has a faculty of coming right back and doing business with the same people over and over again. Floyd has stood the acid test of years without a tarnish and when exhibitors received the news of his appointment with Select there was great rejoicing.

Edward C. Mix, branch manager in Salt Lake City, is playing a return engagement there after having handled Select in Los Angeles for a considerable length of time. Ed stands like the Mormon church in Utah.

Ralph B. Quive comes back to his native San Francisco after a lapse of three years. Ralph opened the old Vitagraph Company offices in Frisco and later introduced Realart pictures in that territory. There is no more popular exchange man anywhere than Ralph.

Paul R. Aust of Seattle is one of the youngest exchange executives in the business, but in his two years and a half with the Realart Corporation, he built up a vast following and fine reputation among exhibitors throughout Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana. Paul has enjoyed phenomenal success as a manager.

Louis (Tiny) Reichert's exhibitor friends, who are a legion all over the country, will be truly glad to learn of his return to Washington territory.

"Silent" Phil Selznick and Claude C. Ezell are the "fence riders" of the Select outfit, serving as field representatives of the powers-that-be at the Select home office.

Selznick News Expects Banner Year

SELZNICK News expects 1922-23 to be a banner year for its new reel. Added to the already big camera personnel of 392, Selznick News has developed plans to extend its pictorial news gathering activities to isolated regions of Europe, which have figured economically and politically all out of proportion to their geographical significance.

Sam Morris, general representative of Selznick productions.

Selznick Pictures All Over World

GENERAL Foreign Representative Sam E. Morris has been unusually successful in disposing of foreign rights of Selznick Productions.

During the short space of time he has been abroad Mr. Morris has concluded contracts for the sale of the foreign rights of Selznick and Select Pictures in the following countries: France, Belgium, Switzerland, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Austria-Hungary, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Greece, Bulgaria, Rumania, Albania and Turkey.

Theda Bara's Return Anxiously Awaited

UNQUESTIONABLY the return of Theda Bara to the screen will be one of the most interesting film events of the year, and good business for such exhibitors as show the Theda Bara production which is on the 1922-23 Selznick schedule of "Sixteen Only."

Lewis J. Selznick is determined that Miss Bara's return will be a most auspicious one and is sparing no effort which will tend to bring about such a condition.

What Light Is and Some of Its Peculiar Characteristics

Non-existing Without the Eye and Is Propagated Like Waves in Pond

WITHOUT the eye there would be no light and the sensation of light is caused by a stimulus. In the ordinary sense, therefore, light is the agent which causes the sensation of light when it falls upon the eye. The ordinarily accepted explanation of light is that it is due to waves in a substance called the ether, which extends through space and through all bodies. This ether extends to the most distant stars, and it is through it that we are able to see the stars.

The waves in the ether, which are very small, are similar to those of the sea and are transverse in character. A good idea of these transverse waves can be obtained by shaking a rope, which is fastened to a post at one end. A wave passes from one end of the rope to the other, though it is obvious that the particles of the rope have only moved up and down. The same will be seen with a piece of cork or stick on the sea. It will be noticed that when the wave reached the cork or stick, it is raised to the top of the wave, and when the wave passes on falls down into the trough immediately behind the wave in the same position as it was before, then to be raised on to the crest of the succeeding wave. Waves of the ether are of different sizes: there are waves which are very much larger than those which cause the sensation of light, and also waves which are very much smaller.

Size of the Waves of Light

The waves which affect the eye are of a certain defined range, and waves above and below this range have no effect for the purpose of vision. Light moves with extreme rapidity, traveling at a rate of 186,380 miles per second. There is no other movement which exceeds the speed of light. An idea can be gained of its enormous velocity when it is noted that light will travel seven times round the world between two ticks of a clock. A bullet travels at the rate of about half a mile per second; sound in a steel wire about three miles per second. It is because the velocity of light is so much greater than sound that the lightning flash is seen some time before the thunderclap is heard.

THE study of light is found most interesting, especially to those interested in this industry where light plays such an important part. Many of us have a vague idea of what light actually is, but fail to realize the surprising likeness of light to other phenomena with which we are more intimately acquainted.

If every living thing on this earth that has the sense of seeing were to be exterminated would there be such a thing as light? There are strong theories supporting contention that there would be no light under those conditions.

It is hard to imagine that light travels by means of wave propagation in much the same manner as to the waves in a pond created by plunging stone.

And again, some living things can see objects in what appears to be apparent darkness to the human eye. Eyes of different living creatures are sensitive to different wave of light.

The same character of wave that causes the sensation of seeing also causes the sensation of heat, depending on the length of the wave.

The article herewith presented prepared by Maurice Bart Bloom, Esq., chairman of the Board of Optics, Ltd., London, Eng., brings out in an interesting manner many of these peculiar characteristics of light.

The size of the wave is the distance measured from the trough of one wave to the trough of the succeeding one, that is, the distance between two consecutive crests, or between two consecutive troughs. The size of a light wave is about $1/50,000$ of an inch.

Light waves are not, however, all of the same size. The waves giving rise to the sensation of red are a little larger than a $1/50,000$ of an inch. Those causing violet are a little smaller. The waves giving rise to the sensation of red are about twice the size of those causing violet.

If a thin strip of light, such as obtained by light passing through a fine slit, is allowed to fall upon a triangular prism and then upon a white surface, it will be noticed that the white light is now spread out into a rectangle of colors, and that this rectangle is bent downwards in the direction of the base of the prism. This band of colors is called a Spectrum, and is seen in daily life as a rainbow. The order of the colors is red, orange, yellow, green, blue and violet. It will be noticed that the red is least bent and the violet the most. The visible spectrum of light can, therefore, be split up into six colors, red being the extreme on one side and violet on the other. Below the red there are other waves larger than those of the red, which, whilst not visible, produce other effects. These waves are designated infra-red waves, and cause a sensation of heat. If a poker be placed in the fire and heated, but not until it appears red, on placing the hand near it, a sensation of heat will be experienced. Heat may also be felt when a hand is placed near a kettle containing boiling water. The sensation of heat is caused by these infra-red rays. Photographs have also been taken by means of them.

On the other side of the Spectrum above the violet there are still smaller waves which are designated the ultra-violet. These rays, whilst invisible to the eye, also have powerful effects as shown by their action on a photographic film. These ultra-violet rays, whilst they are of no use for the purpose of vision, may have very deleterious effects on the eye.

Absorption

No substance is perfectly transparent, that is, in a thick layer it will obstruct a certain amount of light, and no substance is absolutely opaque, that is, if a sufficiently thin film be taken it will transmit some light.

The color of a substance, as for instance, colored glass, is not due to a color in the substance, but to the fact that it is opaque to certain rays, and transparent to those which when mixed give the color of the glass. If a deep red glass be taken and interposed between the prism and the spectrum, which has been formed on the white paper, it will be found that the only color which appears on the white paper is red, and a certain amount of orange. The portion of the spectrum which appeared yellow, green, blue, and violet, has now disappeared; therefore, the red glass owes its color to the fact that in the white light

Exhibitor Brings Physical Charms of Theatre to Patrons' Attention

THE Miller theatre, Wichita, Kans., is one of the modern motion picture theatres that have a great many striking features.

In an endeavor to bring forcibly to the attention of the patrons the rich appointments of this theatre the house organ published an article accredited to one of the patrons of the theatre.

It is a worthwhile effort on the part of the exhibitor to strive to make the clientele appreciate the physical charms of the house.

The following is a reprint of the letter.

My Impressions of the Miller Theatre

By A TIRED BUSINESS WOMAN

When I am tired, just awfully tired, both mentally and physically, then I like to turn my steps toward the Miller theatre. Its dim, cool depths have the power to soothe me. Its roomy, soft seats rest me. Its calm, unhurried atmosphere relaxes me.

When I am sick of the humdrum of work, the petty details and responsibilities of business, then the Miller theatre offers me a deviation from the commonplace, a taste of luxurious leisure. When I walk slowly across one of its wide expanses, marble about me, satin and velour and gold fringe, ponderous divans, slender tall lamps, quaint dull-framed mirrors, quick, silent uniformed attendants, and beyond in the glowing mysterious depths of the theatre the low, exulting voice of the organ or the triumphant crash of the orchestra, I am transported into another world in which I am a being without cares, a play world in which I am a princess free to do what I will, free to turn my attention and thoughts to the pleasures and the ideals of a freer, higher existence.

Someone before me must have realized what my soul needed in its play moments, must have known even before me just what my mood would be, for when I finally sink down in one of the cool, soft seats, the stories that flash before my enchanted eyes are never other than in complete accordance with my desire and my mood. There are no melodramatic blood-and-thunder fictions to irritate me. No mawkish sentimentalities to sicken me. No veiled salacity to offend my sense of good taste. Instead I am given the tales of real men and women, the problems that come to human beings to harass them and try them, the sufferings through which they pass in order to grow and develop to their best selves. I live these moments of their lives with them, see into their hearts when moral struggles wrench them, rejoice when I see them choose aright, and experience their remorse when they have chosen wrongly. In a way, their moral problems become mine, aiding me to a broader and clearer vision as to what my own duty should always be, and creating in me finer and stronger ideals.

In the lighter moments I am given the delight of hearty, unashamed laughter over some incongruous situation of some very human and ordinary comedian. There is no slap-stick attempts at being funny. Then there is the News Review, selected with a view to giving me a glimpse of the very things that interest me in my daily paper, often accompanied by a clever and timely fable or animated cartoon. Thus all sides of my nature are appealed to and appeased in this marvelous and lengthy program of pictures, lights and music.

Moreover, the theatre has come almost to mean what a club means to a man, for any night I drop in, I meet countless numbers of my friends and acquaintances. I have never felt a stranger in this theatre, even upon the first night I visited it, for there is a very friendly atmosphere always prevailing.

In view of all the material and spiritual enjoyment and benefit the Miller theatre has afforded me, I can only say that the architects who planned it, the contractors who executed it, and the management whose vision it was, and whose present mode of conduction has given the final perfect touches, have been thoroughly successful in creating an exquisite and harmonious whole.

Mechanical Lobby Display Embodies Great Amount of Action

R. R. Russell, exploitation man for Loew's Palace, Memphis, Tenn., put over a very striking mechanical lobby display which had a great amount of action.

The accompanying photographs show the inside construction of the miniature racing device and the finished display as installed in the lobby.

In contrast to other racing devices (where the surface or continent revolved beneath the autos) this "racer" is so arranged that eight small cars are continuously passing each other as they race over the ground in front of the map of the U. S. Each car was a distinctly different color. Those who looked on never knew which car would show up first—which would be "ahead."

This device was actuated by one motor driving a shaft on which were various sized pulleys.

These various sized pulleys were belted to the three larger pulleys which carried the canvas belts with the miniature racing cars. This construction is clearly shown in the photograph. In the Dent, or small car which was numbered 3, was a cut-out likeness of Wallace Reid.

A week in advance of "Across the Continent," simultaneously with the showing of the trailer an advertising prologue was used. A cut-out was made from the 24-sheet automobile. This was concealed next to the screen. Just as the trailer appeared two sharp blasts of an auto-horn were sounded, the black screen curtains were drawn and a spotlight was played on the cut-out. This was then withdrawn in such a way as to fade out into the trailer and made an animated display of the coming attraction.

Mechanical display used in Lobby of Loew's Palace, Memphis, Tenn., in connection with Wallace Reid in "Across the Continent." Eight miniature racing automobiles travelled in a constant cycle over revolving belts. By using various sized pulleys the speed of the cars were varied. The apparatus was designed by R. R. Will Fit Many Cases

Not long ago a member from Iowa wrote the Editor remarking about a certain "operator" who was employed in his vicinity. From the general trend of this member's letter the Editor suggested to him that a few remarks directed to our columns might make interesting reading with this "operator" as the subject.

The following description would fit a great many instances in our industry. Just such conditions as brought forth in this letter are what cause many black eyes for the motion picture business.

Clyde Edmondson, employed in the Grand theatre, Perry, Iowa, goes on to say:

In regard to "that operator" I haven't near as much to say as when writing before. He certainly has changed and I think has become at least a little interested in his work. However, I shall tell some of the things he did.

In the first place I did not see how we could blame this "operator" for not knowing. He had never seen a "booth" but a few times before starting to work. He said that he had never thought of being an "operator" until asked to take the job.

I do not wish to write what I think of a manager who will do a thing like this—but no doubt you can "think."

This operator is also handicapped by working conditions. His "booth" (not projection room) is not large enough for one machine, yet there are two "stuck in."

But this is no good reason why it should not be kept clean—even though there is not a place to keep his carbons and reels.

I have tried several times to get him to join the National Anti Misframe League but he does not seem interested. Before asking what it was or what good it did he asked "How much does it cost?"

He told me he had never read any trade magazines or books on projection—that he did not care as long as the film got through the machine.

After explaining a cue-sheet he told me that he just let the reel run out, sometimes showing a white screen.

He said he did not punch or scratch warnings at the end of reels. (This is the best thing he "does not do.") However, he does not try to remedy the punches or bad splices and misframes.

Starting out of frame, showing "The End of Part One" and starting the next reel showing "Part Two," and not keeping the light clear surely can not be classed under Good Projection.

But "his" work is not all I have noticed lately. On a trip to one of Iowa's leading cities I noticed one thing that surprised me—punch marks.

It being a strong union town, I had expected to see some good projection—but in place of that I saw punches, scratches and paper pasted on the end of reels so thick you could not count them. (I tried to.)

I attended seven theatres and they all used punches but one.

And here I have been working on a new show every other day, cutting out as high as 135 frames ruined by punches.

I closing I wish to ask for some more N. A. M. L. labels as I am out.

Change Over Devise

Dear Editor:

At your request I am sending you my change over system again as it might be of some help to a few of the boys.

I always put my show together before starting. I have a file hanging on the wall between the machines. At the end of each reel I take a cue; for instance, the last title and scene, as, for example, a close up of a man or woman or a fade out, should there be one. Then when my film gets down to the hub I have plenty of time to strike the other arc and watch for my cue.

I have, therefore, no need of scratching or punching the film in any manner.

On starting my last show, on coming to the end of a single reel I simply drop a piece of paper in the take up reel and then have no trouble in finding the place.

Hoping this will be of some service to the fellows,

Yours very truly,

D. F. GLANCY,

Colonial Theatre,
Jasper, Ala.

British East Africa

A projectionist from the far off country of British East Africa sends in a few interesting remarks concerning the general conditions of affairs in the Motion Picture business in his country. It probably is hard for many of the readers to realize the places and people reached by THE NEWS. Foreign countries are active in motion pictures and watch the activities of the industry on this side of the water with keen interest. America is the criterion for motion pictures and we must therefore keep well out in advance to retain our prestige.

An excerpt from P. J. Gallagher's letter follows:

"I am in receipt of your letter dated April 25th, 1922, and am sending you a Postal Order for 25c. for the N. A. M. L. Membership button and shall also send you a postcard of the theatre I am working in; I am Projectionist to the largest and best built theatre in B. E. A. It has seating accommodation for 660 people, and a large stage, four dressing rooms, and is equipped with a Phoenix Generator, a Tyler Apparatus Co. and a Motiograph Cinema machines. The pictures are screened to a piano accompaniment. I must tell you the films screened here are not the latest, for instance, "Daddy Long Legs" will be shown for the first time in Nairobi a week hence. An opposition show opened a Cinema show in the Lyric Hall, a few paces away from us, and from all accounts (papers and gossip) it is a knockout; the films are not screened right and they are older than what we show. Could you possibly get me an instructor for the following machines—Powers 6B Simplex, U. T. E. or any other machines on the market excepting the Motiograph, as I have one already?

"Nairobi is in its infancy, the population amounts to 2,000 Europeans. B. E. A. is a very expensive country to live in; has a good climate; plenty of game, small as well as big. Mr. H. A. Snow has taken very good films of the game here, the only disadvantage here is owing to Nairobi being about 300 miles from Mambasy, the seaport, the freightage is heavy and it takes a day and night from the port to Nairobi owing to the engines being fired with wood instead of coal, coal not having been discovered. NATIONAL ANTI-MISFRAME LEAGUE PLEDGE

AS a motion picture projectionist who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the projection-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in reasonably good condition, according to conditions of film when received. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother projectionists and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

Hoboken—Construction work has started on State-Capitol Twin Theatres, Union Hill, for Capitol Amusement Co.

OREGON

Portland—David H. Ryan will erect moving picture theatre with seating capacity of 750 at East Forty-seventh St. and Sandy Boulevard.

New Texas Theatre Opens

The new Rialto theater was opened at Beeville, Texas, Aug. 19th with J. H. Hall as manager. The new theater seats 701 persons. Half of the balcony will be reserved for colored people.

An up-to-date organ has been installed and two of the latest projectors put in. Beautiful electrical fixtures throughout the building, which is fireproof, have been installed and also a modern ticket booth.

A $500 wireless outfit will furnish radio news messages of all kinds for the pleasure of the audiences.

The screen is of the latest pattern and interior furnishings complete in color design. A large stage was added to the equipment so that road shows can be shown, although feature pictures will be the policy.—Noble.

The $50,000 Wurlitzer-Hope-Jones organ was thoroughly overhauled by the manufacturers of this musical instrument. No expense was spared in replacing and overhauling minor necessities in the California theatre. The total cost of renovating, including new draperies, was approximately $75,000.

"On a five-year period," said Mr. Roth, "divided up into fifty-two weeks per year or 260 weeks for the entire time, would amount to but $288, a comparatively small amount, which a large house like this adds to overhead expense." It was also pointed out that since the management spent $1,894,000 to complete the California theatre and is catering to the highest class of patrons in San Francisco, employing an orchestra of fifty pieces at an annual expense of $200,000, the renovating expense was a minor one. "While all," said Mr. Roth, "cannot afford $75,000, they can afford a proportionate amount and must afford it if they desire to keep their clientele."—Gross.

"I shall explain about my work in another letter".

An Efficient Department

Here's a chap that has things running in pretty nearly perfect condition and I guess we'll all admit he's using the light from his arc to best advantages. Having a 117 ft. throw with forty amperes at the arc, he secures a clear bright picture on the screen. With a very small picture we would naturally expect a bright screen, but the house has a capacity of approximately 850 seats, which indicates that an average sized screen must be used.

There are several other good points about this projection department, according to David Hunter, who writes:

"Since my last letter to you I have obtained a position in the Park theatre, Merchantville, N. J. It is one of a circuit of nine houses in the vicinity of Camden.

"I am assistant to Operator Walter Hoffman, who has worked at this trade for fifteen years. He does all the installing and repairing for these houses. The Park seats about 800 or 900 people. It is very prettily decorated inside with eight medium sized domes. There are three large rooms over the lobby, one being an office, the other end one contains a stairway and the switches, while the middle one is the booth. We have two Power's 6-B, motor driven of course. Two Power's Inductors regulate the current on a 220 volt line. The booth is modern in every way, having a high ceiling and being large and square shaped, with two windows opening out on the main street. A Safety First cabinet protects the film and an automatic closing can holds the waste. We have two large shelves extending the whole length of the booth and serving as rewind bench, while the other holds supplies. We are not annoyed by draughts coming in the port holes because Mr. Hoffman covered them with glass which at any time can be removed and washed.

"The picture is great: the throw is 117 feet and we use only 40 amps. Gundlach lenses are used and they give a perfectly defined picture. The picture is soft and does not glare, yet every portion of the picture is distinct. Mr. Hoffman has the intermittent and tension regulated so that you can sit 10 feet from the screen and not see a jump. I proved this to myself by actually sitting that distance and could not discern a jump except for bad patches. We run all early pictures of the better kind because we play to a select trade. Mr. Hoffman would like to join the League, so I am enclosing his application. I'm sure he will give the brothers some valuable information. We are going to experiment with the aerial image soon.

"With best wishes for the League,
DAVID HUNTER, No. 1669,
Philadelphia, Pa."

New Contract Signed

R. A. Root, Business Agent for Local 236, advises new contracts have been signed with all the theatres in Birmingham, Ala., for the coming year; the agreement to run from Sept. 1 to Sept. 1, 1923.

The contract committee composed of Brothers Root, Business Agent; J. H. Sapp, President, and F. E. Walker, Vice-President, at first asked for an increase in wages for the coming year, but after several conferences with the theatre owners, signed up for next year at the present wage scale and conditions.

Dear Editor:

I being a projectionist and interested in the Cinema Profession would like to know if the N. A. M. L. enroll oversea members as I am anxious to become a member. If so please let me know at your earliest convenience the membership fees.

Faithfully,
G. J. GALLAGHER, U. A. C. O.,
Theatre Royal,
Nairobi, B. E. Africa.

Brother Gallagher is now a member of the Forum.—Editor.

Dear Sir:

I am sending my name and address for membership in the N.A.M.L. as Brother E. E. Francisco of Portsmouth, Ohio, was at our show a few days ago and he told me about the League. He gave me the blank to sign.

Hoping this will meet with your approval, I remain

Very truly yours,
HENRY L. DUGAN,
Head Projectionist,
Auditorium Theatre,
Georgetown, Ohio.

Dear Editor:

Enclosed find 25 cents in stamps for which please send me one of your league buttons. I think that you are doing the right thing, but still the projectionists are not always to blame. Most of the managers want 10 to 11 minutes a reel and films cannot last long under such conditions. Others refuse to buy new parts, etc.

Yours truly,

Olympic Theatre Completely Remodelled

The Olympic theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., following several months' closing, during which time the interior was completely remodeled and re-decorated in elaborate style, reopened to the public Sunday evening, September 3, with Universal's special, "The Storm." A large Wur-litzer orchestral organ is a feature of the house. A striking stage setting has also been installed. Beautiful mural paintings adorn the walls of the house. The Olympic is operated by the same company that operates the big Lafayette Square in Buffalo. A fine exploitation campaign preceded the opening of "The Storm." T. C. Leonard, Buffalo Universal exploitation-ist, aided the management in the campaign.—Noble.

University Theatre Remodeled

Complete remodelling of the University Theater at Norman, Okla., has been started and will be rushed to completion.

The lobby will be tile floored with marble base and marble box office.

New spring bottom, leather upholstered chairs will be put in, seating 484 people. Two Powers projectors have been installed and a new Halftone screen added. The theatre will be steam heated and well ventilated and will show Paramount and First National pictures.

Commercial Fibre Co. Opens Raw Film Dept.

The Commercial Fibre Co. of America, Inc., New York City, announces the opening of a Raw Film Department under the management of Mr. G. Zezza to handle a new raw positive film manufactured by the Fabbrica Italiana Lamine Milano (F. I. L. M.). A large stock of said film has already reached this country. Mr. G. Zezza, before the world war, was the manager in this city, of the Raw Film Supply Co. and the Ambrosio American Co.

New Lighting System Installed

The Strand theatre, Binghamton, N. Y., held its fall opening last week. A completely renovated interior, with a new lighting system, greeted the eyes of patrons. A novelty drop setting, with artistic colorings, provided an effective stage setting for the cinema screen. Walter Stanzel is conducting the 15-piece orchestra.

A Program Feature You Don't Have to Buy Every Week

Everyone enjoys good stage lighting accomplished by the Major System and it adds an unmistakably great feature to your program at little or no cost, for you must have light anyway. Controlled light is a reputation builder that has made many Major Equipped theatres of nation-wide fame. Have you considered how much beautiful lighting effects are used in modern photoplay houses? Practically every house built today makes light an important feature—they invest in apparatus to give them the widest variety of marvelous light blendings.

The Major System of Light Control is used in the majority of the finest theatres everywhere. It is of unit construction fitting every size house, and can be installed without closing the house for a single day. It is pre-selective, remote control, extended remote control, flashless, safe in every particular, reduces fire and panic hazard and is simple to operate. No other switchboard or control has the Major advantages.

We will help you plan your improvements without cost to you. Write us of your problem; our theatre lighting engineers are at your service.

Light and Its Peculiar Characteristics Explained

falling upon it, only the red and a small amount of orange are allowed to pass, the remaining colors being absorbed by the glass. The color, therefore, of the red glass is due to the subtraction of certain elements from white light.

With the aid of the prism other glass can be tested. A yellow glass will be found to have cut off a large amount of the violet and blue, but the orange, yellow and green and most of the red are allowed to pass. A blue glass when examined in a similar way will show that the yellow is absorbed in the glass, but the blue, violet and green and a small band at the extreme red are allowed to pass. If now the two glasses be placed together and a white cloud viewed through them, this appears green, but if the two glasses be tested together, it will be found that only the green rays are able to pass through the two glasses, therefore, the green color has been produced by the subtraction of the other colors from white light, the other colors being absorbed by the combined glasses.

It will be noticed that the green seen through the combined glasses is very much darker than the color of either of these glasses alone, just as each of these glasses is much darker than the original white light.

The color of all pigments is produced in a similar manner and, therefore, no color in a picture can be of the same luminosity as white.

Just as the visible rays which cause a sensation of light can be absorbed by a colored medium, so can the invisible rays, the ultra-violet and infra-red, be absorbed by a substance which is transparent to the light rays. As has already been stated photographs can be taken by means of the ultra-violet rays alone. The light of the mercury vapor lamp is very rich in these rays and if a photograph of its spectrum be taken, it will be seen that its effects extend far above the visible spectrum into the ultra-violet. If now a piece of a particular type of glass be placed in front of the lens of the photographic camera, the ultra-violet region will be cut off, and the spectrum will appear to terminate at the end of the visible region.

WESTERN NEW YORK

Herman Lawrence, manager of the Bellevue theatre, Niagara Falls, N. Y., the past week celebrated the first anniversary of the attractive Cataract City house by offering an "All-Fun Bill," headed by Harold Lloyd in "Grandma's Boy." Herman reports the house attendance record being shattered.

Yeggs were frightened away before they were able to crack the safe in the Regent theatre, Buffalo, early on the morning of August 28. A hole had been drilled in the safe in Manager J. H. Michael's office and "soup" poured in and a fuse attached when the bandits were frightened by a scrub woman, who started to work earlier than usual and saw the men. She rushed to the front door and called two men, who in turn called the police. This is the second attempt on the Regent safe this year.

C. J. Carlson, one of the most popular exhibitors in western New York, is dead. Mr. Carlson operated the Grand theatre in the town of Westfield, in the heart of the Great Lakes grape belt.

Dewey Michaels of the Plaza theatre on William street, Buffalo, announces a change in policy of his popular east side house. Dewey is now offering vaudeville and pictures. The Plaza has been a straight picture house.

Stage hands and operators in Syracuse theatres have been granted an increase in wages of $2 a week, it is announced by A. P. Reed, secretary of the local union. The increase marked the settlement of a wage dispute between managers, stage hands and operators, which has lasted for months.

Shea's theatre in Jamestown, N. Y., has added Keith vaudeville to its program. Its new policy is vaudeville and high class photoplays. Mae Murray in "Fascination" was the opening feature Labor Day.

"The Glorious Adventure," starring Lady Diana Manners, followed "The Orphans of the Storm" as the special attraction at Shea's Hippodrome.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Appearing before the House District Committee Saturday, Representative Upshaw of Georgia, uncle of a girl who died as a result of injuries sustained in the Knickerbocker, urged that the Government appropriate one or two million dollars for a payment to the survivors and relatives of victims as damages for their misfortunes and sorrows. Charging that government agencies had been delinquent in safeguarding the lives of those who went to such a place, Representative Upshaw said he spoke for a number of those who had lost dear ones, as well as the Knickerbocker Victims' Congressional Relief organization. Representative Fred Zihlman of Maryland, active member of the District Committee, questioned the District Committee's jurisdiction in the matter and doubted the possibility of making such an appropriation, suggesting, however, the individual right to argue the matter out before the claims committee and claims court.

Last week at the instigation of the national executives of Stage-hands' and Operators' organization Washington local 224 operators, agreed to a reduction of ten per cent from $60 to $54. Washington is the only city in the country where the union has a strength permitting it to enforce the employment of three operators and an assistant in larger houses. Had the local failed to accept the cut, they were told from their International that the three and a half in booth rule might be permanently suspended. An agreement of national scope would eliminate the extra two or three men.

The children of Trinity Community House recently presented Harry M. Crandall with a handsome silver tray as an expression of their gratitude for the photoplay entertainment that Mr. Crandall for many months has afforded them gratuitously.

Permits to build the following Washington business properties were recently issued: A new film studio to be built by E. G. Smith at 1359-1365 C street, S. W., cost to be around $64,000.

Rapley Theatre Company to repair 1313-1325 E street, N. W., cost $850,000. This means the extensive alterations to the National theatre, including the new roof girder which was recently placed and is the largest in the world.

CANADA

The Orpheum theatre, Fort William, Ontario, was opened as a unit of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation in the company's chain of theatres across Canada on August 26 under the direction of Oral Cloakey of Winnipeg, manager of the Capitol theatre in that city. The opening was a marked success, the house being packed to the doors a half hour before the scheduled opening took place.

The Arcade theatre, 859 St. Catherine street East, Montreal, Quebec, was partly destroyed by fire early on the morning of August 31 in a blaze that lasted 40 minutes before being put under control. The gallery of the theatre was destroyed, the fire having started immediately below the projection room. A. Denis, proprietor of the theatre, could not estimate the damage but declared that the loss would be covered by insurance.

Unusual interest has been taken in moving picture circles in Canada in the arrangements for the release of "Blood and Sand" which was scheduled for leading theatres of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation chain in eight cities of the Dominion simultaneously on September 11. The chosen cities were Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver, Regina, Edmonton and Hamilton.

Two features were held over for a second week's showing at Toronto, Ontario, theatres for the week of September 4. One picture was "The Prisoner of Zenda" at Massey Hall while "The Loves of Pharaoh" was continued at the Strand theatre.

CLEVELAND

M. B. Horwitz, head of the Washington Circuit of Cleveland motion picture theatres, has been south all week. It is said that Horwitz is off on a vaudeville-book- ing expedition, and that he will play small time vaudeville at the Globe theatre, Woodland avenue and East 55th street.

Christie Deible of the Liberty theatre, Youngstown, was in Cleveland shopping last week. Among his purchases is the new forty-one Paramount series. Others in these parts who have booked the series of forty-one Paramounts are the Loew circuit in Cleveland; the Allen and Orpheum, Akron; Valentine and Strand, Canton.

INDIANAPOLIS

A reward of $100.00 offered by the Indianapolis Times for the capture of the "Masquerader" who appeared on the streets in connection with the picture of that name at the Circle theatre, was considered by the Circle management to be one of the greatest publicity stunts ever put over in this city.

Loew's State theatre is to be known in the future as "The State." The house opened Saturday, September 2, with "Blood and Sand," with but two days' notice. Herb Jennings, who has again taken over the management, says there wasn't time to engage an orchestra, so the house will use only the organ for the present.

KANSAS CITY

The Electric theatre at Edena, Mo., has been purchased by Carl Muff, while the Cozy and Elite theatre, Pratt, Kas., are being remodeled by S. F. Meade and F. W. Meade, new owners. The Electric theatre at St. Joseph, Mo., has been reopened after having undergone several improvements.

Eugene Dennis, psychic wonder girl of Atchison, Kas., who recently filled engagements at the Doric theatre, Kansas City, will be given an opportunity to appear before the American public in motion pictures, having signed a three-year contract for $52,000 a year with the Corona Pictures Corporation, according to George Davidson, Jr., of Wichita, Kas., one of the directors of the company.

ST. LOUIS

William Goldman, manager of the Missouri theatre, and Joseph Mogler, owner of the Mogler, Bremen and Excelsior theatres, were selected to represent the exhibitors on the joint arbitration board of the theatre owners and musicians during 1922-23. The selection was made at a meeting held Tuesday, August 30. Frank Gecks, president of the St. Louis Musicians' Mutual Benefit Association, and Steve Butler, business agent, will represent the musicians on the board. When the four cannot agree they will select an outsider to decide any questions in dispute.

John Karzin's Casino theatre, 1618 Market street, St. Louis, was robbed early Sunday, August 27. The intruders escaped with $5 in small change secured from the safe. A desk was also rifled.

Tuesday, September 6, was the St. Louis "Browns" Testimonial Night at the Missouri theatre. Nathan Frank, new president of the Missouri Famous Players, as chairman of the Citizens' Testimonial Committee, presented each member of the team from Manager Fohl to the mascot with a gift from the fans of St. Louis. More than $3,000 was raised by popular subscription to reward the players for their great playing this year. Billy Goldman, manager of the Missouri, headed the list with $100.

Eli Gory will open his new theatre at Wilsonville, Ill., on September 15. For the present he will play but four nights a week but if business proves sufficiently good he will increase to seven days. The house seats 385. Wilsonville is a mining community just east of Gillespie, Ill.

SAN FRANCISCO

Sunday, August 27, ushered in a new policy for Loew's Warfield theatre in this city. The combination vaudeville and partly motion picture programs, with which this new 3,000-seat house has been operated since its opening, are supplanted by photoplays, exclusively, with elaborately staged scenic and dramatic effects. In speaking of the change Lionel H. Keene, Western representative of Loew's said, "We believe the people demand good pictures and we will give them the best in our San Francisco theatre. Together with these pictures will be offered music worthy of the name, by artists known all over the country."

Sixty exchange managers and members of the sales and exploitation departments of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., representing Seattle, Portland, Los Angeles, Denver, Butte, Spokane, San Francisco and other Pacific Coast states, met in convention for a few days beginning Wednesday, August 23, as guests of the local exchange. L. O. Lukan, Western division manager, hurried Westward from a conference with General Manager J. D. Williams in New York City, so that he might explain the coming season's releases. The exchange managers were all enthused over the coming program and left with a feeling that they were to have a big year.

Edward Belasco, president of the Belasco Productions, Inc., has just returned from a trip to Los Angeles, accompanied by Dallas M. Fitzgerald, director general of the company. They are in San Francisco looking over locations for the filming of their first big picture.

SPOKANE

Nell Shipman, moving picture actress, star of "The Grubstake," Bert Van Tuyle, her director, and her cameraman have gone to San Francisco to complete the making of the picture, according to word from Spokane men financially interested in the undertaking. The animal scenes were concluded at Priest Lake last week and the party came directly to Spokane, leaving at once for the south.

Monroe Salisbury, pioneer stage and screen actor, asks that justice be given the moving picture players by the public, in the matter of sentiment these days. "The public and the press have taken a peculiar and flagrantly unjust stand upon receiving the news of the comparatively few improprieties in and around the studio," Mr. Salisbury said.

Fox Finishes "St. Elmo" with Gilbert as Star

ALL camera work on "St. Elmo," the screen adaptation of Augusta Evans' best-seller, has been completed at the West Coast studios of Fox Film Corporation under the direction of Jerome Storm, according to advices from Hollywood this week.

The production stars John Gilbert. The members of the supporting cast, headed by Bessie Love in the feminine lead, are Warner Baxter as Murray Hammond; Nigel Brullier as Alan Hammond; Barbara La Marr as Agnes Hunt, and Lydia Knott as Mrs. Thornton. Gilbert essays the part of St. Elmo Thornton. The continuity was prepared by Jules Furthman. "St. Elmo" has been on the stage for many years where it scored as a great drama. The picture will be an early fall release.

FEATURE RELEASE CHART

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

Adds good photography to picture interest—gives that truthful, accurate reproduction that is only possible when the reproductive scale of the positive material parallels that of the negative. That's why Eastman Positive Film carries quality through to the screen.

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base—now available in nine colors, is identified throughout its length by the words “Eastman” “Kodak” stenciled in black letters in the transparent margin.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY

In the long run Rothacker Prints actually cost you less than ordinary prints, for the many savings in our superior product and service soon cancel the slight difference in first cost which distinguishes Rothacker Prints from less beautiful and less durable prints.

The relation of first cost to final economy is the important thing, and to buy ordinary prints, which are priced according to their quality, is to be extravagant.

Our price represents no excessive premium—it represents a screen reflection of all that is beautiful in the negative.

Rothacker Prints may cost a fraction more than ordinary prints, but their screen appearance and service prove that they are worth the slight difference.

A MAN'S flaming answer to "The Sheik"—and a picture that will be like "The Sheik" in popularity.

Made by the producer of "The Sheik," with one of the most distinguished casts in history.

When a rash and beautiful woman throws herself on the mercy of a strong, determined man—what happens?

Your audiences will thrill to see. They'll thrill at the wild desert rides, the fierce conflicts, the revelries of Cairo's underworld, the dark stratagems of the crafty Arabs—and above all, they'll thrill at the heart-story of the little dancer, who risked her life for the man she loved.

Scenario by Olga Printzlau and Waldemar Young.*

Short Subjects are Half the Show

No matter how good the feature picture, how fine the story, or how prominent the name of the star may be, such a picture is only half of a motion picture theatre program.

The other half is comprised of Short Subjects, such as the news reel, the scenic drama, the comedy, the specialties in short length.

You are entitled to a whole evening's entertainment, and will get it at theatres whose owners pay for high quality throughout their entire programs and give as careful thought to the Short Subjects as they do to the feature.

These conscientious exhibitors select their Short Subjects from this list of guaranteed entertainment-value motion pictures:

AIM AT THE 100% SHOW

"How many shows were saved last year by short subjects? How many exhibitors had to count on the comedy or novelty reel for the words of commendation that tell them when patrons are coming back again?"

"Don't exercise the utmost of judgment and shrewd showmanship on the selection of your feature attraction now—and then decide to 'take a chance' on the short subjects as they come along.

"That's only half doing your job.

"Book short subjects that are worthy of it—then advertise them! There are opportunities here for creating a following that will bridge over many a weak offering."

EDUCATIONAL PICTURES have a following

Because their quality has been high and sustained through two years of successful distributing.

Because Educational pounds away with paid advertising in publications like THE SATURDAY EVENING POST and THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, telling 24,000,000 people constantly that good showmen present EDUCATIONAL PICTURES on their programs.

It pays to book EDUCATIONAL PICTURES and LET THE PUBLIC KNOW YOU HAVE THEM. Display our posters and lobby-cards prominently and talk about them in your newspaper advertising!

"Remembrance"

Goldwyn—5650 Feet

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

IT is with a deep feeling of reverence that we take our pen in hand to comment on what will undoubtedly be one of the most talked of pictures of the new season. Here is a feature so far above the usual run of filmplays that it sets a new standard. There is only one word applicable to it and that is —masterpiece. This is a photoplay in which "Dad" comes into his own. The screen has been inundated with mother stuff. It is therefore eminently fitting that father should have a chance. Well, he gets it in "Remembrance," which is one of the finest things Goldwyn or any other company has ever contributed to the literature of the silent art.

A niche in the film hall of fame must needs be set aside for Claude Gillingwater who as John P. Grout, the "pop" of the story, gives the shadowstage one of its truly great characterizations. This veteran actor makes the role a living, breathing thing. One moment our eyes are moist, the next we are taking part in the rare humor of the comedy moments. This is life stripped bare—life as it is undoubtedly lived in thousands of homes in this land. We predict a real reform around these thousand fireplaces after some folks see "Remembrance." If ever a film drove home a lesson, a forceful moral, it is this one.

All praise to Rupert Hughes for his entertaining story, his transcribing of it to the screen and his flawless direction. The cast is one of uniform excellence. Kate Lester does some of the best work of her long career. Patsy Ruth Miller's smile and charming personality shines throughout the action.

"Remembrance" has been mounted with unusual care in every detail. The sub-titles are unusually expressive and well worded. The scenes during which "Pop" is hanging between life and death and in his delirium tells mother of the old days and how he longs for a word of love are moments that set the heart strings strumming. We recommend "Remembrance" as a 100 per cent. picture. It has everything.

It is greater than "The Old Nest"

Months ago Pyramid knew that the title of this big exploitation-value play meant box-office success and Ray C. Smallwood directed it to make certain its immense audience values. In every big city where it has opened it's an assured success.

For the largest cities we are booking Martha Mansfield in person with a big dancing act called "The Evolution of the Queen" together with Pyramid's big picture. Opening week of the act and picture together Del Monte Theatre, St. Louis, September 24th.

The Portland Telegram

(ESTABLISHED APRIL 16, 1877)

PORTLAND, ORE., SEPTEMBER 2nd, 1922

Editorial

FOR FOUR WEEKS one of Portland's leading theatres has played a film-comedy to crowded houses. Between seventy-five and one hundred thousand people have laughed and cried over the predicaments and trials of "Grandma's Boy," and there are probably as many more who would enjoy its intense human appeal if the management of the theatre continued to play it.

This same film is now on its seventeenth week in Los Angeles where nearly four hundred thousand people have seen it at one theatre. In New York during the hot month of August it broke all attendance records.

The success of "Grandma's Boy," not only in Portland, but in New York and Los Angeles, is convincing argument that the American people, as a whole, still love the clean, the true, and the beautiful in life.

No salacious sex problem trails its slimy length through the film, the eternal triangle is limited in its application to two boys who vied in basking in the smiles of one innocent, wholesome girl, there is fighting enough to satisfy the most belligerent, for cause enough to suit the most critical, and bloodless enough to suit the most sensitive. There is lack of lavish display of wealth. Vamps and villains are relegated to limbo, and freak thrills are placed on the absentee list.

The comedy appeals to everyone who still has faith in men and women. We love "grandma" because our memories still retain visions of some one who had faith in her grandchild and whose face was good for a boy to see. We laugh at the boy, and wipe away a tear, because we have not forgotten the rebuffs, the timidity, the fear, the hopes, the heartaches of our younger days.

"Grandma's Boy" is everyone. The film is not an expression of the vagaries of a diseased imagination, it does not represent the morbid, the debased, the fetid side of life; it tries only to tell a simple story of human faith, a story in which each of us finds some counterpart in his own life, and it only tries to make us laugh between our smiles and tears, which is life after all.

The success of "Grandma's Boy" is America's answer to the film makers. Create what is pure, and sweet, and real, and the American people will open their hearts and let you in.

A brilliant showman, gifted with a supreme genius for fun-making, Carter De Haven stands at the peak among screendom's comics. His most recent comedy hit, "Their First Vacation," played the great Capitol Theatre, New York, and almost wrecked it with laughs.

De Haven knows how to PLEASE all classes of people. His comedies are gilt-edged and de luxe in their dressing. But they have touches of good old hoakum that would get a laugh from a dyspeptic. Make room for ALL the De Havens. But make room ESPECIALLY for their latest and greatest triumph

-Me-Not

NEW YORK AMERICAN—

"Forget-Me-Not," at the Criterion, held the attention engrossingly from the start to finish. It was charmingly and artistically told—genuinely poignant drama. Anybody who can sit nonchalantly through these several scenes must be callouser than any professional critic.

VARIETY—

The picture looks strong enough to go into any of the week stand houses and get money.

NEW YORK REVIEW—

A most remarkable picture. It is one of the finest pieces of work all the way around—in directing, acting and photography—that we have yet seen on the silver sheet.

NEWS—

"Forget-Me-Not" is aptly named. Few who see this little screen drama will soon forget its sweetness and charm.

FILM DAILY—

Exhibitors . . . can rest assured that they will be pleased with "Forget-Me-Not." Exploitation should be simple enough.

BILLBOARD—

The world will not soon forget "Forget-Me-Not."

CHARACTER OF STORY

A big, human story of love in the lumber camps of the giant forests of the Northwest—colorful romance—pathos that makes men and women weep—tender poignant—thrills of breaking log booms, surging waters and men fighting for life—a drama of a man's undying faith in the woman he loves—tense suspense—touches of humor—a real audience picture.

A TASTE OF THE PLOT

Nan and her father settle as squatters on "the sawdust pile" in the lumber camps of the rich Hector McKaye. She and a lumberman's son form a childhood friendship which grows to love as they mature. To break the friendship McKaye sends his son to college and Nan to the city to have her unusual education. There she is swept off her feet by a man of the world who marries and deserts her and a child that is born. Nan returns to "the sawdust pile" broken hearted. Her childhood sweetheart is back—and real love comes. But the lumber king forbids the marriage. Nan quits the place, sacrificing her own love for her sweetheart. He is true to his love, and grieving over her loss he exposes himself in the lumber camps and becomes deliriously ill. Dying, Nan is sent for, and he recovers. Then he learns his father is sending Nan away again, and leaves his home to save her. They are married, but father and son are estranged. The film loves a series of thrilling episodes—a new heir—and a touching reconciliation.

LIGHTING—Especially fine and carefully done, with unusual effects.

HOW TO PLAY IT

Play up name of author who has an international reputation, and character of the story. Star's name also will draw.

A rustic effect in your lobby, with back to give a log cabin effect, will present the correct atmosphere. Photographs of the north lands, streams and forests will be effective. A sawdust pile with chips and twigs and a miniature log cabin to give the touch of the lumber camps will attract attention. A tie up with the bookstores and libraries on the now famous novel will aid.

CATCH LINES

Peter B. Kyne's famous novel a picture triumph.

"Kindred of the Dust"—the drama of a man's belief in the woman he loves.

Drama moves as swiftly as the roaring flood of timber which bore down on two grappling men—one fighting for his life, the other almost throwing life away.

A story of the great Northwest and the people who grow there. "It has more human appeal than any picture I have ever made," says R. A. Walsh—and he certainly has made some mighty pictures.

A play as strong as the forest giants that tang it.

The stern old Laird, the Son, Nan of Sawdust Pile—love's own outcast—stride from book to screen in "Kindred of the Dust."

Treachery!

Bedtime

Then the fight began.

"KINDRED of the DUST"

"It makes you hold your breath!"

Nan Brent.....Miriam Cooper
The Laird's Manager.....W. C. Ferguson

By Mae Tinee.

This lovely picture is holding optiences at the Chicago theater spellbound. It is as real as hearts and lives and human nature. Without a spectacular effects calculated to make you hold your breath, it succeeds in doing just that. Brilliantly acted, the truest pathos, interlarded with bits of most exquisite humor. It was adapted from the novel by Peter B. Kyne.
Mr. Kyne chose as principals for his story a rugged Scotch lumberman, known as The Laird through that part of California where his vast properties lay; his only and beloved son Donald and a girl named Nan Brent.
Nan is a sailor's daughter, and it isn't the wish of the Laird that his son shall marry her.

"There are just two things I could not stand up under, Donald," he says.
"Your death—and the wrong kind of a daughter-in-law."

The boy worships his father, but he loves the girl. Nan—well, Nan is wonderful. There are women in the world like her, I reckon, but we don't get to meet them often. (Any more than we meet characters like the Laird or sons like Donald.) They must be, though, or an author could never have written so grippingly about them.

For the rest of the story—see the picture. I don't see how you can fail to be charmed with everything about it.

It's one of the simplest BIG and one of the biggest SIMPLE accomplishments ever screened.
(I think.)

That's what the Chicago Tribune says—but it will pay you to read their review in full. We've only space to give you excerpts of the other reviewers, but they're just as strong. This picture has made a big hit in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. It'll do it for you too!

Motion Picture News

Tell the Truth

EVER since the days of the first store show, the motion picture has been, in the minds of certain very influential people, an undesirable addition to an already menacing institution—the theatre.

As the industry grew, the opposition of these misguided but probably in most cases, perfectly sincere persons, increased in a corresponding ratio.

This opposition has, obviously, been aided and abetted, by our own indifference to criticism and our failure to take advantage of opportunities presented for defense.

It has become a tradition that we must be maligned in various degrees, depending on the attitude of the opposition—whether simply through ignorance or prejudice or by malicious intent.

And yet the remedy for this condition that has cost so much, is relatively simple. Just a matter of telling the truth—the manner of telling to be intelligently selected of course.

Here is the way Turner Jones of the Southern Enterprises, who is writing a series of four articles in MOTION PICTURE NEWS on the subject of motion pictures and their relations with the public, briefs our case:

“We must take the public frankly, candidly and avowedly into our confidence in making it conversant with the facts and problems of our theatres, companies and industry. Our problems must be laid before the public in a favorable manner; we must teach the public constructive means of securing better pictures through cooperation; we must tell the truth about company and industry.”

And Mr. Jones knows whereof he speaks. Southern Enterprises has been carrying on an educational campaign, fully explained by Mr. Jones' articles, the last of which appears in this issue that proves beyond a doubt that fair minded people can be won to the cause of the photoplay. Its proof is the best of all evidence—it has been done.

The methods that have been employed could only be epitomized in this limited space. We recommend to our readers, those who have not already done so, a careful study of the four articles referred to above. They tell the story of perhaps the most constructive step of its kind yet undertaken and of what is certainly a most illuminating example of the results accruing from intelligent and expertly conceived propaganda.

The whole industry owes a debt to Mr. Jones and Southern Enterprises that can not be measured in dollars and cents alone. They blazed a trail that every circuit organization should emulate to the *n*th degree and every individual manager should copy so far as it is possible.

Wm A. Johnston

HAIL to Pola Negri! The eminent Polish star has stepped on American soil where she will continue to flash her charm and personality under the guidance of Famous Players. It was indeed fitting and proper that contractual obligations should be forgotten while the Paramount executives in general and Adolph Zukor in particular tendered a luncheon in her honor.

Last Wednesday at Sherry's the representatives of the press and other guests, including E. J. Ludvigh, E. E. Shauer, Ben Blumenthal, S. R. Kent, Hugo Reisenfeld, Robt. T. Kane, and Thomas Meighan came and saw and Pola Negri conquered. After a brief visit in New York, the new Paramount star will leave for Los Angeles to begin work in her first American production, "Bella Donna."

It is an accepted fact concerning America that we always demand the best. Art has no nationality when this country beckons. We take Caruso, Godowsky, Gabrilowitsch, Stransky, Schumann-Heink, Galli-Curci, Kreisler—to mention a few—and call them our own. And now Pola Negri comes to us. We hope she will like this country well enough to call it HOME.

Carter DeHaven, F. B. O. comedy star, arrives in New York today and will be entertained at a luncheon at the Hotel Astor on Monday, together with representatives of the press and film notables. He recently completed five two-reel comedies for Film Booking Offices, and has been taking his vacation in the form of a cross-country personal appearance tour. He will remain in New York several days and then head south, taking in Philadelphia, Washington and southern cities, after which he will return to Los Angeles to resume work.

THE Majestic steamed into port Tuesday and among the passengers who registered happiness was Mabel Normand. The star of "Molly O" will leave for the Coast shortly.

IT'S an eerie atmosphere which greets the spectator from the Rivoli and Capitol screens this week. Wallace Reid's picture, "The Ghost Breaker," at the Rivoli, takes you on a spooky journey through the chambers of a castle in Spain, while "The Hound of the Baskervilles" at the Capitol introduces a "creepy" canine who dashes afire along the moors of Devonshire. The ghost should walk in on these pictures.

RICH characterization marks the Kate Douglas Wiggin story, "Timothy's Quest," which comes to the screen singing a cheery song of love and faith. Here is a picture which needed the most perfect of types to land fidelity to the original. And they step into their characters so admirably that it seems as if they might have stepped right from the pages of the book.

Marie Day gives a marvelous study as the stern, unyielding aunt. Her severe manner of wearing her hair—her expression of looking into yesterday and remembering something which should have been forgotten—the prim attitude of the congenital old maid, brought forth in every gesture, whether it is manifested in the folded arms, the "cross-patch" look, or the measured tread of her carriage—these points suggest perfect pantomime. You will recognize this religious spinster if you have lingered in the country. She is out of touch with things. Hers is an old-fashioned school—a school which taught her that a frequent smile is akin to a sinful thought. And Marie Day never loses her grasp upon this character.

The other spinsters are well played, too. One is expressed in the garrulous type—the little fussy, fidgety, talkative woman, admirably caricatured by Vivian Ogden. She gossiped in "Way Down East," and she gossips in "Timothy's Quest," though tragedy doesn't follow through her idle chatter here. Margaret Seddon plays a third spinster. This figure is also recognizable, for she represents the victim of a broken romance. Her day is over and she knows it. So she broods and smiles and is kind toward everyone. Watching these three actresses express such perfect acting is a treat indeed.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

HERE is an item of interest which will come as a severe shock to the industry. Benjamin B. Hampton has issued announcement that he has retired from the film business and it is not his intention to engage in picture production again either now, or in the future. Mr. Hampton's policy of production has always been marked by an honesty of purpose. He has always striven to make clean, wholesome pictures—and his sincerity in this direction has made these pictures censor-proof.

Everyone identified with the screen wishes Mr. Hampton the best of health and success.

LONGFELLOW'S celebrated poem, "The Courtship of Miles Standish," is going to be picturized. And Charles Ray will doubtless speak for himself in the role of John Alden. The star is at present engaged upon the picturization of the Whitecomb Riley poem, "The Girl I Love."

WALDEMAR Young has arrived in New York where he will be engaged in writing the continuity for the Hergeheimer novel, "Java Head."

MAYBE you don't think Bull Montana is a good business man! Back in his old home town in Italy he was visited by a committee appointed by the mayor to ask him if he would permit a statue of himself to be erected on the public square. Bull's modesty came to the rescue and while he blushed over the thought of his classic features being handed down to posterity, he tersely replied in a characteristic manner that brooks no argument—"They can pay to see me on the screen."

* * *

JOHN C. COLTON, one of the guiding spirits of the Marr and Colton Co., Inc., Warsaw, N. Y., builders of organs, arrived in New York last week for a business jaunt through the metropolitan district.

"THE fault dear Brutus lies not in our stars but in ourselves." To the citizens who live in Stratford-on-Avon, picture dramas are lurid plays of life. The birthplace of Shakespeare is to be kept sacred from the "malign atmosphere" of "lurid" plays put out by American screen producers.

According to a despatch gleaned from the New York Herald, American Consul Bailey has reported to the Commerce Department that a project to invade Stratford with "picture palaces" stirred the townsfolk to indignation. A mass meeting attended by leading citizens promptly squelched the plan.

When American producers suggested the idea, in line with a plan to expand their field of activity abroad, practically the whole of Stratford's population was up in arms and made successful attack upon purely sentimental grounds.

As Lady Macbeth has it—"Out, damned spot!"

OUR congratulations to the William S. Harts. William S. Hart, Jr., arrived on this planet recently and reports have it that Mrs. Hart (Winifred Westover) and child are doing nicely, thank you. It is a well known fact that when the stork deposits an heir upon a father's doorstep, his friends always rise to remark that he is a chip of the old block. We'd like to wager a typewriter against a couple of guns and a pinto pony that Dad was asked this one—not once but five and fifty times—"Well, Bill, are you going to make a cowboy star out of him?"

THE train kept moving that carried Thomas Meighan from the Coast. The Paramount star arrived in New York Monday and after a jaunt into the George Ade country, where he will confer with the famous Hoosier author and humorist, will return to the metropolis to begin work on Mr. Ade's "Back Home and Broke," written especially for the star. If you want to know how long the friendship has endured between the author and the actor, consult your old theatre programs or your memory. You will need to return to many yesterdays when "The College Widow" graced the stage. There was Tom in the leading role of the football player.

SPEEDING westward toward the land of the studios is Louis Burston, producer of "Forget Me Not." His plans? To begin work on a new large production, the name of which has not been announced.

HERE is a picture which should make some noise. We present "Blow Your Own Horn," which Wesley Ruggles will produce at once, starring his brother, Charles Ruggles. The film is an adaptation of Owen Davis' play of the same name.

THE Broadway Limited steamed into the Pennsylvania Station, Monday and Sol Lesser and Harry D. Wilson stepped forth with a world of news which will be found on another page of this issue.

JEROME LACHENBRUCH writes from Berlin that much film activity is going on in the land beyond the Rhine. New ideas are constantly being tried, though most continuities are still undeveloped. The correspondent feels sure that the Germans, with their freedom from puritanical censorship, are closer to real MOTION PICTURE than the Americans. He advises us that if we don't watch our step, they are going to put one over on us, and show us up as good technicians and little more. They have, through technical inefficiency, spoiled hundreds of marvelous stories. We spoil them by changing the stories into unrecognizable monstrosities. Mr. Lachenbruch believes in calling a spade a spade. This is one industry where one's toes are not sacred. A little stepping on them now and then makes walking easier in the end.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS reviews Norma Talmadge's new picture, "The Eternal Flame" this week. Mr. Larkin says "Better than 'Smilin' Through,'" which is a comparison that certainly ought not be odious to anyone, Miss Tadmadge, Joe Schenck, First National or the exhibitor.

It looks as if J. D. Williams when he talked for publication in Motion Picture News on big pictures, some time ago, knew that his words wouldn't boomerang to the detriment of First National's product this fall.

Joseph Plunkett, managing director of the Mark Strand theatre, New York, and R. H. Clark, treasurer and general manager of First National's New York Exchange, looking over the print and lobby stills of Norma Talmadge in "The Eternal Flame," which will be shown at the Strand next week

THROUGH courtesy of Marshall Neilan, Pete Smith has been loaned to Douglas Fairbanks to supervise the exploitation for the "road showing" of "Robin Hood." Loaning a publicity man is worthy of mention since there appears to be no record that the idea is in general practise. Pete appears to be making his typewriter count for something.

THOMAS INCE decided to give his picture "Jim" a new title. So he offered $250 for a winner. The best suggestion came from Harry Wilbur, proprietor of the Rialto theatre, Fullerton, Calif., who won the prize with "What A Wife Learned."

ROBERT E. PRITCHARD and Howard Deitz, Goldwyn's advertising manager, are busy organizing an exploitation department that is intended to be second to none. It will be headed by Mr. Pritchard.

Motion Picture News is eager to predict great things for Mr. Pritchard and his new department. No one in the business deserves more credit for the place that exploitation and the exploitation man holds in the film world, than "Bob" Pritchard. No man is to be found who is more of a veteran in the field. As long ago as the "Triangle Days," "Bob" was practising practical exploitation from the newspaper picture page angle in New Orleans.

Then he came to Motion Picture News, where he developed what had been a rather perfunctory exhibitor department into the Exhibitor's Service Bureau, the first real exploitation service to be offered trade paper readers. Now this further step upward in a field, in which few have specialized so successfully. Congratulations to both Goldwyn and Mr. Pritchard.

IF further evidence is needed to convince either exhibitor or layman that Harold Lloyd's latest picture, "Grandma's Boy," is a knockout, same can be found in the fact that it is playing the New York Mark Strand for the second week.

Managing Director Plunkett likes to keep the regulars coming around once a week, and it takes something way above the just good picture to make him change his policy, which by the way, isn't such bad showmanship either.

So when Joe holds a production over put it down that there is a jam at the box office window and a pleased crowd in the theatre. Incidentally Lloyd might well take unto himself a middle name—consistency. This makes about a dozen good ones, with never a flop. Who said making a good picture was more or less of a chance?

"WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER," Cosmopolitan's latest and without a doubt greatest production has begun its indefinite New York run at the rejuvenated Criterion theatre, leased from Famous Players-Lasky as a permanent home for Cosmopolitan pictures prior to their general release throughout the country.

This famous play, almost a generation old, has proven wonderful picture material. All its romance, dramatic values and originality has been brought to the screen and much which the stage could never hope to present has been added.

The Cosmopolitan production staff has outdone itself. Such opulence is a revelation even in these days when the million dollar picture is not an unusual occurrence.

All that an unstinted appropriation, skilled technicians, master directors and an all star cast might be expected to deliver, is realized.

"When Knighthood Was in Flower" enters the class of great motion pictures, with never a dissenting vote.

Few Theatres Expect Serious Fuel Shortage

Further Reports from News Correspondents Show Few Houses Will Have to Close

FURTHER reports from correspondents this week failed to alter the statement made last week in MOTION PICTURE NEWS to the effect that the fuel situation of theatres for this winter was not as serious as believed by some, and that no serious disturbance should be caused in the industry this winter through the closing of theatres.

In certain areas, however, conditions are not as favorable as might be desired, and much depends upon the length and severity of the winter. In almost every case, exhibitors express their determination to keep open this winter, even though they are forced to burn oil or wood.

The following reports have been painstakingly gathered by correspondents of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and present the best information obtainable in the respective localities:

BUFFALO, N. Y.: Situation in this city rather unfavorable, and managers face winter with varying degrees of optimism. Three houses, Mark Strand, Victoria and Regent, have their coal in for the winter. Loew's State has a few days' supply on hand, and plans to burn wood. The Lafayette Square and Olympic have none on hand, but state they can get necessary supply. The Elmwood has none on hand, but has order in for half a winter's supply. At Niagara Falls, the Strand has two carloads on hand, and the Imberg plans to burn coke mixed with pea coal.

WASHINGTON, D. C.: Situation here fairly good, as a whole. The three Notes Brothers' houses, Criterion, Plaza and Empress, buy six months in advance. The Strand and Empire have about three weeks' supply on hand. The Crandall houses have a considerable supply on hand, and can run up to March, 1923; some of the houses longer than this. These include: Metropolitan, Knickerbocker (now being replaced by the Ambassador), Savoy, York, Joy, Avenue Grand, Apollo, Park View (building) and the Lincoln. The Strand, Cumberland, Md.; Apollo and Strand, Martinsburg, W. Va., and Rialto and American, Roanoke, Va., will get through the winter, as will also the Virginia and Maryland. The Leader and Keith's have about two weeks' supply on hand. The Rialto, Palace and Loew's Columbia are not very favorably situated, although the latter may receive its regular supply because of the office building in which it is located.

GREENSBORO, N. C.: The general manager for the Pryor Brothers and Leitch interests, operating eleven houses in the south, states that there is no coal on hand and that a statement of requirements has been filed.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.: Coal situation comparatively bright, despite poor condition of state, as majority of theatres are owned by Finkelstein and Ruben interests, and the purchasing department of this firm has made provision for fuel for several months. Coal on hand at present will last until January 1, 1923. The situation throughout the state is not so good. Coal for Minnesota is largely shipped down the Great Lakes, and after navigation on the lakes closes, little more can be brought in. The governor of the state has urged residents to observe war time conservation.

RACINE, WIS.: Situation rather bad. The Rialto, a leading theatre, has no coal on hand and none in sight. The Bijou has none on hand, but has its winter supply promised. The Rex has none, but has about half its needs promised. The Palace has none on hand and none in sight.

Further Facts Relative to Heating Situation

ADDITIONAL data on the heating situation in theatres, gathered by correspondents of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, is presented herewith. Every effort has been made to make this survey as comprehensive as possible, and nearly every section of the country is represented in it.

Complete data, as submitted by correspondents, is presented, so that the reader may draw his own conclusions.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH: No prospect of coal shortage. Utah mines have large supply on hand. The Orpheum theatre is heated by the Utah Light and Traction Company. Three houses, the Paramount Empress, Isis and Kinema, are heated from central heating plants in the buildings in which they are located. Pantages and the Wilkes have their own heating plants, but will be able to obtain all the coal they need.

SPOKANE, WASH.: Very little concern is being felt here over the fuel situation. Nine houses, the Auditorium, Casino, Class A, Unique, Clemmer, Hippodrome, Rex, Pantages and Majestic, are heated by the Spokane Central Heating Company, which has 10,000 tons of coal on hand. The coal is obtained from Montana. The two other houses open, the Empress and Lyric, are supplied with heat from plants in the buildings in which they are located.

PHOENIX, ARIZ.: Houses here have not used a ton of coal in five years.

OMAHA, NEB.: Theatres in Omaha and surrounding territory are not worrying about the coal shortage. Should the supply of coal fail, exhibitors plan to use oil, electricity and cord wood. The Strand, Rialto and Empress are heated by a central plant, where three to four carloads of coal are kept on hand constantly. The World, Sun, Moon, Princess and Muse have enough for three or four weeks of extremely cold weather. The Apollo, Benalto, Comfort, Mueller, Park, Rohlff, Victoria, Grand and Alhambra carry only a small quantity, but anticipate no difficulty. Film salesmen report that theatre owners throughout Nebraska and Iowa are not alarmed over the threatened shortage.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.: No fear of shortage is felt here. Coal dealers give assurance that plenty of coal will arrive by boat before the close of navigation to meet all needs. All of the downtown houses are heated by a central heating plant, which will be able to obtain all coal needed.

CLEVELAND, O.: No worry felt here. All downtown houses are heated by the Illuminating Company, which will receive priority in coal supply. The Regent has an entire winter's supply. The Sun has a small amount on hand, but in the event that coal cannot be obtained, will burn oil, which has been done before.

ST. LOUIS, MO.: Practically all theatres are protected on their supply for the winter and the nearness of coal fields makes it certain that there will be no shortage here. The following theatres either have their supply in bins or are protected by strong contract: Arsenal, Lafayette, Maffitt, Shaw, Pagear, Arco, Grand-Florissant, Gravois, Juniata, Liddell, Manchester, New Shenandoah, Novelt, Pershing, Capitol, Grand-Central, Lyric, We End Lyric, Cinderella, Woodland, Empress, O'Fallon Park, Baden, Plaza, Congress, Demar, Broadway, Excello, Mogler, King, Liberty, Midway, Majestic, King's. The Criterion is heated by the Union Electric Light and Power Company and the Delmonte from the Delmonte hotel. The Knickerbocker changed hands recently, and no provision has been made as yet.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.: The situation here is not especially critical. The Stanley company, controlling a large number of the important houses, is covered by contracts for several years to come. The Nixon-Nirdling houses, Strand, Locust, Belmont, Colonial and Imperial, have from one to ten tons on hand per house. The legitimate houses declare the intention of keeping open even should they be forced to use some emergency fuel, such as oil.

ATLANTA, GA.: Exhibitors here are not worrying about the coal situation. The weather is still mild and is likely to continue so for a month or more, and exhibitors are confident that ample supplies of coal will arrive before the need arises.

CINCINNATI, O.: All of the houses in the Frankel Enterprises chain can be heated by gas if necessary, but the company states that no difficulty in obtaining the necessary coal is anticipated. This includes the following theatres: Palace, Park Hill, Lubin, Alhambra, Colonial, Victoria and Hippodrome; Cincinnati: Temple and Hippodrome at Newport, Ky.; Majestic at Columbus, O.; and New Lyceum at Dayton, O.

SEATTLE, WASH.: Theatres in this vicinity are not in the least worried about heating conditions and expect no interruption in their service this winter. Practically all houses in Seattle are heated by steam heat furnished by the Puget Sound Light and Power Company. This company is now burning coal but is prepared to use oil at any time, if necessary. The coal mines of Washington are a working to normal capacity and are producing more than enough to supply the state. Railroad service has not been noticeably interrupted, and there should be no trouble distributing this coal to the cities.

Missouri Film Rentals Show Reduction

A canvass of film rentals just completed by the M. P. T. O. Missouri shows that the exhibitors in the "Show Me" state are paying on an average of about 40 per cent lower film rentals this year, as compared to last year.

The fact that a depression has led exhibitors to be more careful in buying, as well as more economical, is the reason for lower film rental expense, according to Lawrence E. Goldman, secretary and counsel of the Missouri organization.

New England Exhibitors Addressed by Cohen

Massachusetts and New Hampshire Groups Told Antiquated Distribution Methods Must Go

NEEDLESS waste, excessive cost, and antiquated methods of picture distribution now in vogue were charged by Sydney S. Cohen in the course of an address before a joint conference of the M. P. T. O. A. of Massachusetts and New Hampshire held at the Hotel Arlington, Boston, on Tuesday of this week, September 12.

"Present distribution systems are antiquated," he declared, "and must be so changed that the cost of handling pictures will be materially reduced, and the independent producers given an opportunity to market their product among exhibitors. Discriminatory practices in this relation, directed against the independent producer, must be set aside and an absolutely square deal supplant present unfair processes."

Others to speak were W. J. O'Toole, chairman of the department of public service; William A. True, president of the Connecticut body; A. J. Moeller, general manager of the national organization; Senator G. A. Bean, New Hampshire president; Edward M. Fay, Rhode Island; and Jacob Lourie, president of the Massachusetts M. P. T. O. A.

Resolutions were adopted by the more than 100 owners present, scoring state censorship as a burden on production and invasion of popular rights; commending the extension of public work by the M. P. T. O. A., promoting progress in the community and making the theatre a center; favoring distribution of pictures on a fair basis, guaranteeing equality; emphasizing the right of the exhibitor to make such changes or omissions from pictures as he might deem right; and commending and pledging support to the national body in their work in behalf of the exhibitors of the United States.

In the matter of providing unhampered channels for the circulation of independent product to theatre-owners, Mr. Cohen declared:

"Unless the means of reaching the theatre owner with a picture is provided to the independent producer, the picture thus made will not be given the proper circulation among the theatres. This feature of the business is of the highest consequence to the theatre owner and the public. We mean to so arrange systems of distribution in this country that any maker of meritorious motion pictures shall have the opportunity of reaching the theatre owner and the public. Only in this way will we be able to bring to its highest point American genius in the matter of producing world-beating motion pictures."

Mr. Cohen further charged that the "block" system of selling was one of the most objectionable features, in that an exhibitor must buy forty or more, most of them having no exhibition value, in order to get a few of real merit, the others having no special interest to the public. This practice he characterized as an imposition on theatre owner and public alike, and declared it must cease.

"Art must be free to attain its highest expression," he continued. "It is a rank assumption on the part of the few groups, now seeking to control picture play product, to conclude that they have a monopoly of genius when the brain power of 100,000,000 Americans is considered. The time has arrived for affirmative action in this relation."

Paul Brunet Resigns Presidency of Pathe, Inc.

THROUGH Lewis Innerarity, secretary of the company, Pathe Exchange, Inc., announces the resignation of Paul Brunet, as president. Mr. Brunet's action was not unexpected by those closely associated with him, as family reasons have made his return to France necessary.

No information could be obtained from Pathe officials as to Mr. Brunet's probable successor.

It is understood that Brunet will remain a member of the board of directors, return to the United States occasionally and continue to take an active interest in the affairs of the company.

Before discussing the question of censorship, Mr. Cohen paid a high tribute to the women of New England. He said it was a matter of great consequence to the people of New England and the nation that the women of the country were provided with the ballot, as it would certainly have the effect of bringing American politics and American official life to a much higher standard.

"Speaking specifically on this point," he said, "women constitute the saving, balancing and effective element calculated to bring the nation from every uncertain phase now confronting it back to a sound, normal basis. In this relation, the motion picture theatre is a cooperating agency in every respect, and the women voters of the United States in common with the other citizens can always feel sure that the good offices of the Motion Picture Screen will be at their service in carrying forward every line of progressive action which tends in any way to advance the welfare of the nation or the interests of any American community."

"Most people," Mr. Cohen continued, "confuse good pictures with censorship. The fact of the matter is there never was and never can be any definite relationship between the two. Censorship represents only the opinion of those who censor. It cannot be made to represent the opinion of those who are in no way associated with censorship. Hence it follows that political or official censorship applied to any subject, whether it be a film, a newspaper article, a speech, a sermon or anything else, is representative only of the commission or the person who is doing the censoring."

"It is not reasonable that the American people should be obliged to read only and see only and hear only the things that some other person or official, designated or otherwise acting, feels disposed to permit them to enjoy. There are manifestly some divisions of government where regulation may be tolerated. But these have to do with the more concrete propositions and are never applied with any real degree of safety in a government like ours to matters affecting speech or any other element of public expression."

Mr. O'Toole discussed ways and means of dignifying and ennobling the picture industry, and of cooperation with officials of country, state and city, all to the end that exhibitors would find relief in many forms, such as from taxation, censorship, and the like. This he said, would make the theatre owner an important public factor and a force for good that would give him a standing in his community equal to that of a leading newspaper editor, the members of which profession he characterized as the best censor material obtainable.

"As in the case of any office-holder, there is so much glamor and glitter to a censor's position that we can never hope to abolish the job, but what we can and must do is to destroy the principle."

"The screen should be as important a factor in the community as the newspaper, and you should make yourself as conspicuously important as the editor, for then you will have the same liberty that he enjoys, and those who cry for censorship would never dare censor the newspapers."

"There is nothing in censorship that will help the industry in any way, and everything that will work against it. It is bad for business and community alike. You have got to get after the question in your own neighborhood, and make yourself so popular that your people will come to consider your judgment on the question the best. Make your opinion the opinion of your neighborhood."

Mr. True outlined the work done in his state, declaring that they had no fear of censorship there and that they had plans laid for the defeat of certain bills coming before this winter's session of the legislature. He prophesied that the state amusement tax of five per cent would also be done away with. He described their methods of raising the funds needed without taxing the members of the state body; in one instance, through advertising contracts with national advertisers by means of animated cartoons in film form.

The Arlington meeting resolved itself into two conventions and a general conference. The conventions were held under the respective auspices of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Massachusetts and New Hampshire. Exhibitor members of the state organizations of Maine, Vermont, Connecticut and Rhode Island were also present, making the gathering entirely representative of the business in New England.

The different meetings were featured with much enthusiasm and interest was accentuated by the fact that a referendum on censorship will be submitted to the people of Massachusetts at the November election.

Mr. Cohen was accompanied to Boston by M. J. O'Toole, chairman of the National Public Service Committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Theatre Owners Will Hold Convention in Omaha

A convention of Motion Picture Theatre Owners will be held in Omaha, Neb., September 19-20, at which many important visitors are expected.

According to A. L. Pramer, president of the Nebraska M. P. T. O., the gathering is for the purpose of discussing the problems that have confronted the exhibitor during the past year.

Pennsylvania Adopts Non-Theatrical Rules

Regulations Passed After Year's Stormy Debate Put All Educational Exhibitions Under Control

AFTER a year of stormy debate the Pennsylvania regulations governing the use of educational motion pictures, compiled by the State Department of Labor and Industry, and declared by Labor Commissioner G. B. Connelley to be "the first attempt in any state, in the interest of safety, to bring non-theatrical exhibitions under governmental control," have been finally adopted and became effective as of September 1, it is just announced.

The Pennsylvania code provides that where the "safety" type of film is used the customary fire-proof booth may be eliminated and the pictures may be shown from one of the numerous portable types of projectors. On the other hand, if the nitro-cellulose or flammable film is used, a fire-proof booth must enclose the projector.

Up to this time, "educational movies" were exhibited throughout the state from portable machines, in buildings that were unprotected from the fire hazard, and operators were employed who held no license. These things are corrected in the revised code, and the machinery for enforcement has been set up through the Department of Labor and Industry.

The regulations were adopted by the State Industrial Board, a branch of the Labor Department, after a year of stormy debate and public discussion. They were opposed first by the underwriters as leaving open the door to disaster from fire, and later when this hazard was taken care of, the representatives of the churches, schools and civic organizations who are affected directly, protested the restrictions would drive out of the state a most important kind of motion picture performance.

"Robin Hood" Will Open on Oct. 18 at Hollywood

"Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" will open Grauman's Hollywood theatre on October 18, according to an announcement made on Tuesday by Sid Grauman at a luncheon tendered members of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce and representatives of the press at the Fairbanks studio.

The run is to be indefinite and the consideration involved is said to be large.

From the applications that are being received at the Department of Labor and Industry in Harrisburg, there is every reason to believe, Commissioner Connelley says, that these interests are accepting the regulations and are preparing to adhere to their enforcement. The Bureau of Inspection has notified interested parties of the method of procedure to obtain permits for operation of machines, with or without a booth, as well as the procedure for securing building permits.

To assist in the enforcement of the regulations the Bureau of Inspection, Mr. John H. Walker, Chief, has drafted the following Rules of Administration, summarizing the regulations and setting forth the method of procedure to secure the various permits:

1. No permit will be issued for any auditorium for the use of flammable film where an enclosing, standard fire-proof booth is not provided for the projection machine.

2. No permit will be issued for any auditorium located above or below the first floor of a building where it is intended to use flammable film.

3. No permit will be issued for any auditorium located above the second floor of a building.

4. No permit will be issued for any auditorium for the use of any balcony for any purpose other than to accommodate the projection machine, booth and accessory equipment.

5. No permit will be issued for an auditorium without an enclosing, standard fire-proof booth, where the machine to be used has not been approved by the Industrial Board for the use intended.

6. No permit will be issued for any auditorium where the machine operator has not first applied for and received the permit required by the Industrial Board Rulings.

7. To obtain a permit for any auditorium, floor plans or sketches, in duplicate, showing aisles, seating arrangement, and all exit facilities, with all dimensions plainly marked and drawn to scale, must be submitted to the office of the Chief Inspector, Department of Labor and Industry.

Charnas-Lichtman Tour Is Highly Successful

Many Exhibitors Attend Dinners in Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Detroit and Cleveland

MORE than a hundred exhibitors and their families filled the banquet hall of the William Penn hotel, Pittsburgh, at the first of the series of dinners given in Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Detroit and Cleveland by Harry Charnas, president of the Standard Film Service, Inc., and Al Lichtman, president of the Al Lichtman corporation.

An elaborate screen entertainment was provided, consisting of "Rich Men's Wives," Sacred Films in Prizma colors, cartoon and novelty pictures. Motion pictures were taken of the New York arrivals at the railway station and added to the program.

At the speakers' table were Jacob Silverman, toastmaster; Harry Charnas, Al Lichtman, Carroll Dunning of Prizma Pictures; William Brewer, president of the Otis Lithographing Company; Dr. and Mrs. Asheom of Pittsburgh; Joseph Lefke, Joseph Danneberg, Robert E. Welsh, L. J. Boynton, Lynn Bonner and William A. Johnston. Addresses were made from the floor by Michael Rosenbloom of Charleroi and Fred J. Herrington, secretary of the Western Pennsylvania League of Exhibitors.

The speeches centered about the topics of uniform contracts, Will Hays' program of "Confidence and Cooperation" and the importance to the exhibitor of the independent producer.

Al Lichtman, in the closing address, said that uniform and equitable contracts were not needed if the distributor sold fairly and the exhibitor bought sensibly and justly. He reviewed briefly the history of the industry with respect to so-called "trusts" and so-called "independent" oppositions. True independence, he pointed out, means the independence of each branch of the industry, exhibitor, distributor and producer from each other. He outlined the cooperative principle of his organization—cooperation in production, in distribution and with the welfare of the exhibitor.

Many fine tributes were paid to the integrity and enterprise of Harry Charnas and his organization. Exhibitors were present from Pittsburgh, McKeesport, Newcastle, Sharpsburg, Johnston and Washington, Pa., and many others cities.

After the dinner the party left for Cincinnati, where on Monday night a dinner was held at the Sinton hotel. Commercial optimism and a renewed pledge to give the public bigger and better motion pictures were the keynotes of the dinner. There were present nearly 250 exhibitors and their families, producers, editors and newspaper critics.

Mr. Lichtman was introduced by the toastmaster, Fred E. Meyer, owner of the Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. He made an appeal for open dates.

"It makes no difference," he said, "who makes a picture, so long as it is good, and the exhibitor will miss good pictures if he contracts blindly for quantity product. It is lack of courage on the exhibitor's part not to refuse to buy pictures he knows his public does not want. It is the exhibitor's first duty to himself and to the worth-while producer to buy judiciously."

Harry A. Kress, of Picqua, Ohio, who successfully fought the blue laws there, said: "Business will be good this fall." Fred Meyer made the same prophecy.

Carol Dunning, vice president of Prizma, Inc., stressed showmanship, rather than side-showmanship, and urged: "When you put on a show put on as much inside as you do outside."

Following the Cincinnati dinner the itinerary called for a stop in Detroit, where the Statler had been selected for the third gathering. The presence of the trade paper editors in the city prompted the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan to give them a special luncheon, at which W. A. MacLaren of the Palace theatre, Jackson, was the toastmaster.

The wind-up of the series occurred in Cleveland at the Carlton Terrace. Here, as in the other three cities, the first Lichtman release, "Rich Men's Wives," was screened for the assembled exhibitors. All through the territory the series of dinners had been heralded long in advance of their actual occurrence, and a good deal of interest had been aroused in exhibiting circles by such an introduction, which the Charnas organization claims to have been the first of its kind for a producing and distributing company.

Free Film Import Question Agitates Germans

Opinion Divided Concerning Lifting of Present Much Abused Permit System

By Jerome Lachenbruch

THE German film world is at present greatly agitated over the discussion of the free admission of foreign films. When one thinks of foreign films here, one substitutes mentally the word "American" for "foreign," inasmuch as one-half to three-fifths of foreign films that enter Germany are of American manufacture. Should the present restriction upon importation be removed, the percentage of American films here would immediately rise.

It is a matter of common knowledge that most of the best American films have never been shown in Germany. The duty on films is small, practically negligible, but the restrictions placed upon foreign films make it difficult for many importers to obtain American-made pictures.

As to the advisability of admitting foreign films, opinion is divided: about seventy-five per cent. for and twenty-five against. Among the twenty-five per cent. may be numbered a group of speculators who have made nice little "Schieber" profits from the condition that obtains at present.

Some of the German film journals are strongly for exclusion, and a few film firms agree with these periodicals. But from the tenor of their statements, I gather that most protectionists are still such merely because many German films have not found a welcome in the American market, and they approve of a so-called exclusion act as a gesture of retaliation. The others have a personal interest which will be enlarged upon later.

In order to present both sides of the question, it is best, perhaps, first to give a short history of the German ban on foreign films and then to quote some interested authorities on the present state of affairs.

Ban Put On in 1916

In 1916, all importation of luxuries was forbidden. Among these was film negative. Of course, during the blockade, it was impossible to import films. Nevertheless, in July, 1917, the edict against certain articles was lifted, but with definite restrictions. One could import certain wares, but only with a government permit. Films, however, were still banned. In 1921, the importation of films was permitted in an amount equal to about half of what was made in Germany. The conditions under which importation could be carried on was laid down in a ruling known as the "contingent." The government issued contingent permits, the holders of which might import a stated number of meters of film. The intention of the government officially was to permit those German producers and exporters who sold German films to foreign countries to import foreign films to give variety and novelty to the native theatre programs. The amount of importations varied from ten to fifteen per cent. for the larger companies, while fly-by-night concerns managed to grab a number of contingent permits and so import films that they had no moral right to bring into the country. These concerns then sold their contingent permits to bona fide film companies, which paid huge middleman profits for a privilege that the government intended them to enjoy.

Immediately after the war, the restriction on films was a measure of protection for the

THIS is the second of a series of articles which Jerome Lachenbruch is writing for MOTION PICTURE NEWS, dealing with conditions in the foreign film field. Mr. Lachenbruch, who was connected with the home office publicity staff of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, and is well known as a writer on film topics, is now abroad where he is able to observe conditions in the motion picture industry there at first hand.

The present article, which was written in Berlin, presents an authentic summary of the attitude in Germany toward the importation of pictures, particularly those made in America. Other articles will appear from time to time.

film industry; but since then, the demand for pictures has been greater than the supply, and consequently the make-shift contingent idea was brought into being.

In 1921, about 300,000 meters of foreign films were imported into Germany; and during the past year, or rather ten months, from Oct., 1921, to August, 1922, about 500,000 meters have come into the country. These figures are exclusive of titles, and represent approximately the number of meters of film that were passed by the official censorship board. Of the films imported in 1922, about 225,000 meters came from America, and the rest from Italy, Denmark, Austria, Sweden, Hungary, France, England, Spain and Finland. Very little was brought in from the last three countries.

Fear Flood of Pictures

The overhanging fear among the honest protectionists is that if importation is absolutely free, American films will flood the German market and German film companies will have to go to the wall. Against this point of view, the free traders say that small films and those of a purely local flavor should not be produced. They see no reason why the German film should not consider the entire world as a market, just as the American producers look to other countries in selling their product. In presenting these contrasted opinions, let me quote some of the interested authorities:

"I know very well," said Mr. Powell, the general sales manager of the Decla-Bioscope, "that with the free importation of foreign films, our production will be reduced. Nevertheless, I hold it to be a good thing because we will then be able to present a greater variety of pictures in our programs. We shall also be able to concentrate on pictures that deserve to have a world market. The fact that many German films have been exported to America and still remain unsold is very likely due to the fact that their technical handling is years behind what America is accustomed to. During the war, the United States kept on producing, while we turned out practically nothing. It is quite understandable that these old-fashioned pictures are unsalable in a market well supplied with its own product. To break into the American field, we must make pictures technically as good as the American variety and supply a new type of story. I believe we can do it."

Dr. Walter Friedmann, in a polemic published in the Film Courier, cites the large percentage of foreign films imported into Germany within the past year and refers petulantly to the unsold German pictures in the American market. He does not, however, state that in most instances, meters and meters of expensive negative have been used to show messengers leaving rooms, walking in the street, reaching their destination and finally delivering a letter. Such drawn-out work hasn't been seen in America since 1913. Although the example quoted can easily be cut out of a picture, it is typical of the directing and the general treatment of German films immediately after the war. The number of new German films that have been and will be sold THIS year, I believe, is likely to make Dr. Friedmann change his opinions.

Claim American Discrimination

Although Dr. Kuehnert, the chief of the Government Film Export department, presented the facts and the history of the importation bann on films unbiasedly, he feels that America discriminates against German films because they are German. He referred to the vicious reception that "Caligari" received at the California theatre about a year and a half ago. This picture would probably not have been boycotted, had there been plenty of work for American actors to do at the time. The boycott was an economic means of self-protection, but that has been understood only by the few in Germany who follow American film conditions closely and understandingly. All that is generally known here is that an artistic German film was horribly "razzed." From this attitude, it is but a step to the point of view that if America will not have German films because they are German, Germany ought not to import American films. Dr. Kuehnert himself is personally not interested either way in the question, but he remarked that one of the strongest established American firms in Germany made a fortune on propaganda films during the war. That is a particularly bitter pill to swallow, as the head of this concern is a born German.

Another factor that has expressed itself in no uncertain terms is the theatre owner. To owners of theatres, the red tape and chicanery connected with the Contingent idea is a pernicious restriction on their business. Although it is a fact that many of the large chains of film theatres are owned by film producing and distributing interests, they are motivated in their stand only by the showing of their box office receipts.

Recently, several well known film producers, directors and exchange men stated in the press their advocacy of the principle of free film importation. They all welcome foreign competition, and believe that the animosity that still exists in some quarters against German films will be removed not by restricting importation, but by producing pictures that will succeed in spite of past hostilities.

Loew Finds England Interesting

Electric Sign Stops London Traffic; Exploitation Methods Conservative

MARCUS LOEW, who recently returned from seven weeks in Great Britain, this week gave out his first interview on conditions as he found them there.

"The one fault I have to find with English exhibitors," says Mr. Loew, "is that they are too conservative in their advertising methods. Such advertising as they do we would not consider advertising here at all. They have their programs a year ahead and they proceed along set lines.

"This block system of booking I think to be faulty, as the new product does not reach the English screens until it has become old and of less value.

"Metro hopes to relieve this situation, providing the proper co-operation is forthcoming from the exhibitors in retiring some of the old product and supplanting it with new material. This will not only bring the foreign market up to date, but determine proper values for the new product.

"Presenting super-features in legitimate theatres or in a method as we know as 'road show,' is somewhat new to English exhibitors, and proved quite satisfactory with our presentation of 'The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse' at the Palace theatre, in London. The results were and are continuing to prove beneficial beyond all expectations.

"The English taste for pictures leans to the drama, with an occasional comedy-drama as relief. American productions are, of course, the most popular because of the limited scope afforded a 'home-made' product.

"The admission prices to motion picture theatres of the same calibre as our Broadway houses are much higher in England. Five shillings, or the equivalent of one dollar and a quarter in American currency, is charged for mediocre productions. This refers to orchestra seats, the balcony prices being graded in proportion.

"There are about 3,500 cinema theatres in all Great Britain, and I discovered that the very best elements are interested financially in the industry. Lord Ashley and Lord Beaverbrook I found to be actively interested in the motion picture industry.

"I had been lamenting the lack of electrical advertising display among European exhibitors when Sir William Jury, who represents our enterprises in England, advised me that there was a huge electric sign in the course of construction nearby and invited me to have a look.

"As we approached the sign, which was bare of any advertising material but held only the outer edge of bulbs in place, the power was turned on. The police were quite right about it blocking traffic. It seemed that everyone forgot all else but that sign, which, though only a feeble illumination on Broadway, was the one bright spot of that London street.

"In another minute the power was turned off and the next day I was advised of the cause."

Fox Erects New Film Building in Dallas, Tex.

Fox Film Corporation will begin erection of a modern two-story film exchange building in Dallas, on Jefferson street.

The building will be twenty-five feet wide by ninety feet long and will include a projection room for use in the private showing of films. The structure is expected to be completed in November.

The structure will be the first film exchange building to be erected outside of what is popularly known as the Dallas "film row." The Fox Corporation at present maintains offices at 1907 Commerce street.

Cleveland Musicians Demand Increased Wage

Cleveland holiday audiences were without music on Labor Day as a result of a walk-out of the musicians in their strike for higher pay. Managements of the State, Allen, Stillman, Park, Alhambra, Mall and Liberty Theatres, negotiated a temporary peace and the music was resumed in the various houses at the Wednesday matinees.

The musicians are asking an increase from $46.50 to $60.00 per week. About seventy-five theatres and five hundred musicians are affected by the strike.

Patterson-Aiken Wedding on Sept. 5 at Atlanta

The marriage of Miss Anna Eugene Aiken, editor and publisher of the Weekly Film Review, to Willard C. Patterson, manager of the Metropolitan theatre, Atlanta, Ga., took place in that city on Sept. 5, according to cards received here this week.

Mr. Patterson came into prominence in Atlanta when he associated himself with the Sig. Samuels interests, Associated First National Franchise holders, and literally raised the now famous Criterion theatre "from the dead." The result of the successful run of the Criterion theatre was the building of the Metropolitan theatre. Mr. Patterson is a member of several fraternal organizations and is a 32nd degree Mason. Mrs. Patterson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Aiken. She was educated at the Georgia State Normal school in Athens and at the University of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Patterson were to be at home after September 15 at 247 St. Charles avenue, Atlanta.

Oklahoma M. P. T. O. Hold Convention

The annual convention of the Oklahoma Owners and Managers' Association last week at Oklahoma City was extremely successful. Many matters of interest to the industry were discussed.

The convention voted that each exhibitor in the state of Oklahoma run one slide of national advertising free, for benefit of the state association. The tax on music was attacked and the executive committee authorized to fight the tax proposition in every way possible.

The action of certain film corporations in charging alleged high prices for pictures was denounced.

The executive committee was authorized to be on the job during the coming session of the Oklahoma legislature and to use all honorable means to prevent adverse legislation from being passed.

The question of no Sunday shows was discussed, and it was agreed that all means possible would be used to prevent Sunday theatre closing in the state of Oklahoma.

It was voted to hold the next annual meeting of the association at Oklahoma City either the last of April or the first of May, the date to be fixed later by the executive committee.

The exhibitors attending claimed to have sufficient fuel in the way of coal and gas to last until a new supply of coal could be procured from the Oklahoma coal mines, which have recently been reopened.

The following executive committee was elected: Ralph Talbot, Tulsa; Morris Lowenstein, Oklahoma City; Josh Billings, Norman; Harry Britton, Norman; W. A. Moman, Shawnee, who in turn, elected the following officers: Ralph Talbot, re-elected president, Shawnee; Morris Lowenstein, re-elected vice president, Oklahoma City; Josh Billings, secretary, Norman; and Harry Britton, treasurer, Norman. No further business appearing, the association adjourned to meet on call of the executive committee.

The association on Friday and the second day of the convention attended a private screening of "Remembrance," a Goldwyn production, and "Grandma's Boy," a Pathe picture featuring Harold Lloyd, at the Orpheum theatre.

First National Will Distribute Folio, Listing Pictures

UNDER the title of "The Great Selection" First National Pictures, Incorporated, will distribute to exhibitors a detailed list of its pictures, including those ready for distribution and those in the course of production or contemplated. Twenty thousand copies of the folio are said to have been printed to date.

A foreword outlines the purposes of the book and the value which the publishers believe it will be to the exhibitors. This is followed by the list of First National Releases. A more or less detailed account of each picture is given, including names of the featured players, the producer and director and a short description of the nature of the story itself.

Twenty-Seven Corporations Formed in August

Incorporations of motion picture companies in the state of New York during the month of August numbered twenty-seven, representing a capitalization amounting to $1,011,000. But one of these companies had a capitalization of $500,000, the others ranging all the way from $1,000 to $250,000. The complete list follows:

Independent Finance Corporation, $1,000, E. W. Peck, D. E. Hurwitz, New York City; A. A. Kelley, Montclair, N. "Dorothy Vernon" Probably Pickford's Next

ACCORDING to present indications, Mary Pickford's next starring release for United Artists Corporation will be "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall." The rights to the Charles Major novel had been purchased for Madge Kennedy a few weeks ago, but Miss Kennedy decided to relinquish the rights upon receiving an offer from Miss Pickford, through Ruth Allen, the photoplay agent. The consideration involved is said to be one of the largest this year.

"Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" is laid in the Elizabethan period, and will be a costume picture. As it will be somewhat of a departure from her customary photoplays, Miss Pickford plans to give it special attention, and will not begin work on it for several weeks after the completion of "Tess of the Storm Country."

It is practically settled that Douglas Fairbanks will produce Booth Tarkington's "Monsieur Beaucaire" following "Robin Hood." Both of the foregoing productions will probably be started before the close of 1922.

Operators' Union Head Gets Sixty Day Sentence

The Omaha "World-Herald" of September 2nd reports that Mayo Paden, head of the Omaha local, International Alliance of Motion Picture Operators, was convicted of contempt of court in Council Bluffs, Iowa, and sentenced to sixty days in the county jail.

Thomas E. Smith, a member of the same local, received a thirty-day sentence on the same charge, and A. R. Krake, tried at the same time, was acquitted.

The arrests and convictions grew out of a series of alleged offenses perpetrated against Council Bluffs theatres in connection with the strike and lock-out of the operators. On August 16 the theatre managers were granted an injunction by the district court enjoining the members of the union from interfering with the operation of the theatres.

The arrests were made near the Liberty theatre in Council Bluffs after a "stink bomb" had been thrown into the lobby. The odor from the "bomb" is said to have saturated the business district for several hours.

Operators' Strike Settled in Cleveland

Meetings between the executive committee of the motion picture operators union and a committee of Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, have resulted in a peaceful settlement of differences between them.

The new scale affects every motion picture theatre in Cleveland with the exception of the Loew circuit, and is retroactive to the first of September. By the new terms operators working seven nights and one matinee in a house of 500 seats and over getting 20-cent net admissions, are receiving $52, as against the old price of $37.91. Operators working seven nights and two matinees are getting $60, as against $47.50. All day grinds are paying $68, as against $55.88 a week.

Loew interests made separate arrangements with the operators and are consequently not affected by the agreement of the Exhibitors' League.

New Theatre Buildings for St. Louis

The Missouri Famous Players will spend $1,000,000 for the completion of a 12-story office building in conjunction with the Missouri Theatre, Grand boulevard and Lucas avenue. An announcement to this effect was made by Nathan Frank, recently elected president of the organization, a few days ago upon his return from New York. Frank also stated that $50,000 had been appropriated for permanent decorations and other improvements to the Missouri.

Charles H. Thimmig, owner of the Midway Theatre, Grand and Washington boulevards, has also completed arrangements for the erection of a theatre and office building on the present site of his theatre. It is said a leading moving picture producing organization has arranged to lease the theatre which will have accommodations for about 3,000.

M. P. T. O. Convention at Wichita, Kan.

Western exhibitors are highly interested in the coming convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners, to be held at Wichita, Kan., Sept. 25, at the Hotel Broadview. Important speakers are expected from all parts of the state.

Among the more prominent names that are down on the program for addresses are those of Attorney General Richard J. Hopkins and the Rev. Earl Blackman, one of the best known ministers in Kansas.

The activities of the convention will be centered upon the securing of lower film rentals and the discussion of pending censorship legislation, it is stated.

A feature of the convention will be a free banquet, given at the expense of the Kansas City exchanges.

Nat Royster Made Manager of Orpheum

"Nat" L. Royster, who has been handling publicity, advertising and exploitation for the Knickerbocker and other theatres owned by the Crescent Amusement Company, Nashville, Tenn., has been appointed manager of the Orpheum theatre, a legitimate house in that city, according to word received here this week.

Youngstown Operators Return to Work

Youngstown motion picture theatres, closed for one day on account of the operators' strike, reopened when an agreement was reached with the exhibitors.

Under the terms of the settlement operators returned to work at the old scale of $50.40 a week until January 1, 1923, after which the scale will be $56.00.

Legislative Matters to Be Postponed

Action on legislative matters in Washington affecting the industry will be postponed till November, according to the remarks of chairmen of committees, such as Education, District of Columbia, Judiciary, Interstate Commerce and others.

MacManus Company in Porto Rico

Work Started on New Subject for Associated Exhibitors; Islanders Interested

EDWARD A. MacMANUS is again "on location" in Porto Rico and proceeding with his new subject for release by Associated Exhibitors. The title of the new production has not yet been announced. While in New York during the past few weeks, Mr. MacManus assembled a cast for his new picture which includes Monte Blue, Mary Thurman, Mary Alden, Frank Currier, Macey Harlam, Charles Lane, Sallie Crute and Martin Faust. As was recently announced in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, MacManus's production enterprise is being financed by a group of wealthy Porto Ricans and a studio has been erected for the production company near San Juan. The first picture already completed is titled "The Woman Who Fooled Herself," and features May Allison and Robert Ellis. The story is from the pen of Charles A. Logue. Associated Exhibitors has set "The Woman Who Fooled Herself" for release on October 29th.

That the work of the MacManus company in Porto Rico has won favorable notice from the business interests located on the island is evident from the fact that upon the arrival in San Juan last week of the new production company, assembled for the next subject, the Rotary Club, under the leadership of Governor E. Mont Reilly, turned out to welcome the players and tendered them a banquet at the Hotel Condado.

In a statement from the home office of Associated Exhibitors this week the screen careers of the various players engaged for the new MacManus production are sketched as follows:

Monte Blue entered pictures after two years on the vaudeville stage, and some of the more notable productions in which he plays prominent roles were "Wild and Woolley," "The Man from Painted Post," "The Squaw Man," "Everywoman" and "Peacock Alley."

Mary Thurman began her career soon after her graduation from the University of Utah.

She had important parts in "The Sin of Martha Qued," "The Scoffer," "Bare Knuckles" and in Richard Barthelmess's recent success, "The Bond Boy."

Before entering pictures Mary Alden played with Phillips Smalley in "The Wolf," and with Mrs. Fiske, and on the screen she has had big parts in the "Argyle Case," "The Land of Promise" and "Common Clay." She played the mother role in "The Old Nest."

Frank Currier started in pictures after playing with Julia Marlowe, Viola Allen and Nat Goodwin. Among the screen successes in which he had parts were "Revelation," "Toys of Fate" and "The Brat."

Macey Harlam, after a successful stage career, had important roles in "Ruggles of Red Gap," "The Man from Mexico," "Wanted—A Husband," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and "The Restless Sex."

Martin Faust has scored successes in a number of features, the most recent of which was "A Face in the Fog."

Obtain New Injunction Against Union Operators

Theatre managers in Council Bluffs, Iowa, are still having their troubles.

A third injunction restraining union moving picture operators from interfering with the operation of Council Bluffs theatres was granted in district court September 6, by Judge E. B. Woodruff. It was obtained by Morris Cohn, Abe Smead and Benjamin Harding, managers of the Strand, Majestic and Liberty houses, respectively.

The first injunction issued by Judge O. D. Wheeler covered all four Bluffs houses, but did not restrain the union men from picketing the theatres. The second restraining order prohibits picketing in addition to all the things covered by the first order, but protects only the Garden and Liberty theatres.

Fox to Build Theatre in Cleveland

Plans for a new theatre to be erected in Cleveland are announced by Will Page, special Fox representative. John C. Eisle, treasurer of the Fox Film Corp. has been in Cleveland for several days with a view to obtaining a suitable location for the proposed building.

A site has been secured, one block from Playhouse Square, on Euclid Avenue and work will be commenced immediately. The theatre will accommodate three thousand people and is expected to be ready for opening by September, 1923.

Abe Warner Goes to Coast For Six Weeks

ABE WARNER, of Warner Brothers, left last Wednesday for the West coast, where he will spend six weeks in conference with his brothers, Sam and Jack, relative to the production schedule of eighteen pictures, announced by Harry M. Warner for the season of 1923.

The purpose of the trip, it is said, will be to engage a number of prominent directors and popular screen players for the eighteen pictures, the production of which will begin as soon as the present series has been completed.

In the estimation of Harry M. Warner the production schedule for 1923 will outstrip any production plan hitherto attempted by an independent organization. The eighteen stories, the titles of which have not been made known for the present, are well known novels and stage plays.

Sam and Jack Warner are at present producing "The Beautiful and Damned," with Marie Prevost in the leading role. Following the completion of this picture they will begin work on Sinclair Lewis' novel, "Main Street," and "Little Church Around the Corner" written by Marion Russell.

Harry Rapf is now producing the Charles G. Norris novel, "Brass," which is being directed by Sidney Franklin and which will also feature Marie Prevost.

Scenes from "The Bond Boy," First National Attraction, starring vehicle for Richard Barthelmess.

Jane Novak Starts Work on "Thelma" for F. B. O.

"Thelma," Marie Corelli's famous novel, went into production this week under the direction of Chester Bennett, with Jane Novak as star. It will be distributed through the Film Booking Offices of America.

The picture is being personally directed by Mr. Bennett, and will afford Miss Novak a new type of role inasmuch as she plays the Norwegian girl whose love story has been read by thousands. A large part of the action is laid in the Scandinavian village, which required the building of an entire village near the Pacific ocean, several miles north of Santa Monica, where the scene strongly resembles that of Norway. Boats of special Norwegian design were also built for the ocean scenes of the production.

The cast supporting Miss Novak in "Thelma" includes Vernon Steel, who plays opposite the star, Bert Sprotts, June Elvidge, Wedgewood Noel, Barbara Tennant, Harvey Clark, Jack Rollons, Gordon Mullen, Harry Lonsdale and little Virginia Novak.

Universal Has Engaged E. D. Leishman

E. D. Leishman, formerly connected with Warwick, Mitchell & Co., public accountants, has been engaged by Universal as a traveling auditor. He has left New York for Pittsburgh, where he will begin work.

Leishman, who is a native of Edinburgh, was a lieutenant in the Royal Flying Corps during the war.

Canada Urged as Production Source

Shipman Indicates Advantages Accruing From Tariff and Natural Endowments

ERNEST SHIPMAN, just returned to New York from an extensive Canadian trip, declares that the Dominion as a location for motion picture production has some decided advantages. Not the least of these advantages, according to Mr. Shipman, is the preferential tariff under which motion pictures produced in Canada can be exported from that country to Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand, India, Africa and Scandinavia at rates lower than would apply to the same film shipments made from the United States.

Ernest Shipman

Mr. Shipman cites as an example the fact that pictures entering New Zealand from the United States are subject to a duty of one cent per foot while pictures of Canadian manufacture shipped from Canada to New Zealand are entirely exempt from duty. In the matter of tariff the various states comprising the British Empire determine their own respective schedules. Because, however, of the reciprocal tariff regulations obtaining between each of these states, shipments from one to the other can be made at materially lower rates than would apply to countries which are not parties to such reciprocal arrangements. This saving in preferential tariffs on a normal picture output is tremendous, according to Mr. Shipman, and the Canadian producing units are planning to combine their product and export nationally.

Mr. Shipman further affirms that Canada, by reason of its natural endowments, is in a better position to serve as a location for motion picture production than many other countries. It is Canada's natural advantages that are particularly appealing, he states, and declares that in this respect the surface has not yet been even scratched. The only pictures made of Canada to amount to anything to date have been stories of the Royal Mounted and a few pictures of Alaska and the Yukon, he declares. The Royal Mounted is one of the smallest features of Canadian national life. There are nine provinces forming the federation known as the Dominion of Canada, and each one of them is as diversified in regard to scenery, types of people, romance, legend and adventure as almost any five separate countries to be found elsewhere, asserts Mr. Shipman.

A meeting of all the producing units in Canada is scheduled to be held at Ottawa in the near future to devise means for further production and direct export of pictures upon a large scale.

Elaborate Production For Emerson Hough Story

"The Covered Wagon," Emerson Hough's story of the epic period in the history of the West, will go into production under the direction of James Cruze immediately after the completion of "Thirty Days," starring Wallace Reid.

The features embraced in this story are many and varied and include among others the start of 350 covered wagons from Westport Landing (now Kansas City) in 1848. The terrors of fording freshet rivers, prairie fires and the like will be depicted with great realism, it is stated. A buffalo hunt will be one of the most exciting scenes. Old Fort Bridger with a night attack and fight by day with Indians, will be shown. The dividing of the trails to Oregon and California at old Fort Hall; a touch of the gold fever in California, magnificent mountain shots and a culmination of the romance with the establishment of one of the first homesteads in Oregon—these are all incidents in a picture that is promised to bristle with big scenes. Jack Cunningham is adapting the book which he says is being closely followed.

Such historical characters as Kit Carson, Jim Bridger and Bill Jackson, scouts and typical Western types, are to be portrayed.

Announce Sept. 24 Pathe Releases

Schedule Includes Screen Snapshots, Johnny Jones Comedy, Roland Serial

PATHE'S schedule of releases for September 24 is headed by Johnny Jones in the two-reel comedy, "For Rent—Haunted." The action in these two reels is enlivened by juvenile business efficiency, as was the case in his previous comedies, "Supply and Demand" and "Makin' Movies," which had their New York premier at the Capitol theatre.

In "For Rent—Haunted," the young star, supported by little Gertrude Messinger and a capable cast of children and grown-ups, puts through an ingenious scheme to win a fat commission by renting a "haunted house" for a skin-flint landlord who has evicted the lovable old lady who had made the place her home for years.

In the eleventh episode of "The Timber Queen," entitled "The Runaway Engine," Ruth Roland is seen in one of her most thrilling "stunts." The action continues down in Argentine.

"Screen Snapshots" No. 9 shows Betty Compson and Bert Lytell; Pearl White, back from Paris and starring in a new Pathe serial; Snowy Baker; a picnic captures Johnny Hines, Edward Earle, Grace Darmond, the ex-Mrs. Valentino, Jane and Katherine Lee, Mabel Ballin, Crawford Kent, Hugo Ballin and Zena Keefe; Wesley Barry and Niles Welsh make a scene for Director Wallace Worsley; Colleen Moore gives a radio luncheon, and Director Raoul Walsh tries out child actors.

In Pathe Review No. 174 Photographic Gems show the "painted waters" of the Adirondacks; the "Mud Pie Man" does wonderful things with lumps of clay; "The Passing of Pong" is pictured in Celibes, Dutch East Indies; handwriting analysis, and the Ampitheatre at Athens, Greece, in beautiful Pathe-color.

theatre at Athens, Greece, in beautiful Pathe-color.

"Soak the Shiek," with Paul Parrott, is the Hal Roach comedy on this schedule. The comedian arrives on a radio-equipped camel, upsets the decorum of a whole Arab desert encampment, and gallops away with the Shiek's favorite wife.

Harold Lloyd is at his single-reeler funniest in the re-issued, "Two Scrambled," with "Snub" Pollard and Bebe Daniels.

The Aesop's Film Fables release for Sept. 24 is called "Two Slick Traders." What happens points the moral: "A fair exchange is no robbery."

Pathe News Nos. 78 and 79, and Topics of the Day, No. 39, are on this schedule.

Meeker Now Sales Director of Cosmopolitan

George R. Meeker, who has been connected with the production department of Cosmopolitan, has been appointed general sales director, succeeding James R. Grainger, who resigned to go with Goldwyn.

Meeker has had a long experience in motion pictures, dating from the time when Biograph was taken over by Klaw and Erlanger. He was connected with Paramount from the time that company was organized, and for that company was editor-in-chief of Pictographs, a screen magazine. Resigning, he went with World Film as special representative and later as manager of the Philadelphia exchange. More recently, in association with the well known artist, Tony Sarg, he started Tony Sarg's Almanac and managed it until going with Cosmopolitan.

Some scenes from the Fox comedy "The Pirate," with Lupino Lane.

"Do and Dare" Will Be the Next Tom Mix Release

William Fox has selected "Do and Dare," a comedy drama with a portion of the scenes laid in South America, as a suitable vehicle for the next Tom Mix production. The story is by Marion Brooks, and is directed by Edward Sedgwick of the Fox West Coast staff.

"Do and Dare" is the story of a passive American youth who is suddenly awakened from inactivity and sent forth into the romantic realms of adventure by the yarn of an old denizen of the corner drug store.

Demands of the role bring Mix to the screen in the comic opera uniform of the revolutionists and coupled with a monoeled eye and a laughable stern visage, Tom's followers will find many situations that will amuse them.

Mix does some daring riding, transferring himself at one time from the saddle of a horse to the fuselage of an air machine and at another place slides down the 45-degree angle of a mountain side astride his favorite and famous steed, "Tony."

Claire Adams plays opposite the Fox star and does her work creditably.

Goldwyn Opens Branch in Milwaukee

James R. Grainger, recently appointed by F. J. Godsol, president of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, as his personal representative, has completed arrangements for opening a new Goldwyn branch sub-office in Milwaukee to care for the exhibitors in central and northern Wisconsin and the eastern part of Minnesota. This will give Goldwyn twenty-three domestic exchanges.

Chas. Ray to Do "Courtship of Miles Standish"

CHARLES RAY will produce a screen version of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's classic, "The Courtship of Miles Standish." Production work will begin as soon as possible after the completion of Ray's current picture which is based on James Whitcomb Riley's "The Girl I Loved." The latter subject will follow the current release, "A Tailor Made Man."

The selection of "The Courtship of Miles Standish" is stated to be in pursuance of Mr. Ray's policy to reproduce literary classics or dramatic works of established reputation. It will be the third American poem which he has secured for picturization. The first was "The Old Swimmin' Hole" by James Whitcomb Riley.

Preliminary to actual production, Mr. Ray and his associates expect to indulge in as much research work as is necessary to ensure a picture which will be historically correct in every detail. It is the star's determination, says Arthur S. Kane, that the picture shall be of great educational value, while taking full advantage of the limitless opportunities for entertainment that are offered.

Famous to Distribute "Rich Men's Wives" in Canada

"Rich Men's Wives," the first Preferred Picture and initial release under the new Ben Schulberg-Al Lichtman producing and distributing plan, will be distributed in Canada by the Famous Players Film Service, Ltd. Henry Ginsberg, sales manager of the Lichtman Corporation, has just returned from Canada where he closed the deal with Louis Rosenfeld, general manager of the Canadian distributing unit.

Japan Moves to Stop Film Piracy

Injunction Halts Showing of Duped Print of "Way Down East" in Nippon

APRECEDENT for the protection of American film producers against piracy in Japan has grown out of an action brought by United Artists Corporation to prevent illegal showing of D. W. Griffith's "Way Down East," in which the court granted an injunction forbidding the further exhibition of a duped print and confiscating the print in question. This is the first court decision of this sort in Japan.

The following story was carried in the Japan Advertiser, one of the leading newspapers of Tokio:

"Film piracy as well as the exhibition of 'duped' motion pictures throughout the Empire of Japan is thought to have received a death blow yesterday in the form of a legal decision in the civil action brought last May by United Artists Corporation to prevent the illegal showing of David W. Griffith's film masterpiece, 'Way Down East.'"

"The decision establishes the precedent for invoking the protection of the law relative to the 'rights of author' in favor of the legal holder of copyrights in foreign films in Japan.

"The civil action was brought by the plaintiff against Mr. Hanjiro Sudo, who exhibited the 'duped' film at the Nippon-kan in Asakusa Park on the night of May 4, the object of the suit being to obtain judicial affirmation of the fact that the rights of authorship in the motion picture—which, in a more intelligible wording, would be 'copyright'—belonged to United Artists Corporation, and to ask for a writ of injunction against the unauthorized presentation of the picture.

"In this action the plaintiff prayed the court to judge and declare that the right of authorship in the film called 'Way Down East' was vested in the plaintiff, to prohibit the defendant from exhibiting the same, and the defendant should be ordered to pay costs.

"The judgment was declared precisely in the words of the plaintiff.

"On May 4, immediately upon this action being brought, the court issued a temporary writ of injunction against the exhibition of the duped copy. At the same time the plaintiff requested the court to order the provisional seizure of the duped film; that petition was also granted, the film being surrendered voluntarily to the United Artists Corporation by Haruo Takamura, a local exhibitor, who proved to be the purchaser of the duped print and who had sold the exhibition rights to the defendant, Mr. Sudo."

Mary MacLaren to Support Elsie Ferguson

The supporting cast of Elsie Ferguson in "Outcast," her next Paramount picture, will include Mary MacLaren, it was announced this week.

Miss MacLaren, who played the leading feminine role with Wallace Reid in "Across the Continent," will play the important part of Valentine. She recently portrayed the queen in "The Three Musketeers," and has also appeared in Cosmopolitan productions.

Arthur Swanks to El Dorado as Advertising Manager

Arthur Swanks, formerly advertising manager for the Palace, Hippodrome and Rialto theatres, located in Ft. Worth, Texas., has been appointed to the exploitation and advertising managership of the Rialto and Mission theatres in El Dorado, Ark.

Transform House for "Knighthood"

Urban Decorates Criterion in Tudor Style For Marion Davies Special Production

WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER," Cosmopolitan's latest production, with Marion Davies in the leading role, opened at the Criterion theatre, New York, Thursday evening before a packed audience of film first-nighters who, by every clever device of theatre art, were transported back to the Tudor period of the picture. The spectacular pageantry of kings and courts depicted so realistically on the silver screen were reflected in the harmonious decorations of the theatre, so that the spectator might easily imagine himself in Hampton Court palace personally witnessing the royal revels, political and love intrigues of Bluff King Hal's court.

"When Knighthood Was in Flower" is not only a wonderful picture, but it has been fitted with a frame which enhances its atmosphere and makes it look like the million-and-a-half dollars which the production cost Cosmopolitan.

Transforming a picture theatre into a Tudor palace is no small task, and when it comes to accomplishing it in four days' time it becomes something akin to modern magic. Yet that is what Joseph Urban, the art director of Cosmopolitan Productions, did to the Criterion.

The Cosmopolitan corporation took over the theatre at midnight on Saturday night, and immediately mobilized an army of carpenters, painters, decorators and electricians, who worked in day and night shifts. Not only was the entire interior of the theatre and the lobby redecorated in Tudor style, proper to the period of the picture, but several notable changes were made in the structure of the house.

Twelve new loges were installed, and decorated after the style of the royal boxes at the tournament scene of "When Knighthood Was in Flower." The orchestra pit was enlarged to accommodate the symphony orchestra and vocal choir who furnish harmonious musical accompaniment to this magnificent picture of the days of King Henry VIII.

The front of the house was not neglected: here has been installed one of the largest and most unique electric signs on Broadway. The decorations of the lobby form an object lesson in what can be done with limited space by an artist who is thoroughly versed in his subject. Such effects were not dreamed of twenty-one years ago, when Julia Marlowe presented "When Knighthood Was in Flower" on the stage of this same theatre, and illustrate the advance made by motion pictures in theatre art.

The magnificent work of Joseph Urban is seen not only throughout the theatre, but in every portion of the production. A glittering, colorful spectacle which makes one especially regret the inability of the camera to record color is the ambassador's reception given in the throne room of King Henry VIII when the French ambassador comes to ask for the hand of Princess Mary Tudor for old King Louis XII of France.

The satins and gold laces, slashed doublets, silken tights, plumes, jewels and swords make a wonderful spectacle when the knights and ladies assemble in the great room. Overhead are the silken banners with the various coats of arms and crests of royalty. "When Knighthood Was in Flower" was directed by Robert G. Vignola. Prominent in the cast are Lyn Harding as King Henry VIII, Forrest Stanley as Charles Brandon, Ruth Shepley as Lady Jane Dolingbroke and many others whose names are well known on stage and screen.

There are pathetic moments in "For Rent—Haunted," featuring Johnny Jones, as the above scenes from the Pathe comedy indicate.

Canadian Lieutenant Governor Heads Film Company

New Brunswick Films, Ltd., of Canada, has been organized. The board of directors is headed by Hon. William Pugsley, Lieutenant-Governor; Hon. W. E. Foster, Premier; ex-Mayor E. A. Schofield; R. T. Hayes, M. P.; F. G. Spencer, theatre man, and others. The enterprise has been underwritten by the Eastern Securities Company, Ltd., and J. M. Robinson & Sons, private bankers.

The first production will be from Frederick William Wallace's story of the Bay of Fundy fisher-folk entitled "Blue Water." David M. Hartford, who has recently completed the production of "The Rapids" at Sault Ste. Marie has moved his entire organization to St. John and it is estimated that the picture will be completed in about ten weeks' time.

Ernest Shipman will market the product in the United States.

West Coast Theatres, Inc., to Play Legitimate

An increased range of activities for West Coast Theatres, Inc., Los Angeles, by which the company will lease and operate a downtown legitimate house in Los Angeles and play the best legitimate and musical comedy attractions available, was announced this week by Sol Lesser and A. L. Gore, vice president and secretary, respectively, who are in New York.

An amount in excess of $250,000 will be spent in remodeling this theatre, according to present plans, and every successful attraction obtainable in New York and Chicago will be played.

According to Mr. Gore, the company, which now holds fifty-five theatres, expects to have at least six more before the year is over. These new houses will be patterned after the most modern eastern houses.

Scenes from "Oliver Twist," in which Jackie Coogan will be seen in the production sponsored by Sol Lesser, starring the juvenile actor in the screen version of the Charles Dickens story

Colleen Moore to Star in "Forsaking All Others"

UNIVERSAL-JEWEL officials announce that Colleen Moore has been engaged to head the cast in their coming production of "Forsaking All Others." Miss Moore will be supported by Cullen Landis, juvenile leading man and a suitable cast.

"Forsaking All Others" is a story with a 'mother love' theme, by Mary Lerner. It appeared in Collier's Weekly.

The picture will be directed by Emile Chautard who has recently been added to the staff at Universal City.

Milton Crandall Now With Hodkinson Force

Milton Crandall, exploiteer, has been added to the exploitation department of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, headed by Harry McDonald, it was announced this week. He will give his attention to productions such as the Irene Castle Fashion Promenade now being offered exhibitors with "Slim Shoulders."

Crandall has already put in some exceptionally good exploitation stunts in the St. Louis territory in connection with the engagement of "Slim Shoulders" and the Irene Castle Fashion Promenade for the re-opening of the beautiful Delmonte theatre. Sunday at the baseball game between the Cardinals and Giants in St. Louis Crandall arranged for an announcement to be made from the field to the fifteen thousand fans to the effect that Irene Castle had telegraphed for four seats for the world's series this year in St. Louis.

Famous Polish Actress Arrives

Pola Negri Welcomed at Pier by Notables of the Stage and the Screen

POLA NEGRI, the famous Polish star, received a warm welcome when she arrived in New York Tuesday afternoon on board the White Star liner Majestic.

Miss Negri is making her first visit to the United States under the auspices of the Hamilton Theatrical Corporation, by whom she has been engaged to appear for Paramount in a picturization of the Robert Hichens novel "Bella Donna." She spoke with enthusiasm of her work and of the pleasure she anticipated in doing it in an American studio.

On board the Majestic were E. E. Shaner, assistant treasurer and head of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and Mrs. Shaner, who have been abroad three months; Ben Blumenthal, president of Hamilton Theatrical Corporation; Frank A. Vanderlip, Samuel Untermyer, Mabel Normand, former Senator O'Gorman and other noted people, but the attention of the reporters, photographers and passengers as well as the throng of people at the pier was focussed upon Pola.

Miss Negri went to the Hotel St. Regis, which will be her headquarters during her brief stay in New York, and there met more reporters.

Wednesday noon, at Louis Sherry's, Miss Negri was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by the Hamilton Theatrical Corporation. There were eighty guests in attendance, including representatives of all the trade papers, New York newspapers and fan magazines, as well as the executives of the Famous Players-Lasky and Hamilton corporations, including Adolph Zukor, Ben Blumenthal, E. E. Shaner, E. J. Ludvigh, Ralph Kohn, Eugene Zukor, S. R. Kent, Robert T. Kane, H. G. Ballance, George W. Weeks, John Clarke, Hugo Riesenfeld and Felix Kahn; also Thomas Meighan, who arrived from the Coast Monday. Mr. Ludvigh presided informally as toastmaster.

On Thursday a luncheon was given Miss Negri by the Coffee House Club, an organization of artists, authors and members of the theatrical and newspaper professions, all of whom are admirers of the star and her art. Among the invited guests were: Alexandra Carlisle, Mary Nash, Tallulah Bankhead, Elsie Ferguson, Blanche Bates, Ina Claire, Lenore Ulric, Grace Moore, Doris Keane, Julia Hoyt, Ethel Barrymore, Carlotta Monterey, Neysa McMein, Marie Tempest, Theresa Helburn, Mary Boland, Laura Hope Crews, Madge Kennedy, Billie Burke, Alice Brady, Geraldine Farrar, Peggy Wood, Ruth St. Denis, John V. A. Weaver, Graham Browne, Alexander Woolcott, George Jean Nathan, Karl Kitchin, Herbert Bayard Swope, Will H. Hays, Chester H. Aldrich, Sidney Blackmer, Robert Bridges, Heywood Brown, Royal Cortissoz, Frank Craven, John Cross, Charles B. Dillingham, Dwight Franklin, Arnold Genthe, Howard Greenley, Jascha Heifetz, Avery Hopwood, Wallace Irwin, Ernest Lawford, H. T. Lindeberg, Guy Lowell, Gilbert Miller, Grant Mitchell, Kenneth M. Murchison, Conde Nast, Tony Sarg, Ernest Truex, Whitney Warren, H. J. Whigham, Efrem Zimbalist, Frank Crownshield, Adolph Zukor, Robert T. Kane, Ralph Cohn, Eugene Zukor and Charles E. McCarthy.

Miss Negri will leave New York for California in time to start work in "Bella Donna," under the direction of George Fitzmaurice, about September 25.

Sawyer and Lubin Start Work on Studio

Construction work has commenced on the S. L. Studios at San Diego, on a site near Grossmont, secured early in the year. A. H. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin are associated in the venture.

According to the announced plans, the first unit will contain stages, dressing rooms, property rooms and interior sets, sufficient for the handling of three companies at a time.

"Bishop of Ozarks" Bought By P. A. Powers

"The Bishop of the Ozarks," a Finis Fox production made by the Cosmopolitan Film Company, has been purchased by P. A. Powers for Film Booking Offices of America, Inc., according to word received from the Coast this week.

Non-Taxable Music Only On "Moulin Rouge" Cue Sheet

Deep appreciation has been expressed by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America for the co-operation extended to the new Music Department of the organization by F. B. Warren of the American Releasing Corporation in entirely revising the cue sheet on "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" so as to include only tax-free music. All American Releasing music cue sheets are to conform to this condition in the future, it is announced.

The Music Department of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America now has special writers who prepare new and appropriately catchy music for new motion pictures. This music when applied and adapted to a picture is broadcasted in all of the motion picture theatres of the United States, giving it unrivaled lines of popularization.

All producers and distributors of pictures are invited to avail themselves of this service, and their cooperation in having only tax-free music in the cue sheets associated with their productions is being solicited. A complete list of producers and distributors thus cooperating will soon be forwarded to all theatre owners by the Motion Picture Owners of America.

Goldwyn Closes Contracts for Foreign Release

Contracts have been closed by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation for the distribution of its fifth year product in a number of foreign countries, according to announcement this week.

A new contract has been closed for the distribution of fifth year pictures in Japan through the Yanuma Company.

The Liberty Film Company of Cuba has taken over the pictures for distribution in Cuba.

In Porto Rico the Goldwyn product will be handled by Selection Film Company.

For the Australasian market a contract has been closed with Australasian Films, represented by Millard Johnson.

Goldwyn Organizes Exploitation Department

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION announces the establishment of an exploitation department as part of its intensive campaign to support the twenty Goldwyn specials which will be released during the coming season. The exploiters working from Goldwyn exchanges all over the country will assist theatres, running the Goldwyn special product, in putting the pictures over with the public.

While the personnel of the staff and the exchanges to which the exploitation men will be assigned will be published in full in the near future, it is already announced that the department will be under the direction of Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity for Goldwyn; with R. E. Pritchard, formerly director of the Exhibitors' Service Bureau of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, as exploitation manager.

The initial work of the new exploitation staff will be in connection with "Remembrance," which will be shown October 8th. Heavy bookings are reported on this subject, and it is planned to send Goldwyn exploiters to as many first-run houses as possible. The second of the Goldwyn specials, which will be aided by the staff, will be "Sherlock Holmes." The staff when fully organized will be adequate to cover the entire field, it is announced.

"Madame Sans Gene" Rights Are In Dispute

FOLLOWING the announcement last week by Aubrey Kennedy, film producer, that he had completed "Madame Sans Gene" and would release it to the independent market immediately, Kathryn Kidder, who appeared in a stage play of the same name, this week engaged attorneys to restrain the showing of this picture.

She alleges that the entire rights to the play belong to her and that Mr. Kennedy has no right to release this picture.

Mr. Kennedy, in turn, alleges that the picture is based upon historical facts, familiar to all, and that his story of the famous washerwoman who rose to a duchess has nothing to do with the stage play.

Clune Film Exchange Has Been Reorganized

With the consent of the Commissioner of Corporations of the State of California, the Clune Film Exchange, which bears the name of W. H. Clune, has been reorganized and an issue of $75,000 of preferred stock bearing 8 per cent interest has been approved for the purchase of new pictures. Common stock has been approved at $100,000.

The exchanges are situated in Los Angeles and San Francisco, and are distributing throughout California, Arizona and Nevada and the Hawaiian Islands.

The Clune Film Exchange is now on the market for the addition of some first-class productions capable of booking in first run houses in their territory.

Seiter Engaged to Direct "Beautiful and Damned"

The engagement of William Seiter to direct the Warner Brothers production, "The Beautiful and Damned," from F. Scott Fitzgerald's novel, was announced this week. Previous reports were that E. Mason Hopper would handle the megaphone on this picture, but this did not materialize, it is said.

A cast of prominent screen players have been engaged for this picture, and the complete list includes: Marie Prevost, in the leading feminine role; Kenneth Harlan, as the male lead; Harry Meyers, Louise Fazenda, Tully Marshall, Walter Long, Kathleen Key, Clarence Burton, Parker McConnell, Charles McHugh and George Kuwa. The story was adapted for the screen by Olga Printzlau.

Eichberg Film May Produce for Fox in Germany

In connection with the report recently published in Motion Picture News to the effect that William Fox would produce in Germany, it is learned that there is a report current in the trade in Berlin to the effect that Eichberg Film will produce for Fox to some extent, and that Lee Parry, a Central European star, is to appear in the pictures.

While in Germany Fox conferred with a number of German distributors for the purpose, it is said, of selecting an executive head for the exchanges he proposes establishing in Germany. It is understood that while in Vienna he closed with Sascha Films for the distribution of Fox films in Austria.

Martin Johnson's Adventure Film Due Oct. 1st

"Head Hunters of the South Seas," showing the latest adventures of Martin Johnson among the savage tribes of Malekula, will be released by Associated Exhibitors on October 1st. This picture is five reels in length and is, in a sense, a sequel to Johnson's subject, "Captured by Cannibals," which was shown at the Capitol, New York, about a year ago. A strange tribe of "Monkey People," photographed in the jungles of Lombumbubu, is also said to be a feature of the new picture.

Use Pathecolor Prologue on "Blood and Sand"

What is said to have been a most effective atmospheric introduction to the feature, "Blood and Sand," was used at the Rivoli and Rialto theatres, New York, and the Stanley theatres in Philadelphia.

As the scenes are laid in Spain, the managements of the theatres mentioned believed that to precede "Blood and Sand" with a suitable Spanish scenic would be an excellent idea. So they applied to Pathe and were supplied with prints of a Spanish Pathecolor subject called "A Day in Spain." This short reel, with charms enhanced by the natural tints of Pathecolor, not only pleased the audiences on its own account, but is said to have served admirably as a scenic introduction to the announced feature.

Geo. M. Dillon to Manage Hodkinson N. Y. Exchange

According to an announcement from the W. W. Hodkinson Corp., George M. Dillon is succeeding F. Kilgour as sales manager of the New York exchange.

The change is effective at once. Mr. Dillon is well known in the trade and comes to his new position with a fine record.

Ben Blumenthal Back With Continental Spectacle

"SODOM AND GOMORRHA" has been acquired by Ben Blumenthal, president of the Export and Import Film Company. The "Filmshau," Berlin, is quoted as acknowledging this subject to be the "finest example of continental cinematographic art." The production is stated to be of a spectacular order and is reported to have taken over eighteen months to produce. In its present form the picture is in ten reels.

The story was prepared for the screen by Ladislaus Vajda and adapted by Michael Kertesz, the European novelist. No advices have been received as to who the principal players are.

Just what Export & Import Film Company plans to do with the feature is not stated. It is interesting to note that last week this company announced the acquisition, in conjunction with David P. Howells, of the continental feature "Othello."

Ben Blumenthal is scheduled to arrive from London on the Majestic this week and is then expected to make an announcement concerning both "Othello" and "Sodom and Gomorrah."

To Test "East is West" for Exhibition Valuation

In order to obtain the exhibition value of Constance Talmadge in "East Is West," a series of test showings have been agreed upon between Joseph M. Schenck, producer of the picture, and First National, Inc., through whom it will be released. The manner of making the tests is announced by First National as follows:

"Play dates for preliminary test runs in six theatres are now arranged. Upon the result of these engagements a temporary or tentative exhibition value will be set, at which rate forty additional test engagements will be played. Upon the results of the forty-six engagements the final exhibition value for all rentals will be set.

"The general release date has been set for October 23rd. The test engagements will precede the release date. Exhibitors will be kept informed as to what the picture does at test runs by advertisements in the trade papers."

Two Sales Representatives Added to A. E. Staff

Two more sales representatives have been appointed by Arthur S. Kane, president of Associated Exhibitors. R. H. Winn has been assigned to the Memphis branch and Robert A. Bertschy has been appointed to the New Haven office.

Mr. Winn has had many years' experience, largely in Indiana. He formerly was on the sales staff of First National in that state, and recently has been managing a large picture theatre in Washington, Ind.

Mr. Bertschy gained his first picture experience with United Pictures Corporation and was branch manager for that organization in Indianapolis, St. Louis and Boston, successively. Subsequently he was with Educational as New Haven manager, and more recently has served as a special representative of Associated Producers, under Al. Lichtman.

Wesley Barry Signs Warner Brothers Contract

Wesley Barry, whose contract with Marshall Neilan has expired, has been signed for a number of years to appear exclusively in Warner productions, it was announced this week by Harry M. Warner, of Warner Brothers.

"Freckles" Barry recently completed two productions for Warner Brothers, "Rags to Riches," and "Little Heroes of the Street," which were produced by Harry Rapf, and directed respectively by Wallace Worsley and William Beaudine.

With the completion of the second picture a tour of the country has been planned for Barry. Arrangements have been made with G. H. Dumond, formerly owner and manager of the famous Sherwood's act, whereby the latter will take the freckled youngster on a tour of the principal cities of America.

Mr. Dumond is said to have arranged an act which will keep the freckled star on the stage during the entire performance, and it will give the public a good opportunity to study his ability both as a legitimate and screen juvenile actor.

Following the completion of the tour, which is expected to last fifteen weeks, Barry will immediately return to the coast where another Warner vehicle will be in readiness for him.

"Under Two Flags" to Open at Strand Theatre

Priscilla Dean's latest Universal-Jewel production, "Under Two Flags," an adaptation of Ouida's celebrated novel and play, will have its New York premiere at the Strand theatre, where it opens on September 24 for a week, and perhaps longer.

"Under Two Flags" is said to be Universal's greatest fall release. No expense was spared in the making of the film. Those who have seen a pre-view of the big special, say that Tod Browning, its director, has outdone himself in the bigness of its theme, settings and character portrayals.

The picture will receive an unusual presentation, in keeping with its colorful theme and its exciting action. Manager Plunkett, who is noted for his presentations, says the picture offers unlimited opportunities for exotic prologues and striking lobby decorations.

New Production Is Started by Sacred Films

Having completed the first year's product, a series of twelve Old Testament narratives, Sacred Films of Burbank, Calif., are now proceeding with additional chapters of the pictorial Bible as rapidly as possible.

The stories of "Isaac and Rebecca," "Jacob and Esau," "Jacob's Flight" and "The Reconciliation," are now in the course of construction under the personal supervision of Dr. Edgar James Banks, noted Bible scholar and archaeologist.

Upon the completion of these reels, Sacred Films will send a company to Egypt for the filming of the stories of Joseph and Moses. The film stories of the lives of these Biblical characters will be made in single reels and will constitute a great part of the 1923 release.

Ernest E. Van Pelt has been appointed manager of Sacred Films' New York office, it was announced this week, and will be located here permanently after October. Mr. Van Pelt is at present in Portland, Ore., where he is attending the general convention of the Episcopal Church. He will swing around through Seattle, Denver, Omaha and Kansas City, en route here.

Sam Sax Is Representative for Will Nigh Product

L. Lawrence Weber & Bobby North this week engaged Sam Sax as special representative and sales manager for the Will Nigh productions to be state-righted by that firm. Sax will begin his new connection immediately and will take care of the inquiries from exchange-men for "Notoriety" and the future releases of Weber & North to the independent market.

Mr. Sax was formerly sales manager for Select and later for Robertson-Cole. He has also acted as representative for various independent releases and is well-known throughout the states-rights field and among exhibitor circles.

"Shriek of Araby" Latest Turpin Comedy

The title of the latest Mack Sennett comedy feature in which Ben Turpin and Kathryn McGuire appear, was announced this week as "The Shriek of Araby."

This production, which will be released through First National, is said to be one of Sennett's best efforts in the comedy line.

J. Frank Shea Joins Sales Staff of Hodkinson

The addition of J. Frank Shea, until recently general manager of the Grey circuit of theatres in Maine and New Hampshire, to the special sales force of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, where he will work with Harry McDonald, was announced this week.

After leaving Holy Cross College, Shea joined the foreign department of the Fox Film Corporation, and made several trips abroad. He resigned in 1919 to go with the S. A. Lynch enterprises, for whom he was South Texas district manager and state manager of Oklahoma and Arkansas. He resigned some time ago to join the Grey Company in Maine.

"Remembrance" Screened for T. O. C. C.

The new Rupert Hughes photoplay, "Remembrance," was screened before nearly 200 members of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce at the Hotel Astor on Tuesday of this week, who were guests of the Goldwyn organization. This is believed to be the first occasion on which a new film has been screened before the entire membership of the T. O. C. C.

The screening was arranged by S. Eckman, Jr., in supervisory charge of Goldwyn distribution for the metropolitan district, and it followed a luncheon given for the members of the organization. Mr. Eckman had arranged for special music to accompany the picture.

"Remembrance" is the first Goldwyn release for the new season in its list of twenty, and arrangements are being completed for an early pre-release booking in New York City. The release date for the photoplay is October 10.

Wm. Fred Peters Writes Score for Cosmopolitan

An operatic score has been composed by William Fred Peters for Cosmopolitan's "When Knighthood Was in Flower," starring Marion Davies. This picture opened at the Criterion theatre, New York, this week.

Mr. Peters is well known on Broadway as the composer of several successful light operas, including "Iole," from the book by Robert W. Chambers, and "The Purple Road," which he wrote with Fred De Grissac for the famous French baritone, Victor Maurel. Mr. Peters also wrote the music for "The Passing Show of 1915" at the Winter Garden, and the next season for the London Hippodrome revue. Returning to this country he was engaged by D. W. Griffith to write the incidental music for "Way Down East" and "Orphans of the Storm."

Drew Post, American Legion, Installs Officers

A meeting of the S. Rankin Drew Post, American Legion, was held at Keen's chop house on Friday evening, September 8th. The meeting was for the purpose of installing the officers of the Post for 1922-23.

Wells Hawks, the new Post Commander, called the meeting to order.

Chairman Brady of New York County committee of the Legion conducted the installations, assisted by Commander Hawks, Chaplain Peter H. Hoey and Glen Condon.

The Post is named for S. Rankin Drew, son of the late Sydney Drew. S. Rankin Drew was an aviator, killed in the late war.

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Nice People—

An excellent picture which went over big in spite of a poor week. (Middle West.)

Nothing extra; no particular appeal excepting Reid; ran fair for week. (West.)

Played to good business. Satisfactory picture. (West.)

Business was good. Picture received with general satisfaction. A clever little play, good cast and good direction. (Middle West.)

Good picture which went over well. Audiences off a little account of unreasonably hot weather. (Middle West.)

Went over great. Wallace Reid and Bebe Daniels always draw well here. (South West.)

If You Believe It, It's So—

A lively week's business with this one. (Middle West.)

Her Gilded Cage—

A good picture and box office attraction. (West.)

Good stuff; pulled better than fair for full week. (Middle West.)

Turned them away many nights. Gloria Swanson, always popular won new admirers with this one. Wonderful receipts. (Middle West.)

Fairly good business though handicapped by rain and hot weather. One of those dressy pictures that seem to satisfy, though not new in plot. (Middle West.)

Fairly well liked. Nothing extra. Business good considering hot weather. (Middle West.)

This is not equal to Gloria Swanson's best, but did fair business considering extremely hot weather. (Middle West.)

Picture centers altogether on Swanson. If you like her, you like the picture. She has lost some of her popularity here, and the picture didn't do much for us. (Middle West.)

Over the Border—

Hot weather did not keep this one from doing a good week's business at box office. (Middle West.)

Pleased 90%; played to largest house this year. Film in first-class condition. Best photography I have run in months. (South.)

The Valley of Silent Men—

Vigorous drama with excellent scenery. Fair box office value. (Middle West.)

Very poor week, due partly to excessive heat and part to lack of interest in this picture. (Middle West.)

Fair picture; business not at all good. (East.)

The Devil's Pawn—

An excellent picture in every respect. Good attendance throughout the week. (Middle West.)

The Siren Call—

Picture only fair. Business pretty good. (East.)

Blood and Sand—

Valentino's greatest work. Played to capacity all week. (Middle West.)

Second largest business in history of the house. Weather torrid. (Middle West.)

Very big week with thermometer at 90 degrees and a musicians' strike on so that we had no music for two performances. Playing it a second week. (Middle West.)

Excellent picture and doing tremendous business. (East.)

South of Suva—

Very bad picture and business not good. (East.)

Fool's Paradise—

On second showing this picture did business entirely satisfactory and was shown during the week, when hot weather and rain was bucked up against it too.

While Satan Sleeps—

High class feature which proved good box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Strong picture. Big business, but business is due in large degrees to wonderful concert programs that are featured twice daily. (Middle West.)

The Young Diana—

Played to capacity every night and good matinee business. (East.)

The Dictator—

Business good despite heat, especially at matinees. (East.)

The Bonded Woman—

Fair picture; fair business. (East.)

FOX

Monte Cristo—

Considering hot weather, this one proved a good drawing card. (Middle West.)

As great as the book itself. Many came to see it a second time. Going into second week. (Middle West.)

Opened very big. Dropped off some when thermometer rose way out of sight, but finished the week strong. Matinees especially good. (Middle West.)

Great picture, everybody liked it, but played to poor money. (Middle West.)

First class picture and business to match. (East.)

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS

Grandma's Boy—

Broke all records first half of week, but lopped off last half because of tremendous heat. (East.)

Did big week, will hold over for another. (East.)

On second week took a flop; nothing to brag about on first. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

The Storm—

One of the best out of door pictures in a long while; attracted big houses constantly for two weeks. (Middle West.)

Opened well, then flopped; not exploited enough. (East.)

Paid Back—

FIRST NATIONAL

Domestic Relations—

Not best picture of its kind, but did fairly well. (West.)

Heroes and Husbands—

Better than the average Katherine McDonald film. Average business. (Middle West.)

The Cup of Life—

Business fair. The picture is entertaining with a good story and not of the usual Bosworth line. Good picture where they like action. (West.)

F. B. O.

In the Name of the Law—

Drew satisfactory business, following big exploitation campaign; held up for week. (East.)

GOLDWYN

The Night Rose—

Business was just fair. This is a good crook mystery melodrama. Star does not seem strong enough to draw against other attractions. (Middle West.)

AMERICAN RELEASING

Bluebeard, Jr.—

Great comedy. Our patrons liked it very much. Photography a little dark in print used. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

Living Lies—

Best independent picture we have ever shown. Story was good, so was lead and direction. Business out of the ordinary. (West.)

Diamond Carlisle—

Snappy northwestern; our patrons were well pleased and business extremely good. (West.)

I Am the Law—

Good picture, full of action and fine scenery. Held up for one week. (West.)

Back to Yellow Jacket—

Just fair feature and hot weather affected business very severely. (Middle West.)

More to Be Pitied Than Scorned—

Did not get business which excellence of feature justified. (Middle West.)

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 752 S. WABASH AVE.

The Astor theatre opened its doors for the first time Saturday, September 2, and got away to excellent business considering the weather. This new loop house is located on Clark at Madison, and while small in size, three hundred seats, it is beautifully decorated and the equipment is of the highest class. The house is owned and will be operated by the Astor Amusement Company, the principal owners of which are Roder Brothers, who are interested in the Union Restaurants and other enterprises. Richard Healy, well known theatre man, is manager of the new house.

Century comedies last week had a splendid representation in the Chicago loop district, being run simultaneously at the Rose, Randolph, Orpheum and Casino. Ascher Brothers have just closed contract for their entire circuit of theatres to use these popular comedies regularly each week.

Tom Delaney and Tom Norman are two recent additions to Manager Eckhardt's Fox sales staff.

I. Natkin is now covering eastern Illinois territory for Metro, and Charles H. Dingman is working Indiana territory, having succeeded T. C. Baker in that district.

H. D. Johnson, formerly connected with the Standard Film Service in Detroit, is now connected with Goldwyn and is covering the Northwestern Illinois territory for Manager Harry Lorsch.

Verifying District Manager Herbert Given's prediction that 1922 Paramount week would be the greatest of these events ever put across in Chicago territory, one hundred and seventy-five theatres in Chicago proper and forty in close-in suburbs showed Paramount pictures for a solid week. Included in these theatres were all the large first run houses in the loop and all the principal circuits. This year the number of houses taking part in Paramount week exceeds those which participated last year by a large margin.

Roy B. Shonoway, who has been connected with various Chicago film exchanges, is now a member of the Goldwyn sales staff and will work Wisconsin territory, making his headquarters at Milwaukee branch office. L. Klar, formerly manager of Robertson-Cole's Milwaukee office, is another Goldwyn recruit and will cover Indiana territory. Manager Harry Lorsch and Sales Manager Shurman are starting on a tour of Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin key centers this week and expect to be gone about ten days. They desire to get in personal touch with exhibitors throughout the territory and see where the service can be improved.

Walter A. Rosenfield, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, is in Chicago to open campaign headquarters at the Morrison Hotel. Mr. Rosenfield who is a member of the firm of Rosenfield-Hopp & Company, which operate the Fort Armstrong at Rock Island and many other theatres throughout Illinois and Wisconsin, has a wide acquaintance among exhibitors. This enterprising firm, by the way, is booking some big attractions for their large Rock Island house, including "The Sign of the Rose," and "Slim Shoulders." During the showing of "The Sign of the Rose," George Beban and his company will appear in a playlet of the same name, and a fashion show will be put on during the "Slim Shoulders" showing.

Manager Rozelle, of Metro's Chicago exchange, was host at a delightful luncheon last week, given in honor of Mae Murray and her husband, Director Leonard, at the Blackstone Hotel. Frank Bacon, Jesse Dandy, and other famous stage stars, as well as leading exhibitors and representatives of the press, were present. The beautiful Metro star made a short, but interesting, talk and invited exhibitors to send in criticisms on her pictures and also suggestions for improvement, wherever possible, and expressed her pleasure at the opportunity given her to meet them. Messrs. Bacon, Dandy and others also made witty talks, which added greatly to the pleasure of the occasion.

Charles Raymond, formerly of the exploitation department, First National, Boston, has assumed his duties as manager of the Strand theatre at Kokomo, Indiana, which has been recently taken over by the Consolidated Realty and Theatres Corporation.

Illini Lodge, of Masonic Order, is a new organization, which it is believed is unique in both fraternal and film circles of the United States, as its membership is composed almost exclusively of men connected with the motion picture industry. The roster of the new lodge, which reads like a directory of film row, includes: Joseph Hopp, Edgar Hopp, E. W. Johnson, Clyde Eckhardt, Lee Mitchell, Max Schwartz, David Dubin, Robert T. Smith, Edwin Silverman, Archie Spencer, Henry D. James, Simeon Greiver, Philip Dunas, John S. Mednikow, George R. Weinberg, John Bobeng, Louis Natelson, Fred Aiken, Harry Weiss, Harry Birch, George Taif, William Hamm, Herbert Washburn, Frederick Martin, Charles Cassanave, Aaron Saperstein, Sidney J. Goldman, Charles A. Lundgren, Harold M. Gollos, George Gollos, Lyman Ballard, Samuel Rieger, George H. Oldfield, Cresson E. Smith, Charles Filkins, Henry Goldson, Irving Mack, Emil Stern, Burley A. Lucas, Arthur R. Telser, Christie H. Otto, Julius Lamm, Sidney H. Selig, Carl M. Lesserman, Theodore H. Schlanger, Edward T. Cassanave, Walter S. Altland, Edward L. Brichetto, Frank L. Drumm, Thomas Greenwood, Ephraim Goldberg, Claud R. Plough, Jacob Lock, Henry Wooden, A. Krueger, Louis M. Noto and Russell C. Smith. Illini Lodge is now operating under dispensation but expects to receive its charter at an early date.

A. A. Schmidt, general manager of Universal, was in Chicago last week in conference with Manager Herman Stern, and his sales staff.

Edward H. Hayden made his headquarters at the Rothacker laboratory while in Chicago obtaining Windy City atmosphere scenes for the Irving Cummings production, "Chicago Sall," an original story by Harvey Gates, who wrote "Hurricane's Gal." Milton Sills, Alice Lake and Little Richard Hedrick have roles in the picture.

Business Manager I. Lesserman, of Universal's Chicago exchange, after a record breaking two weeks out in the state gathering in a string of nice contracts for Universal's new product, rested a week, but the lure of the selling game proved too much for him and he is out in Indiana with the boys of the regular sales force tying 'em up for Universal's proven brand of attractions.

With the cessation of the terrific heat, which had put a severe crimp in the moving picture theatre business, as well as all other lines of endeavor in the Chicago district, crowds thronged back to the theatres Sunday, which was reported to be the biggest day in point of attendance in many months. This is very cheering to the exhibitors, who had had a very bad ten days, especially as it indicates that the public is as anxious as ever for this type of amusement and was only kept away by the torrid weather.

Charles Biglow, assistant superintendent of the Chicago Rothacker laboratory since the close of the war, has been transferred to the Rothacker-Aller plant in Hollywood. The Chicago crowd gave him a farewell dinner at the Edgewater Beach Hotel. He joined Watterson R. Rothacker six years ago.

O. F. Spahr, of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, has returned from a fishing and vacation trip spent at Squaw Lake on the northern border of Wisconsin. Sixty fine bass in two hours is one of the pleasant features of his sojourn in the north woods, as well as several battles with muskies.

Maurice Hellman, of Reelcraft Pictures, put on a trade showing of "Barbed Wire," starring Jack Hoxie, at the Fulco-Scaffier Projection room, on Wednesday.

Sales Manager Herman Stern, of Universal's Chicago office, spent the week with the hoosiers—having started out on a flying motor trip through the Indiana section of his territory—a sort of a "get acquainted" trip. Business is looking up in Indiana, as well as in other Illinois and central west states, according to the report brought back by Mr. Stern.

Century comedies last week had a splendid representation in the Chicago loop district, being run simultaneously at the Rose, Randolph, Orpheum and Casino. Ascher Brothers have just closed contract for their entire circuit of theatres to use these popular comedies regularly each week.

Tom Delaney and Tom Norman are two recent additions to Manager Eckhardt's Fox sales staff.

I. Natkin is now covering eastern Illinois territory for Metro, and Charles H. Dingman is working Indiana territory, having succeeded T. C. Baker in that district.

H. D. Johnson, formerly connected with the Standard Film Service in Detroit, is now connected with Goldwyn and is covering the northwestern Illinois territory for Manager Harry Lorsch.

Joe Koppel, widely known in Chicago film circles as a successful theatre manager, has turned to the selling game and is now a member of Film Booking Office of America sales staff, and will cover city territory.

Bill Brimmer, one of the veterans of film row; Theodore Stover, formerly with Paramount, and E. A. Rockerbrandt, recently connected with First National, are three additions to the sales staff of Educational. Mr. Brimmer will cover northwest Chicago territory, Mr. Stover, northern Illinois, and Mr. Rockerbrandt, middle Illinois.

Carl Fulton left this week, accompanied by his family, for a prolonged auto tour, during which he will combine business and pleasure. He will go first to St. Louis and from there to New York, and on his return trip will stop at several eastern centers. He expects to be back in Chicago by September 18.

C. O. Stevens, of Preston, Ill., was in Chicago last week, and while here purchased two new Motiongraph De Luxe projectors for installation in his Apollo.

Manager's Personal Endorsement Used in Exploitation

Columbus, Ga.—Major I. C. Holloway, manager of the Rialto theatre, based his campaign on a personal endorsement of this picture.

Some time in advance he started a series of slides worded along the following line:

"We say that 'Tol'able David' is so good that after you have seen it, if you are not satisfied—if it has not proven all that our advertising claims it to be—then you can disregard all our future advertisements. . . Do you think we would say that if we were not sure of our grounds?"

The slides were varied somewhat with every change of program.

The night before the picture opened 500 cards, 11 x 14 inches, were fastened to sharpened sticks and placed, facing the houses, in the yards throughout the best residence districts.

During the engagement a card was displayed in the lobby, reading:

"Go in and see 'Tol'able David.' If you like it pay as you come out. . . If you don't like it. . . Well Then. . . Just don't pay."

Very few failed to buy their tickets before going in. But all those who did accept the offer paid when they came out. Everybody noticed the card and commented on it.

When "Over the Border" was booked for the Rialto theatre, Columbus, Ga., Major I. C. Holloway, manager, decorated the front of his house, as shown above

Schenectady Exhibitor Worked Without Newspaper in Putting Over "Sonny"

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—After the newspapers in Schenectady had turned down the possibility of finding the most popular person to whom to award a collie, Manager William Shirley of the Strand Theatre decided to go it on his own, buying the space to announce the arrangement whereby a collie would be given to the most popular person in town.

The white dog was supposed to personify the "Waggles" of "Sonny," which was then playing at the theatre. On the first day 21,000 votes were received in answer to the advertisement which was unaccompanied by any aid from the paper with the exception of one or two small readers.

The dog was displayed outside the theatre, resulting in such a crowd that he had to be moved away a bit to allow people to pass from the box office into the house. The dog cost only five dollars and was believed to have been responsible for a stupendous business that exceeded what the picture might have done normally.

Money Back Offer Made on "I Am the Law"

Waco, Texas.—To start right with "I Am the Law," Manager J. P. Harrison of the Hippodrome theatre had printed in the local papers a letter calling attention to the fact that anyone paying to see the picture and coming away dissatisfied would have his money refunded. All of the sidewalks and curbs in the town carried large footprints with the sign, "I Am the Law" in the center.

For a lobby display Manager Harrison erected a miniature snow scene, placing it in the center of the lobby. It consisted of a small bit of art work, showing a winter landscape, everything being covered with ice and snow. The small hut reproduced in miniature gave this artistic painting a touch of realism. The rest of the lobby is completely enclosed in cedar branches and cedar trees, whose limbs had been dipped in whiting and then covered with imitation snow.

Effective Lobby Attractor at a Cost of Fifty Cents

Ft. Smith, Ark.—For only fifty cents Manager J. B. Robertson, of the Palace theatre, reports building an effective lobby attractor for "The Man Unconquerable."

Taking the suggestion of the Exploitation Department for what it was worth, he decided to build a front that in some way brought out the idea of pearl poaching.

Since pearls in a theatre lobby are novel and out of place they attracted lots of attention, and the placing of them on a table which was covered with a plush cloth added to their finery or expensive appearance.

The imitation pearls were put into a jar of water, carbonated water being the most effective for this stunt. The gas collection on the pearls caused them to rise to the top, and as soon as they hit the surface they would sink again, only to go over again the same process. This caused a great deal of curiosity from people passing, and a nice crowd filled the theatre as well as the lobby.

A large sign told that Holt had found those in his trip to the South Seas and that he was the star in the picture.

An exhibitor in Havana, Cuba, used a ballyhoo in connection with exploiting "Robinson Crusoe." The picture shows the lobby of the Campoamor theatre

A prologue for "My Dad" at the George M. Cohan theatre, New York, was staged and executed by Andrew J. Cobe, who put into use a genuine train sled and real dogs. During the run of the prologue a constant drive of "snow" lent desirable atmosphere to introduce the picture of the Far North

Merchants Go Double Truck One Better, Stage Parade For "Smilin' Through"

Bristol, Va.—Manager Cod Goebel, of the Isis Theatre, started out with a vim and "sold" the idea of co-operative exploitation sufficiently well to hook up retail merchants on a double truck in local papers. Then, to advertise their advertising, they combined a "Smilin' Through" parade.

Every merchant who was represented in the double truck, had a delivery automobile or float in the parade advertising his wares and the fact that they would be advertised in the coming issue of the paper. It was advertised advertising, such as Bristol had never seen before and was estimated that seventy per cent of total population of the town knew about the run of "Smilin' Through."

In connection, therewith, manager Goebel varied the garden wall idea for the lobby, by using a picket fence built along the lines used in that part of the country.

Decorations on "Smilin' Through" Attract Lanning Residents

LANSING, Mich.—Among the attractive theatre decorations that have come to hand, the most tasteful were those used by Manager Ellsworth Hamer of the Strand, for "Smilin' Through." A wax bust of Norma Talmadge in the starring role was the centerpiece. It stood inside a latticed bench, such as one sees in summer houses on a country estate. At the right a gilded stairway led to the balcony of the theatre but was closed to allow the display to have the space it needed. The stone stairway before the waxed figure was decorated with potted plants and shrubs. Local merchants co-operated in lending the floral display and furniture necessary for this layout and received recognition in advertising signs.

Women's Orchestra Engaged Exploits "Red Hot Romance"

SANDUSKY, Ohio. — At George Schade's picture theatre, during the run of "Red Hot Romance," an orchestra composed entirely of women was engaged to play in the theatre and also give public concerts outside. They attracted crowds who were bound to read the banners exploiting the comedy feature.

Mr. Schade reports that not only was this good exploitation, but that it won popularity for the theatre, since the orchestra played well, and to Sandusky a women's orchestra was a novelty

Appropriate Prologue Precedes "In the Name of the Law"

NEW YORK, N. Y. When "In the Name of the Law" opened at the George M. Cohan Theatre, a prologue staged by Andrew J. Cobe, designed to entertain and lend atmosphere, was used just ahead of the feature. It consisted of a male quartette, dressed in police uniforms, the set being "head-quarters," where the men were awaiting orders. When the singing had hushed the house, there appearing in center back a policeman standing as if on watch, in a steady downpour. He was dressed in a rubber coat and hat, stood rigid, as if intent upon his work—every outline distinct inasmuch as the house was dark and lights were centered on the figure. Then the "vision" faded and the picture was immediately screened.

Police Cooperation Aids "In the Name of the Law" Campaign

Cleveland, Ohio.—An exploitation campaign which caused the State theatre to bill a coming attraction over its current feature preceded the run of "In the Name of the Law." The exploitation was staged by Harold Wendt, F. B. O. field exploiter.

The campaign started when the picture was screened for Chief of Police. Permission was also obtained from the police to place three three-sheet cut-outs in the congested district under the charge of three men, who carried them from one busy corner to another during the entire day. The stunt used during the New York run, that of having a motion picture camera take pictures of the crowds from an automobile, was also used in Cleveland. A few feet of film was taken at intervals of a crowd around the cameraman, who had plastered his stand with announcements of "In the Name of the Law."

A unique tie-up, made possible by the title of the picture, was arranged with the Steward-Warner Speedometer Company, which carried a circular compo-board representing a speedometer on their trucks, on the bottom of which was printed, "Drive carefully to see 'In the Name of the Law' at the State theatre."

Lobby display designed to exploit "The Delicious Little Devil," at the Majestic theatre, Portland, Oregon

The above illustrations, left and right, show how Manager Clayton Tunstill, of the Rialto theatre, Chickasha, Okla., dressed his lobby for "Reported Missing" and "The Woman Who Walked Alone." The center illustration shows the lobby of the Rex Theatre, Sumter, S. C., transformed into temporary political headquarters for the play date of "Our Leading Citizen."

Advance Exploitation Brings Results on "Foolish Wives"

Columbus, Ga.—Manager I. C. Holloway, Rialto theatre, got his dates on "Foolish Wives" about two months before playing. He immediately placed a story with each paper as the first announcement. Thereafter he never allowed the town to forget that "Foolish Wives" was coming. An occasional slide on the screen and short notices in the papers kept it before them.

One month in advance the trailer was started. Every few days he cut about 50 feet out of the trailer so that it would not become tiresome to the patrons. As the trailer became shorter more typed slides with sales talk were put on. The slides were changed with every change of program.

A large show window was secured and a display put in with three reels of junk film having a section of the "Foolish Wives" trailer attached to the end of each. These trailers were run up to the front of the window so the scenes and subtitles could be seen from the sidewalk. One of the papers published a large photo of this window and write-up of the display. This display was put in three days before opening.

One sheet was placed in every service station in town and in the majority of store windows. Oil paintings, 14 x 36's, and 22 x 28's were placed in all drug stores and soft drink stands.

A number of merchants were tied up for two co-operative pages in the morning paper, one on opening day and the other on the second day. Mr. Holloway says it was much easier to get them this way than for a double truck. 2500 rotogravures were distributed in the city circulation of the morning paper.

Exploitation Stunts Used in Buffalo Campaign

BUFFALO, N. Y.—When Arthur L. Skinner presented "Nanook of the North," at the Victoria theatre, he put over some exploitation that aided him in swelling box office receipts.

The best stunt was the one he arranged with jitney drivers. Buffalo is in the throes of a trolley strike and most of the transportation has been in jitneys. Recently these jitneys were ruled illegal by a court justice and were ordered off the streets. The drivers, however, took off their signs and continued to give service. A wink of the eye and other signalling gave the hint that the auto was carrying passengers. One driver, however, happened into the Victoria and discussed a plan with Mr. Skinner whereby a number of the vehicles offered to use signs carrying advertising for the Victoria. The idea seemed a good one, so he gave the drivers cards reading "Nanook of the North" and Constance Talmadge in "The Primitive Lover" at Victoria Now." These signs were placed on the windshields of the gas buggies and in addition to giving the theatre some fine publicity, also told that the jitney was going in the general direction of the Victoria.

Another good stunt was the placing of an Eskimo doll dressed a la Arctic in the center of a cake of ice. The ice was placed in a large tin tub in the center of the lobby with suitable cards on it telling patrons of the coming of the picture. A local ice company froze the doll in the ice for Mr. Skinner.

Window displays were arranged in all the stores in the community and a fine shadow box arranged for use in the lobby. This was brilliant with color and was lighted in realistic manner. The stunts used necessitated little financial outlay.

Huge Cutout of Masked Rider Adorns Top of Theatre for "One Clear Call"

Winston-Salem, N. C.—The Auditorium theatre got over the Ku Klux Klan effect of "One Clear Call" without the use of night riders by simply taking the six-sheets and standing a huge cut-out of the klansman (that measured at least seven feet) and putting it on the top of the marquee.

Simple, broad in construction and a sure eye attracter, it offered a good example of how marquee space can be used for exploitation when it becomes impossible or inadvisable to use the street ballyhoo.

Shepherd Tries Page Ad for "The Storm"—Theatre Establishes Local Precedent

Newark, N. J.—D. J. Shepherd, manager of the Branford theatre, has established a reputation for ingenuity in his presentations. When he booked "The Storm," he decided to play it up in a big way.

The result was the first full-page moving picture theatre ad ever used in Newark, which attracted the attention Mr. Shepherd desired.

Covering this innovation in Newark advertising methods, Manager Shepherd says: "With regards to the full page advertisement we used in last Saturday's issue of the Newark Star-Eagle on our presentation of 'The Storm,' I will say that there is only one way to sell your entertainment and that is to let the public know you have it, and it is a proven fact, at least to me, that the bigger you go after things, the better the returns."

Shepherd also arranged a striking front and lobby decoration. The interior of his lobby was built into a scenic cut-out effect reproducing the impressive vista of snow-clad mountains, such as are featured in parts of the picture. His box office was transformed into a log-cabin, flanked on both sides by lobby walls covered with snow effects. Viewed from the street, the log cabin was seen against the colorful background supplied by the lobby interior.

"In reality it might seem that we have spent a fortune in building this set," says Shepherd, "but I would say that this outside set, and also a prologue representing a forest fire, came to just a little under a hundred dollars. This seems to me to be very inexpensive and can be used by most any house."

A unique lobby decoration. It was used to exploit "The Little Minister," at the Rialto theatre, Chickasha, Okla., under the direction of Clayton Tunstill

Made Animated Dirigible for Play-date of "Molly-O"

Bristol, Va.—As the outstanding feature of a "Molly O" campaign at the Isis theatre, the manager fixed up a lobby display of two animated attractors. One was a miniature dirigible eight feet long suspended under the marquee. A battery in the cabin kept the propeller in motion, while a strip of leather between the blades produced the realistic whirring sound. Red lights were placed in the cabin and the windows reflected the light. This display cost three dollars, the paint costing two and one dollar being spent for sundries. The gasbag consisted of an old sign cloth, repainted with silver color.

The second animated display was a Mabel Normand cut-out from the twenty-four sheet. A real umbrella was inserted in her hand to replace the lithographed one and a syphon pump worked by a dry cell battery produced the effect of water pouring over the figure. A circular pan about six feet in diameter caught the flow and fed the pump at the same time, the total cost being four dollars, which was spent for the pan. The other articles were borrowed from retail merchants.

Birthday Party for "My Boy" at the Reynolds Theatre

UNION CITY, Tenn.—Coincidentally with the first appearance in Tennessee of the Jackie Coogan statuettes the young star gave a birthday party to the kids of Union City. It was staged to harmonize with the showing of "My Boy" at the Reynolds theatre. Manager Andrew Cox arranged a tie-up with an ice cream manufacturer awake to the possibilities of effectively advertising his wares and the cream for Jackie's party was furnished free in a mutual advertising arrangement. The ice cream company's wagons advertised the party days in advance and a small army of youngsters ranging in age from 7 to 70 were on hand.

Manager Cox barred those over 20, but afterwards decided that some of those over 65 came within the specifications, as belonging to "us boys."

One of the most effective window tie-ups was used with the small Jackie Coogan statuettes. These little plaster figures were very popular and cost only a small sum or can be borrowed from the exploiteer.

Telephone Cut-out for Exploiting "The Storm"

NEW YORK CITY.—Eddie Burns, manager of Keith's Hamilton theatre, contributed several ideas to the growing exploitation field for "The Storm."

In the center of his lobby Burns set up a huge telephone cut-out bearing the caption:

"Call off your appointments. The Storm is coming."

Over the inside entrance to the theatre he arranged a forest fire cut-out with flashing electric lights that flickered and made an effective eye-catch for passers-by.

Woman Exhibitor Sets Standard for Window Tie-Ups

TOPEKA, Kans.—Because she has the feminine touch of artistry and knows, with an expert's experience, what is what in women's hats, Ruth Wright, owner and manager of the Cozy theatre, was able to effect and assist in installing an unusually nifty window display for "The Crossroads of New York."

The background for the millinery display was a drop curtain of a street crossing marked "The Crossroads of New York," concentrated entirely upon scenic effects and with no attempt to introduce a purchasable commodity in the display. In this instance the addition of hats gave the store a chance, added an attractive feature bound to catch the feminine eye and made more friends for the Cozy.

Exploitation and Prologue for "Human Hearts"

New York City.—Good street exploitation, a tasty lobby display and a colorful prologue did much to fill the Central theatre during the run of "Human Hearts."

The street stunt, arranged by Marc Lachmann, consisted of a victoria, containing two silk-hatted men and expensively gowned women, driven around New York bearing the following sign:

"How many 'Human Hearts' are there among New York's brilliant 400?"

The theatre front and lobby were decorated with attractive and elaborately mounted oil paintings and panels.

The prologue, arranged by Andrew J. Cobe, manager of the theatre, consisted of a scene showing the interior of a blacksmith shop, with a smith at the forge, and his helper working near him.

Exploitation used by Ray Grombacher, managing director of the Liberty theatre, Spokane, Washington, when announcing the coming of "Grandma's Boy"

These decorations, with a miniature track and fast running toy train, were placed in the lobby of the Arcade theatre, Asheville, N. C., for the play date of "The Fast Mail"

Unique Tie-Up With Furrier Advertising "I Am the Law"

Austin, Texas.—realizing the value of contrast, Manager R. P. Whitefield interested a local furrier in giving up one of his windows for a display on "I Am the Law" at the Majestic theatre, in which he was to display furs, and the latest fashions for women for the coming season. Cut-outs from the accessory paper and art displays including black and white stills from the picture and window cards were given first consideration. The display was advertised in the newspapers:

"See the latest in ladies' Furs for the Fall and Winter, now on display in our windows." But the picture received its full share of this advertising stunt. Another tie-up was arranged with a local gun store, displaying hunting materials and weapons of defense.

In the lobby and enclosing the box office was a log cabin made from beaver board. The top of this cabin was covered in "fake" snow and icicles hung from the edge of the roof. Cedar trees, also covered in white paint and imitation snow stood in the lobby. Across the front of the lobby hung a ten-foot banner telling the story, the cast and title. All lighting effects were in pale green.

Footprint stickers, carrying the title of the picture, were pasted on every possible location in town.

Exhibitor Sponsors Local Motion Picture

DEFIANCE, Ohio.—First hooking up with a local newspaper, Harold F. Wendt, manager of the Rivoli theatre, won the approval of his public by pointing out to the editor what an honor it was to the city to have a real motion picture produced within its limits, a town of eight thousand and a theatre with a seating capacity of three hundred and twenty.

The paper carried front page stories reporting on the enterprise while Manager Wendt carried advance advertising. Players were selected by votes, ballots being given each purchaser of a ticket. Tabulated returns were printed each day, all of which acted as a stimulant to business. Finally, with a script written by Mr. Wendt, production was put under way. Scenes being taken always attracted attention, especially since there was a bona fide director and camera-man employed.

Scenes that attracted the most attention were those calling for interiors in a bank, the main title being "Theft for Love," and when the "trick photography" was employed, people thronged to see the cameras in action. When the picture was finally shown, it brought them in and put a lot of "pep" in business during its production.

Mahomet Goes to the Mountains, to Exploit "Forever"

Provo, Utah.—Manager Billy Ashton, of the Columbia theatre, took to heart the old tale that when the mountain wouldn't come to Mahomet, Mahomet went to the mountain.

Just as he booked "Forever," he found that the Mt. Timpanogos Hiking Club had announced their annual outing, which promised to take fifteen hundred people away from the romantic love affair of Elsie Ferguson and Wallace Reid.

"Mount Timp," as the jawbreaking monicker is locally referred to, is the pride of Provo. If Mr. Ashton did anything to interfere with the annual pilgrimage he might be found lacking in civic pride. So he called forth an essay contest on "Forever." First prize was awarded to the man who compared the picture with Mt. Timp. This got the front page of the newspaper.

Advance Publicity on Lobby for "Over the Border"

Columbus, Ga.—Major Holloway, Rialto theatre, depended largely on his lobby display to sell "Over the Border." But he didn't just stick the display in and let it go at that.

Several days in advance he started telling them by slides that he would have a lobby display for "Over the Border" entirely different from any display ever used at the Rialto. He didn't tell them that it would be a "snow" display, but he did say that it would be worth a trip down town just to look at the display this hot weather.

The box office was completely enclosed in rough pine slabs and the chinks were stuffed with cotton. Just over the ticket window was a regulation border sign, U. S.—Canada. A low platform ceiling of white lattice work was put in the lobby and along the front edge of this a pine forest was "grown." The trees were sprayed with white alabastine wash to give them the snow effect and small pieces of cotton were placed in the forks of limbs, etc.

Betty Compson is very popular in Columbus, so her name was featured in cut-out letters suspended just under the front edge of the platform ceiling. Back of the cut-out letters was a row of white frosted lamps. Blue lights were used in the marquee reflectors and above the "pine forest" display to make the entire effect as cold as possible.

Parade and Tie-up with Car for "Our Leading Citizen"

Atlanta, Ga.—About five days before opening Manager DeSales Harrison staged a big "political" parade at about 8 P.M. Heading the march was a band of ten pieces. Behind them came two porters carrying a large banner, both sides of which read, "Our Leading Citizen will be at the Howard Theatre next week." Walking on either side of the banner were five ushers in Howard uniform, each carrying a red fusee on a long stick. These fusees kept the banner illuminated so that it could be read at all times. Next in line was a Stutz car made up to resemble Thomas Meighan in frock coat and high hat. Banners on the car read, "Our Leading Citizen owns The Leading Car . . . Stutz." Bringing up the rear were about 200 newsboys whooping and shouting and attracting lots of attention.

A week in advance a trailer was run announcing that during the week of showing "Our Leading Citizen" a ballot would be taken in the foyer to determine Atlanta's leading citizen. A near ballot box was arranged and voting was rather brisk. The man determined by the ballot was photographed and his picture shown on the screen the week following the engagement.

Huskies from Dog Train in Realistic Prologue

NEW YORK CITY. In connection with the run of "My Dad" at the George M. Cohan theatre, a prologue, staged by Andrew J. Cobe, was a part of the presentation. This was especially designed to shed northern "atmosphere," and to put the audience in a receptive mood for the showing of the picture, locale of which is the far north. Genuine Esquimaux dogs were employed to make the prologue effective, it being the scene of a snow storm in the land of the frozen north, when a train sets out through the storm for a destination which may never be reached.

Stuffed Bear in Home-made Lobby Cage for "The Trap"

ATLANTA, Ga. For the showing of "The Trap" Manager John Thomas of the Strand theatre, had gathered a lot of pine boughs from neighboring forests, and placed them effectively in the lobby. In the center of the lobby he placed a home-made cage and borrowed a stuffed animal from a local furrier, placing it in the cage, thus giving the idea of an animal trapped.

Old Sign Combined with Vaudeville Novelty Artist

LEXINGTON, Ky.—The ballyhoo artist with a sign on his back combined a vaudeville novelty with his street peregrinations when he appeared to exploit "Fools First," at the Ada Meade theatre.

Manager Henry Eger, who was approached by the man, saw the novelty in his act after he had rattled off the notes of several dozen popular airs on his trombone. He was widely advertised. His odd make up, rural character, identified him at once and he played any tune that was called for on his trombone.

In two days he became the best known figure in Lexington, as he was constantly advertising the theatre and the picture.

Boys Parade Streets in Ballyhoo for "Pay Day"

Wilmington, N. C.—For a ballyhoo to exploit "Pay Day," Ernest G. Stellings, manager of the Grand theatre, placed a want ad in the paper for twenty-five boys to appear at the Grand, dressed as imitators of Charles Chaplin, stating that the first twenty-five appearing would get the jobs.

Stellings placed the boys in line, each one carrying a card with a letter spelling "Charlie Chaplin in 'Pay Day' at the Grand Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday." They covered the city with their parade.

In addition to this, Stellings also had five thousand large hand-bills distributed by twenty boys in Chaplin costume on every porch in town and also distributed three thousand pay envelopes, twelve hundred of these going into the offices of the Coastline Railroad the day that the employees were paid.

Stellings also had two cutouts of Chaplin in his lobby in advance of the showing and used the cards carried by the boys in the parade as a banner for his lobby.

A nearly life-sized figure representing Ruth Rowland in "The Timber Queen." It was kept in a galloping motion by electric motor, wires being run from the log cabin box-office of the Ottoway theatre, Charlotte, N. C. The built up cliffs served to decorate the sides of the lobby

Weird effects together with the decorations illustrated above, were used by Manager Guy A. Kenimer, of the Arcade theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., for the play date of "While Satan Sleeps"

Decorating Odd Corners Proves Good Exploitation Angle

Chillicothe, Mo.—There is a way to fill up odd corners of a lobby and give them a hand in putting over an attraction, such as Manager John W. Creamer reports to have met with success when he played "The U. P. Trail" at the Strand and Empire theatres. He mounted the one-sheet cut-out on eight-ply cardboard, which allowed the figures to curl somewhat, giving them a more lifelike appearance. Then he painted in the blue water and brown rocks and pasted the extreme edges at the back of each column with a strip of thin board running across for a brace. This also supported the cut-out. The "forest" at the back was filled in with small willow branches held in position by wires, and while the decorative scheme entailed some painstaking effort, Mr. Creamer reports that the effect was worth it.

Tie-up, incorporating two familiar figures, in a window display, for the exploitation of "Trouble," when at the Strand, Marshalltown, Iowa

Advance Exploitation Used to Put Over "Reported Missing"

CORSICANA, Texas. Ten days in advance of showing "Reported Missing" slides were run on the screen of the teaser type working up interest on the coming attraction at the Palace Theatre. Following this campaign of slides a large lobby card in the form of a "reported missing" bulletin announced those going into the theatre. The card read, "Missing: Your reported missing articles here," and to bring out the humorous side of the picture Manager Grist had painted on this card small squares, with the following captions—"false teeth, cork legs, rattlers, powder puffs, dispositions and tempers, etc." The newspapers gave this stunt considerable free publicity, mentioning in several articles the novel foyer card now on display at the Palace Theatre. Teaser ads were run in all the newspapers one week in advance.

Baseball is quite a local pastime, so the management secured permission to hang banners and teaser signs at the ball park three days in advance of the showing of the picture. All the street cars carried signs one week in advance and three large grocery stores donated their trucks to help Grist sell the picture to the public.

In the lobby during the run of the picture were large cut-outs of Owen Moore and several artificial life savers. One banner carried this caption, "Don't be Reported Missing this week; we hate to think about anyone missing all the fun."

Seven Poses of Star Used to Exploit "Polly of the Follies"

Augusta, Ga.—A footlight trough about twelve feet long was built of beaver board and fitted with electric sockets, for the purpose of exploiting "Polly of the Follies" when at the Modjesca theatre. Mounted just above this was a cut-out of the seven small figures for the twenty-four sheet, showing Constance Talmadge in several different poses. A painted back drop was stretched on a frame back of the cut-out.

Alternate red and blue lights were used in the footlight trough, giving an unusual effect when they reflected on the row of cut-outs. The color scheme of the trough was light blue and orange.

"The Unconquered Woman"

Pasha-Lee-Bradford—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Stuart Gibson)

"THE UNCONQUERED WOMAN" makes an appeal to two distinct types of movie-goer. To those—and there are many—who revel in sitting in an upholstered chair and living mentally through melodramatic moments set among the hardships and rigors of a winter in the Great Northwest, it will undoubtedly prove pleasing. To those who like yarns of the Great White Way as distinguished from the Great White Spaces, the picture will also find a way—for it jumps from the wooded northland to the spangled city midway, and shows one a satisfactory eyeful of both sections.

It contains every element guaranteed to "put over" such a drama—although that may not be considered by some especially high praise. Rubye de Remer is the star, and she succeeds in getting over quite capably the undoubted power that is latent in the role of Helen Chappelle, whose life is moulded among the cold and snow of the northland and the natural drama that springs up among men close to nature in its phases which most certainly emphasize the fact that there must be a God.

The part of Victor Chappelle, Helen's father, played by an actor unnamed in the film, is one of the best pieces of character work seen by this reviewer for some time. Nick Thompson, as Antione, keeper of a gambling house, also does good work, although it is of conventional cut. The photography has been well done, some lovely exteriors in the snowy and tree-capped sections of the land being shown, and the direction assures that the story progresses smoothly at all times.

The Cast

Helen Chappelle.....Rubye de Remer
Bruce Devereaux.....Walter Miller
Serge Ronoff.....Fred Jones
Mildred.....Frankie Mann
Antione.....Nick Thompson

By John B. Clymer. Directed by Marcel Fercy.

Photographed by William Cooper.

The Story—Helen Chappelle is led to gamble her father's timber lands against money in a gambling den in an effort to obtain funds to replace money stolen by her brother. Bruce Devereaux intercedes after she has lost the lands, gives them back to her, with money to cover her brother's defalcation, and later marries her. He starts on a search for the brother. When he fails to return Helen worries and at last is convinced by confession of the bogus priest who married her that Bruce has deceived her. She goes to New York and after a lapse of five years weds Serge Ronoff, musician and dilettante, whose cavorting with other women eventually disgusts her. Bruce has found the brother and after a fruitless search for Helen they have become wealthy fur importers. By chance they meet at Ronoff's home, and after a series of difficulties Ronoff steps into the next world and the wedding bells ring a second time.

Classification—Drama of the outdoors and of love.

Production Highlights—When Helen surprises her brother in thefts. The scenes in the gambling den. The lovers' meeting. Helen's confession that her son is the offspring of Bruce, not Ronoff.

Exploitation Angles—The problem of a woman's duty. The scenes in the frozen Canadian wilds.

Drawing Power—Ought to satisfy, but should not be played up as a world-beater.

Oriental atmosphere marks the above scene in "The House of Darkened Windows," Eastern Film Corporation release.

"Desert's Crucible"

Arrow—Six Reels

(Reviewed by D. I. Gest)

IN "Desert's Crucible" the followers of Jack Hoxie, Western character actor, have an opportunity of seeing him play two parts that are almost directly opposed—the slow-thinking, methodical half-breed and the product of Eastern civilization who proves to the West that he is a He-man.

There is plenty of the typical Jack Hoxie action in this picture. It should fit into any program in which a Western is desired. The plot is one that has been used on the screen repeatedly. It is the old story of an Easterner landing on a ranch and in love with the queen of the outfit about the same time.

Of course she doesn't respond immediately and it is up to him to prove his courage. Then follows the customary busting of a bad horse, the fight with the gang headed by the villain, Tex Fuller, who also wanted the girl, and eventual victory. As usual the half-breed, who secretly loves the girl in his quiet way, risks his life to protect the hero when the gang opens its attack.

The picture is well directed by Roy Clements, and the photography is very good. Andree Tourneur and Claude Payton hold up their ends excellently, Miss Tourneur making a clever little heroine.

There is much beautiful scenery in the outdoor shots. On the whole "Desert's Crucible" should go very well in the neighborhood houses and smaller towns where Westerns are always popular.

The Cast

Jack Hardy, Jr.....Jack Hoxie
Deerfoot.....Jack Hoxie
Tex Fuller.....Claude Payton
Miss Benson.....Andree Tourneur

Author, Roy Clements. Director, Roy Clements. Produced by Ben Wilson. Distributed by Arrow.

The Story—Jack Hardy, Sr., sends his son West to make a man of him. Jack falls in love with Miss Benson, ranch secretary. Taunted by the girl he busts an intractable horse to prove his courage. When Tex Fuller and his gang try to get Jack, Deerfoot, his half-breed brother, to protect Jack takes the missiles intended for his brother. Jack fights his way through the gang and brings them to justice. But Miss Benson is not won yet. She thinks of the girl back East to whom Jack was engaged. Then Jack's father appears, and announces that he is engaged to the Eastern girl. Miss Benson surrenders.

Classification—Western drama.

Production Highlights—Jack's busting of bad horse to prove his courage. The battle with Tex Fuller's gang.

Exploitation Angles—Play up Hoxie's popularity with Western fans. Might use a cowboy and broncho as street ballyhoo.

"The Man She Brought Back"

Playgoers Pictures—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

THE poor Canadian mounted police! What lives they must lead if we are to believe all these things depicted on our shadow stage. It seems that when stories run low, someone is always called in and taking the usual formula dashes off a tale of the Mounted. Of course there's a deal of romance connected with these sleuths of the snows, but it's getting a bit monotonous watching this everlasting effort of a trooper "bringing in his man."

The present effort is no worse or no better than those which have gone before. The production's redeeming features consist of some very attractive wood land exteriors. In fact the story has been "shot" in a very convincing locale. The cast, too, is a fairly good one. Charles Mackay is a good type as a Commander of a Mounted post. Frank Losee portrays "a voice in the wilderness," which means undoubtedly a man of God. He does it well, as usual. Earl Fox is the hero. He works hard, but is inclined to overact. Doris Miller is too "proper" in her acting. She should put more pep in her love making.

There are a number of thrills in the picture and some comedy relief. The capture of Trooper Ramsey by the gang of bootleggers, his forced return to headquarters and disgrace, and the scenes attending his expulsion from the Mounted are well worked out. Ramsey's finding of himself, his conquering of fear under the power of Fenton and his capture of two criminals forms the other high light of the production. The shooting of one of the hooch gang by the villain is staged in fine manner.

The direction is only fair. There are a number of abrupt closes of scenes. The subtitles are attractive and the photography and lighting adequate.

The Cast

Neil Shanley.....Charles Mackay
Margo.....Doris Miller
Fenton.....Frank Losee
Songatawa.....Donald Russ
John Ramsey.....Earl Foxe
Sergeant Hawkins.....Harry Lee
Bruce Webster.....Frederick Burton

By Jasper Ewing Brady. Directed by Charles Miller. Photographed by Lawrence E. Williams.

The Story—Deals with the adventures of John Ramsey, a "newcomer" in the Royal Mounted. Through fear he loses "his first man" and brings disgrace upon himself. Through the kind offices of an aged friend of his mother, he is brought to see a new light. He overcomes his fear, brings in not only one but two criminals and wins his chevrons and the girl.

Classification—The familiar Northwest Mounted "thriller."

Production Highlights—The exterior sets, showing some very attractive natural scenes in winter. The capture of Trooper Ramsey and his return to headquarters in disgrace. Ramsey's conquering of fear, his going out "on his own hook" and bringing in his man—and another criminal. The murder of Le Loup, a bootlegger. The fine photography.

Exploitation Angles—During your exhibitorial career, you've probably pulled a lot of Northwest Mounted stunts. Well you can repeat them all here. Dress the lobby in log cabin style. Use a Royal Mounted trooper on the streets with suitable advertising. The moonshine theme will suggest tie-ups.

Drawing Power—If your patrons like Mounted stories, put this one down for a day or two.

"The Curse of Drink"

(Export and Import—Weber—North—5500 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A OTHER old-timer of yesteryear—one straight from the old gallery days is "The Curse of Drink," an adaptation of Charles E. Blaney's melodrama. The picture should be a good investment for the state right buyer because it carries a "kick" and a moral. It is capably directed and excellently acted by a cast comprising such well known names as Harry Morey, Marguerite Clayton, Edmond Breese, George Fawcett and Brinsley Shaw. Of course such a story is obvious and you know just how it will develop—even though you never saw the original. However, it holds the interest because Harry O. Hoyt has brought out the highlights of the play by emphasizing the melodramatic punch.

The plot reveals a railroad engineer whose taste for liquor brings sorrow upon his family. A man of ability, his weakness has brought his household to the brink of ruin. He is not trusted with a passenger train but is forced to drive a switch engine. The introductory reels present his abuse of his family which culminate in the oldest daughter's humiliation. There is an evil plotter whose influence over him causes the unhappiness to spread. This villain is determined to win the girl. So his story told to the president of the road—that the later's son is cheapening himself in his attention to her and the fact that her father is unable to keep sober—precipitates a climax which contains a good thrill.

The drink-crazed engineer, thinking he has killed his youngest child, starts to avenge himself upon the president by driving the special on a mad ride. There is only one thing to be done. The girl and the youth must follow and stop the train before it reaches the edge of the bridge which has gone down. The long shots here are good and there is suspense in the pursuit of the train. The girl climbs over the cars and saves the lives of her father and the president. And romance triumphs. The atmosphere is appropriate.

The Cast

Bill Sanford.....Harry T. Morey
John Rand.....Edmund Breese
Ruth Sanford.....Marguerite Clayton
Ben Flartey.....George Fawcett
Baby Betty.....Miriam Batista
Sam Handy.....Brinsley Shaw
Mother Sanford.....Alice May
Harry Rand.....Albert Barrett
Margaret Sanford.....June Fuller

By Charles E. Blaney. Scenario by Harry O. Hoyt. Directed by Harry O. Hoyt. Presented by Export & Import. Distributed by Lawrence Weber and Bobby North.

The Story—Railroad president opposes the romance between his son and stenographer, the latter the daughter of an engineer who has strong liking for liquor. The engineer brings ruin to his family and thinking the president is interfering with him, plans a revenge. He drives a special train containing the executive and the girl realizing that both lives are in danger gives chase in a locomotive. She succeeds in saving their lives in the nick of time. This is sufficient to win the executive's forgiveness.

Classification—Adaptation of melodrama of same name. Some thrills and romance.

Production Highlights—Good work of cast. The chase of the runaway train.

Exploitation Angles—Play up the theme and use the title. Mention the players. Their names spell box-office receipts. Put on a special ballyhoo.

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

TAKE one winsome and appealing heroine, plus a broad-shouldered "he-man" hero, plus a dastardly villain and a pair of half-breeds; add a few log cabins and a gold mine, and you have a picture that is as sure-fire as anything in this uncertain industry.

Such is the formula employed by the makers of this Jane Novak vehicle. Though the material is not especially new, it has been well handled, and there are a number of novel twists that should put it over in good shape.

The pensive Miss Novak has been well photographed and has ample opportunity to display her emotional ability. Her following should be well pleased with her showing in this picture.

The box-office value of the picture should be further enhanced by the presence of Roy Stewart as leading man. Stewart's name is closely identified with roles of this sort, and he plays them well. The remainder of the cast, Lloyd Whitlock, Herbert Prior, Kate Toncray and Spottiswoode Aitken, are well known, and give satisfactory performances.

There are several strong punches in the picture, which, in the latter part, are further enhanced by the fact that the hero has been temporarily blinded by smoke.

The Cast

Virginia Tremont.....Jane Novak
Bill Bronson.....Roy Stewart
Harold Lounsbury.....Lloyd Whitlock
Kenly Lounsbury.....Herbert Prior
Mrs. Bronson.....Kate Toncray
Herbert Lounsbury.....Spottiswoode Aitken
Mah Lung.....Chai Hung
By Edison Marshall. Adapted by Marion Fairfax. Directed by Chester Bennett. Distributed by Film Booking Offices of America, Inc.

The Story—Society girl goes into far northwest to search for her fiancé, accompanied by her guardian and a guide. The guardian deserts with the horses, leaving them in a cabin with insufficient supplies. They locate her fiancé, now a squaw man. His true nature is revealed, and she realizes her love for the guide.

Classification—Northwest melodrama with usual situations gives some clever twists. Romance and humor are also present.

Production Highlights—Rescue of heroine from falls. Struggle with pine trees, asbestos snow, snowshoes, and the like. A log cabin front on your box office should go well. You might have a man go about town in furs on a pair of snowshoes, with a banner announcing the picture.

Exploitation Angles—Title lends itself well to special lobby displays with pine trees, asbestos snow, snowshoes, and the like. A log cabin front on your box office should go well. You might have a man go about town in furs on a pair of snowshoes, with a banner announcing the picture.

Drawing Power—Should go big in smaller houses and anywhere that they like straight melodrama.

"The Hound of the Baskervilles"

F. B. O.—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE most exciting of the Conan Doyle stories written around Sherlock Holmes has been adapted to the screen. The curious part of it is no American producer had the foresight to see picture material in "The Hound of the Baskervilles," and so an English company took advantage of its stirring action, its cumulative interest and suspense.

All things considered they have turned out a film calculated to make anyone sit up and take notice. If they have faltered it is in allowing too many captions to interrupt the sequences—captions which explain facts which are immediately followed by the illustrations. This is contrary to good construction. And the Americans know better. Again the adaptors have fallen into the habit of showing considerable letter writing in these same captions. And Holmes does not intrude to any extent—his place being taken until the climax by "my dear Watson." Eliminate many of these subtitles and the picture would carry more mystery. Yet it carries suspense. It couldn't help but carry it—seeing that it is an adaptation of a masterpiece of its kind.

The English countryside is brought out with its bleak looking moors—the background of the story. It is thrilling to see the master of Baskerville Hall worried over the ghostly hound which has haunted his family for generations. And when he dies of fright and Holmes and Watson are called—the story picks up and releases an intensity of scene sufficient to thrill everyone. You may be able to guess the identity of the conspirator responsible for the mystery of the fiery hound. Even so you are deeply interested. It is a compelling touch when the servant is observed flashing a signal to someone on the moor. The little group in the house are awaiting anxiously the developments. And another good incident is that which discloses the Druid stones silhouetted against the darkened sky. What about that scene when Holmes is horror-stricken in watching the criminal sink in the quagmire? There is imagination there.

The lighting is faulty in the interiors. The exteriors are misty and therefore correct for such a story and its locale. Eille Norwood makes a good Holmes. He seems to step right out of the pages of the story. The book is more exciting, but the picture will give you a thrill.

The Cast

Sherlock Holmes.....Eille Norwood
Dr. Watson.....Hubert Willis
Sir Henry Baskerville.....Rex McDougall
Osborne.....Allen Jeaves
Sir Hugo Merrepet.....Lewis Gilbert
Beryl Merrepet.....Betty Campbell
By Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Distributed by F. B. O.

The Story—Holmes is called to investigate the mysterious presence of a fiery hound near Baskerville Hall. The dog's appearance has always marked the death of the occupant of the Hall. Holmes sends Watson and investigates the case himself from London. He captures the criminal responsible for the dog whose fiery appearance is due to a phosphorus coating. The criminal's ambition is to gain title to the Baskerville estate.

Classification—Adaptation of Conan Doyle's famous detective story. Thrills and excitement.

Production Highlights—The bleak exteriors silhouetted against the darkening sky. The moor and the appearance of the strange, mysterious dog. The scene of the Druid Stones. The scene when Holmes is silhouetted when observing the death of the criminal. The suspense. The fine acting of Eille Norwood—a genuine Holmes.

Exploitation Angles—This story is widely read and everyone will want to see the picture. Play it up for its mystery and thrills. Stage a prologue and use incidental music. Make your atmosphere creepy. Play up the author. He has a worldwide reputation.

Drawing Power—Get out your posters and use all the copy. And get the crowd. They will come if they remember the book.

"Men, Women Marry"

Edw. Dillon-Genius-M. H. Hoffman—
Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

EDWARD DILLON has taken Adelaide Heilbron's story of a girl who learns humility through a realization that all are "sisters under the skin" and given it a production which is certain to be appreciated as a good box-office bet by the states rights buyers. It is an involved tale of a financier, who, having lost his wife and child, adopts his servant's baby. And because she is thrown in contact with a false aristocracy she gets out of harmony with human nature. In other words, she is brought up as a snob—a mercenary title hunter.

The story is not easy of solution. The climax takes you by surprise. But it comes where it should—at the finish. The father dies suddenly and when the will is read, the girl discovers that she is the daughter of the humble servants. This is a severe shock. Another shock comes when the equally haughty wife, a social climber too, ejects her from the house. And a second surprise arrives when a second will is read making the girl sole beneficiary. Having learned humility she accepts the modest love of the hard-working youth.

The picture teaches a lesson in deportment. It teaches a lesson for the socially ambitious who have no time to get in touch with humanity. The picture is well mounted, progresses evenly to its climax, and is certain in its appeal. The acting is in capable hands, E. K. Lincoln playing the humble youth like a regular fellow, while Hedda Hopper flashes a true finesse as the mercenary wife. Florence Dixon enacts the part of the haughty girl as if to the manner born—a true Ritzy touch throughout. Charles Hammond makes the father a recognizable type—a fine performance. The technical arrangements—lighting, photography, etc., are O. K. In all an interesting society drama.

The Cast

Dick Clarke.....E. K. Lincoln
Montgomery Rogers.....Charles Hammond
Emerie Rogers.....Florence Dixon
Eleanor Carter.....Hedda Hopper
Brooks Fitzroy.....Cyril Chadwick
Lady Fitzroy.....Emily Fitzroy
Aunt Gertrude.....Julia Swayne Gordon
Adam, the butler.....Richard Carlyle
Hetty, the cook.....Margaret Seddon
By Adelaide Heilbron. Directed by Edward Dillon. Photographed by Roy Overbaugh. Produced by Genius Film Corp. Distributed by M. H. Hoffman.

The Story—Rich man loses his wife and child and adopts the infant of his servants—the child to be reared as his own. Her aunt has social ambitions for her and takes her to London where plans are made to marry her off to an impoverished lord. On return voyage she is accidentally thrown into contact with youth who is working his passage. Eventually he comes into her house as servant and when her father dies his will establishes her as child of servants. His mercenary wife ejects her and she goes to live with her parents. A second will is read and the girl comes into a good fortune.

Classification—Drama of domestic complications when adopted child allows herself to become haughty—not knowing that she is offspring of humble parents.

Production Highlights—The good directing. The capable cast. The atmosphere of society. Scene when father's will is read and girl discovers that she has no name. Scene when girl meets youth on ship.

Exploitation Angles—What about the title here to exploit? It will attract attention. Play it up as society drama which carries a lesson for all. Bring forth in your copy that it is a picture of modern society well acted and directed. Feature the players—E. K. Lincoln being well known.

Drawing Power—Title will attract them. If played up to take advantage of this title the picture should draw. Suitable for all classes of houses except factory districts.

"Putting It Over"

Goldstone—Five Reels

(Reviewed by D. I. Gest)

GROVER JONES has turned out a picture that is ideally suited for the neighborhood patronage in "Putting It Over" in which Richard Talmadge has the star role.

It is a lively little story of small town politics with a somewhat limited appeal. There is nothing elaborate about the settings, but it moves forward at an agreeable pace, with the proper mixture of love, villainy, comedy and thrills.

There is a certain boyishness about Richard Talmadge in this picture, but he puts on just enough comedy of the strenuous sort to make it peppy, and thoroughly removes the effeminate effect at times he imparts. The prize ring scene is rather thrilling, while the cattle parade during the electioneering is real comedy. The final shot in which the hero permits the train to pass through without him is a fitting finish for the picture.

Jones has handled his subject excellently and no fault can be found with his directing. Barbara Norton's part is very cleverly handled by Doris Pawn.

Properly exploited "Putting It Over" should go good in any neighborhood house. It is a picture that probably will never be featured in the bright lights of Broadway but on Main Street, that's different.

The Cast

Bob Merritt.....Richard Talmadge
Barbara Norton.....Doris Pawn
Arnold Norton.....Thomas Ricketts
Mark Durkham.....Harry Van Meter
James Merritt.....Henry Barrows
Tate Busby.....Victor Metzetti
George Norton.....William Horne
"Porky" Donovan.....Earl Schaeffer
Lem Kendall.....Andrew Waldron
Author, Grover Jones. Scenario by Grover Jones. Directed by Grover Jones. Distributed by Goldstone.

The Story—James Merritt, powerful politician, gives his wayward son, Bob, a thirteenth chance to make good by being elected mayor of Carterville over Arnold Norton. When Bob meets Barbara Norton and learns the tactics being used to defeat her father he chucks his thirteenth job and enters upon his fourteenth that of electing Norton. He puts it over, after much excitement.

Classification—A light drama with sufficient romance and comedy to carry it through.

Production Highlights—The prize ring battle in which Bob has leading part. The cattle parade at the psychological moment.

Exploitation Angles—Play up title. Can be used for tie-ups with local merchants and newspapers. Prize ring lobby display could be used advantageously. Might use election campaign copy for advertising.

Drawing Power—Made to order for the neighborhood houses.

"Why Do Men Marry?"

(Unity—Six Reels—State Rights)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS picture is evidently an Italian product, with the story, characters, detail production carrying a strictly continental flavor. It is a highly involved plot—one which points toward a satirical vein here and there but which in its background relies heavily upon its dramatic quality. The title is doubtless an after-thought and replying to its inquisitive demands we would say that some men marry just to satisfy their vanity. That the story contains a suggestion of light comedy is noticeable in the wager of two clubmen—that if one of them marries a certain actress who bears a strong resemblance to a society woman—the latter undecided in her choice of a husband between the two men—well, if one marries the gay charmer the other must settle a princely sum on him.

That's the plot in a nutshell. And in working it out one is treated to high life in some city of Italy—probably Milan, since there is a reproduction on a lavish scale of the La Scala Theatre. There is fine atmosphere in this particular scene even if the lighting is characteristic of most European products—rather cloudy. Knowing that the two women bear a strong resemblance he lures his wife to the other's home and elopes with her though making it evident that it is her double who is driving away. Meanwhile the rival is taken from the house and secreted in a dungeon. The husband returns and soon appreciates his friend's treachery. A trusted servant has been killed and the worthless clubman is the victim of a duel.

The story holds one's interest because it has suspense and the players are ideal types for their respective roles, particularly the men who portray the clubmen. Edy Darclea, a statuesque type of beauty, plays a dual role and gives a good performance. The scenes of Venice are the real thing, and the atmosphere is entirely correct. Lesley Mason has edited the picture so that it carries an even sequence throughout, the story interest being emphasized through his captions. The picture should please American audiences.

The Cast

Flavia.....Edy Darclea
Mousseline.....Edy Darclea
Glenmore.....Edy Darclea
Madoc.....Players not mentioned
Companion.....Players not mentioned

By Leo Gozlor. Scenario and titles by Lesley Mason. Directed by Genina. Distributed by Unity Pictures.

The Story—Two clubmen wager that one or the other must win a celebrated actress, the loser to give $50,000 to the winner, while the loser must also pay court to a certain beauty of society. The latter is happy in her unresponsive way. The winner of the wager indulges in a practical joke which ends in his death.

Classification—Domestic drama carrying a strong note of satire, although tragic climax brings story to an end. An Italian picture strong in continental flavor in plot, characters and detail.

Production Highlights—The big sets of the theatre. The fine atmosphere. Scene of reception in theatre. Scene when clubmen pay court to the actress. Scene when one double-crosses the other. The duel. The good acting by principals.

Exploitation Angles—All you have to capitalize is the main title—which is sure to awaken interest. Once in their seats, the patrons should find entertainment. Mentioning the players will not help, as only one name is given and she is unknown to American audiences. Play up the fine atmosphere.

Drawing Power—Will doubtless please audiences where it is shown. But don't advertise the fact that it is foreign unless you know your crowd. Title should draw.

"The Ghost Breaker"

(Paramount—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT is a nonchalant Wallace Reid who wanders on and off the sets in this adaptation of the play by Paul Dickey and Charles W. Goddard. While he has his work cut out for him he takes it so easy as to make it appear almost farcical at times. Really he doesn't "bat an eyelid" in protecting himself or the girl, although he is confronted on all sides by desperate men. It seems to us that more could have been made of the ghost scenes. What are secret panels and trap-doors for? They seem to have a place in serials for building suspense. Yet in this story they might have been used to add a rip-roaring climax.

The star is introduced long after Lila Lee. She has inherited a castle in Spain which is supposed to secrete a deal of treasure. But the missing plans are in New York and a neighbor is determined to make life miserable for her by getting possession of them if possible. It is he who is supplying the ghosts—it is he who has spirited the girl's brother away. Meanwhile the star has journeyed down to the feud country, Kentucky, and helped himself to a lot of trouble. This incident might just as well have been eliminated because it doesn't advance the action. It merely starts Wally on his nonchalant way. He comes to New York and the well known hotel scene is used. This introduces him getting into the wrong room—the girl's room. So they become acquainted. And to avoid more trouble he secretes himself in a trunk and is taken aboard the steamer. The rest of the picture is taken up with frightening off the ghosts, scaring them with a gun or two and protecting the girl. The villain is caught and exposed and romance triumphs.

The picture carries a few laughs, but they do not center around the rotund personality of Walter Hiers in blackface. Had he played the part straight he would have encouraged a bit of laughter here or there—but blackface is not his forte. It is his duty to act as Wally's valet. There are some gaps which need bridging because some scenes release the idea that it is too fantastic—too improbable. And that brings us back to the thought that the star played it too lightly. Lila Lee is much more in character as the Spanish senorita. The settings are excellent. In fact the technical equipment is of a fine quality throughout.

The Cast

Warren Jarvis, a ghost breaker.....Wallace Reid
Maria Theresa, a Spanish heiress.....Lila Lee
Rusty Snow, a colored servant.....Walter Hiers
Duke D'Alva, leader of ghosts.....Arthur Carewe
Sam Marcum, a Kentucky feudist.....J. F. MacDonald
Aunt Mary Jarvis.....Frances Raymond
Maurice.....Snitz Edwards
By Paul Dickey and Charles Goddard. Scenario by Jack Cunningham. Directed by Alfred Green. Photographed by William Marshall.

Produced by Famous Players.

The Story—Adaptation of well known stage play of the same name. Deals with the adventures of a devil-may-care Kentuckian who aids a beautiful Spanish senorita to rid her castle in Spain of a band of robbers posing as ghosts, and eventually wins her love.

Production Highlights—Fine atmosphere and detail. First rate lighting and technical details. Star gives adequate performance. Lila Lee well cast and gives a pleasing portrayal. A good sense of adventure in plot.

Classification—Comedy-drama containing much adventure and romance.

Exploitation Angles—This being a Wallace Reid picture you won't have much trouble in filling the house. Get the paper and posters and go to it. Use a mystery campaign in your copy to suggest the character of story.

Drawing Power—Will fill your house in every community. Reid has his following.

Scene from "The Electric House." The bath tub operates by electricity and moves at the wrong time.

"Youth Must Have Love"

Fox—4368 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE old law of averages is being obeyed in this picture—the latest from the Fox lots starring Shirley Mason. The piquant star who has been frolicking around in romantic tales, the plots of which were kept moving with little intimate touches of the heart and home is not so fortunate with "Youth Must Have Love." It is quite familiar and old-fashioned and wholly improbable if you accept the premise of a father willing to condemn his daughter's lover to keep himself from being suspected of a crime of which both are innocent. The picture, once the characters are introduced, follows a conventional groove, with the climax anticipated from the start. Such development builds tedium.

Of course there is only one possible course—and that is for the father to overcome his cowardice and save his daughter's happiness. And suspense is absent because you know in advance what is coming. In other words it is a single track story told without any relief from its obvious pattern. The picture carries a romantic title, but the plot is more concerned with melodrama. The director has done as well as possible with the story and in technical detail he has officiated in a first rate manner—the production and lighting being up to the requirements.

It's a case of circumstantial evidence with the hero being suspected because he happened to be around when the villain takes advantage of his opportunity to steal. The father accompanies the thief and afraid of being implicated he keeps quiet concerning the real identity of the crook. But eventually things are straightened out and happiness and love are the girl's reward. The star is pleasing in her role though she hasn't many opportunities to flash her winsome appeal. Wallace MacDonald is the hero—a conventional one, while Landis Stevens makes the villain fairly convincing. The best plan here is to forget the story and follow the players. It will suit the neighborhood houses.

The Cast

Della Marvin.....Shirley Mason
Marvin.....Cecil Van Auker
Earl Stannard.....Wallace MacDonald
John Hibbard.....Wilson Hummel
George Hibbard.....Landis Stevens
By Dorothy Yost. Scenario by Dorothy Yost. Directed by Joseph Franz. Photographed by George Schneiderman. Produced by Fox.

The Story—Deals with cowardly father who to throw suspicion upon daughter's lover rather than take any blame for robbery engineered by his friend. The latter has threatened to implicate him. Consequently the father exposes youth. Eventually he discloses the guilty friend.

Classification—Melodrama which involves a crime with coward featured as afraid to tell the truth to spare an innocent man. Romance triumphs.

Production Highlights—Good work of star and support is adequate. Exteriors first rate. Scene when man overcomes his cowardice and discloses the guilty party. The romantic moments.

Exploitation Angles—This title will attract the star's following. Feature the star in all your copy. Her name is the best bet here.

"Caught Bluffing"

Universal—4517 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is a compact, "up and at 'em" type of western which is laid up in the Alaskan country—a western which builds well toward its climax, furnishing a full quota of romantic moments, a few thrills and some hefty infighting. It's a story of a "one-woman man" who is called a woman hater, but who fights shy of the feminine sex because he is unable to find his ideal. You may call it a character study for most of the action and incident center around the proprietor of the gambling hall—a proprietor who is always on the square and who will not allow any crooked work at cards among the visitors.

Frank Mayo makes the figure a virile, man type. The plot is not original. It goes back to an old situation—one which has been used scores of times, but which never fails to compel attention. It presents two men—one a scoundrel, the other our hero, gambling at cards for the woman. The heroine has come West to meet her fiancé, but that unworthy has absconded with some funds. Naturally, the "one-woman man" is blamed by the girl although she doesn't know him. She employs a guide to help her locate the missing youth. And once in the wilderness he attacks her. This is Jack Curtis' moment. And Jack can make any type a regular tough guy. The stranger enters. It is the honest gambler. So he suggests a game of cards and stakes his gold against the girl. And for once in his life he cheats and wins.

The following scene is of the "knock-em-down-and-drag-em-out" variety. It is a gruelling fight and the hero triumphs. But with his success his real name is mentioned. And the concluding incident presents the girl upbraiding him for his influence with her fiancé. The youth enters and shows his true colors. So the hero accepts the girl's apology. A lively western, characteristic of the director, Lambert Hillyer, who hasn't directed Bill Hart all these years for nothing. He knows when to add the punch and develop his incident. And the atmosphere is well suggested. Mayo is supported by a competent cast, the feminine roles being well cared for by Edna Murphy and Ruth Royce. There are no false heroics here. It is a sample of straightforward story-writing, direction and acting.

The Story—Gambler boasts reputation for playing fair. Occasion arises where he has to resort to underhand card play for the first time in his career to save the life and honor of the only girl who ever fascinated him. After a bit of misunderstanding the girl appreciates him. Love triumphs.

Classification—Melodrama laid in Alaska. Revolves around fight of two men for a girl. Situation of cheating at cards furnishing the climax.

Production Highlights—Mayo's vigorous performance. Appealing work of Edna Murphy. Jack Curtis a good heavy. Scene when men gamble for girl. The atmosphere. The good direction.

Exploitation Angles—Bill it as a vigorous melodrama directed by Lambert Hillyer, responsible for many Bill Hart pictures. The title can be worked out in some snappy teaser ads.

Drawing Power—Wherever westerns are popular and Mayo has a following picture will draw. Those who see it will like it.

"The Eternal Flame"

First National—7453 Feet

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

"SMILIN' THROUGH" was a splendid picture. "The Eternal Flame" is a better one.

As the Duchesse de Langeais, Honore de Balzac's colorful character, Norma Talmadge attains new emotional heights. Whether as the loyal wife, the court beauty, the coquette, or the nun fleeing from love in a convent, Miss Talmadge is superb.

"The Eternal Flame" has been produced without regard for expense. The setting for the grand ball at the palace sets a new standard for lavish interiors. It is a treat for the eye. The French streets, the interior of the Duchesse's home, the Boar's Head Inn, the convent, all have been staged with meticulous attention to detail. The subtitles are unusually artistic, being changed ever and anon to relieve monotony. The photography and lighting are perfect.

The production brings before our eyes all the grandeur, romance, thrill, adventure, beauty and tragedy of the days of Louis XVIII. Although the feature is in eight reels, there is very little padding. Here is an instance where such length is needed. It is impossible here to enumerate all the dramatic situations. The most thrilling moment, however, is that in which General de Montriveau seeking to destroy the beauty of the woman who has played with his heart, seeks to brand her with a red hot iron. In staging the scenes attending this climax, every opportunity for thrilling an audience is taken advantage of.

This is Frank Lloyd's finest directorial work to date. The cast is one of uniform excellence. Conway Tearle gives a masterful portrayal of de Montriveau, Adolphe Jean Menjou is convincing as the Duc de Langeais, Rosemary Theby is an admirable Madame de Serizy, Kate Lester lends dignity to anything in which she appears. "The Eternal Flame" should be a box office bonanza.

The Cast

Duchesse de Langeais.....Norma Talmadge
Duc de Langeais.....Adolphe Jean Menjou
Marquis de Ronquerolles.....Wedgewood Nowell
General de Montriveau.....Conway Tearle
Madame de Serizy.....Rosemary Theby
Princess de Vlamont-Chauray.....Kate Lester
Vidame de Pamier.....Thomas Ricketts
Count de Marsay.....Irving Cummings
Abbe Conrand.....Otis Harlan
Adapted by Frances Marion from Honore de Balzac's "La Duchesse de Langeais." Directed by Frank Lloyd. Photographed by Antonio Gaudio.

The Story—The Duchesse de Langeais, regarded as a toy by her soldier husband, becomes enraged when the latter wagers upon her purity. He leaves for the front. In her loneliness she accepts the attentions of many men. Then comes de Montriveau. She plays with his love. The general kidnaps her, determined to make her pay for her deception by branding her. Because of his great love he is unable to carry out the torture. He flees and remains aloof from her. Her letters to him are unanswered. In despair she decides to enter a convent. After a year, the general gets word of her place of hiding. There is a happy reunion.

Classification—A story of real heart interest, revolving around the petty jealousies, romance and intrigues of the court of Louis XVIII.

Production Highlights—The magnificent setting given the production. The gorgeous gowns worn by Norma. The masterful portrayal by Miss Talmadge of the role of the Duchesse. The excellent supporting cast. The grand ball at the Palace. The branding scene. The kidnapping of the Duchesse. The love scenes between the general the Duchesse. The reunion at the convent.

Exploitation Angles—First National has prepared an unusually large number of advertising aids on this picture. Use them. Play up the star, of course.

Drawing Power—Don't hesitate about booking this picture. It's "there!" No matter how large your house, this one should fill it.

Earl Williams in a scene from the Vitaphone Picture "A Rogue's Romance"

"A Rogue's Romance"

Vitaphone—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

TAKING advantage of Rodolph Valentino's phenomenal rise to fame, Vitaphone is reviving this production of other days and in billing the picture is giving "The Perfect Lover" equal prominence with the star, Earl Williams. This is all well and good and fine business practice, but Williams is the boy who does the work. It was as a dancer that Valentino first won public attention and in this feature he gyrates through a couple of wild Apache dances, in which his fair partner undergoes some rough treatment and otherwise distinguishes himself in the role of The Ferret, a Montmartre hard-boiled egg. The girls will undoubtedly rush to see Rody dance, so this picture has a real box office value.

So much for the Valentino end. To Earl Williams, however, goes the honor of portraying a very entertaining character, that of M. Picard, master criminal. Williams dominates every scene and it is Earl at his best.

The atmosphere of Paris has been fairly well transferred to the screen. The Cafe D'Or being a colorful underworld setting for the Valentino dances. There are some elaborate shots at a fashionable hotel. The story is one that holds the interest throughout. It deals mostly with the theft and recovery of pearl necklaces and the capture of a band of grafters. The exposure of the plot and subsequent escape of Picard forms a dramatic climax. James Young directed this one. That is a decided asset. The thing for exhibitors to do when they book this one is not to overplay the Valentino end too much.

The Cast

M. Picard.....Earl Williams
The Ferret.....Rodolph Valentino
Helene DuPrenay.....Katherine Adams
M. Henri DuVal.....Brinsley Shaw
Jeanne Derneau.....Maud George
By H. H. Van Loan. Scenario and direction by James Young.

The Story—M. Picard, a master criminal, antagonizes The Ferret, a dangerous Apache. The Ferret in return hounds Picard, informing the police of his every move. Picard always outwits the police and escapes. A girl induces Picard to turn his powers to the aid of society. He helps the police capture a dangerous band of grafters as well as recover a valuable pearl necklace. He is cornered several times but always gets away.

Classification—One of those interesting French crook stories that always appeal.

Production Highlights—The Apache dances performed by Valentino and a sprightly little partner. The work of Earl Williams as Picard, the criminal. The exciting escapes. The theft and discovery of the necklace. The fine photography, direction and lighting effects. The correct Montmartre atmosphere. The thrilling climax.

Exploitation Angles—Your one best bet here, of course, is to tell them that Valentino dances in this picture. That will evoke interest at once. You have a chance for a colorful prologue on this theme.

Drawing Power—A very satisfying program picture which should go over in second class down-town houses, neighborhood theatres and towns.

"Timothy's Quest"

Dirigo-Amer. Releasing—6377 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is American Releasing's finest achievement. A simple, homespun story filled with a great heart tug, which overflows with sentiment and pathos and kindly humor—a story so faithful in its adaptation—so faithful to its people, its environment that Kate Douglas Wiggin must feel immensely proud. The pages are opened and Timothy, Lady Gay, Miss Avilda, Samantha, Jabe, Hitty, Miss Dora and Dave Milliken step forth to be humanized—to live on the screen.

Nothing is amiss. Everything is in place. And the result is a masterpiece of its kind. There is no thought in the spectator's mind of a camera lurking about, so real, so intimate are the human touches. It is as if you were actually transplanted to the country and were a part of the scheme. We go on record as saying that Olcott's backgrounds have never been excelled. Where did he go? Where is this rustic spot? There is nothing of the studio stamped upon it. Look into the white farm house, take notice of the quaint furniture, the rag carpets, the quilts on the four-poster beds, the sittin' room. Look outside and marvel in the romantic landscape. Watch the oxen plodding along. So much for the details.

We look at the story and we find it unusual—a story of a little dreamer, who, having no mother, runs away from the city slums in search of a real home. His companion is a tiny girl. And they catch a freight and reach the countryside up Maine way. And straightway they stop at the white farmhouse. They are not wanted. Inside lives a stern, unyielding old maid and another spinster, a victim of lost love. These little people conquer them slowly but surely. The boy brings back vivid memories to the straight-laced woman, whose sister took the primrose path and died in sin. He has the dead girl's eyes. The spinster of the broken romance adopts the little girl, but the boy is sent away. The minute he leaves the stern woman is sorry. And so she brings him back. —

Simple isn't it? Yet it tugs at the heart without any recourse to maudlin sentiment. The story is told in a straightforward fashion—and told with a wealth of humanities. If you want to see character acting of the highest quality take notice of Marie Day's study of the stern, relentless spinster. She is real. Margaret Seddon also gives an exceptional portrayal, and Vivian Ogden lends color and humor to a familiar type of old maid.

The Cast

Timothy.....Master Joseph Depew
"Lady Gay".....Baby Helen Rowland
Miss Avilda Cummins.....Marie Day
Samantha Ann Ripley.....Margaret Seddon
Jabe Slocum.....Bertram Marburgh
Hitty Tarbox.....Vivian Ogden
Miss Dora.....Gladys Leslie
Dave Milliken.....Wm. F. Haddock

By Kate Douglas Wiggin. Directed by Sidney Olcott. Photographed by Al Liguori and Gene French. Produced by Dirigo Films, Inc. Distributed by American Releasing Corp.

The Story—Orphan of the slums to avoid an asylum runs away—taking a little girl with him—his quest being a real home and the possibility of finding a mother. They hop off a freight car in the country and select a house, but the spinster living there declines to do any adopting. Eventually she yields and adopts both children.

Classification—Heart interest story filled with sentiment and pathos.

Production Highlights—The marvelous atmosphere of the country. The rich details. The splendid direction. The fine acting, especially by Marie Day and Margaret Seddon.

Exploitation Angles—Play this up as the best human interest story of the year. Play up the heart touches. Use the author's name. Bill it as a fine adaptation of the story. Don't be afraid of the superlatives here.

Drawing Power—Certain of getting over everywhere. Especially suited for family audiences.

Reviews of Latest Short Subject Releases

"West Is Worst"

(Crescent Comedy—Two Reels—Released Through East Coast Prod.)

The outstanding feature of this T. R. Coffin Production's comedy is the excellence of the settings, cast and photography. Interiors are built with a lavishness worthy of a feature, and the cast includes such well known names as Jack Richardson, Eddie Barry, Spottiswoode Aitken, Helen Darling and Gale Henry.

Richardson appears as Gordon Gynn, a wayward son. Finally, when he proposes to three girls in one evening, while "under the influence," his father sends him west to Colorado. Here the cowpunchers proceed to frame him up, but luck is with him and he triumphs over them. The foiled villain then kidnaps the "goil," and our hero goes to the rescue. He is thrown from the car, and in so doing strikes oil, and all ends as it should.

This comedy is of a somewhat new type, striking a note midway between polite "situation" comedy and slapstick. There is an element of slapstick present at times, but there is more of situation and story than is usually present in these subjects. There should be a goodly number of laughs in this, and the titles help it along. Direction is by Bruce Mitchell.—L. C. MOEN.

"Water Sports"

(Fox Educational—One Reel)

EVERY form of water sport, with a plentiful admixture of thrills, is contained in this interesting release.

As might be expected, there is a generous quota of bathing beauties, but all manner of novel water sports are included, such as water tennis, canoe tilting and the old reliable shoot the chutes.

These are followed by scenes of surf riding in Hawaii, with frail craft riding easily over the rolling surf. The real thrill, however, comes from the scenes showing aquaplaning, the aquaplane being a water toboggan towed behind a swift motorboat, and on which the rider stands upright. The rider (or should we say "aquaplaner"?) has it under remarkable control, and performs breath-taking gyrations with it. Aquaplaning behind a seaplane is also shown.

The picture then closes with the modern, highly perfected speed boat skimming the water. This is an unusual release of its sort.—L. C. MOEN.

"Two of a Kind"

(Universal—Two Reels)

THIS concerns the weird happenings which ensue when a plumber's helper, fleeing an irate boss, enters a fashionable home and dons evening dress as a disguise. It happens that the home is that of a wealthy young man, double of the plumber, who is being guarded by the father of a young woman until the young woman is brought to the house by the young man's father for a wedding. Much wealth is the goal of both fathers. When the doubles begin tiptoeing about seeking escape and the guard begins to follow first one and then the other, some real laughs are introduced.

The stealthy young men are always appearing and disappearing in the most disconcerting manner, as for example when the guard closes the only one he knows of in a closet and turns to see apparently the same man slipping through a door on the other side of the room.—Stuart Gibson.

"Speed"

(Pathe Serial—Fifteen Episodes)

FINDING a name for this rapidly moving chapter play, must have been the only easy task connected therewith, since the first three episodes show indications of hard, painstaking and diligent application. However, "Speed" is right, for there is not a moment in the first six reels that something is not happening at a breath-taking pace, and every lightning-like move has some direct bearing upon the story.

Charles Hutchinson "out-stunts" himself in swift movement and when it comes to fighting his way through outnumbered thugs, detectives, and various obstacles, "Speed" illustrates how he earned the appropriate nickname and why it was given the photoplay with Mr. Hutchinson, as the hero.

Director George B. Seitz has kept the rest of his company on an even tempo with the star, with the result that an instantaneous interest is aroused, which, to the end of the third episode holds on like a hungry leach. While the happenings and thrills are typical of the serial, yet the fights and scenes showing "Speed" making miraculous escapes from death-traps, are not altogether divorced from logic, and Bertram Millhouse has provided a continuity that leaves the thread of the story at a point compelling curiosity, at the fade out of each episode.

"Speed" Stanbury, heir to large fortune, is in love with Lucy Durant, plucky girl the kind of partner "Speed" would need in life, to keep up with him. The first thrill is when these two are driving to the Country Club and rescue a child playing on the railroad track, with a training rushing fast upon the baby victim. "Speed" steps on the accelerator, and while his car is going at a dangerous pace, consigns the wheel to Lucy. Then "Speed" make a leap for the front of the engine, rides the cowcatcher and grabs the child from the jaws of death just in time.

From that moment things happen in such swift succession that it would be impossible to relate them in sequence. "Speed" is accused of attempting to assault his uncle and guardian but can prove his innocence by an alibi to which only one man can swear. Learning that the man has gone to South America, "Speed" shows how fast he thinks and moves when a patrol of plain clothes men fail to catch him, as he scrambles over roofs, in and out of a huge chimney, and finally embarks on a boat, bound for the tropics. Lucy, keeping in touch with the situation, takes "Speed's" valet, and goes too.

There is a production behind this serial with a worthy cast and the kind of direction that is needed to save many ill-fated "features" from doom. A few more serials like "Speed" and the Chapter play is bound to hold its own with cinema attractions that keep the man in the box office busy.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Ancient Rome"

(Fox Educational—One Reel)

ALL of the well known features of ancient Rome, and some not so well known, are covered in this interesting and instructive reel. It opens with an animated map, showing the extent of the Roman Empire at its height. This is followed by views of the Pantheon, the Coliseum, the Forum and various of the monuments left by the Caesars.

These ruins have been well photographed, and a considerable amount of pictorial beauty has been obtained. The titling has been handled in a clean cut manner, so that they impart a considerable amount of information without being especially pedantic. The average person seeing this film will probably have a better idea of ancient Rome than most Cook's tourists obtain.—L. C. MOEN.

"The Landlubber"

(Hal Roach—Two Reels)

COMEDY of conventional design, still fast moving and sufficiently original to be refreshing is contained in this production. Paul Parrott plays the part of a fond lover who, after various vicissitudes gets his lady fair aboard a yacht which he has chartered, only to find that the belligerent captain has shanghaied for a crew his deadly rival and the father of his affinity. He uses the captain as a club to force them to keep hands off him, but the worthy skipper falls overboard and then the owner-lover has a heck of a time. But it all turns out pleasantly.—STUART GIBSON.

"Take the Next Car"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

THIS isn't as funny as it could have been. Most of the action centers in the efforts of the conductor of a mule-drawn car to get the vehicle moving, and his eventual success in overcoming the competition of an automobile jitney. By doing so of course he wins the girl of his dreams and is given the franchise of the one-horse, one-car line as her dower. It appears at times that comedies are being turned out with greater attention to quantity production and getting released on the right date than on quality. The children may like this a good deal, however.—STUART GIBSON.

"The Farmer and His Cat"

(Pathe-Aesop's Film Fables—2/3 Reel)

CLEVERLY done cartooning is this one, which tells of the cat that wouldn't be got rid of, no matter how much the miserable farmer tried. Cartoon pictures allow of a grotesqueness of caricature obviously impossible in comedies in which human beings participate, and as a consequence there is a bizarre humor about them that brings laughs on its own account. The conclusion of this picture, in which the cat after a series of horrifying escapes from death is apparently dashed to destruction, only to produce something like 40 kittens and chase the farmer, is pretty sure to leave the crowd laughing.—STUART GIBSON.

Official Movie Chat No. 31

(Urban—One Reel)

THE latest issue of Urban Movie Chats describes the unique way in which the populace of a part of Cincinnati go to their homes. Those who live on the "Heights," an exclusive residential section of the city, must needs reach the height of their home environments by the elevator.

Another section shows how a resourceful dairyman in Georgia, under the impression that cows enjoy music, placed a phonograph in his meadow and put on the record "The Cows are in the Clover," at the conclusion of said open air concert, the owner reports that the cows returned to their barns, "all in excellent spirits and gave better milk than ever."

"Learn a little every day" is an old adage, one which illustrates that part of the reel of chat which informs that there are special laboratories maintained by the U. S. Bureau of Agriculture for experiments with ripe fruit in behalf of public safety.

There is a bird of prey that seeks the most secluded places in the woodlands, known as the "horned owl," the name indicating two feathery tufts springing from the sides of its head. The ornithologist sets himself a task when he goes in quest of a species, a sort of unique adventure on his part in behalf of science.

Concluding with showing the process of manufacture of whole wheat bread, this "chat" is an animated bit of film conversation.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Pardon My Glove"

(Educational—Two Reels)

A comedy based upon a hopeless college career. Jimmie Carter, played by Bobby Vernon, finds it hard to study, since it takes so much time from his athletic training. Finally, the faculty decide that the school can do without Jimmie and his father, having read of said son's ability to bout, writes that he needn't come home.

But Jimmie's reputation as a fighter has come to the attention of a professional manager, one with a daughter. This man's idea of staging a bout is to employ one man on whom he can depend to lose, so he offers Jimmie the job.

The second reel is devoted to the fight, when Jimmie finds that his own father is among the spectators, besides the pretty daughter of his manager, he decides it is up to him to win, regardless of any arrangement. This shows the ring, and all the atmosphere that goes with a boxing match, and runs in mighty fast style, spreading laughs along the way. It is well directed and well titled, while a cast has been selected to support the featured player, that is entirely adequate.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Thrills and Spills"

(Fox Educational—One Reel)

THIS reel, prepared by the Fox Educational department, presents a splendid array of winter sport scenes of every sort.

It opens at St. Moritz, France, where ice sports are in full swing. From these general scenes, the interest is narrowed down to the various sports in turn. These include skating, with some fancy dancing on skates, skii jumping, always good for a thrill, tobogganing, and the like.

The closing portion of the picture, showing ice boating, combines beauty and "kick" to an unusual degree.

The photography is capable and the reel is intelligently titled. This release should prove very satisfactory on almost any program.—L. C. MOEN.

"The Speeder"

(Educational—Two Reels)

AN up-to-the minute comedy, one that is really funny beginning with the description of the different kinds of automobiles of to-day and some of the people who ride in them, finally showing Lloyd Hamilton feeling very important in a new flivver, for which, the subtitle informs, he has spent his life-savings. When the comedian attempts to park the little car, the fun begins and it keeps right on rolling along wherever the wheels of the vehicle run. When prevented from parking his car in front of the fire-house, Lloyd finds a way to make room. He turns in an alarm and soon the street is deserted, so that he may park in comfort.

Along comes the "Sheik of Avenue B," who has an eye on the pretty cashier of a restaurant, upon whom Lloyd, also, looks with favor. Their presence complicates matters for Lloyd, who finds it difficult to make an impression with his motor driven property. He happens along where a ballyhoo artist is describing the uses of frog liniment. A frog lights on Lloyd's bare head and remains under his cap when he puts it on, which causes feminine passers-by to think he is politely raising his hat to them. With the consequence, that Lloyd is followed by a bevy of anything but beauties. One of the funniest things, which, by the way is more or less of a novelty, is when a shot is fired and punctures the oil tank on Lloyd's flivver. As he drives on, the leaking oil becomes ignited, and follows the trail until the car stops while Lloyd examines a display of fireworks, when there is a general blow up with many funny incidents involved. This is one of the best slapstick comedies in which Lloyd has appeared.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Amsterdam and Ahlkoom"

(Hy Mayer Travelaugh—One Reel—Distributed Through Film Booking Offices of America, Inc.)

HY MAYER continues to maintain the high standard of these novel releases in this subject, dealing with Holland life. He has an unusual faculty for seizing upon the interesting and novel features of a city, and through his clever combination of cartoon animation and straight photography manages to inject a good bit of clean comedy.

This issue deals particularly with the cities of Amsterdam and Ahlkoom. The unique construction of the former, which rests on piles, is shown, and picturesque views of the streets, Dutch types, and the like, make interesting material. Ahlkoom is a cheese manufacturing center, and unusual views of the handling of cheese, well interspersed with comedy, are included.

This is a high class release, and should please almost any audience.—L. C. MOEN.

"You and Me"

(Universal—Two Reels)

THE Century Kids make a charming little comedy of this, and incidentally show themselves entirely fearless so far as water is concerned. The children really "act" and their entire naturalness and freedom from constraint is refreshing after the efforts of many of their elders in the profession. "You and Me" is the story of a kid love affair, with a villain and a vamp and a bold, brave rescue of the "cheeld," in this case a doll, from a watery grave.

During the rescue nearly everybody gets stuck in the mud. Some tedious horseplay by a group of typical "comedy" lifesavers is introduced, but in spite of this the picture sparkles like the little gem it is.—Stuart Gibson.

"Easy Pickin'"

(Crescent Comedy—Two Reels—Released Through East Coast Prod.)

Director Bruce Mitchell has worked with a free hand in producing "Easy Pickin'." Many excellent locations have been obtained and the sets are all that could be desired. Vernon Walker, the cameraman, has taken full advantage of the material offered.

Although the story includes several familiar situations, new gags have been introduced to freshen them up.

Jack Richardson plays the part of a wealthy orange grower. His three assistants, attired in dress suits and woolly chaps, shoot down the oranges with revolvers. One of them, being cross-eyed, is unable to hit them, and he gives him a double-barreled shotgun. As a result, he is caught in a veritable cloudburst of oranges.

Precisely at four, they stop for tea. Among the guests is his fiancée, played by Vera Reynolds. He writes his father for permission to marry her, but his father receives a picture of the maid (Gale Henry) instead, and sends a lawyer and three attractive girls to break up the match at once. Meanwhile, they elope, and when the matrimonial wrecking crew arrives, all sorts of complications ensue. A promising comedian is introduced in the person of "Fatty" Karr.—L. C. MOEN.

"That Son of a Sheik"

(Educational—Two Reels)

THIS is a travesty upon the popularity of the type of man familiarly known as "The Sheik," such as the hero in the widely read book and the characterization of the love bandit, as seen in the screen version.

The comedy has to do with a "Sheik-struck" girl, who is so infatuated with the character, that she makes life miserable for her fiancé. The girl's father is another victim of the "Sheik malady," since her mother is another enthusiast.

The older masculine head lays a plan for curing the women folk of the "Sheiks" and takes the prospective son-in-law into his confidence. They employ a motion picture outfit, on location, to make a picture and cast the younger man in the role of the Arab, with a view to winning back the strayed affections of the girl, while the father sets a trap to bring the mother back to earth, by playing a few "Sheik" tricks, himself.

Neal Burns is the neglected hero who becomes a picture actor, while Viora Daniel is the girl who is responsible for the happenings. The comedy is rapid, clean and teems with laughter.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Apartment Wanted"

(Universal—Two Reels)

THIS comedy deals with a janitor, his wife and five graduated offspring. Lee Moran becomes a janitor after he is unable to find an apartment satisfying to his wife. Their quarters in the basement are no more agreeable to her, and Moran begins a campaign of terrorism among the tenants in an effort to make the occupants of any suitable apartment vacate. There is considerable rough-and-tumble as a consequence. None of it is likely to cause hysterics in the audience, but there is enough real fun to make it worthy of the name "comedy." Some of the ideas, among them the saving by each tenant of his most treasured possession when Moran raises a false cry of fire, are worked out well for the humor in them.—STUART GIBSON.

Fooling the Public an Injurious Policy :

IN reviewing the many evils that are constantly besetting the motion picture industry, Harry M. Warner contends that the attempt by theatre owners and producers and distributors to fool the public with false advertising relative to a picture not only helps to kill off theatre patronage but also immeasurably hurts the industry.

"If the producers and distributors of pictures continue to splurge smooth but false facts about a picture, this industry will gradually lose its popularity in the eyes of the theatre going public," said Mr. Warner. "For when this sort of advertising is carried on incessantly, and the picture does not back up the statements made in the newspaper and trade press, the succeeding ads will thereby lose their force and conviction."

"It simply means that when a real box-office attraction comes along, all the smooth phrasing and ballyhooing will do it no good. Because the public has become used to the same line of advertising, because it feels that in the past that same advertising did not truthfully tell about a picture, the public pays no attention to future announcements. Now more than ever before in the history of the business is there a greater need for sane and truthful advertising in both the newspapers and the trade press.

"We have dedicated ourselves to exhibitor co-operation, and in rendering this co-operation we will not wilfully mislead exhibitors into the belief that what is hailed as white will turn out to be black. In other words, our policy will be rigidly adhered to as far as our advertising and publicity copy is concerned. When we are truthfully sold on the merits of our features, we will truthfully tell both exhibitors and public about it.

"The seven pictures we will release this fall are, in my estimation, worthy of the highest commendation because each and every one of them contains the big essentials needed for big box-office attractions. Merely a glance at the list of our pictures, the names of the screen players, the scenario writers, and the directors we have engaged for these films, will convince the most skeptical person that the Warner pictures are indeed worthy of all the praise that can be bestowed upon them.

"This contention to the unknowing will at once seem superficial, but those who will stop to look over the names of the representative theatre owners and prominent exchanges that have contracted for our entire series of pictures will be firmly convinced that these pictures will be given first run showing in all the large theatres throughout America.

"To help maintain the public confidence in the motion picture, to help theatre owners derive the maximum results from these attractions, we will constantly endeavor to inform them of the salient features and truthful facts concerning each and every one of our productions. Let us have more advertising in the trade press and in the newspapers, but let that advertising spell real worth in the eyes of those who have made our industry what it is today the fourth in industrial importance.

Albert Warner

Warner Production Plans for 1923

By Harry M. Warner

EIGHTEEN big pictures is our production goal for 1923!

And each one of these productions will be made with the best talent available in the industry—meaning, that we will engage the best directors, the best screen players and the best known scenario writers to whip our stories into shape.

All of the eighteen pictures will be made from books and plays which, when made known, will startle the industry. I say this without exaggeration. And I'll back up any assertion I make.

As has been announced to the trade press, the forthcoming series of seven Warner Brothers' pictures have been made from seven popular stories. Each work is known to thousands of people, and the reading percentage of the entire series runs into the millions. Furthermore, the men behind the stories, from the novelist to the directors, the players and the scenario writers, have a following that also runs into the millions.

"We are not only striving to produce money-making attractions, but we have also dedicated ourselves to exhibitor co-operation. By co-operation I mean that we leave no stones unturned in helping the showmen of the country with publicity and advertising suggestions from the time he books the picture until the time he shows it to his patrons.

An instance of the wide scope of our publicity and exploitation campaigns to aid exhibitors can be evidenced from the fact that we are sending a huge float containing the names of our seven productions from New York direct to California. This stunt is unprecedented ed in the history of motion pictures. And to say that it will help those exhibitors who will play our pictures is putting it mildly.

We have joined the Will H. Hays organization and we are glad to be with him in helping to restore the public confidence in motion pictures and in the industry in general. We believe that he is wielding a powerful weapon in developing the educational as well as the entertainment value and general usefulness of the motion picture in the eyes of the public. And in advocating the diffusion of accurate and reliable information about the motion picture, in making known the great scope of this wonderful medium for the transmission of clean, wholesome and instructive ideas, he is performing a great service to the industry and the great American public.

And that is why we joined Mr. Hays.

"Rags to Riches" Release Is Announced

WARNER BROTHERS announce "Rags to Riches," a Harry Rapf production featuring Wesley Barry, as their first of seven fall releases. The picture was given a preview presentation at the Symphony theatre, Venice, Cal., and it is said to have been accorded an unusual reception by both the critics and the public.

Here's the first review of the picture by Art Meyer in the Los Angeles Motion Picture Bulletin:

"Warner Brothers have scored another triumph in 'Rags to Riches,' their latest Wesley Barry feature. It is a splendid production with a wonderful moral. It is one of the few pictures that have been produced recently that really gives you something to think about. A much misinterpreted definition gives the picture a splendid moral. Webster gives as his definition for Riches: Wealth, Opulence, Plenty, Abundance. But how many of us define RICHES with just one word, and that is MONEY.

"Wesley Barry's parents (in the play) are indeed monied people but Wesley is far from rich. They try to bring him up as a much pampered, molly-coddled youngster but the desire to be a real honest-to-goodness, red-blooded, HE boy prevails and in spite of a high fence, tutors and servants, Wesley makes his get-away and before the story proceeds many reels, we find our poor little rich boy one of the roughest roughnecks that has ever been pictured in a Diamond Dick novel. And after the child has disappeared and the old folks are left alone with their thoughts they realize their grave mistake in not allowing their child to grow up as children should—to play and romp with other boys, to enjoy the games and sports of other boys; and in their misery they decided they are poor indeed.

"The picture does not lack thrills. One scene that shows Wesley and his pal on a railroad trestle in a machine with a train approaching them rapidly, furnishes some hair-raising feats. Wesley and his pal jump from the machine into the river below and the picturization is most vivid. There is some excellent camera work here."

Wesley Barry is supported by a popular cast which includes Niles Welch, Russell Simpson, Ruth Renick, Richard Tucker, Minna Ferry Redman, Eulalie Jensen, Gilbert Clayton, Elaine Manning, "Snitz" Edwards and Lillian Leeds.

"Rags to Riches" was directed by Wallace Worsley, and it was adapted for the screen by Walter De Leon and William Nigh from the book and stage play of the same name written by Charles A. Taylor.

Independent Producers Elevating Standards

By Sam and Jack Warner

THE encouragement of the independent producers is tending to elevate the motion picture to its greatest and highest standard, according to Sam and Jack Warner, members of the Warner Brothers organization, who are producing a number of the forthcoming series of seven Warner pictures. Both Sam and Jack have been allied with the industry since its infancy, and during this period they have found that the smaller producing companies are helping to maintain the excellent standard of motion picture production.

"Since 1918 the smaller producers of pictures have had a hard struggle," say Sam and Jack Warner. "But the earnest endeavor to bring forth high class money-making features has been very successful indeed. In 1918 the picture business was being rapidly cornered by the big producing organizations. Had their aims been accomplished, the small producers would have been forced out of business, and the market would have been cluttered with only a few brands of films.

"These films, good or bad, would have been foisted on the public and no doubt patronized because the public demands and must have entertainment. Today, however, due to the fact that the big companies could not monopolize the industry, the exhibitors realize that the small producing units are turning out pictures which more than meets with public approval. And the standard is ever soaring upward toward bigger and better productions.

Jack L. Warner

"The smaller producing companies have one big advantage over the larger concerns, and that is the personal contact between the producer and the director and the actual filming of the pictures. This advantage has proved its worth, for the simple reason that every successful producer has studied the public's demand and knows what will satisfy their amusement appetites.

"In short, the producer is on the ground from the day the picture is started up to and including the day the film is shipped from the cutting room ready for exhibition. This fact is proved when we consider the working methods of a genius like David Belasco. When Belasco stages a production for the legitimate stage, the public throngs to the box-office because they know they can expect something unusual, because Belasco has consistently satisfied the public with his plays.

"Briefly, he has created an international reputation by catering to and studying the wants of the public. And he has done this simply because he personally looks after every detail in the staging and producing of a play.

"Another change that has served for the betterment of the industry is the eradication of mob scenes and large mammoth structures in picture making. The spectacular photoplay has given way to the picture that has actors of ability, and a story that is delightfully clean and wholesome. The public has been educated to the point where quality and not quantity is the main factor. The producers that fight shy of artificial structures, the producers that avoid a melange of mob scenes, but instead center their efforts in pictures that are really entertaining—these same producers will always keep going and they will always find a ready market for their productions."

Rapf for Big Productions

By Harry Rapf

HARRY RAPF, who is producing three productions for the Warner Brothers, namely, "From Rags to Riches," and "Little Heroes of the Street," both featuring Wesley Barry and "Brass," the Charles G. Norris novel of marriage and divorce featuring Marie Prevost, is firm in the conviction that the coming season will witness the production of the biggest pictures ever made in the history of the industry.

"The coming season will mark the release of the biggest pictures yet produced," said Mr. Rapf. "For the past year the pictures released have been only of the program standard, not big enough to cause comment and just fair in their entertainment value—that is, with the exception of a few special features from a comparatively few companies; but now the producers have broken away from the blue booked standards of production and are launching forth into the making of pictures which, although they do not run according to the rule book, will be of greater value both to the theater and the makers.

"Every scenario writer and every director," continued Mr. Rapf, "is following one light and the motto seems to be 'Good stories well directed.' There was a time when to mention the cost of a picture was to sell it, but now that the motion picture business is becoming established, systematic business pictures that would have cost $500,000 a year or two ago can now be made for half that amount for the reason that there is no waste. There is now a keen rivalry between the motion picture companies not to outspend the other people but to turn out a picture that the public will flock to see, for the least amount possible without sacrificing it in any way.

"After looking over the list of pictures scheduled for production and release and seeing many previews, it strengthens my conviction that there will be pictures on the market this coming season that will exceed all previous years both in amusement value and box office drawing power."

Warner Product Sold Throughout Country

THE entire series of seven forthcoming Warner Brothers productions made from popular novels and stage plays have been sold solid throughout the country, according to Harry M. Warner. An unprecedented feature of the negotiations is that the seven pictures have not all been completed, and this is said to indicate in no small measure the confidence placed by the buyers of the films in the Warner Brothers.

The seven features include "Rags to Riches" and "Little Heroes of the Street," both starring Wesley Barry; "The Beautiful and Damned," featuring Marie Prevost; "Brass," starring Marie Prevost; "Main Street," the novel by Sinclair Lewis; "A Dangerous Adventure," featuring Grace Darmond, and "The Little Church Around the Corner," by Marion Russell.

The names of the purchasers of the pictures include: Balaban and Katz, Rubin and Kinkelstein, A. H. Blank Enterprises, The H. Lieber Company, J. S. Skirboll, Skouras Brothers Enterprises, Associated First National Pictures of New Jersey, Independent Film Corporation, Philadelphia; Warner's Exchange, Detroit; Big Feature Rights, Louisville, Ky.; The Standard Productions Co., Atlanta; Creole Enterprises, New Orleans; Tri-State Film Exchange, Minneapolis; Franklin Film Co., Boston; S. and O. Picture Corporation, San Francisco; Kwaluty Pictures, Seattle; A. L. Kahn Film Enterprises, Kansas City, Mo.; Skirboll Gold Seal Productions, Cleveland; W-B Film Exchange, New York; Specialty Film Co., Dallas, Texas, and Regal Films Ltd., Toronto.

Huge Float to Tour From Coast to Coast

WHAT is probably the most striking advertising stunt that has been evolved in the industry was launched last week by Eddie Bonns, director of advertising and publicity for Warner Brothers, and his assistant, Lou Marangella, for the forthcoming series of seven Warner pictures.

The advertising stunt is a huge float with seven books mounted on a truck. The float is thirteen feet high, and the total length of the seven books is seventeen feet. The books are in striking colors, and the names of the seven pictures are emblazoned on both sides of the truck.

This huge float will make a tour of the country, beginning in New York and ending in California. On the tour will be a driver for the truck, and a publicity man, who will visit every mayor and governor along the route, carrying with him a letter of introduction from Will H. Hays and Mayor Hylan of New York.

An unusual number of publicity stunts will be put over, and it is conservatively estimated that about 25,000,000 people will see the float display of the Warner pictures. In this respect it will exceed the circulation of the largest and best-known national magazine published in America.

The seven productions to be advertised by the float include

Warner Brothers have launched this huge float, which will tour from New York to Los Angeles. Insert: Eddie Bonns and Lou Marangella, Advertising Manager and Publicity Director respectively, of Warner Brothers, who planned the stunt.

"Rags to Riches," and "Heroes of the Street," both with Wesley Barry; "The Beautiful and Damned," by Scott Fitzgerald; "Main Street," by Sinclair Lewis; "Brass," by Charles G. Norris; "A Dangerous Adventure," with Grace Darmond, and "Little Church Around the Corner," by Marion Russell.

The truck will be equipped with a radio amplifier, and reports of current news events and concerts will be given at street corners in the various cities visited. Also, a portable projector will be used on the tour, and during the evening trailers of the Warner pictures will be shown to the public.

The publicity man will visit the Chamber of Commerce and the Rotary Clubs in the various cities, and he will give a talk on the idea of the trip relative to its usefulness as a means of stimulating interest in clean pictures as advocated by Mr. Hays.

The float will tour through New York city for one week, after which it will make a trip to Boston and come back to New York. Then it will proceed direct to the Warner Brothers west coast studios. The route outlined is as follows:

From New York to Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Toledo, Columbus, Cincinnati, Terra Haute, Indianapolis, Chicago, Milwaukee, return to Chicago, Davenport, Des Moines, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Cheyenne to Denver, Salt Lake City, across the desert to San Bernardino, Los Angeles, San Francisco and return to Los Angeles.

Upon the completion of the tour the return route, which in all probability will encompass the south and southwest, will be mapped out at the Warner coast studios.

Warner Brothers Announce Fall Releases

THE roster of seven productions to be released by the Warner Brothers for the coming season includes three Harry Rapf productions, and four Warner features, directed by prominent directors and adapted by well known scenario writers from seven popular books and stage plays. A group of prominent screen players were engaged to interpret the varied roles for each production.

"Rags to Riches," featuring Wesley Barry, is announced for release in September. This is a Harry Rapf production, directed by Wallace Worsley and adapted from the stage play and book of Charles A. Taylor by William Nigh and Walter De Leon.

Barry is featured in what is declared to be one of the finest roles of his screen career. He is supported by an exceptional cast of players including Niles Welch, Ruth Renick, Russell Simpson, Richard Tucker, Nina D. Redman, Eulalie Jensen, Elaine Manning, Gilbert Clayton and "Snitz" Edwards.

"The Beautiful and Damned," with Marie Prevost and Kenneth Harlan in the leading roles, is named as the second release. S. L. and Jack Warner produced the picture. E. Mason Hopper directed, and Olga Printzlau adapted it for the screen.

The combination of director, scenario writer and producer of F. Scott Fitzgerald's widely read and discussed novel dealing with the modern flapper is said to have brought forth an unusual box office attraction. It is a picture which reveals in a vivid, entertaining and truthful manner the stirring conflict of two souls in the mesh of wealth and social gaiety.

"Brass," the Charles G. Norris novel of marriage and divorce, features Marie Prevost. It is a Harry Rapf production, directed by Sidney Franklin who has been responsible for "Smilin' Through," "East Is West," and many other screen successes. Monte M. Katterjohn adapted the story for the screen.

The Norris novel is enjoying a tremendous vogue among the fiction reading public, and hundreds of thousands of copies have been sold by the publishers. Its appeal is nation-wide, in that it serves to present in an absorbing manner the conditions which make or destroy marriage.

"Heroes of the Street," starring Wesley Barry, is a Harry Rapf production directed by William Beaudine. The book and stage by Lem Parker has enjoyed years of undiminished popularity. The setting of the story is the colorful and romantic slum section of New York, and it graphically and realistically portrays the trials and tribulations of the ironic and humorous side of the seething pot of humanity.

In the cast supporting Barry are Marie Prevost, Jack Mulhall, Wilfred Lucas, Philo McCullough, Wedgewood Nowell, Aggie Herron, Will Walling, Phil Ford, "Peaches" Jackson, and Joe Butterworth. The story was adapted for the screen by Edmund Goulding, Mildred Conisidine and Isabel Johnston.

"A Dangerous Adventure," featuring Grace Darmond, is hailed as a monumental, spell-binding story of strange adventure in the African jungles. Thousands of wild animals, and thousands of natives against the background of the jungles are said to furnish a veritable feast of electric action.

The production was made by S. L. and Jack Warner, and the story was written by Frances Guihan.

"Grandma's Boy" Has Extended Run at Strand

"GRANDMA'S BOY," scheduled as a single week's run for the Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors super-attraction at the Mark Strand Theatre was less than half finished when Joseph Plunkett, managing director, announced the continuation of the run during a second week. Hence, "Grandma's Boy," which opened on Broadway September 3rd, is still there.

"The house has been packed every afternoon and every night since the engagement began," declares Mr. Plunkett. "The attendance has smashed — not merely broken — the record for this time of the year. It may have done more than that. I shall have to wait for the complete figures before I can tell the extent of this Harold Lloyd success."

Katherine Grant in Beauty Contest

The Hal Roach Studios comedy producing forces at Culver City, Cal., are reported to be very proud of having supplied "Miss Los Angeles" for the National Beauty Contest held at Atlantic City. She is Katherine Grant, eighteen years old, and for the past six months has lived up to her successful debut with that organization as a comedy stock player.

Combined beauty of form and face, according to the group of artists who made the selection of a Los Angeles candidate, caused the prize to be bestowed on Miss Grant. She is a good swimmer and is noted for her graceful dancing. Harold Lloyd showed his personal approval of the judges' choice by posing with "Miss Los Angeles" at the request of West Coast newspapers for photographs which have been widely printed.

Toronto News About Century Comedies

The Griffen Circuit composed of 12 theatres in Toronto, Canada, has signed for the entire output of Century comedies. These theatres include some of the finest in the province of Ontario.

The National Toronto Exhibition with an attendance reported at about 100,000 daily booked a Century comedy for the last and most important week of the fair. The picture was "Radio Hounds" starring Brownie the Century wonder dog and posters announced it as being the premier showing of the picture in Canada.

"Kindred of the Dust" Liked

Walsh Production, with Miriam Cooper, Approved by the Los Angeles Critics

"KINDRED OF THE DUST," the R. A. Walsh production with Miriam Cooper as the star, which is being released through First National, received praise from the motion picture critics of the Los Angeles newspapers when it was shown at the Kinema theatre there. Following is the substance of what they wrote:

George Marion, Jr., Examiner—In the film version of Peter B. Kyne's novel, "Kindred of the Dust," Mr. Walsh has succeeded admirably in bringing to the screen every pictorial value in this straightforward story.

Los Angeles Herald—"Kindred of the Dust," an R. A. Walsh film version of Peter B. Kyne's famous novel of that name, is all that can be asked. It was well received by the spectators, who found in its North woods scenes refreshment from the Summer heat.

Los Angeles Record—Suspense and interest are held throughout the picture. Each director in the story of the lumber mill town of Washington is admirably cast. Raoul Walsh, who directed the production, has carried out every detail of the picture with extreme care.

William Foster Elliott in The Times—Beautiful in detail it certainly is, "Kindred of the Dust" contains many fine shots of forest and sea and is on the whole entertaining.

Release Two Serials in Month

Universal Announces "Radio King" and "Days of Buffalo Bill" for Sept.

THE release of two serials in a single month, an innovation in Universal's serial release policy, has been brought about by a complex situation. Among the factors which determined the new departure are the general film situation this fall, and also the subject matter of the chapter-plays concerned.

"In the Days of Buffalo Bill," is a story of the Indian fighting days of America's empire builders. It is a 36-reel drama of events from American history, woven into a romance. The picture is said to have an especial appeal for children, and to be adaptable for schools and colleges in the study of history. Its September release is timed with the opening of schools throughout the country.

"In the Days of Buffalo Bill" was directed by Edward Leammle.

"The Radio King," starring Roy Stewart, is the second serial for September release. Being both educational and instructive, its release at the beginning of the school year affords the exhibitor another strong tie-up between his theatre and the local class-rooms. It is constructed around the development and projected progress of the present radio craze, and is expected to have a strong appeal for radio "fans" throughout the country.

"The Radio King" was directed by Robert F. Hill from a story of his own. Roy Stewart is the star, supported by Louise Lorraine.

"While Satan Sleeps" Ready

Paramount Will Release Jack Holt Feature and "Siren Call" Sept. 18

FOR September 18, Paramount announces as its feature releases Jack Holt in "While Satan Sleeps," and an Irvin Willat production, "The Siren Call," with Dorothy Dalton.

"While Satan Sleeps" is an adaptation of "The Parson of Panamint," one of Peter B. Kyne's earlier and most popular novels. The scenario is by Albert Shelby Le Veno and Joseph Henabery directed.

Playing opposite Holt is Fritz Brunette who makes her first appearance for Paramount as leading woman. Betty Francisco plays an ingenue role and character parts are played by Mabel Van Buren, Wade Boteler, J. P. Lockney, Will R. Walling, Fred Huntly, Bobby Mack, Sylvia Ashton and Herbert Standing.

"The Siren Call," the picture in which Dorothy Dalton is featured, with David Powell and Mitchell Lewis as leading support, is a story of the Far North by J. E. Nash, who wrote the scenario in collaboration with Philip Hurn. The producer, Irvin Willat, is noted as the director of "The Grim Game," "Behind the Door" and "Below the Surface," all Paramount pictures.

Plum Center Series to Play Eastman

The Eastman theatre, of Rochester, N. Y., the new four million dollar temple of the motion picture which opened recently in that city, will show the entire series of Plum Center comedies, which are being released through Film Booking Offices of America.

These comedies, which are produced by the Paul Gerson Pictures corporation of San Francisco and in which Dan Mason is starred, were booked by Mr. Eastman himself, builder of the mammoth playhouse, after he had seen the first three of the series, including "Pop Tuttle's Movie Queen" which ran at the George M. Cohan theatre, New York, in connection with "In the Name of the Law" and "Pop Tuttle's Clever Catch" which was presented by Dr. Hoge Reisenfeld at the Rialto theatre, New York.

Fighters' Pictures Are in Montana Comedy

Jack Dempsey, Benny Leonard and other well known figures in the boxing world appear in Bull Montana's new comedy, "A Punctured Prince," which Hunt Stromberg is producing for Metro. They do not appear in person but in pictures hung on the walls of the short order restaurant in which Bull portrays the part of the chef.

All these ring notables are personal friends of Mr. Montana. He appeared in a serial thriller with Leonard, the lightweight champion, and he worked out daily at Atlantic City with Dempsey when the latter was preparing to defend his heavyweight crown against Georges Carpentier last year. "Strangler" Lewis, Joe Stecher, Earl Caddock, noted wrestlers, are among Bull's athletic friends.

All the pictures on the walls of the restaurant were taken from honored positions in the comedy star's dressing room.

Melford Brings Company East for Production

Director George Melford, Waldemar Young, scenarist, Leatrice Joy, Jacqueline Logan, Raymond Hatton, and members of Melford's production unit arrive Monday from the west coast to begin production of "Java Head," Joseph Hergesheimer's novel, at the Paramount Long Island studio.

Work on the picture will begin immediately with the company going to Salem, Mass., where exterior scenes will be taken. Some of the Oriental scenes already have been photographed on the west coast.

Paramount Signs Jacquelin Logan

BECAUSE of her work in "Burning Sands," Jacquelin Logan has been added to Paramount's list of permanent players, Jesse L. Lasky announces that a five year contract has been signed with Miss Logan.

Miss Logan also will appear among the featured players of Mr. Melford's new picture, "Ebb Tide" the other being Lila Lee, James Kirkwood, Raymond Hatton, George Fawcett and Noah Beery.

Shortly Miss Logan will come East with George Melford's company to work in "Java Head," in which she will be featured with Leatrice Joy and Raymond Hatton.

"The Ruling Passion" Praised by Editor

When the George Arliss photoplay, "The Ruling Passion," a United Artists release, was shown recently at the Broadway theatre, South Boston, Mass., it won high editorial praise in the columns of the South Boston Gazette, which said, in part, as follows:

"The Broadway is to be complimented on running such a fine, constructive and wholesome bit of movie entertainment. . . . Readers of this editorial do well to request the theatre to book more picture plays of the calibre of 'The Ruling Passion.' Any who are interested in better plays, will do well to let the local theatres know their opinion. George Arliss, the whimsical and incisively clever screen artist, proves that a movie vehicle may be popular, effective, and amusing without being punk and immoral"

Pauline Garon Engaged by C. B. DeMille

Pauline Garon, who played opposite Richard Barthelmess in "Tol'able David" and "Sonny," has been engaged by Famous Players-Lasky to take one of the leading roles in Cecil B. DeMille's next production for Paramount.

Miss Garon will leave in a few days for Hollywood where Mr. DeMille is already making preparations for the picture in which she will take part. A detailed announcement concerning the nature of the story and the other members of the cast is expected from the producer shortly.

Mabel Bardine and Maxine Alton Join Forces

Mabel Bardine and Maxine Alton have joined forces. They have leased a suite of offices in New York, where Miss Bardine will conduct a casting bureau. Miss Alton will continue to act as representative of authors, having already earned the reputation as a successful play broker in New York.

"Omar the Tentmaker" Finished Elaborate Production Given Persian Romance, by First National Pictures

LATE this week marked the actual filming of the final scene in Guy Bates Post's second screen vehicle for First National release, "Omar, the Tentmaker," an adaptation of Richard Walton Tully's stage play of the same name that served Post on the speaking stage for over four years. "Omar the Tentmaker" will follow "The Masquerader," and like its predecessor, was directed by James Young. It is a colorful story of Persia in the days when Omar Khayyam wrote the Rubaiyat.

In the supporting cast are Virginia Brown Faire, Nigel de Bruliere, Noah Beery, Rose Dione, Patsy Ruth Miller, Douglas Gerard, Brois Karloff, Maurice (Lefty) B. Flynn, Edward M. Kimball, Walter Long, Evelyn Selbis, John Gribner, Will Jim Hatton, George Rigas and Gordon Mullen. Practically each one of these players has been starred in the past, but all worked in supporting characterizations with Post, joining their efforts in a concerted attempt to make this an ideal photoplay.

Director James Young has given "Omar the Tentmaker" the benefit of his wide experience. Settings were designed and executed under the direction of Wilfred Buckland.

A large number of costumes and properties was needed for these great sets and for the hundreds of players who participated in the various scenes. These were all under the direction of Milano Tilden, who has been associated with Mr. Post for many years as his stage manager. Francois Nazare Aga was the Persian expert on this film. Georges Benoit, who photographed "The Masquerader," was in charge of the cinematographic corps; while John Ellis, a well known Eastern photographer, made the special production stills.

"Oliver Twist" Pressbook Large Nearly 100 Pages of Exploitation Advertising and Publicity Material

The exhibitor booking Jackie Coogan's "Oliver Twist" is going to be given what is declared to be the greatest campaign book ever given the film industry. The volume contains approximately 100 pages—each and every one devoted to arguments not to the exhibitor but for the exhibitor. One section of 15 pages is devoted to stunts of exploitation that both the big and little exhibitor can utilize.

Forty pages are devoted to exclusive press stories ranging from paragraph length to full page length and taking into consideration every phase of the Charles Dickens' masterpiece and its noted star and cast.

A gigantic newspaper campaign consumes another eight pages and messages to the exhibitor from the producers, director, musical score compiler, etc., form another important part. Detailed descriptions of the records broken in the world premieres and how they were broken is still another interesting portion.

Several double truck rotogravure sections stand out in the book. A page of accessories that would equal the listing of accessories for ten ordinary productions is also inserted in the book. Complete music score, etc., is also furnished.

To make the volume complete in every detail, the contract for exhibition of "Oliver Twist" is attached to the back of the book. This contract is in four parts, one original and three duplicate copies.

The book was designed and compiled by Harry D. Wilson and Walter Anthony of the Jackie Coogan Productions, Los Angeles.

Christie Announces Comedies

"That Son of a Sheik" is one of Three Ready for Fall Distribution

WHILE two new Christie Comedies have gone into production, the first three pictures of the new series through Educational Film Exchanges are now ready for fall showing.

The first picture, "That Son of a Sheik," has already been announced and in fact, has opened in a number of cities with pre-releases. In the second picture, Bobby Vernon dons fighting trunks and gloves. The comedy is "Pardon My Glove." Vera Steadman, George Pearce, Tommy O'Brien, Zack Williams and Ward Caulfield play the main supporting roles.

The third picture will be a horse-racing story called "Let 'er Run," featuring Dorothy Devore. George Stewart, recently signed by Christie, plays the leading role with Miss Devore. In this picture personally directed by Al Christie, there is promised a great comedy horse-race.

Neal Burns will be featured in "Ocean Swells," which has gone into production at Balboa Beach and the studio under the direction of Scott Sidney. This is a house-boating comedy by Frank R. Conklin. Prominent in the support of Burns will be Sylvia Ashton, borrowed from Paramount Pictures; Charlotte Merriam and Bebe Blackburn, a child of three and a half who does some diving and swimming scenes.

Al Christie has started work on "Choose Your Weapons," a large presentation of comedy characters in a mythical kingdom atmosphere. Bobby Vernon is featured.

Camerman Loses Equipment in Hinton Wreck

EDITOR EMMANUEL COHEN of Pathe News corroborates the statements published in the New York World that Camerman Thomas Baltzell continues with the Lieutenant Hinton party flying to Brazil, as the motion picture maker of "The Log of the SC-2," as the new seaplane has been officially designated. These pictures of land scenes along the route of the flight and of events aboard the plane will be screened in regular issues of Pathe News as fast as the film is received at the New York headquarters.

As reported in George T. Bye's correspondence for the New York World Baltzell lost 10,000 feet of film and most of the rest of his equipment in the wreck of the SC-1.

Famous Dog to Play in "Peg O' My Heart"

Laurette Taylor came to Hollywood to star in the Metro screen version of J. Hartley Manners' famous play, "Peg o' My Heart." Michael, Miss Taylor's Irish terrier who has appeared with her in every performance of the play on the stage, accompanied her to the Coast merely for the trip.

But with the start of production Michael was forced to don his makeup and to take his place, an important one, in the cast. During the first day it took a deal of cajoling on the part of Miss Taylor and Director King Vidor to smooth the dog's ruffled feelings. He soon entered into the spirit of his part and played it as he knew it should be played.

A real effort was made to secure an Irish terrier to take Michael's place. Several were tried out but none proved satisfactory.

Description of Music Scores in Press Sheet

The musical accompaniment arranged by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld for "The Enchanted City," Warren A. Newcombe's love fantasy, when it was shown at the Rivoli theatre in New York, will be full described for the benefit of other exhibitors in the press and exploitation sheet which is being issued by Educational, which is distributing this single-reel subject.

"The Enchanted City" is to be released October 1.

Playgoers Pictures Gets Elinor Glyn Film

Officials of Attractions Distributing Corporation announced this week that that organization has placed its forthcoming feature, "The Man and the Moment," from the novel of that name by Elinor Glyn, with Playgoers Pictures for handling. B. P. Schullberg is president, and J. G. Bachmann, treasurer of Attractions.

"Monte Cristo" Heads Bill in Many Houses

MORE than 100 theatres, representing the most important first run houses and circuits in the country, inaugurated the new motion picture season the week beginning September 3, with unusual programs headed in each instance by "Monte Cristo," the Fox special, which is about to enter the sixth week of its indefinite run at the 44th Street Theatre, New York City.

Numerous reports from many of the houses evidence drawing power of the screen version of Alexandre Dumas' novel. A large number of the theatres are said to have created new box office records with the opening engagement. In New York, where the picture is running at $1.50 prices despite an exceptionally warm summer, many have been the days when S. R. O. sign was hung outside the box office, the producers report.

Lucille Rickson to Play Flapper Role

Lucille Rickson, seen in many Goldwyn photoplays as a child actress, can no longer be classified as such. She has been engaged by Marshall Neilan to act a flapper role in his first production in association with Goldwyn, "The Strangers' Banquet," from Donn Byrne's novel.

Mr. Neilan decided little Miss Rickson was just the flapper type he wants in "The Strangers' Banquet." She will be in distinguished company in this production—Herbert Bosworth, Claire Windsor, Rockliffe Fellowes, Ford Sterling, Eugenia Besserer, Nigel Barrie, Stuart Holmes, Claude Gillingwater, Arthur Hoyt, Cyril Chadwick, Aileen Pringle, Jean Hersholt and others.

Reeves Eason to Direct Universal Serial

Universal announces the selection of Reeves Eason as director for its 'chapter-play,' "Around the World in Eighteen Days," production of which will begin soon.

Mr. Eason has been a director of feature pictures for Universal for a number of years and his appointment as director of this serial is in accordance with the company's announced plan to have all future 'chapter-plays' directed by men who have been successful in feature directing.

Larry Semon Comedies to Open New House

Larry Semon comedies have been booked for the two new Washington, (D. C.) theatres, the Ambassador and the Rivoli. The Ambassador is to occupy the site of the ill-fated Knickerbocker, in the northwest section of the Capitol City.

"Cold Courage" For Billie Dove

Much of Action Laid On High Seas; Irvin Willat to Direct New Star

THE next Metro production in which Billie Dove is to be seen at the head of a distinguished cast is "Cold Courage," a screen version of the powerful sea story by Ben Ames Williams, which was published under the title of "All the Brothers Were Valiant." Irvin Willat has already been selected to direct the picturization of the story.

She will be called upon to demonstrate her ability as a sailorette inasmuch as a great part of the action of the story takes place on the high seas. Mr. Willat is planning to spend several weeks working on a vessel which has been chartered for the picture.

Miss Dove recently completed her work in "Youth to Youth," the first of the Metro special story series of productions, in which she appeared at the head of a distinguished cast. This was an adaptation of Hulbert Footner's story, "Country Love," and was directed by Emile Chautard. It was Miss Dove's first picture for Metro.

Julian Josephson prepared the screen adaptation for "Cold Courage."

Two F. B. O.'s at N. Y. Capitol

DeHaven to Make Personal Appearance at Showing of "Their First Vacation"

THE first Carter DeHaven comedy on the F. B. O. schedule, which has just been issued has been given a reception by the biggest first run houses which equals that of the star himself who is now touring the key cities en route to New York. "Their First Vacation," which introduces Mr. and Mrs. DeHaven in their series of refined domestic comedies is this week running at the Capitol theatre, New York, where it supplements "The Hound of the Baskervilles," another F. B. O. release.

Mr. and Mrs. DeHaven have completed the first five of their series for F. B. O. under the direction of Mal St. Clair and the star's tour of the country is resulting in a great amount of publicity which is expected to prove an excellent advance campaign to precede the first of his new series of comedies.

"Their First Vacation" was given an important place in the billing at the Capitol theatre this week.

The story tells of the adventures of a newly-married couple who spend their first holiday in a large hotel.

The trade paper critics received "Their First Vacation" as a high-class domestic comedy. Lawrence Reid in the Motion Picture News stated that this comedy is a "refined high-class laugh getter, with swift action. It should be a splendid supplement to the program of any first-run house in the country and is easily entitled to a generous space in the billing."

The Carter DeHaven series will be released at intervals of three weeks. Production is already far ahead of release schedule, with four comedies waiting publication. The second, "Twin Husbands," shows the star trying to pose as his own twin brother; "Entertaining the Boss," "Keep 'Em Home" and, for the Holiday season, "Christmas," which tells an amusing story.

Toronto Likes "Two Orphans"

Griffith Production Draws Big Crowds in Canadian Theatres

THE success of D. W. Griffith's production of "Orphans of the Storm" on the occasion of the initial showing in Toronto, Canada, of this United Artists release, has resulted in one more huge theatre being added to the list of motion picture palaces of that city. The Griffith spectacular film was shown at Shea's Hippodrome, formerly devoted exclusively to vaudeville. So great was the success of the engagement that Michael Shea has abandoned his policy of vaudeville and will hereafter display only the larger feature pictures in this house.

The Toronto premier of "Orphans of the Storm" took place the week previous to the opening of the great Canadian National Exhibition in that city. Ordinarily the week before this annual event is a dull one for theatres and other public offerings. Despite this, Mr. Griffith's picture adaptation of the old play "The Two Orphans," and including events of the French Revolution, is said to have broken all attendance records for the city.

In connection with the booking Mr. Shea wrote the following letter to Hiram Abrams, president of United Artists Corporation:

"It is a pleasure to tell you how greatly I am pleased with the receipts we are getting with 'Orphans of the Storm' at my Toronto theatre (Shea's Hippodrome). It is double the business ever done by any former picture production in Toronto."

Following the success of "Orphans of the Storm," Manager Shea showed Lady Diana Manners in "The Glorious Adventure," released by Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation, a United Artists subsidiary organization. This picture will be followed by a number of other noted productions being released by United Artists.

"Ching, Ching, Chinaman" Not Laid in Orient

THE first Tom Forman Production for Preferred Pictures, Inc., for distribution through the Al Lichtman Corporation is "Ching, Ching, Chinaman," which is now being completed on the coast.

The principal members of the cast are Lon Chaney who appears as Yen Sin, Harrison Ford as John Malden, the minister; Marguerite De La Motte as Sympathy Gibbs; John Sainpolis as Nate Snow and Walter Long as Daniel Gibbs.

The story is not an oriental one as the title might indicate, but deals with life in a New England fishing village. Wilbur Daniel Steele, the author, has written a number of stories about a place called Urkey, and "Ching, Ching, Chinaman" is another of that series.

"Captain Blackbird" Filmed in Tahiti

Director R. A. Walsh and the cast filming Carey Wilson's South Sea romance, "Captain Blackbird," are back at the Goldwyn studio from Tahiti where they spent two months at work on the exteriors and ship scenes.

Director Walsh discovered a native girl whom he describes as a Polynesian Pola Negri. She has a small part in "Captain Blackbird" and may be brought to this country for development. Director Walsh and the members of the company say the girl possesses beauty and dramatic ability.

"Captain Blackbird" will be completed, insofar as photography is concerned, within two weeks, after which editing and titling will be begun.

Pathe Predicts Success For New Series

Pathe's statement that it never started a new series of comedies with a better initial release than "One Terrible Day," first of Hal Roach's new "Our Gang" series of two-reelers, is reflected in reports from Branch Managers following their first screening of that picture.

Pathe's announcement of a series of "Our Gang" Comedies for release once every four weeks, supplemented by the acknowledged quality of "One Terrible Day," is said to have stimulated heavy advance bookings of the entire series.

Bobby Vernon Appears in Fighting Clothes

Bobby Vernon dons fighting trunks and gloves in his first Christie Comedy of the season which is called by the lady-like title "Pardon My Glove." Vera Steadman, George Pearce, Ward Caulfield, Tommy O'Brien and "Zack" Williams have leading parts.

F. B. O. to Release Sherlock Holmes Story

BECAUSE of its excellent reception at the Capitol Theatre, New York, where it is this week completing its run, "The Hound of the Baskervilles," a screen version of the Sherlock Holmes novel of the same name, has been scheduled for early release by the Film Booking Offices of America, which is releasing this feature. This production will be offered to exhibitors early in October, and will follow "The Snowshoe Trail," starring Jane Novak, which is the current F. B. O. Release.

Entering the Capitol Theatre with practically no advance advertising, the picture proved the drawing power of its title on the opening day by playing to highly successful Sunday business. The critical comment was universal that this novel makes excellent screen material. In every review the character development of Sherlock Holmes as portrayed by Eille Norwood was commended.

Fox Specials Endorsed By Films Committee

The Better Films Committee of Atlanta, Ga., through its president, Mrs. B. M. Bogkin, issued a statement this week endorsing the first two of the Fox schedule of special productions for this season, to be shown in that city. The endorsement concerns "Silver Wings" with Mary Carr, and "The Fast Mail" with Charles Jones which is an adaptation of Lincoln J. Carter's famous stage play.

Three Christie Comedies Play Minneapolis

Three Christie Comedies played first runs in Minneapolis three weeks in succession, and in that territory, as in practically all of the others, leading downtown theatres are ready for the new fall series. "Any Old Port," played at the State, and was followed by "Mile-a-Minute Mary" at the Blue Mouse and then by "Bucking Broadway" at the Strand.

New Universal Series Coming

Group Named Prosperity Nine is Being Completed For Release This Fall

UNIVERSAL'S new series of features attractions, to be called the "Prosperity Nine," and to be released this fall, is nearing completion at Universal City. One of the nine already has been received in the East, and others are expected next week.

The "Prosperity Nine" is composed of Universal Attractions, made by such stars as Frank Mayo, Lois Wilson, Jack Mulhall, Herbert Rawlinson, Gladys Walton, Hoot Gibson, Colleen Moore, Ralph Graves and Cullen Landis. Universal's best corps of directors has been engaged in turning out these special productions. Carl Laemmle has named the group the Prosperity Nine because he believes the pictures will arrive on the screen simultaneously with a wave of better times.

The pictures, to be released one each week beginning October 23, are "Wolf Law," starring Frank Mayo, directed by Stuart Paton; "Broad Daylight," featuring Lois Wilson, and Jack Mulhall, directed by Irving Cummings; "Another Man's Shoes," starring Herbert Rawlinson, directed by Jack Conway; "The Lavender Bath Lady," a new Gladys Walton feature; Hoot Gibson in "Ridin' Wild;" "The Jilt," an all-star production, directed by Irving Cummings; "The Altar Stairs," starring Frank Mayo; Colleen Moore and Cullen Landis in "Forsaking All Others," directed by Emile Chautard, and "One Wonderful Night," another Herbert Rawlinson feature.

Long Runs for Fox Specials

"Over the Hill" Is Well Liked in Australian Film Theatres

THE advent of the big Fox specials, such as "Over the Hill," "Connecticut Yankee" and "The Queen of Sheba," is causing a change in the methods of the exhibitors in Australia and New Zealand, according to reports from the Fox offices in New York City.

Mr. Fox says that until the advent of these big productions the picture houses had been showing about 16,000 feet of film at each performance, using two features, and the exhibitor was contracting for his films at so much per week, instead of buying each feature, as is done in this country. The rental price of the big picture was so much in advance of the weekly film rental that the city exhibitors were compelled to turn to long runs. With the overwhelming success of "Over the Hill," the first of the big Fox pictures shown, the suburban theatre exhibitors immediately began to clamor against these long city runs, claiming that the short runs should continue, so that they would be able to cash in better with the pictures.

But before the matter came to a head, the suburban exhibitors found that the long city runs caused the suburban patrons to get quite excited over the new picture and that the suburban theatre profited to a greater extent.

The Australasian exhibitors have been shown, and have taken advantage of the American methods of exploitation, going in for extensive newspaper advertising, running three and four column ads half, three-quarters and whole pages deep. They play up in bold type, the fact that "Over the Hill" ran a year on Broadway.

The newspapers in Sydney, Melbourne, Auckland, Wellington and in the smaller cities give the exhibitors excellent support.

Fox is now showing first run in Hoyt's theatre, Sydney, instead of the Empress and the Majestic

The manner in which W. J. Hutchinson, the Fox New York representative in Australasia, got behind the big specials has convinced exhibitors that proper exploitation and plenty of it will get the people into the theatres and bring them big returns.

Meighan on Way East to Make Picture

Immediately after the completion of "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow," Thomas Meighan, Paramount star, left Hollywood Tuesday for New York where he will start work at the Long Island studio in "Back Home and Broke," by George Ade. Director Alfred Green and his staff will follow in a few days, as also will Lila Lee, who has been assigned the leading feminine role, and Laurance Wheat, who will work in the picture.

On his way East Mr. Meighan will stop at the home of Mr. Ade in Indiana for final consultation with the author on this, his second original screen story for the star.

"One Terrible Day" at New York Rivoli

THE new Hal Roach "Our Gang" series of two-reel children and animal comedies made its first appeal to New York audiences at the Rivoli with "One Terrible Day." According to New York newspaper reviewers, "Our Gang" has made an auspicious beginning. The Herald said:

"The outstanding hit of the bill is a rollicking Pathe comedy, 'One Terrible Day,' in which a parcel of kids on an outing do all that they can to wreck the peace."

The World said: "There is an extremely funny comedy film tacked to the bill at the Rivoli called 'One Terrible Day,' dealing with philanthropic women and slum children."

Turpin to Be Seen in Desert Satire

The novel appearance of Ben Turpin, dressed as a Sheik, is one of the many interesting situations in "The Shriek of Araby," a recently completed Mack Sennett comedy special, for First National release.

Ben Turpin presents a ridiculously odd appearance in fez and red pantaloons, with a threatening looking sword dangling at his side. The balance of the cast has been well and carefully chosen.

In "The Shriek of Araby" Ben Turpin assumes a character entirely new. This latest comedy special starring Turpin is now in the cutting and titling department preparatory to early release by First National. It was directed by F. Richard Jones.

Ade Gives Private Showing of "Grandma's Boy"

"Fun, to be appealing, need not be expressed in words." This is the judgment of George Ade, voiced after he had seen "Grandma's Boy." The humorist took steps to arrange a private view for his friends at his home in Brook, Ind.

"The original treatment of all the episodes, direction, characterizations and photography are all very good," said Mr. Ade.

"West of Chicago" Is Said to Be Thriller

CHARLES JONES in "West of Chicago," will be released early in September by the Fox Film Corporation. The story, a western melodrama, is by George Scarborough, the playwright, and is said by the producers to be full of thrills and unusual situations.

Jones, as Conroy Daly, assists in unravelling a murder mystery, performing some surprising stunts in the process and incidentally winning the heroine.

The supporting cast is headed by Renee Adoree and the direction is by Scott Dunlap and C. R. Wallace.

Song and Fox Trot Written for Jackie Coogan

Jackie Coogan now is the hero of a song. Having won the hearts of motion picture patrons all over the world as the star in First National Attractions, Jackie will now go down in history along with "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," "Little Boy Blue," and others immortalized by music.

The song dealing with the star in "Peck's Bad Boy" and "Trouble," is entitled, "Jackie," and is a fox trot. It was written especially for and dedicated to Jackie Coogan by Vaughn De Leath, and the air will be featured as a musical theme in all his pictures. The song is published by M. Witmark & Sons, New York.

Fox Announces "Youth Must Have Love"

"Youth Must Have Love," the new Fox picture starring Shirley Mason, will be released October 5. Directed by Joseph Franz, the story is said to provide Miss Mason with a novel character and to permit her to exhibit her skill as a toe-dancer.

Miss Mason wears a number of handsome frocks in "Youth Must Have Love." She also has something novel in the line of riding suits for cross saddle purposes. A sleeveless coat is worn over a checkered blouse of a becoming cut and there are trim breeches and riding boots.

The company in support of Miss Mason is headed by Wallace McDonald.

Century Comedies Make Additions to Casts

Important appointments to the casts of Century Comedies are announced by Abe Storm.

"Kewpie" King, formerly with the United Studios, has been engaged by Mr. Storm to support Lee Moran. "Kewpie" weighs well over 200 pounds.

Thomas Wonder, the six-year-old dancer who appeared with Annette Kellerman makes his debut in pictures, appearing with Baby Peggy in "The Little Match Girl," a Century comedy now in the course of production.

Exploit Castle Road Shows Parades and Window Advertising Used With "Slim Shoulders" Openings

IRENE CASTLE in "Slim Shoulders," released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corp., and the Irene Castle Fashion Promenade opened to capacity houses in three different points last Sunday. The theatres and cities where the attraction is playing this week are the Capitol in Detroit, Princess in Quincy, Ill., and the Rialto in Newark.

Next week the shows move on to the Brooklyn Mark Strand, the Princess in Springfield, Ill., and the Capitol in Jackson, Mich.

The opening in Newark on Sunday was accompanied by an intensive exploitation campaign throughout the week, closing on Saturday with a big parade through the principal streets of the city.

Other noteworthy campaigns were conducted in Quincy and Detroit, where the Hodkinson representatives kept the towns keyed up with parades, window displays and other novelties.

The Quincy opening is also reported as one of the biggest in the history of the house and indications are that the picture and promenade will break the house records for attendance.

Home office officials are enthusiastic over the first week reports of the production and it is anticipated that the Irene Castle Fashion Promenade will be one of the most successful road shows ever sent out of New York. Sufficient bookings have already been accepted to keep each company out for more than three months.

"Till We Meet Again" Ready First Dependable Pictures Production For Release by Associated Exhibitors

SINCE the announcement, made recently, that Dependable Pictures Corporation has finished its first production, "Till We Meet Again," and placed it with Associated Exhibitors for release, Morris Kohn, president of the former organization, has received many letters and telegrams of congratulation from picture executives and exhibitors.

The tone of these communications shows that the return of Mr. Kohn, who was president of Realart Pictures Corporation until its absorption, to the active leadership of a film enterprise, is warmly welcomed. During his long career in the industry, Mr. Kohn has developed an acquaintance with exhibitors that is country wide.

It is felt, too, that Dependable is entering upon its career under particularly favorable circumstances. Arthur S. Kane, president of Associated Exhibitors, announces the release of "Till We Meet Again" on October 15th.

The cast of "Till We Meet Again" is headed by Mae Marsh, well known for her work in "The Birth of a Nation," "Intolerance," "The Face in the Dark," "Hidden Fires," and other big successes, and associated with her in important characterizations are Norman Kerry, Martha Mansfield, Walter Miller, Julia Swayne Gordon, Cyril Chadwick, J. Barney Sherry, Tammany Young, Denny Hughes, Fred Kalgren, and Dick Lee.

The story, which is said to carry a peculiarly dramatic appeal, is by William Christy Cabanne, who also had charge of the direction. The Police Tie-Ups Bring Results Many Exploitation Concessions are Allowed on "In the Name of the Law"

The police tie-ups arranged on the Emory Johnson photodrama, "In the Name of the Law," by the Film Booking Offices field force, continue to obtain all manner of important concessions in first run centres, making it possible to put over exploitation campaigns of unusual magnitude.

Perhaps the most extraordinary exploitation arranged to aid the picture is the police parade stunt. In Des Moines, Jess Day, manager of the Palace theatre, stopped traffic half a dozen times during the day. He obtained a motion picture camera with which he "shot" scenes of the police parade, to be shown in connection with "In the Name of the Law" at his theatre. Practically this same campaign was staged in Portland, Oregon, where the picture ran at the Blue Mouse theatre; in Los Angeles, in Enid, Oklahoma, while similar drives were executed in Cleveland, Buffalo, Atlantic City, Topeka and

That the picture is worthy of the attention afforded it and is able to stand up against the hardest opposition is shown by the Blue Mouse in Portland, which wired: "'In the Name of the Law' opened to greatest business in the history of the house."

Fred Desberg, of Loew's State in Cleveland, wired: "'In the Name of the Law' opened yesterday to very big business. Picture offers great opportunities for exploitation and tie-ups."

"Any exhibitor," wrote A. H. McLaughlin, manager of the Criterion theatre of Oklahoma City, "who will exploit 'In the Name of the Law' like we did will reap a box office reward."

In Tulsa, Oklahoma, the picture opened at the Broadway theatre, and despite the fact that the weather was hot and the house opened against big opposition, the opening smashed all summer records.

"Kentucky Derby" Coming to Screen

"THE KENTUCKY DERBY," a screen version of Charles T. Dazey's "The Suburban," is being edited and will soon be available for exhibitors. The picture is a Universal-Jewel Production, featuring Reginald Denny, star of the "Leather Pushers," and directed by King Baggot.

In addition to Mr. Denny, the cast includes: Lillian Rich, Wilfred Lucas, Emmet King, Walter Grail, Gertrude Astor, Lionel Palmore, Kingsley Benedict, Bert Woodruff, Harry Carter, Bert Tracy, Pat Harmon, Anna Hernandez and Verne Winter.

"The Storm" Acclaimed at Detroit Showing

"The Storm," Universal's Jewel production of Langdon McCornick's famous stage play, drew great praise at its recent preview showing in the Adams theatre, Detroit, Mich. The showing was attended by a large audience of exhibitors, public officials, newspaper men and other invited guests.

The Detroit Free Press, in commenting upon the showing and the picture, said:

"This picture, produced by the Universal Film Company, promises to take place among the great productions of the year. It contains all the elements which go to make up a successful photoplay, including heart interest, action, dramatic situations which grip powerfully, continuity, perfection of detail and masterful direction.

"Reginald Barker directed the picture with consummate skill.

"The Storm" will be shown in Detroit about the middle of September, when it will come to the Adams for an indefinite run."

Loew Houses Showing "Rich Men's Wives"

The Loew theatre chain in Greater New York is now playing "Rich Men's Wives" the first of the Preferred Pictures to be released under the new Ben Schulberg-Al Lichtman producing and distributing plan.

The booking, which provides for 96 days, was launched at the State in New York and the Metropolitan in Brooklyn simultaneously. In spite of warm weather and strong competition from the big Broadway first runs, the picture made a creditable showing.

Educational Books Honolulu Theatre

Kahn and Greenfield, owners of a big circuit of theatres in and about San Francisco, have just completed a big picture house in Honolulu, and have signed for the entire list of pictures to be furnished by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., during the present season.

This means that Educational will supply practically all of the short subjects for this fine new house, except for a few special star productions.

Six Leading Ladies in Christie Comedies

CHRISTIE COMEDIES will have six different leading ladies in their first five pictures this fall. Here's the line-up: Viola Daniel and Helen Darling appear with Neal Burns in the first picture, "That Son of a Sheik"; Vera Steadman plays the lead with Bobby Vernon in "Pardon My Glove"; Dorothy Devore is starred in "Let 'Er Run"; Charlotte Merriam, former Christie girl, has been re-engaged for the fourth comedy, a house-boat-ing expedition; and Charlotte Stevens supports Bobby in the next picture of the series.

Life-like "Stills" for Doug's "Robin Hood"

Those theatres that book "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" will have what is believed to be the most artistic and useful set of stills with which to publicize this feature, that has ever been turned out.

These pictures are unique in that they have been made with a graflex camera and were snapped during the action of the play instead of being posed after the taking of the scene. As a result they express the spirit of the story and depict the same grace and naturalness of the players that is expressed on the screen. Art critics who have viewed the prints declare them to be the most meritorious photographs ever taken in connection with a film play.

"Face to Face" Is Well Cast

Well-known Actors to Be Seen in Playgoers' New Mystery Melodrama

WITH a strong cast and telling a story, the Playgoers feature, "Face to Face," out September 17th, is said to rank high among the year's offerings.

Marguerite Marsh and Coit Albertson play the featured leads. Marguerite is a sister of Mae Marsh, and both girls began their screen careers under the direction of D. W. Griffith.

Coit Albertson, a pleasing leading man, had important roles in "Madam Sherry" and "The Girl from Rector's," starred in "Stubborn Cinderella" and "The Dance Dream," and has been prominent in Universal, Fox and Metro features. The remainder of the cast is equally satisfactory, and includes William Kendall, Edna Holman, Joseph Marba, Richard Stewart, Cleo Rand and Frances White.

"Face to Face," which is in five reels, presents a drama in which Bert Manners is being tried for the shooting of John Weston, a financier. Evidence is against him, for he admits breaking into the house for the purpose of stealing, and firing a revolver, but insists he shot at a young, not an elderly man. Helen Marsley, school chum of the victim's daughter, and in love with his son, Jack, does some investigating after curious actions and remarks by Martin Hartley, a relative, have aroused her suspicions.

In the midst of the trial, Helen rushes into the courtroom with evidence that shows that Manners shot at his own reflection in a mirror. A letter found in Hartley's room, written by Weston to his son, explains his suicide and the whereabouts of certain bonds, which have been missed. Hartley, called to the stand, confesses to stealing the bonds and keeping the suicide secret to hide his theft.

Associated exhibitors announce that "Face to Face" is a story to keep the public guessing, and the surprise that comes in the last reel is by no means the least of the appealing situations.

Mabel Normand Release Optimistic in Theme

Mack Sennett announces that "Suzanna," starring Mabel Normand, is completed and will be released through First National. Director F. Richard Jones and Miss Normand say that they have combined their best efforts in the making of this picture.

The theme of "Suzanna" is one of optimism. The story deals with the experiences of two girls, born of families at the two extremes of society and who, through knavery, have been substituted for each other at the time of their births.

Next Paramount Release, Stevenson's "Ebb Tide"

George Melford's production of "Ebb Tide," the Stevenson-Osbourne story, will be ready for release soon as a Paramount Picture.

The story was adapted by Waldemar Young and it is reported that he has kept the South Sea atmosphere of the original, in his film version.

The producers announce that one of the high points in the story is a realistic fight with an octopus.

The cast is headed by Lila Lee and James Kirkwood. Among those supporting them are Raymond Hatton, George Fawcett, Noah Beery and Jacquelin Logan.

Bert Glennon was in charge of the photography and C. V. Clegg acted as assistant director.

French Fire Chief Sees Hollywood

Major Paul Varginot, chief of the fire department of Paris, France, went from San Francisco to Los Angeles to have a look at the movies, so 'tis said.

Among the many studios he felt impelled to visit was that of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks. It is said that Douglas Fairbanks apologized for not being able to show the chief a fire at the studio, but the chief responded by saying that the sets for Douglas Fairbanks in "Robin Hood" and "Tess of the Storm Country" were almost as exciting.

Federated Comedies to be Censorproof

JOE BRANDT, executive director of the Federated Film Exchange of America, Inc., wires the New York office that he has had a conference with Joe Rock and Ben Wilson, who are producing a series of comedies for the "Federated," at which plans were formulated not to sidestep from the original intention of making high class comedies; and above all it was determined that the new comedies being produced must be censorproof. Primarily the conference was called to give the directors first hand information which was gleaned by Joe Brandt from the theatre owners and exchanges visited by him in his trip to the coast.

Arrow Picture Bought by Barbee's Loop

That Arrow pictures continue to meet with their usual reception in Chicago is evidenced in two letters just received at the home office of the company from Frank Zambreno, who operates Progress Pictures Company in the above mentioned city. In the first of these two letters Mr. Zambreno says that Barbee's Loop theatre has contracted for "The Broken Silence," which many people consider one of James Oliver Curwood's best pictures.

The second letter states that the same theatre ran "Back to Yellow Jacket" during the week of September 3. These two bookings are quoted as being particularly significant in view of the drive which the various independent exchanges handling Arrow product are making in order to make Arrow Month—September—memorable.

"The Jelly Fish" Being Cut and Titled

The second Smith-Cadwell production has been completed and is in the cutting room.

Wyndham Standing is the star and is supported by Dorothy MacKaill and J. Barney Sherry. Hamilton Smith directed the feature and Arthur Cadwell is the Cinematographer.

Immediately upon completing "The Jellyfish," Wyndham Standing sailed for Holland to co-star with Marguerite Marsh, in "The Lion's Mouse."

Advance reports state "The Jellyfish" is a super production, and one of the brightest pictures of the year.

Producers Security Corporation will handle the releasing arrangements.

Special Screenings Planned

"Sure-Fire Flint" Will be Shown to Exchange Managers and Exhibitors

WITH the completion of the first print this week of "Sure-Fire Flint" featuring Johnny Hines, and supported by Doris Kenyon, Edmund Breese, Robert Edeson, J. Barney Sherry, Effie Shannon and Charles Gerrard, it was announced that Lester Scott, sales manager of Affiliated Distributors, Inc., would leave shortly on a coast to coast trip taking in the various exchanges with the print in his possession.

It is Scott's first intention to stop off at all the exchanges from Philadelphia to Los Angeles that have contracted for the release of "Sure-Fire Flint," and screen Johnny Hines' latest six reel comedy-drama for each local exchange and its salesman. Coincident with this Affiliated Exchange managers have arranged to have all the principal first-run theatre owners in their respective territories attend the screening as soon as Scott arrives with the print.

According to present reports issued from C. C. Burr's offices, "Sure-Fire Flint" has already made a better sales record to exchanges than Johnny Hines first starring feature, "Burn 'Em Up Barnes," which is still playing to capacity houses all over the country.

C. C. Burr, producer of Johnny Hines in "Sure-Fire Flint" announces that each of the one, three and six sheets soon to be issued on "Sure-Fire Flint" have been designed not from the production stills as has formerly been the case, but from enlargements of the actual film negative. This deviation from the usual course was the result of the clearness of the photography obtained by Billy Bitzer, former chief cameraman for D. W. Griffith and Charles Gilson, both of whom were engaged to "shoot" "Sure-Fire Flint."

Charles Murray, veteran Mack Sennett star and one of the leading lights of the film comedy world, was signed up this week by C. C. Burr to appear with Ray McKee, former lead to Shirley Mason, in Burr's new "All-Star Comedies," which shortly will make its debut to the trade and public.

Atlantic City Opening Success

"Night Life in Hollywood" Plays to Large Business at Premiere Showing

BACKED by a heavy exploitation and advertising campaign, "Night Life in Hollywood," released by Arrow, opened to big business at the Wood's theatre, Atlantic City, N. J., on Monday, September 11.

Mr. Starkman, managing director, made liberal use of twenty-four-sheet, six-sheet and three-sheet stands in every section of the city and almost without exception every desirable shop window carried a card so that the townspeople knew when and where to expect the production. In conjunction with this he distributed in the theatre, during the week prior to the engagement of the picture, novelty souvenir postcards whereon were imprinted photographs of the different stars who play in "Night Life in Hollywood," and an unusual amount of space was used in the daily newspapers.

The opening of the picture followed immediately after the closing of the Atlantic City pageant. This was a fortunate coincidence for it permitted of a tie-up that resulted in many additional admissions. One of the features of the pageant was a tremendous inter-city beauty contest, in which Arrow Film Corporation co-operated by offering a motion picture contract to one girl chosen from the ranks of the contestants. After a great deal of deliberation a girl, Edria Fisk, of Trenton, N. J., was chosen and given a contract under the terms of which she will appear in "Jacqueline," a forthcoming James Oliver Curwood story, directed by Dell Henderson and produced by Pine Tree Pictures, Inc.

Another interesting feature of the exploitation campaign, which assisted in putting the picture over the top, was a gorgeously decorated float, which was introduced into the boardwalk parade, bearing the billing of the production. This float, done in vivid purple and flaming orange, carried two shapely young misses in attractive, similarly colored bathing suits, and was the occasion of considerable comment.

Frankie Lee Comedies Being Cast

Clarence Bricker left New York city for Los Angeles last Thursday and reached there this week, immediately starting to cast the first of the new series of two-reel Frankie Lee comedies.

The new Frankie Lee comedies will be distributed through East Coast Productions,

Bromberg Forming State Rights Corporation

Arthur C. Bromberg of the Arthur C. Bromberg attractions, operating independent exchanges in Atlanta, Charlotte and New Orleans, spent last week in New York at the offices of the Arrow Film corporation and has just announced the closing of one of the biggest independent deals ever made in the southeastern territory.

Mr. Bromberg announced while in New York that he is at work on the formation of a new corporation capitalized at $100,000, to be known as Progress Pictures, Inc., which corporation will take over and distribute the product already controlled by the Arthur C. Bromberg attractions and in addition the new company has purchased from Arrow Film corporation a program consisting of forty single reel subjects, twenty-six features and three special productions.

Seiter to Direct "Beautiful and Damned"

William A. Seiter is back in Hollywood with a fresh coat of tan and some new ideas to incorporate in the film version of F. Scott Fitzgerald's book, "The Beautiful and Damned," which he has been engaged by Warner Brothers to direct. Seiter recently slipped away to Catalina Island for a short outing and for seclusion in which to study his new undertaking.

Seiter established himself as a director of farce-comedy in his handling of the Doris May series of pictures, recently completed.

Second Hallroom Boys Comedy Is Now Ready

THE second release on the new Hallroom Boys Comedies series is announced as complete and ready for showing.

"Tailor - Made Chauffeur" is the title that has been given this new comedy, according to announcement from the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, and the picture is completely edited, titled, and ready for release. This means that it has been sent to the Eastern distributing offices only after being formally shown in two theatres on the West Coast.

Sid Smith is again featured in this comedy, which was directed by Noel Smith, whose knowledge of comedy directing has been in a large measure responsible for the success of the Hallroom Boys Comedies.

Atlas Film Co. Acquires "Why Do Men Marry?"

Unity Pictures, Inc., announces that the Atlas Film Distributing Co. has purchased "Why Do Men Marry?" for Greater New York and Northern New Jersey. This announcement is the forerunner of many other territorial purchases which will be given shortly.

The box office value of the title of this society drama in which Edy Darlea, seen recently in the female lead of Fox's spectacle "Nero," is the star, has been quickly recognized and Unity Pictures, Inc., state that a great many exhibitors who have seen the picture are of the opinion that it is a "bring 'em in" title.

"Why Do Men Marry?" is the first of many productions in which Edy Darlea is to play the leading role. Recently she completed work on "Sant' Ilario," a Henry Kolker production which is to be released shortly.

Broadway Run for "Notoriety"

Weber and North Expect Extended Run for Will Nigh's Next Picture

INFORMATION gained from the offices of L. Lawrence Weber & Bobby North, producers and distributors of Will Nigh's coming special "Notoriety" points to plans for an extended Broadway run on that production. The feature is nearing its final length, and a week or two will find it cut down to exhibition footage. Arrangements are being made for a run on Broadway.

The calibre of the picture as shown from the 100,000 feet that were shot, convinced the producers that "Notoriety" is above the average feature, and is easily big enough to stand an extended run on Broadway. As matters now stand, Weber & North must take the choice between housing "Notoriety" in a legitimate theatre or booking it into one of the first-run picture theatres.

The same problem confronted the producers of Will Nigh's "School-days." The shortage of good legitimate houses made it necessary to book the Barry feature in a first-run picture theatre. This may be the case with "Notoriety."

More than half of "Notoriety" has been cut. The excess footage has enabled Will Nigh to pick the meat out of the mass, so that the finished product is said to be all action. Screenings of the society drama to date have shown the wisdom in the selection of the cast.

Bennett Says Cast Is Strong

Charles Burr Production of "Secrets of Paris" Ready for Release

WHITMAN BENNETT, who with Charles C. Burr has produced "The Secrets of Paris," which is a screen version of Eugene Sue's famous novel of "The Mysteries of Paris," claims that the cast in this picture is the strongest he ever assembled during his long career as a picture producer. Mr. Bennett was for years assistant to Jesse Lasky, and later Assistant Production Manager for Famous Players-Lasky. During that time he helped to produce many well known pictures.

The role of the Prince is played by Lew Cody. Mr. Bennett felt that such a role needed a man of French extraction to give proper feeling to the part. Montagu Love plays the Schoolmaster.

Gladys Hulette plays the role of Mayflower and in the coronation scenes is gowned in robes that were worn by the Marchioness of Ely at the coronation of King Edward VII.

Rose Coghlan, at the ripe age of seventy-one, and just recovering from illness, returned for the part of The Owl. Harry Sothorn, a nephew of E. H. Sothorn, plays the part of Hoppy, the hunchback. Others in the cast are such well known screen favorites as William Collier, Jr., J. Barney Sherry, Dolores Cassinelli, Walter James and Effie Shannon.

This picture was directed by Kenneth Webb. The court scene was directed by Gaston Duval, a friend of Mr. Webb's, who was for many years connected with the diplomatic service.

"The Secrets of Paris" will soon be ready for the market

Heavy Bookings Reported for "Curse of Drink"

THE first test of the box-office strength of "The Curse of Drink," the five-star feature distributed by L. Lawrence Weber & Bobby North is at hand. Contracts arriving at the sales department of the distributors show that the Blaney melodrama is headed for a prosperous career among exhibitors and exchangemen.

The trade reviews on "The Curse of Drink," which are just beginning to appear, assisted in convincing the exhibitor that the picture was a clean-up. The demand for melodramas with action and cast is another reason for the popularity of "The Curse of Drink."

Schwartz states that "The Curse of Drink" has come in for more praise than any of the melodramas of recent years, because its appeal includes women as well as men.

"The Play's the Thing" Says Film Official

"The House of Darkened Windows," the Eastern Film Corporation's Chinese melodrama now offered on the independent market, is said to be unique in respect of the simplicity of its exploitation details.

An official of the Company says: "We are not featuring the name of the author of the story, the director or the cast, but we have concentrated all our energies on the story to the exclusion of many things that usually hamper the relation of a screen narrative."

"We believe that the wisdom of our policy will be confirmed by those to whom we are offering the picture."

Release "In the Night" for Independents

The cutting process for "In the Night," the Producers Security Corporation's new mystery drama, has been completed and the picture is now ready for release to State Right Distributors.

To back up its great faith in this new melodramatic feature, the Producers Security Corporation is preparing an elaborate exploitation campaign, and a punchy press and exploitation sheet will be off the press this week.

Many inquiries of "In the Night" have already reached the Producers Security Corporation offices.

Joe Rock's "Aladdin" in Cutting Room

Joe Rock has advised the New York office of Federated Film Exchanges of America Inc., that "Aladdin" has just been completed and it is now in the cutting room for titling.

The producer has seen fit to satirize the stories and is making the most of the grotesque characters and humorous situations in which the author placed them. The third of the series will be called "Little Red Robin Hood," work on which is already well under way.

New Souvenirs for "The Jungle Goddess"

The Export and Import Film Co. report an increase demand for exploitation novelties, in connection with Col. Selig's latest serial, "The Jungle Goddess."

Among the new souvenirs, for distribution in theatres, there are post cards, sets of miniature photographic reproductions from the serial and, for the youngsters, a three-color lion mask, strung and ready for use.

J. B. Warner Announces New Western Ready

James B. Warner, the new cowboy star, has completed "Flaming Hearts." This is the second of the Franklyn E. Backer series of Westerns adopted from magazine stories. Mr. Warner will immediately commence production on the third five-reeler of the series, "Crimson Gold."

Warner has a new leading woman in each picture. The series is being directed by Clifford S. Elfelt.

Pete Morrison Westerns for Export and Import

Export and Import Film Co. have just announced the closing of a contract with the Sanford Productions of Hollywood, Cal., under the terms of which they take over the entire foreign rights, including Canada, for the new series of Pete Morrison semi-western productions now being made by that company. Included in the series are several north-western dramas. All the subjects are of five reel length.

"More to Be Pitied" Opens Run at the Broadway, September Eighteen

THE New York premiere of "More to Be Pitied" will take place on September 18th.

This feature, the first of a series of six, has been booked at Moss' Broadway Theatre for a run lasting throughout the week, is the announcement from the Apollo Exchange, which handles Greater New York rights on this feature.

The showing of "More to Be Pitied" at the Randolph Theatre, Chicago, and the record it made there, where it was the first Independent picture to be booked into that theatre, has attracted considerable attention throughout the territory.

The booking of "More to Be Pitied" for the Broadway followed a special screening of the feature in the theatre itself. Mr. North, of Apollo, is specially pleased over this, because the Broadway Theatre goes in for big exploitation and effective displays. Other big bookings are coming through in great numbers in the New York territory, according to Mr. North, and it only wants the favorable reports that he is confident will result from the Broadway showing to make this picture a success.

A truck to canvass the city and a great part of New York territory is now in preparation—which will, according to Apollo, prove a most effective ballyhoo and serve to rouse interest in "More to Be Pitied."

Graphic Announces Releases

First of Series of Features Now Read for the Independent Market

"WILDNESS OF YOUTH,"

Abramson's recently completed feature with an all star cast, is to be disposed of through the previously announced channels of independent exchanges who have tied themselves up with Graphic Productions, in some territories, while in others the picture will in all probabilities be offered for state rights release. This is the first of the announced series which Abramson intends making and releasing through state righters who are affiliated with him under the name of Graphic Exchanges, Inc. The reasons for the double mode of release, Mr. Abramson announces, is the fact that certain territories as yet lack affiliations with his project of partnership with the exchange. Graphic Exchanges will soon be established in those territories, he states.

Frank Zambrino, one of the first independents to take the Graphic franchise and who is handling Abramson's product for his Progress Pictures Co. in Chicago, has completed arrangements for a first run of "Wildness of Youth," in the loop district. Announcement of the theatre and the extensive exploitation campaign planned will be made later. The showing will open on Oct. 2nd.

The Graphic Exchange of New York announces its first run opening September 21st, at the Grand Opera House, 8th Avenue and 14th Street. Additional first runs throughout the country will be announced later.

"Flapper Love" Soon Ready

Pyramid Announces Strong Cast for New Comedy Drama by Eugene Walters

THE work of cutting and assembling "Flapper Love," Pyramid's fourth production for the American Releasing Corporation's program, is being completed in Pyramid's Astoria studio by Director George W. Terwilliger. This is to be an October release. The cast includes Faire Binney as "Peggy Kendricks," Lucy Fox as "Ola," the maid; Florence Billings as "Kate Claybourne," Huntley Gordon as "Bartley Claybourne," Joseph Striker as "Ralph Demarest," J. Barney Sherry as "Horace Demarest," Templer Saxe as "Bayard Thomas" and Harry Clay Blaney as "Steve O'Malley."

The story, by Eugene Walters, is that of a beautiful young society flapper who wrecks her sister's home as a result of her brother-in-law's attentions to her, and who comes mighty near to breaking up other homes before the comedy drama is brought to a delightful ending.

Faire Binney is a sister of Constance Binney, and has played in "The Wonder Man," "The Frontier of the Stars" and "A Man's Home."

Lucy Fox will be remembered in such screen successes as "The Winchester Woman."

Florence Billings, in the role of the young wife in "Flapper Love," has a part for which she is admirably suited.

Warner Features Sold Three States

The last three deals recently consummated with state right buyers by Harry M. Warner for the forthcoming series of seven Warner Brothers productions gives the features full distribution throughout the country, it is announced. The three deals were made with the Creole Enterprises, New Orleans, Big Feature Rights, Louisville, Ky., and Warner's Exchange, Detroit.

The seven pictures include "Rags to Riches," and "Little Heroes of the Street," both featuring Wesley Barry; "Brass," with Marie Prevost; "The Beautiful and Damned," also featuring Marie Prevost; "Main Street," by Sinclair Lewis; "A Dangerous Adventure," featuring Grace Darmond, and "Little Church Around the Corner," by Marion Russell.

"More to Be Pitied" to Have Novel Trailer

What is said to be something new in trailers has just been completed by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation on "More to Be Pitied," the first of its new series.

The purpose of this trailer is not only to show scenes of a coming attraction, therefore, but to drive home a selling argument. It was prepared as an actual piece of exploitation by Esther Lindner, who handles publicity and advertising for C. B. C.

It contains some of the best scenes of the picture with appropriate titles, and, in addition to this, has several direct selling titles calculated to arouse interest in the film and its spirit.

Warner Announcement

Prominent members of the cast supporting Miss Darmond include Jack Richardson, Phil McCullough, Robert Agnew, and Derelys Perdue.

"Main Street" is declared to be the greatest novel ever written of rural America. It was written by Sinclair Lewis, and it was produced by S. L. and Jack Warner. The story enjoyed unusual success on the speaking stage, and the novel with its quaint characters is known to millions of readers.

The picture serves to reveal the bitter clash of new, free ideas against the entrenched complacency of small town tradition. There's a Main Street in every town, and this is said to be but one of the many exploitation hints on the box office possibilities of the picture. Harriet Ford and Harvey O'Higgins dramatized the story, and Julien Josephson adapted it for the screen.

"Little Church Around the Corner," in its many years before the public as a stage play and as a book, has become known all over the world. The story was written by Marion Russell, produced by S. L. and Jack Warner, and adapted for the screen by Olga Printzlau.

It is declared to be one of the sweetest stories ever told on the silver screen. It is a homely human document with an appeal as broad as humanity itself, and for real story value, lavishness of investiture, it is said the production will rank as one of the big box office attractions of the season.

Illumination in Auditorium Vitally Effects Screen Brightness

Extraneous Light from Orchestra Pit or House Units Very Detrimental

THE illumination of the auditorium during the projection of the picture vitally affects the required screen brightness, and the selection and placing of the lighting equipment must therefore be treated as a phase of the projection problem. There must be sufficient light to create an agreeable atmosphere and to permit the theatre patrons to find or leave their seats safely during the projection of pictures, yet the eye should encounter no very bright areas and the light directed to the screen from fixtures or vertical surfaces facing the stage should be kept at a minimum, in order that contrasts in the screen picture will not be materially affected. If but one per cent of the screen brightness is contributed from sources other than the projector, the screen illumination must be increased by 30 to 40 per cent in order to produce as satisfactory results as though no extraneous light reached the screen. The other surfaces at the front of the house should, however, receive some illumination so that excessive contrasts of brightness may be avoided.

Gradation of Intensity

The theatre exterior, lobby, and foyer are usually brilliantly lighted in order to appear cheerful and attractive. However, the eyes of the patrons are thereby adapted to this level and it requires time for their adjustment to the lower level desirable in the auditorium. By lighting the rear of the auditorium to a moderate intensity and gradually decreasing this to the front, the eyes are given an opportunity to adapt themselves as one passes down the aisle, and at the same time the illumination reaching the screen is kept at a minimum. The use of indirect lighting equipments, or units with deep reflectors, shades, or shields, and of auxiliary aisle lighting, obviates the interference with vision caused by bright surfaces near the field of view. Frequently beams or other architectural features may be employed to prevent the direct light from reaching the stage and to shield the eyes of the audience. The brightly lighted music sheets of the orchestra may cause annoyance when in the

Partial List of Papers for Fall S. M. P. E. Meeting

The Papers Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers has been extremely busy in securing a list of papers for presentation at the fall convention to be held in Rochester, October 9th to 12th inclusive.

The complete list of papers has not as yet been obtained. The following are the tentative titles of a few subjects which will be treated by their respective experts:

A Motion Analyzer by Dr. Hermann Kellner.

Accurate Method for Expressing the Performance of Lenses, by Mr. Wilbur B. Rayton.

A Demonstration Model for Showing Lens and Condenser Action in the Motion Picture Projector by Dr. Sander Stark.

A New Sensitometer for the Determination of Exposure in Positive Printing, by L. A. Jones and J. V. Crabtree.

Standard Dimensions and Characteristics of a New Film for Home Motion Picture Use by Dr. C. E. K. Mees.

Standardization of Positive Density and Printing Exposure, by L. A. Jones.

As additional papers are added to the above list they will be announced in this department of the NEWS.

line of vision, and they sometimes reflect a considerable amount of light to the screen. Judicious placing and masking of the music racks will frequently improve these conditions.

The above discussion of the illumination of the theatre auditorium is an extract from the bulletin issued by the National Lamp Works on Motion Picture Projection.

In general, the illumination of theatre auditoriums has not received the proper thought and study that it warrants.

Excellent Illustration

To cite an example of the importance of the proper placing of orchestra lights for music sheets the writer recently visited that new monument to motion pictures, the Eastman Theatre at Rochester, N. Y., and had occasion to study the interior lighting. During a discussion of the illumination of the projection screen the probability of the orchestra lights having any effects on the brightness and contrast of the picture was discussed. A decision was made to make a test of this that very evening.

After the performance the engineers from the Eastman Laboratories conducted a series of tests of the effects of the reflection of light from the music sheets in the orchestra and also the effects on the extraneous light thrown on the screen from the general house lighting.

The results of the tests showed that the extraneous light received by the screen from the orchestra pit was so great that it was possible to double the general auditorium illumination before an equal amount of extraneous light was received by the screen.

In other words the light received by the screen from the general house illumination actually was much less harmful to the picture than that received from the lights in the orchestra pit. Precautions were immediately taken to eliminate all light reaching the screen from the orchestra pit.

Importance Not Realized

Yet how many exhibitors fail to realize the extreme detrimental effects to the picture from the lights used in the orchestra unless they are properly designed and positioned.

It is a simple matter to secure fixtures, which, with the proper arrangement will not reflect light to the screen.

Another extremely important factor in auditorium illumination is the design and position of the lighting units during the presentation of the picture.

Brightly lighted objects in the audience's line of vision to the screen are to be condemned. This glare proves annoying and distracting to anyone watching the picture and also results in apparently a lower screen illumination to the observer.

In case a picture appears gray, presenting no clearly defined contrasts in the blacks and whites, the exhibitor should thoroughly investigate the possibilities of extraneous light reaching the screen for therein lies the source of many puzzling projection problems.

Since the Shubert Corp. changed their Rialto theatre, Newark, N. J., into a combination vaudeville and motion picture house, the Libman-Spanjer Corp. constructed a beautiful ticket selling booth, as shown in the photograph above. These booths are greatly used now in the up-to-date houses

Actual Stereoscopic Pictures Obtained Thru Invention of New Process

A MEANS for taking stereoscopic motion pictures has been developed that appears to be actually successful. The principles underlying the process are scientifically sound and no wonderful claims of revolutionizing the motion picture industry are made.

An interesting demonstration of this process was recently held at the Emerald Studio, Chicago, by Barnett W. Harris, inventor.

The representatives of the daily press, trade papers and others present agreed that Harris had succeeded in actually adding depth to the pictures which were truly stereoscopic in their effect.

The pictures were shot by two motion picture cameras, placed side by side, and were then printed by a special process on to a single film, the pictures taken by the right and left cameras alternating on the film.

This film was then placed in a projection machine with a double aperture plate, so that when thrown on the screen, pictures taken by one camera appear directly above those taken by the second camera, the projection machine being run at such a speed that the pictures give continuous action as in usual motion picture projection. It is understood that in order to get this effect the reels are run at double the speed of the usual picture.

Each spectator is provided with a "rectifier" built somewhat like an old fashioned stereoscope, and provided with a prism for each eye, which is masked in such a manner that when you look at the screen through the rectifier, the two pictures appear as one and the stereoscopic effect is secured.

The reels shown at the demonstration included close-ups and long and short shots, all of which had the effect of depth or stereoscopic pictures to a remarkable degree.

Among those who witnessed the demonstration, was Professor Frank R. Moulton of the Chicago University, known as one of the world's leading astronomers and mathematicians, who stated that the stereoscopic effect obtained by Harris pictures, is one hundred per cent, and that Harris has developed his discovery along correct scientific lines.

It is obvious that this process has decided limitations, though for special work or the educational use it will probably be found of high value.

Harris is widely known in Chicago amusement circles, having been connected with the theatrical and motion picture industry for fifteen years, starting as treasurer of the Marlowe theatre, during the time when Ralph Kettering now general representative for Jones, Linick & Schaefer, was manager.

Canadian Hippodrome Devoted to Motion Pictures

More than ordinary interest has been taken in the re-opening of Shea's Hippodrome, Toronto, which took place on August 21 with an entirely new policy and after important changes had been made in the large downtown theatre. The house was re-opened with Griffith's "Orphans of the Storm," which was shown continuously afternoon and evening at prices ranging up to 75 cents. Arrangements had been made for an indefinite run of this picture and other large features have been booked for the Hippodrome, it was announced.

The Hippodrome opened some years ago under the direction of Jerry Shea as a combination picture and vaudeville theatre. It was, at that time, the largest theatre in Toronto. It is now to present moving pictures exclusively. Much work has been done during the past two months in the way of remodelling the theatre.

Much New Equipment For Cleveland Territory

The following equipment notes are furnished by the Theatre Supply Company of Cleveland, which is making the installations:

Arcade theatre, Georgetown, A. C. Markey manager, is installing a new 6B Powers projection machine.

Robert J. Hirsch, manager of the New Sigma theatre, a new Dayton motion picture house has placed an order for entire equipment, including a 6B Powers projection machine, motor generator, and a white screen.

J. Bernard Mills has completely renovated the People's theatre, Dayton, and has put in all new projection equipment.

W. E. Weiberg of the Royal theatre, Salem, Ohio, painted up his house and installed all new Powers equipment for his fall opening.

Tri-State Amusement Company of Steubenville, which operates the Strand and Orpheum theatres, have installed all new Powers equipment in both houses.

Weber theatre of Dover, O., and the Strand, of New Philadelphia, O., have substituted the new G. E. Mazda equipment for their old carbon arc equipment, saying that the mazda equipment can be run much more economically than the carbon arc equipment—Loeb.

The Heart Never Grows Old

A young heart is a musical heart—and there isn't any other kind! Grandpa beats with his cane to the same lively tune the youngsters hop to—music is universal and appeals to everyone.

But music has its imitators and only real music appeals to the heart. That is where many exhibitors lose a profit—you may not know one note from another but you can tell good music when you hear it, and so can everyone else.

The safe way is to install a Barton Orchestral Organ that any organist can play. It is just a beautiful, full-toned pipe organ with complete orchestral instruments added, and made wonderfully flexible with the Barton Divided Manual.

You don't have to pay cash for a Barton even if it is worth it. We can point the way to owning one easily. Write today.

Grauman Hollywood Theatre Strictly Egyptian Architecture Thruout

WITH the construction practically completed on the picturesque new Grauman Hollywood theatre, the date of opening is very near, in fact, it will probably take place within the next seven or eight weeks.

The new theatre is a distinct addition to the artistic buildings that have made this motion picture capital one of the most attractive residential meccas on the coast, and when it opens its doors to the public, the film industry will be presented with the finest settings ever offered for its best efforts.

The theatre is strictly Egyptian architecture and every detail has been given the benefit of exhaustive research. Egypt's grandeur tells of past glories but this new temple is a monument to present-day enterprise and stands as the realized inspiration of a great exhibitor whose faith has led him to rear this $800,000 structure for future triumph. In Egyptian architecture the builders aimed at stability and so the walls of this edifice are formed of huge cement blocks, hand colored with the soft blues and reds and yellows in which these ancients delighted. The interiors, with its wide foyer, auditorium with its 2,000 seats, smoking and waiting rooms, are fascinating with their marvelous decorations that have incorporated the famous Egyptian motif of Sphinx pyramids, hieroglyphic inscriptions and other ornamentations used in Temples of bygone days.

Marvelous new heating, cooling and ventilating systems have been installed, assuring comfort both winter and summer, while the latest invention of diffused lighting throws the glow through the atmosphere and turns the vaulted ceiling into a glorious blue sky with dazzling stars twinkling like our very own California heavens.

There is a tiled court of much spaciousness, with a stone wall fountain, and shops along one side, a la Bagdad, and a picturesque roof garden. These are but a few of the features that lure the fancy.

Will Hays to Attend S. M. P. E.

The president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers tendered Will Hays an invitation to attend their fall convention scheduled to be held in Rochester, N. Y., October 9th to 12th inclusive.

In replying Mr. Hays states that he intends to be present for at least one session of the convention.

Endicott, N. Y., to Have Modern House

Ned Kornblite, president of the Kodeco Realty company, announces that a new $100,000 theatre will be erected in Endicott, N. Y. on the property between the Endicott Bulletin office and the Earl W. Travis store on Washington avenue. The three lots which comprise the site were purchased from Dr. Mark Welch of Endicott. The plot is 75 feet wide and 100 feet deep. Construction will begin at once. It is hoped to open the house January 1.

The new theatre will be of modern fire-proof construction and will be equipped with a modern ventilating system. Yellow tapestry brick will be used on the front. The remainder will be of hollow tile and concrete with steel framework—Taylor.

Spahr Reports Improved Market

A marked improvement in the market for high class projectors is reported by O. F. Spahr, general manager of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, who states that a splendid business in Motiographs was done during August, the month's record being the best in the past year.

Among large contracts consummated was one with the Philadelphia public schools, whereby a large number of Motiographs will be installed, and one with the United States Navy, which will place Motiographs on many of the larger ships of the battle fleet.

Among installations completed during the month, were those in the Majestic theatre, Chicago; Seventh street, Minneapolis; the Majestic, Milwaukee; and the Palace at South Bend, all Orpheum Time houses, which are devoting more attention to the showing of pictures than in the past.

The Palace at South Bend is one of the finest Orpheum Time houses in the country, and is scheduled to open on September 15th.

Mr. Spahr is enthusiastic over the business outlook for the fall and winter.

Curtains and Draperies Give Patrons All Important First Impression

CURTAINS and draperies give to your patrons a definite impression of your taste—your idea of an expression of harmony and beauty.

More than anything else allied to your decorative scheme and colorings rests a real responsibility upon your curtains and draperies. They may enhance and emphasize the beauty of your theatre or may entirely ruin it. Their importance are most vital.

The first impressions are lasting and if they are what you want them to be, your patrons instantly become favorably impressed with their surroundings and because of those favorable impressions their visits are more frequent. If your curtains and draperies fail to properly represent your house, they are sure to create a depressing effect on your patrons.

An enormous curtain that represents a large investment was recently installed in the Franklin County Memorial Hall. This curtain which extended across the proscenium of 80 feet 2 inches required over 600 yards of Mercerized Velour. A description of the many features of this curtain is supplied by Haller and Haller of Columbus, Ohio, specialists in theatre curtains, draperies, etc., who made the installation.

Both curtain and lambrequin are heavily plaited. The opening ends and bottom edge are hemmed 12 inches deep. The bottom of curtain and lambrequin are weighted; top of curtain reinforced with heavy web. Ten inch mercerized bullion fringe is used and a two inch metal galloon. The monogram and scroll are applied.

The operating of the curtain is absolutely noiseless, the runners are hard wood, self-lubricating; U shaped cast iron hangers, quarter inch self lubricating wire cable. The machine operating the curtain is automatic; switch control; one throw of the switch opens or closes the curtain. When the curtain has been opened or closed the motor automatically stops. Being equipped with an automatic clutch, the curtain or equipment cannot become damaged or injured in any way if a possible mishap occurred from any cause.

Haller & Haller have furnished many theatre and moving picture houses with curtains and draperies.

ABSOLUTELY SINCERE AND PRACTICAL PRAISE OF POWER'S PROJECTORS

No. 515. Vol. XX.

THE CINEMA, LONDON, ENG.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 24, 1922

WHAT THE OPERATOR SHOULD KNOW ABOUT HIS PROJECTOR

By C. H. DAVIES,

(Late Cine-Technical Expert, International Committee of the American Y. M. C. A.)

In the last issue I urged the need—and it is a vital one—for raising the status of the cinema operator, or as I prefer to call him, projectionist. And in so doing, I pointed out that such improvement could, under present conditions, only come about as a result of initiative movement on the part of exhibitors. I say, with a knowledge born of many years' practical experience, that the most ruinously expensive encumbrance to any picture theatre is an incompetent, careless, or discontented projectionist. He can do more harm to business in one month than an inexperienced manager can accomplish in six. Managerial incapacity may damage the prestige of a house in the long run, but faulty projection is working havoc during every hour that the house is open.

Perhaps one of the most potent causes of imperfect projection is to be found in the brevity of time allowed for care and study of the projector, the veritable heart of the system. Sometimes the "operator" is called upon to do so many jobs around the theatre that he is led to neglect his own department, but more often he is disinclined to make more than a perfunctory study of the delicate and exacting piece of machinery upon which very largely rests the success or otherwise of the screen presentation. It is in the hope that a deeper interest may be aroused in the vital functions of the cine-mechanism, and that a fuller understanding of its character may lead to greater care and better pictorial presentation, that I pen these explanatory notes.

For the purpose of my first descriptive analysis, I propose to deal with the Power's No. 6. And I make that particular selection because actual experience has proved to me that it is one of the most perfect, reliable, and durable projectors on the market, if given a modicum of care and attention. Of the "hardy" qualities of the Power's No. 6 I was afforded striking evidence during my charge of the Cinematograph

Section of the American Expeditionary Force, Y. M. C. A. Thirty-five of these machines were returned to me at the Base; most of them had been either buried in the trenches or under water, and all were more or less corroded into utter uselessness. Yet after I had taken apart, cleaned, repaired and re-assembled these machines, no fewer than 32 were returned to France and Russia in perfect running order. A more it is almost noiseless, and the travel of the film is not only more rapid but there is less strain on the perforations than with many other types. Careful study of this movement by means of Figures II and III will result in a clearer understanding of the chief function of a projector.

Second only in importance to the intermittent movement is the film feed, and an intelligent grasp of the principles underlying this will go far to minimize the chances of trouble while running. It will be understood, of course, that the purpose of the intermittent sprocket is to transmit the movement of cross and cam to the film in order that its travel may synchronize with the operation of the shutter. But the important work of the top and bottom feed sprockets is not usually so well appreciated. The condition of the top feed sprocket and its relationship to its rollers governs the feed to the intermittent action, and perfect engagement of the film is a sine qua non of "sweet" running. Adjustment of the gate springs to the exact pressure necessary to ensure smooth passage of the film without putting strain upon the edges of joins is a point calling for careful study. Films vary not only in thickness, but also in condition, and the extra trouble of adjusting the pressure to the film is well worth the while; it is not difficult, and it makes for good results on the screen.

The function of the "take-up" sprocket is important, and care in seeing that the film is firmly engaging and that the idler roller lies snug is time well spent. "Jumping" of the loop will thus be guarded against, and the possibility of failure of the take-up minimized. In the Power's No. 6 mechanism it will be found that the idler rollers are so arranged that pressure upon the moving film is obviated, while the adjustment is so fine that the rising of the film from the sprockets is practically an impossibility.

For the purpose of my first descriptive analysis, I propose to deal with the Power's No. 6. And I make that particular selection because actual experience has proved to me that it is one of the most perfect, reliable, and durable projectors on the market, if given a modicum of care and attention. Of the "hardy" qualities of the Power's No. 6 I was afforded striking evidence during my charge of the Cinematograph Section of the American Expeditionary Force, Y. M. C. A. Thirty-five of these machines were returned to me at the Base; most of them had been either buried in the trenches or under water, and all were more or less corroded into utter uselessness. Yet after I had taken apart, cleaned, repaired and re-assembled these machines, no fewer than 32 were returned to France and Russia in perfect running order. A more searching test would scarcely be easy to find.

searching test would scarcely be easy to find. Figure I gives a general "close-up" of the Power's No. 6 from the gate aspect.

The constancy of motion of this machine is often remarked by those who use it, and the secret of this is in the intermittent movement, which differs greatly from the method usually employed. Within a grease-tight casing the driving element revolves; a cam of hardened steel, diamond in shape, which engages the pins of a cross mounted on the end of the intermittent spindle. The cross and pins are cut from one block of steel so that the pins remain fixedly in precise relation to the cam. The motion of cam and cross is so smooth and devoid of friction that

Good Information

One projectionist, in replying to the letter written by R. Harrington who requested information on Mazda lamp projection and screens, gives a good set of answers and apparently has had considerable experience in working with Mazda equipment.

Motion Picture News,
New York City,
Technical Dept.

Dear Editor:

I've just finished reading the letter you published written by R. Harrington in which he asks for answers to some pointers on the way to use Mazda lamps for projection and also on screens.

As I've been a user of this sort of apparatus for a long time and have run into all kinds of experiences with it in getting thoroughly acquainted with it, I believe I can give some dope to Harrington that will help him.

Before I go into that discussion I'd like to say that a projectionist must study how to operate a Mazda equipment just the same as he needs to study to operate an arc. There are many different things about this apparatus and the way to use it. If the proper methods are not used then the best projection will not be obtained.

As to question one "where the lamp bulb bulges out on the side once in a while" I've never read just why this is but I figured (I've had this happen to me once) that there was a weak spot in the glass and when the lamp got hot this weak spot showed up.

Question two: The hole in the dowser of the G. E. Mazda apparatus is not to be used for anything except to get the mirror in the right place, because it does not always come in the center of the condenser lens. The way I line up my condenser is to first light the lamp in the lamp house after it has first been set correctly in the lamp setter. I don't turn on all the juice the lamp should carry so there won't be too much light to work with. Next I hold a piece of cardboard out in front of the objective lens (maybe about 2 or 3 inches or maybe farther away or closer) until I get an image of the rings of the prismatic condenser. These rings will show up clearly and also an outline of the aperture plate can be seen on the card. The image of the rings can be centered with the aperture outline by moving the lamp house sidewise or up and down and then when the rings are centered in this way the adjustments on the lamp house can be adjusted and set so the house will always come back in that position when it is ready for projecting a picture.

Don't use this hole in the dowser for centering the lamp filament because it's just the same as when you center the condenser. If the hole is not in the center then the lamp filament will not be in the center. Just use the same way to center the lamp filament as for the condenser only be sure that the mirror doesn't throw any light into the condenser. I always push the mirror away around to one side and burn the lamp on the least amperage that I can so it won't be too bright. Then hold the pasteboard card (better have it kind of a gray color) out in front of the objective lens just the same as before and find where you can see the image of the lamp filament. (The lamp should be placed back from the center of the condenser two inches before the image is looked for.) Then by moving the lamp sideways the filament can be placed in the center of the spot of round light on the card you hold in front of the objective lens. You don't have to do all this only when putting up the equipment because if the adjustments are made right the next lamp fits right in the same place.

If the lamp and condenser aren't set right, the light on the screen will be poor and uneven.

When it comes to screens I don't know much about the crystal beaded screen, but the size of the screen to use is something I guess we could all talk about. I've got my own ideas about that but I don't suppose all the fellows will agree with me.

Favors Large Size

I'm for a pretty big screen so that the people can see all the details in the picture. I mean by that a pretty big picture for the house. Of course I don't mean a twenty foot picture in a house that seats about five or six hundred, but say a picture about sixteen feet wide. I don't get the dope on the small picture myself.

Anyway I hope I help out by telling how I do things for I get pretty good results and don't receive any kicks from the manager.

Maybe I'll have some questions to ask the fellows and hope they'll bounce to it and give me some good dope. I guess this country must have fellows in it that know about all there is to know on good projection.

Here's hoping good luck to your league,
EUGENE HILL,
Mansfield, Mass.

The answer concerning how to line up the condenser and lamp filament of the Mazda lamp as outlined by E. Hill is to be recommended. Apparently Hill has had considerable experience with this type of apparatus and has also either read or received personal instructions on this subject. His answer is quite complete and definite.

Reason for Bulging

However, when it comes to the reason for the lamp bulb bulging out the Editor does not agree. This effect is probably due to the light reflected from the spherical mirror being focussed on the glass of the bulb. At this point of focus the temperature is high and in time softens the glass. As the bulb is filled with gas under high pressure the softened glass caused by the focus of the reflected light falling directly on it will bulge out.

This will never occur providing the mirror is correctly placed. It is well to check up on the mirror setting every day or even oftener thus obtaining the maximum efficiency from this element.

The question of the crystal beaded screen is discussed in another letter printed in the Forum this week.

There is a great deal to be said on the subject of the size of screen best suited for the particular theatre. The Editor in his opinion does not agree with E. Hill in the views that a comparatively large picture should be used. It must be remembered that the people sitting in the front seats will find it very difficult to follow the action of a large picture. There is necessary a compromise, i. e., a picture which favors the front seats slightly through its smaller dimensions will be very satisfactory for the center of the house though possibly somewhat small for the rear.

Large pictures are apt to cause eye strain which result in headaches.

The size of picture to use of course depends on the size of the house—Editor.

AS a motion picture projectionist who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the projection-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in reasonably good condition, according to conditions of film when received. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother projectionists and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

Motion picture projection in theatres the country over has greatly improved since the perfection of TransVerteR—the original series arc M-G outfit, which set a new standard for the entire industry.

TransVerteR changes alternating current into direct current which is more suitable for projection arcs. It automatically supplies only such voltage as is needed for the arc, and no wasteful, current consuming ballast is used. It uses less current than any other device, and is therefore more economical to operate.

It is easily adjusted for light and dark portions of film. TransVerteR gives the projectionist perfect arcs, clear-white, steady light that is easily directed and controlled. It makes possible the projection of clear, sharp-lined pictures which patrons appreciate and come again to enjoy.

Concerning Screens

The list of questions submitted by R. Harrington, as published in these columns in our issue dated September 2, has caused considerable comment among the projectionists. The following extract is taken from a letter received from George Shepard of Dallas, Texas, who writes on the subject of screens.

"I've run up against the Crystal Beaded screen at a few places and in some places it sure did some good work. I cannot say this about it every place I saw it.

"From what I've seen and heard about this kind of screen it goes well in a theatre where there is a straight throw and no balcony. But if you take a house that has a big angle for the projection and has a balcony then the Crystal Beaded screen is no good. I've heard this explained by people who ought to know who say that the biggest part of the light that hits the screen is reflected back again right in the direction it comes from. Don't use the Crystal screen where there is much angle to the projection or where there is a balcony in the house. That's my opinion on this anyway.

"When it comes to the size of picture to use in the house I say use a moderate size screen. This idea of using a picture twenty four feet wide in a small house as I've had the good fortune (?) of seeing, is absolutely the wrong idea. I'll say a house which say seats a thousand or so people on one floor with a throw of about a hundred feet from the projector to the screen should use a picture about fifteen feet wide. And I've seen pictures up in the twenty feet in houses no larger than that."

When it comes to the explanation for the action of the reflected light from the Crystal Beaded screen and the proper place to use it G. Shepard has the right ideas.

The Crystal Beaded screen throws the reflected light back right along the axis of projection. In the case where the projection room is placed up over the balcony then the balcony seats will receive by far the best picture while the orchestra seats will suffer.

The Crystal Beaded screen proves very satisfactory when used for house with no balcony and practically straight projection. The screen is really of the reflector type though there is a certain amount of diffusion given the projected light; more, in fact, than is given by most other reflector types of screens.

A fifteen-foot picture (width) for a theatre with a seating capacity of one thousand and length of approximately one hundred feet, seems to be just about the right size, though probably a picture of fourteen and a half to sixteen foot width would be found quite satisfactory—Editor.

THE DEBRIE HIGH SPEED CAMERA

240 pictures per second
For Analyzing Rapid Motion

THE FOREMOST CAMERA OF THE MOTION PICTURE WORLD

Many attempts have been made in recent years to manufacture a high-speed camera capable of analyzing rapid motion and slowing it down sufficiently for the eye to follow such motion in detail. None of these cameras has been equal to the task of the rapid mechanical action required to produce pictures at the rate of 200 or more per second.

It remained for DEBRIE, after long experimentation, to perfect a camera, which, though light and simple of manipulation, has been found to fulfill all the requirements, producing as steady a picture on the screen as though taken at the normal rate of 16 pictures per second.

Most directors and camera men are familiar with the results of this high speed camera, which are shown on the screen daily by the numerous REVIEWS and educational Feature films.

"THEMATIC MUSIC CUE SHEET"

(Pat. Applied For)

It means more to you than any other accessory. It is the cue sheet that insures a musically perfect picture presentation.

Theatre and Exchange Mailing List Service

We rent lists of or address contemplated of existing theatres, exchanges, state rights owners, publicity mediums and producers, selected as to territory, class, etc. Twenty thousand changes were recorded in our list last year. Its use means a saving of from 20 to 50% in postage, etc.

ITEMS OF THE EXCHANGES AND THEATRES

ST. LOUIS

The Melvin theatre, 2914-16 Chippewa street, has been reopened after being dark for several months. Several days ago Gladino Lange and associates purchased the house from Joseph Hollomann. The price paid was not given out. The house seats 600.

The Wilsonville, Ill., theatre owned by Eli Gory opened on September 15. Gory plans to operate four nights a week. If business warrants he may increase to every day in the week. The theatre seats 385.

The Juniata theatre, Grand boulevard near Juniata street, was robbed of $326 on Tuesday morning, September 5. The robbers used two padded sledge hammers to force open the safe. The St. Louis Amusement Company is the owner.

Carter De Haven was the guest at a banquet given in his honor at the Melbourne Roof Garden Wednesday evening, September 6. Thomas McKean of the Film Booking Offices of America was host to De Haven during his stay in St. Louis.

J. A. Seipker, formerly manager of the Wildie theatre, Edwardsville, Ill., has taken charge of the Ozark theatre, Webster Grove, Mo.

Charley Vollmer has resigned as manager of the Delmonte theatre, 5624 Delmar boulevard, and returned to the Midway theatre. C. Olmstead is, the new manager of the Delmonte.

Secretary of State Becker has issued certificates of incorporation to the Rivoli Theatre Company with a capital stock of $30,000. Barney Rosenthal, Nat Steinberg and R. G. Taylor hold 100 shares each. They represent Universal which recently purchased the Royal theatre. The house will be known as the Rivoli.

Certificate of incorporation has been issued also to the Allied Amusement Company; capital, $20,000. Forrest P. Trelles has two shares and Eulalie L. Kuh and Fred J. Hoffmeister 99 shares each. This company is said to contemplate the erection of a theatre on the South Side.

OKLAHOMA CITY

The Royal Amusement Co. has been incorporated at Waco, Texas, with capital stock of $4,000, and the following incorporators: J. Leslie Witt, C. E. Witt and Guy F. Witt, three brothers. The corporation will take over and operate the Royal theatre at Waco, formerly owned and managed by Louis Santokos.

Fire destroyed two machines, rectifier, operator's booth and 9,000 feet of film in the Dixie theatre at Huntsville, Texas, last week, the damage amounting to about $3,000, covered by insurance.

W. H. Gibson has opened his new suburban house at Austin, Texas.

Joe H. Patterson, commissioner of public works at Oklahoma City, has declared war on some of the Oklahoma City theatres. He said that some of the theatres have persistently violated city regulations against posting signs in parkings, and he has ordered all signs torn down, and the guilty persons arrested.

A near fire was staged at the Haskell theatre at Haskell, Texas, when a reel of film caught on fire in the projection booth. The flames were quickly brought under control, however, with no damage except the destruction of one film.

Ed Goeman, popular Dallas, Texas, theatre man, has been appointed manager of the Rex theatre at Dallas and has taken charge.

The new Rex theatre at Graham, Texas, has opened with J. C. Coleman as manager. The theatre is modern in every respect.

KANSAS CITY

Aerial motion pictures of the mayor's picnic at Kansas City Saturday, were a part of the program at the Newman theatre this week, Howard Curtis, cameraman for the Newman theatre, having taken the pictures and had the films developed in twelve hours.

F. B. McCracken, branch sales manager of the Kansas City Hodkinson office, accepted a position with United Artists Friday. Mr. McCracken's successor has not yet been named.

A radio concert tie-up between the Newman theatre, Kansas City, and the Kansas City Star, resulted in considerable publicity this week. The music of the Newman concert orchestra was "picked up" by a microphone, carried through a special cable to the Star's 500-watt broadcasting apparatus and sent to the antenna above the Star building. The concert, composed of classical and popular music, lasted an hour and received front page prominence.

The following changes in ownership and opening of new theatres in the Kansas City territory have taken place during the last week:

Broadmour theatre, purchased by A. M. Eisner; Lyric theatre, Strong City, Kas., and Odson, Cottonwood Falls, Kas., purchased from C. W. Hermes by T. W. Davis; Highland theatre, Kansas City, reopened by S. K. Williams.

CLEVELAND

William J. Kimes has resigned as manager of the Goldwyn Film Exchange of Cleveland. Kimes has been associated with the exchange for the past five years, first as assistant manager and later as manager.

Nat Barach arrived here last Saturday to take over the management of the local Goldwyn exchange. Barach was manager of the Goldwyn Pittsburg exchange for the past three years.

Lester Sturm, former Fox exchange manager in Chicago, succeeds Barach as Goldwyn manager in Pittsburg.

J. A. Koerpel, central western district manager for Goldwyn, has been in Cleveland the past week getting Manager Barach installed. Koerpel announced that there will be a new branch Goldwyn office opened in Indianapolis October 1, in a new one-story building erected at North Illinois and Michigan avenues.

E. Mandelbaum, president of Associated First National Exhibitors Company of Ohio, is at Battle Creek, Michigan, for several weeks.

Manager Irwin Hirsch of the American Releasing Corporation reports that the Ohio Censor Board passed "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" with practically no cuts, and with the comment that it was "well handled by Director Ray Smallwood."

E. W. Penrod has joined the F. B. O. outfit. His brother, C. E. Penrod was recently appointed manager of the Cleveland exchange. E. W. Penrod has been manager of the Indianapolis Universal exchange for the past ten years.

Lemotto Smith, owner-manager of the Columbia theatre, Alliance, Ohio, is off on a two-weeks motor trip vacation somewhere through the East. Smith says it's been a vacation all summer, running a picture house, with all of the inconveniences and none of the recreations. Now he's off for the recreation—provided the good ship Cadillac behaves.

WESTERN NEW YORK

E. S. Kramer has resigned as treasurer of the Shea Amusement Company, Buffalo. The resignation is effective October 1.

S. H. Meinhold, general manager of Loew's Theatre, Inc., was in Buffalo last week for conferences with Al Beckerich, manager of the local Loew house.

Si Bunce of Arrow Film Company was in Buffalo over the week-end. Mr. Bunce is interested in the local Strand and other houses.

Irene Castle, in spite of injuries suffered in a fall from one of her horses at her Ithaca home, appeared at the Rochester horse show, but did not ride "over the jumps."

Arthur L. Skinner, manager of the Victoria theatre in Buffalo put on a free matinee last Saturday for the opening of "Captain Kidd." Of course it was free for kids only. Art said he never saw so many children at one time in his life. They were perched everywhere, chairs, arms of chairs, in the aisles, on the balcony ledges, etc. Art figures that he will have half of the number at the Vic every Saturday afternoon to see the succeeding chapters.

Buffalo's oldest exhibitor is dead. Rudolph Wagner, 67 years old, who operated the Little Hippodrome and Keith theatres on lower Main street, fell unconscious in New York, Sunday, September 3, and died a few days later. The funeral was held Friday, September 8, in Buffalo. Mr. Wagner is said to have established the first moving picture theatre in Buffalo, "The Little Hippodrome," and it was always his proud boast that he was the first man to install an organ in a moving picture house in this country.

The Musicians' Association of Buffalo has proposed the establishment of a Theatrical Commission, which shall establish wage scales and regulations for service in all local theatres. The committee is to have a personnel of ten members. The commission is to consist of two constitutional officers of the association and eight elected members, actively playing regularly in theatres. The making of all rules governing services in theatres shall be the prerogative of the commission and the rules shall be binding on all members of the union. All transgressions of the rules will be tried by the commission sitting at a trial board. Members are compelled to obey the verdicts and orders issued, but have the right of appeal to the local board of directors of the union.

Six hundred and twenty-two persons filled out the coupon in the Niagara Falls Gazette, entitling the holder to a photo of Hope Hampton, who appeared in person at the Strand opening. Almost every town in western New York near the Falls and along the Canadian border is represented in the list.

CANADA

The Garrick theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, continues to be a real home of British film productions in Canada. The management of this theatre has announced the forthcoming presentation of a number of British attractions such as "Tansy," "Her Son" and "Branded."

In announcing plans for "Capitol Entertainment" for the season among theatres forming the chain for the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Ltd., N. L. Nathanson, managing director of the company, gave an official list of theatres in Canada which the corporation now controls. This list shows that there are now exactly 36 theatres which are under the direction of Famous Players.

Another interesting turn has occurred in the developments attending the settlement of the financial difficulties surrounding Allen Theatres, Limited, Toronto. While negotiations were under way for an official extension of time for the company in which to satisfy claims, G. T. Clarkson of Toronto, the official assignee and trustee of the company, was suddenly taken ill with a communicable disease and was forced to relinquish his duties for the time being.

The Alberta Motion Pictures, Limited, has been organized at Edmonton, Alberta, for the making of a picture, "The Scarlet Keeper," featuring the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The company is being financed by local business men.

FLORIDA

Jack Frost, assistant manager of the Consolidated Amusement Co. of Tampa, Florida, is back at his desk, looking fine and full of pep.

Tavares, Florida, is advertising a big barbecue and picnic for the fourth of September. Besides the many day-time events, they announce moving pictures at night. Tavares has no motion picture theatre.

C. D. Cooley is "hanging them on the rafters" every Thursday night with his Country Store, at the Strand theatre, Tampa. It has held up for 13 weeks. He will continue it until October.

A new house is being built in Clermont, Florida. Mr. Winston has leased it and has the promise that it will be ready for him on October 1.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

"Monte Cristo" opened at the Rialto theatre Monday, September 4, for a run of two weeks, although the press agent didn't tell the public it was going to be held over until Thursday. As a result of the plan the first four days of the week did a tremendous business, which was all for the good of the advertising exploitation. The theatre's prices were slightly advanced for the picture.

Miss Clara Blaney, who has been press agent for the Keith interests in this city and Pawtucket for many years, has resigned. She has not definitely stated what her future work will be.

The new Capitol theatre opened on Monday, September 4, at 15 cents for all seats at all times. The Labor Day attendances were said to have come up to the expectations of the managers.

SAN DIEGO

The Bush theatres have announced a new policy at the Broadway, one of their string of motion picture houses, in that only first run pictures will be scheduled there hereafter, and no more serials will be run. No change is made, however, in the prices.

Following a special pre-view, given to a number of city and county officials, naval officers and welfare workers, the seven-reel feature, "Some Wild Oats," began a week's engagement at the Speckles theatre on September 4.

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

Adds good photography to picture interest—gives that truthful, accurate reproduction that is only possible when the reproductive scale of the positive material parallels that of the negative. That's why Eastman Positive Film carries quality through to the screen.

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base—now available in nine colors, is identified throughout its length by the words “Eastman” “Kodak” stenciled in black letters in the transparent margin.

*8546 exhibitors—by our records—manage and book for nearly 12,000 theatres.

It is gratifying to find that the individual care given each job in THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES is appreciated by the producers we are serving. They know none of the artistry they have put into their work is lost in our workrooms. They know each daily consignment is as carefully handled as if they personally followed it, step by step, through our plant. They know every foot of film we send out is the best foot of film it is possible to make from the negative.

THE foremost producers of the West have learned to depend upon our service from camera to screen. They realize the advantage of our superior equipment and of our efficient organization of laboratory experts. No job is hurried through, but no one is held up by delayed "rushes" or release prints. We are working 24 hours a day to give such service. We reiterate, it is gratifying to find this service appreciated.

They'll All Come!

THE greatest of all emotion-dramas—the play that has drawn laughs and tears from a million American hearts—at last given a production worthy of its story.

With the screen's greatest character actor, Theodore Roberts, in the role he was born for—"Uncle Josh."

A story made of the sorrows and joys of plain folks and a great love that weathered adversity. Reaching its climax in a mighty cyclone scene that dwarfs any storm ever shown on the screen before.

Certainly one of the four biggest money-makers of the season!

'Manslaughter' Must Be Seen

BY GEORGE MARION JR.

"MANSLAUGHTER," the new Paramount picture showing at Grauman's, will undoubtedly be a table topic this season, therefore, unless one would fain go into silence, an inspection of the photoplay in question is imperative.

Manslaughter is a mighty indictment of the spirit of this age. It has its periods of tedium—but they are infinitely exceeded by the many moments of forceful, poignant interest.

Cecil B. de Mille, who directed the production, attacks the jazzy generation with heavier artillery than did brother William in "Nice People," at the same theater some weeks ago. "Manslaughter" sounds a somber note of warning to the speed-crazing ladies of today.

The chorus of captious ones who find it fashionable to lash out at De Mille's shins with the hohnailed boots of caustic criticism will discover but little of the tendencies of old. The distinguished director, of course, must have his allegorical and historical episodes—in this instance a vivid Roman orgy complete with Bacchantes, Nubian slaves, gladiatorial combats and intruding Goths, staged by Theodore Kosloff and pupils, aided by Denishawn dancers. The opening scenes of the picture are in the ancient De Mille manner, but ah, the glorious directorial redemption in the ensuing episodes. The director is saved as completely as the heroine.

Thomas Meighan gives a straightforward, superb portrayal of the District Attorney. Mr. Meighan is not content to use the profile, the permanent wave or the lustrous eye in a screen characterization. He gets along beautifully by giving the brain a chance. Of course, Mr. Meighan has this advantage over many of his rivals—he has one to use.

Leatrice Joy is consistently splendid as the girl, while Lois Wilson makes of the maid an interesting character. John Milner, Jack Mower, Julia Faye, George Fawcett and other favorites are in the cast. Jeanie Macpherson has made an adroit adaptation of this Alice Duer Miller novel.

IT'S A BEAR

'MANSLAUGHTER' IS GREAT AMERICAN PHOToplay

By Grace Kingsley

Paeans of praise to whatever gods preside over motion pictures—the great American photoplay is with us at last!

"Manslaughter," at Grauman's big and little, have been directors, around after, sometimes nearly striking it, Cecil De Mille has at last really accomplished.

Even as our native literature was slow in developing, but is at last acknowledged free of European shackles, so our photoplays have just missed their mark as regards vital American ideals—sentiment, expression. We have had some great screen satires, somehow when it came to hitting the dramatic nail on the head, our directors have missed. Sometimes they have had too exotic a flavor or very nearly landed, but there was always a flaw.

Not since "Male and Female" has Cecil De Mille's genius been so apparent. Of course, Jeanie Macpherson must be credited for a smooth and full of realism that one seems not to be looking at a picture, but to be right inside the screen with the actors, so convincing is all the action.

"Manslaughter" is the first story on the screen ever known to come to life with such poignancy, such vividness, fulfillment, that it far overreached the published story. They are usually so disappointing, those transferred stories. They are thought of "Manslaughter" as merely a story on the arrogance and indifference to life of the rich speed maniac. In Cecil De Mille's hands it becomes a masterpiece reflecting American life at its best and its worst. Yet he has adhered faithfully to the story.

Of course, Mr. De Mille's trademark is in some very terrific scenes of Roman revelry, brought in for the sake of illustration, but so skillfully that you feel that it is quite natural and that the picture would lose color without those Roman revels.

Thorne entitles her to a place in the Kleig sun beside Lillian, Glendora and Mae Marsh. Her Lydia is a creature of flexible mood, of dramatic shadings, alluring, vast, vivid, yet so natural that you feel she may be living. Next door to you. Then there is Lois Wilson! Where have they been keeping our little Lois, I'd like to know! As the maid, her fine intensity of emotion in the scenes with her child, later with her mistress, when she forgives her the wrong done her, reveals her the wrong done her, is, indeed, in the regeneration scenes, when the two women become human beings, forgiving and forgiven, that which lifts and thrills one as did certain parts of "The Miracle Man."

Thomas Meighan deserves end- less praise for the manner in which he lives the district attorney's role. You don't realize until afterward the real mental and dramatic atmosphere he has brought to this role, which is usually one of repression. He has Faye and Jack Mower play the motor cop's wife and the cop in key with all the rest.

Shows that Cecil De Mille may easily reach the place of master of them all—if, indeed, he doesn't already do so in this one—if he will leave the drivelling tales he has been giving us of late. This one stands beside "Male and Female," and as I said before, it is the Great American photoplay.

If the reverberating verdict rendered by fifteen lines of drama fans at Grauman's Ri- aito yesterday may be accepted as the vote of Vox Populi—events of the past few weeks, terminating with the election of Tuesday, kindly reminded me of the grand old expression—then "Manslaughter" is a cinematic success by unanimous opinion. After view- ing the picture, I had about ar- rived at the con- clusion myself. But so many of the faithful, and hard-boiled, nodded their ap- proval that the reader has not only my word, but the enthusi- astic acquies- cence of others. It's a big pic- ture, is this "Manslaughter." Cecil B. De Mille has extended himself and we have the director at his best. And don't mean to infer that there's bathrubs strewn through- out the reelage, either! There's drama, tragedy and pathos—plenty of it—and humor and spectacle, too, if you like that. There's everything—everything. Ro- zoes to make dramatic action. The mance drips with every turn of the cinematographer's crank. The story's drunk with love interest. And you'll revel in it. Just as the American stage has its outstanding dramas, so this Paramount film will go down as one of the most vital works of the motion picture art. Paramount is fortunate, indeed, to have a pro- duction so noteworthy to head its list in celebration of the current Paramount Week.

Not all the praise for the excel- lence of the photodrama should be directed at Mr. De Mille either. Miss Jeanie McPherson's transla- tion from the pages of Alice Duer Miller's novel is so pregnant with continuity perfection that one is disposed to give her almost equal credit with the director. The au- thor has clung pretty close to the original story, though occasions present themselves when the fine McPherson hand is deliciously in evidence.

De Mille's preference, or may I say weakness, for sex, sensation- alism, if previous pictures may be taken as a criterion, is partially gratified in the "cutback" scene wherein is revealed such revelry as the Romans are supposed to have indulged to their great sensual gratification and (later) ultimate ruin as a people. In these scenes barely clad damsels are shown aplenty. It's the ocular treat of the picture.

Perhaps the excellent cast which interprets the characters is as much responsible for this conviction as anything else. Thomas Meighan's fine artistry makes the district at- torney stand out like an oasis in the Sahara. The deft touches with which the star colors his outstand- ing characterization add not a little to the realism which saturates every move of the hero. Leatrice Joy makes vivid her portrayal of Lydia and scores one of the most distinct successes the screen has seen this season. Lois Wilson, in a role possess- ing less opportunity, shares almost equal honors, her clever dramatic shadings giving vitality and reality to a role that might have been void of a word, too, of the photography. No photodrama boasts better cam- era effects than the De Mille cine- matographer accomplished in this one.

Mr. De Mille has carved an im- portant niche for himself in the arts. That niche will assume greater im- portance and significance if the di- rector will but stick to photo- dramas of the stuff "Manslaughter" is made of. One reel of good, com- ing sense human drama is worth a bushel of reels of piffle. Which indicates, thanks be, that the very capable and worthy Mr. De Mille has changed his course— from the hall of motion picture shame to the hall of motion picture fame.

GREATER than "The Old Nest"—that's fact! It will prove itself in the leading theatres of the country within the next few weeks. The most conservative critics in the United States after witnessing the preview have volunteered columns of publicity for a production which they say is "100 per cent entertainment." When a great showman selects a picture and goes out to push it you have an argument that is pertinent and personal to every other exhibitor who is eager to book the best films to be had.

AT LAST the screen's foremost actor portrays the most vivid role that has ever been created in fiction. Not only is this picture considered the most exciting story the films have revealed in years, but the box-office and exploitation value of the star's name and the title are an asset that the exhibitor finds in his grasp only once or twice a season. The high merit of this picture is so much more eloquent than words that an early screening at your Goldwyn exchange will bring to your own lips adjectives of praise which you might possibly question in our own advertisement.

Mark The PRINCE and

Here is the undying, beloved story of the greatest of all American authors—Mark Twain.

The story of the ragged son of a thief who for a time changes place with the youthful Prince of Wales and is almost crowned King of England.

It is an honor for a Distributor to announce its possession of this gigantic and human picture.

It will bring profit with honor and reputation to the thousands of Exhibitors who present it in their theatres.

In the hottest week of August, the hottest week of New York's summer, Rothafel gave "The Prince and the Pauper" its American premiere—to winter-time patronage in Sahara weather.

We make the amazing admission as its Distributor, that we have more favorable reviews of "The Prince and the Pauper" than we are able to print. Here are some of them, all from daily issues of August 14:

New York Daily News: Produced in a way that would have pleased Mark Twain if he could have seen it. . . . You owe it to your children and yourself to take them to see it. Magnificently directed.

Evening Telegram: This fascinating romance of the beggar lad and the little King of England who changed places so strangely makes a notably excellent film. A sumptuous production with thousands of assisting players. The true spirit of Mark Twain.

New York Mail: This picture is done on a grand scale. The program announces 10,000 persons in the picture and this seems to be truthful advertising. Tibi Lubin, an adorable youngster in the dual role of the Prince and Tom Canty, the son of a thief.

In Canada: Canadian Releasing Corporation Limited

Twain's The PAUPER

New York Times: You enjoy the story as you are privileged to enjoy only a few photo-plays in a season. Well worth seeing; it's a darn good picture.

New York Tribune: An amazing child hero, Tibi Lubin, as both the Prince and the pauper. He reminds us of the Jackie Coogan we know in real life; not the one on the screen.

New York Herald: Pomp and pageantry which would have delighted the heart of Mark Twain are seen on the Capitol screen in "The Prince and the Pauper." A fine air of imagination about this picture.

Journal of Commerce: An inspired, sympathetic production of the story of the wandering Prince and the royal pauper brought to the screen in a memorable manner.

New York Commercial: A picture of rare excellence and beauty that will be still further reviewed and commented on in this paper again tomorrow.

New York World: This extremely effective picture is unusually well done.

New York American: It is such a good story that nothing can ever weaken its sentimental grip.

The Trade Press Says This:

The Film Daily: Enjoyable rendition of famous Mark Twain story. Interestingly told and occasionally good spectacular bits. Unusually good photography.

Variety: There are no dull moments and it looks as if this picture is certain of being a money-getter. Tibi Lubin, a star youngster, a great supporting cast and a production that stands out as a world-beater.

New York Telegraph: One of the best pictures the screen has ever produced. A story so well told that at the end we find ourselves clamoring for more.

Exhibitors' Herald: The picture is so full of human interest, pleasing situations and beautiful settings that it must be said the producers conferred a favor on American audiences in the selection.

Pre-released for big city first runs October 15. Wire our nearest of 26 exchanges for open dates and a contract.

A Human Picture With Pathos and Comedy

Here is a production that we know possesses unusual box-office values. This knowledge is based upon the picture having proved these values across the big new "Third Circuit" in New York and elsewhere. Sydney Cohen and others have said they believed it to be as strong as "Humoresque." We don't say that ourselves, but we cannot help exhibitors from saying it after the picture has made good at their box-offices.

THE WOMAN HE LOVED

From the story by William V. Mong
Directed by Edward Sloman

William V. Mong who wrote this unusual story, with laughter and tears combatting each other for control of your emotions, acts the role of a Jewish refugee who found sorrow—and happiness—in America. The challenging Marcia Manon plays the leading feminine role. You will like the story even more than the critics who are quoted below.

What the Critics Say:

The Film Daily: The theme of "The Woman He Loved" is satisfactory stuff with happy and pathetic moments so distributed as to maintain interest. It is essentially a human interest drama. In our opinion it is not a big picture, but a pleasing one and it will prove satisfactory entertainment.

Trade Review: An entertaining story with an appeal that will be fairly general. Excellent types; good comedy situations and at times revealing a real sympathetic appeal. Will prove a worth while attraction in houses where "Humoresque" and "The Sign of the Rose" have found favor.

Reeland Reviews: A good, clean picture that tells a heart story; has a nice love interest, plenty of smiles and is very well made in every detail. Plenty of humor and real pathos—not over done and one that will interest every type of audience.

Moving Picture World: William Mong, considered by many to be among the foremost character actors on the screen draws a fine characterization in this picture. He wins immediate sympathy for the man he portrays. You can make this another "Humoresque" with some driving. A story built on the idea of making certain human appeal, which it has in no small degree.

Motion Picture News: Heart interest story based on family separation. Much sentiment and character study here. Play it up for heart interest . . . it will go like a house afire.

We beg also to report that Pete Harrison, of Harrison's Reports, and Fred Schader, of Variety, had attacks of mental dyspepsia the day they saw the picture and wrote dyspeptic reviews. With a quorum present they are out-voted.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

William Fox desires to make known to Exhibitors and Motion Picture Theatre Owners the fact that

FOX EDUCATIONAL ENTERTAINMENTS are now ready for release to the trade

Another Mile-Stone in Motion Picture History Has Been Passed

The release of the first group of Fox Educational pictures marks the beginning of a new Epoch of public Appreciation of the Service rendered the Community by the Motion Picture Theatre.

See three following pages for details.

FOX FILM CORPORATION

1—What are Fox Educational Entertainments?

They are short pictures of from one-half reel to one reel in length made so that they are, first of all, entertaining to the general public; but, at the same time, conveying information on popular subjects in a manner which make them of real value from an educational standpoint. Each picture deals with a single subject. Fox Educational Entertainments are not to be confounded with screen reviews or other make-shift, pieced together so-called educational reels.

2—Who are they made for?

First and foremost for motion picture theatres and their audiences. Fox Educational Entertainments will please the regular patrons of their theatres because of their entertaining qualities, and will create a new body of patrons for you because of their educational value.

3—Where can they be booked?

Fox Educational Entertainments can be booked through any of the established Fox Exchanges in the United States and Canada in just the same manner as any other William Fox motion picture is booked. The manager of the Fox Exchange which serves you has prints in his office and is prepared to screen these pictures for you.

4—When can they be shown at your theatre?

On September 24th the first six Fox Educational Entertainments (listed on the opposite page) will be ready for release, and can be shown at your theatre on and after that date as quickly as you may desire to play them.

5—How can they be booked?

You can book for your theatre either one or all of the first six of Fox Educational Entertainments. This means that these pictures can be booked and presented on an individual or a group basis, as you may elect.

6—How will they benefit your theatre?

First: By adding a unique and highly desirable entertainment value to your program. Exhibitors and the public have long expressed the desire for short numbers on the program of the motion picture theatre, different from the comedies, news reels, screen reviews and other product now available. A novel and welcome addition to any theatre's program will be found in these pictures.

Second: By bringing into your theatre a new and valuable class of patronage and thus make friends for your theatre of the very best people in your community. In this manner there will be created between your theatre and the community in which it is situated a closer contact and community of interest.

—of Fox Educational Entertainments:
Wm. A. Johnston, Publisher Motion Picture News

says editorially, (See page 1354, issue Sept. 16.)

"When William Fox takes off his coat and goes after anything you can always count on results. We speak prominently here of this enterprise because we regard it of great fundamental importance. This kind of picture brings the exhibitor in sympathetic touch with those community groups which today are often opposing him. And it is just this bridging the gap—and only this—which will eventually eliminate censorship."

Robert E. Welch, Editor Moving Picture World

says editorially, (See page 182, issue Sept. 16.)

"There is going to be unusual interest in Fox Educational Entertainments. William Fox is spending a lot of money here on an idea that is akin to an ideal. If all the subjects hold up to the first ones he has lived up to every calculation he has made."

Martin J. Quigley, Publisher Exhibitors Herald

says editorially, (See page 19, issue Sept. 23.)

"The significance of this undertaking is very great. The time is most opportune for the production of motion picture subjects of an educational character...but the effort of the Fox organization does not stop merely with the production of subjects that inform and instruct...these subjects afford genuine entertainment. They place in the hands of the theatremen an instrument that certainly will be productive of excellent results in gaining the attention of the best people of his community. The Fox organization in this matter has identified itself with a highly commendable undertaking."

Coming Fox Educational Entertainments

Future Releases

The Educational Division of Fox Film Corporation plans to release fifty-two subjects yearly of from 300 to 1,000 feet in length. These will be pictures of current educational and entertainment value and will not be of a scientific or technical nature. They will be produced from the showman's angle for the purpose of entertaining and amusing the theatre-going public. Each one will be a distinct novelty, unlike anything heretofore offered the motion picture theatre.

Production Plans

More than 200 experienced cameramen are now gathering especially ordered material for Fox Educational Entertainments.

Frederick Fesneau and L. Maes, two cameramen thoroughly acquainted with the Old Country, now are in Europe making special pictures for these subjects. Russell Muth, who won fame by his daring flight over Mt. Vesuvius is in South America. Al Brick, another of the Educational staff, has just returned from China, where many unusual subjects were made for your use. These pictures set a new standard of exceptional entertainment.

"A Rogue's Romance" Vitagraph—5 Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

TAKING advantage of Rodolph Valentino's phenomenal rise to fame, Vitagraph is reviving this production of other days and in billing the picture is giving "The Perfect Lover" equal prominence with the star, Earl Williams. This is all well and good and fine business practice, but Williams is the boy who does the work. It was as a dancer that Valentino first won public attention and in this feature he gyrates through a couple of wild Apache dances, in which his fair partner undergoes some rough treatment and otherwise distinguishes himself in the role of The Ferret, a Montmartre hard-boiled egg. The girls will undoubtedly rush to see Rody dance, so this picture has a real box office value.

So much for the Valentino end. To Earl Williams, however, goes the honor of portraying a very entertaining character, that of M. Picard, master criminal. Williams dominates every scene and it is Earl at his best.

The atmosphere of Paris has been fairly well transferred to the screen. The Cafe D'Or being a colorful underworld setting for the Valentino dances. There are some elaborate shots at a fashionable hotel. The story is one that holds the interest throughout. It deals mostly with the theft and recovery of pearl necklaces and the capture of a band of grafters. The exposure of the plot and subsequent escape of Picard forms a dramatic climax. James Young directed this one. That is a decided asset. The thing for exhibitors to do when they book this one is not to overplay the Valentino end too much.

The Cast

M. Picard Earl Williams
The Ferret Rodolph Valentino
Helene DuFrenay Katherine Adams
M. Henri DuVal Brinsley Shaw
Jeanne Derneau Maud George
By H. H. Van Loan. Scenario and direction by James Young.

The Story—M. Picard, a master criminal, antagonizes The Ferret, a dangerous Apache. The Ferret in return hounds Picard, informing the police of his every move. Picard always outwits the police and escapes. A girl induces Picard to turn his powers to the aid of society. He helps the police capture a dangerous band of grafters as well as recover a valuable pearl necklace. He is cornered several times but always gets away.

Classification—One of those interesting French crook stories that always appeal.

Production Highlights—The Apache dances performed by Valentino and a sprightly little partner. The work of Earl Williams as Picard, the criminal. The exciting escapes. The theft and discovery of the necklace. The fine photography, direction and lighting effects. The correct Montmartre atmosphere. The thrilling climax.

I'M GLAD YOU MA

*No. 301.---Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Film
Manufacturing Company*

A competitor scolded me and kidded me the other day.

He said, "You're the easiest mark in the business. Why, man, the exhibitors are SIMPLY CLEANING UP MONEY on 'The Storm' and they are LAUGHING BEHIND YOUR BACK because you practically gave them the picture instead of getting big money for it."

His criticism did not have the effect he thought it would. Instead of hurting my feelings, IT MADE ME GLAD.

Whenever I hear that the exhibitors are CLEANING UP PROFITS with Universal Pictures, it gives me a thrill of delight because it means more good will is added to the huge pile of good will the Universal has always had.

But my friend made one slight mistake. The exhibitors are not laughing behind my back. They are honestly telling me to my very face how well they are doing with "The Storm." I never in my life received so many messages of gratitude and congratulation, not only because of the big money the showmen have made and are making on the picture BUT BECAUSE I DID NOT USE IT AS A CLUB TO MAKE THEM BOOK OTHER PICTURES WITH IT.

I ask you to pause just a moment and carefully compare the Universal's selling and booking policy with that of other companies.

DE THE MONEY

How many others, if they had had such a powerful box-office success as "The Storm" would have permitted you to book it WITHOUT BOOKING OTHER PICTURES AT THE SAME TIME?

The policy of clubbing the exhibitor over the head with a good picture to make them book other pictures less meritorious has been very successfully worked in this business. You have stood for it a long time. It has temporarily enriched the coffers of the people who did it, but IT HAS STORED UP BAD WILL AGAINST THEM IN YOUR MIND.

The Universal's policy is the simplest of all, because our basic thought has been to EARN YOUR GOOD WILL.

We've got other pictures coming from the studio all the time, as good as "The Storm" and better. They don't need anything to sell them except their own merits. When you make a clean-up with them, it won't make us mad. We will never regret that we did not wring a higher price out of you.

I'm glad you made a pile of money on "The Storm." You'll make just as much on our pictures to come, and not a blessed one of them will be used as a club to bang you over the head.

Good will comes from the heart. I'm going to hang on to yours with all my might and main. I'm not an easy mark just because you make money on Universal Pictures. I'm GLAD—eternally, almighty and doggone GLAD!

ANNOUNCING

To the Exhibitors and the Public the

GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Productions

Which will be made under the personal supervision of the Author, and which will include the film dramatizations of the following of her record-making books:

MICHAEL O'HALLORAN
THE HARVESTER
A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST
LADDIE

A DAUGHTER OF THE LAND
HER FATHER'S DAUGHTER
AT THE FOOT OF THE RAINBOW
THE FIRE BIRD

and others

Gene Stratton-Porter leads all other contemporary novelists in the number of her readers and sales. More than

10,000,000 COPIES OF HER BOOKS have been printed and sold to English speaking readers, giving her an estimated audience of

50,000,000 READERS and a marvelous sales record, beginning with the famous "Freckles" down to the present time of

1,645 COPIES SOLD EACH DAY FOR 18 YEARS

In addition to this matchless record of sales in the English language, there are EIGHT FOREIGN TRANSLATIONS, including the Arabic, and three Braille point editions for the blind.

The famous Bird Woman of the Limberlost country, in Indiana, is known wherever books are read. Her readers include lovers of clean, wholesome, inspiring fiction and nature studies between the ages of fifteen and ninety.

The first of her personally produced pictures, now being made with an all-star cast at the Ince Studios in Los Angeles, will be MICHAEL O'HALLORAN—a clean, simple story of real people, doing things in a sincere way, under the inspiring influence of an unusual newsboy—Michael O'Halloran, the most lovable youngster of modern fiction.

Up to June 1, 1922, the certified figures of the Doubleday, Page & Company, showed that had been sold. Publishers estimate readers on a basis of five readers to the book, which gives this novel, alone, more than FIVE MILLION READERS who will be anxious to see Mrs. Porter's own screen version of her story.

1,061,374 COPIES OF MICHAEL O'HALLORAN

Gene Stratton-Porter has carefully selected a competent, experienced staff of picture makers to produce her films. She will be with them every day to contribute her own genius to the work, to add the little, intimate, psychological touches that have made her fiction people beloved by all the world; and to assure her millions of readers of a film version which will be true in spirit to the books.

MICHAEL O'HALLORAN will be ready for the public early in the Winter. Distribution arrangements will be announced later. Meanwhile, exhibitors who wish to make plans for booking

Mr. Exhibitor!

OUR support and encouragement has made it possible for us to bring forth the unusual array of box-office attractions described on the following pages.

The most brilliant group of directors, authors, scenario writers, cameramen and a stellar aggregation of screen players have worked in harmony and with the utmost enthusiasm to create these wonderful productions.

Popularity—prestige—profits will all be yours because—

Millions have read the books—

Millions will want to see the pictures.

"Our policy is dedicated to exhibitor co-operation."

WARNER BROTHERS

Warner Bros.

HIS production, adapted from the tremendously popular novel and stage play will be one of the season's greatest box-office attractions.

It will endear itself not only to those who have risen from "Rags to Riches", but also to that countless multitude earnestly striving to attain the same goal.

Wesley Barry, a star of unquestioned popularity and ability, is supported by a brilliant cast of screen favorites including Niles Welch, Ruth Renick, Russell Simpson, Richard Tucker, Minna D. Redman and others equally well known.

HE fiction sensation of the year!

It has caused more comment than any other book published during the current season, and it is unanimously conceded by the critics to be the greatest story ever written about the modern flapper.

Marie Prevost and Kenneth Harlan head a cast of well known screen players which includes Louise Fazenda, Jimmy Morrison, Tully Marshall, Eileen Percy and Clarence Burton!

This picture will prove to be another screen sensation:

BRASS

A Novel of Marriage

CHARLES G. NORRIS

Warner Bros.

HIS picture will create film history!

It was adapted from one of the most widely read and discussed novels of the year. It deals with conditions which make or destroy marriage, and this problem will strike a poignant chord in the hearts of humanity.

"Brass" has been staged in a most lavish and elaborate manner. It contains romance, pathos and comedy in profusion, and it is enacted by a strong cast headed by Marie Prevost.

ERE is another Wesley Barry film achievement!

The setting of the story, adapted from the book and stage play that has enjoyed years of popularity, is the colorful and romantic slum section of New York.

The popular freckle-faced idol is supported by an exceptionally strong cast including Marie Prevost, Jack Mulhall, Wilfred Lucas, Philo McCullough and Aggie Herron.

ONE of the sweetest stories ever told!

A homely human document with an appeal as broad as humanity itself. In its many years before the public, as a stage play and as a novel, the story has become known all over the world.

For real story value, lavishness of sets and a distinguished cast of players, "Little Church Around the Corner" will rank as one of the big box-office pictures of the season.

Produced by Warner Brothers

REATEST novel ever written of rural America!

This splendid production will surpass the success of the fiction version and the stage play.

It serves to reveal the bitter clash of new, free ideas against the entrenched complacency of small town tradition. There's a Main Street in every town, and this is but one of the many exploitation hints on the box-office possibilities of this attraction.

IT has the dramatic punch that audiences are strong for. A young recruit in the Royal Mounted is sent out to get his man. He sneaks back alone. He is disgraced and dishonored before the girl he loves. Then her faith rekindles his manhood and he fights his way to her favor. When, single handed, he wades into a snarling pack of lawbreakers and licks them with his bare fists, you'll know by the noise your audience is happy.

Produced by Charles Miller, who directed Dorothy Dalton in "The Flame of the Yukon," Norma Talmadge in "By Right of Purchase" and "Ghosts of Yesterday."

READ WHAT THE NEW YORK NEWSPAPER REVIEWS SAY

Go and See It

"Miss Talmadge's wonderful acting is 8,000,000 candlepower as compared with other films we have beheld. Go to the Strand to see how it all comes out. You will like 'The Eternal Flame.'"—New York Tribune.

Strong—Unusual

"Unquestionably a fine picture. It presents the always competent Miss Talmadge with an excellent story, intelligent direction and an unusually strong supporting cast."—New York Times.

Remarkably Fine

"A great deal of beauty and dramatic strength. Miss Talmadge gives a remarkably fine performance. A sincerity of direction and splendor of background make it a real and holding drama. We have not seen Miss Talmadge in a more effective role. It contains a type of romantic acting seldom seen. It is destined to be a success."—New York World.

Overwhelms You

"More effective than usual. Miss Talmadge overwhelms hearts and in this lavish picture has upheld the standard she set in 'Smilin' Through.' And it is decidedly worthwhile watching her perform that feat."—New York Sun.

Excellent—Exceptional

"The characterizations are exceptional with an excellent cast. All the pomp and glory of the Court of Louis is brilliantly presented."—New York Evening Telegram.

"The dramatic interest is enough to set the modern woman in a whirl. More consistent dramatic than 'Smilin' Through.' Sufficiently intense scenes to outfit several romances. Miss Talmadge is very moving, playing with exceptional variety in her different moods. Ladies will have to busy themselves with powdering their noses after the weeping over."—New York Herald.

It's Very Human

"It deals with elemental passions—heart that are human, very, very human. Miss Talmadge is wistful and lovely and her eyes speak volumes."—New York Globe.

Exceptional Acting

"Norma Talmadge has never played a part more sincerely. Exceptional acting with charming personality."—New York Post.

n Latest Picture!

Miss Talmadge is creating another sensation in her exceptional photoplay at the New York Strand, which is being filled daily by vast throngs. It is making as big a hit as "Smilin' Through" and the public and Press alike acclaim it as another masterpiece. You can take Managing Director Joseph Plunkett's word that it is a money making attraction.

A First National Attraction

"Brand me! Mark me for your own!" she cried to the lover she had scorned.

EWERS HAVE TO SAY OF THIS BIG PRODUCTION

Superlative Art

"Artistic in screening—it possesses an indefinable something of superlative art that gives it the atmosphere of a classic. Fascinating from beginning to end, and so beautifully and splendidly staged. The cast gives the story a perfect interpretation, in support of Miss Talmadge who is one of our finest dramatic screen actresses."—New York Mail.

Very Enjoyable

"In every way an enjoyable picture. Norma Talmadge and Conway Tearle are fascinating and every foot of the picture is interesting. One of those pictures which keep people going to the theatres."—New York Tribune.

Most Appealing

"Miss Talmadge does a most appealing piece of acting in a picturesque film. See it at the Strand."—New York Morning Telegraph.

Regal in Magnificence

"Love is the eternal flame, of course, from which Norma Talmadge's new picture takes its title and the picture should be considered under that title for a spectator to appreciate the adaptation fairly. Balzac made of the romance of the Duchess of Langeais and General de Montriveau a vibrant novel of the Court of Louis XVIII, while the film narrows the perspective to the Duchess and the soldier, almost exclusively. There are scenes of regal magnificence now and then, scenes in which the director must have revelled, but against them the figures of the lovers stand out as on a cameo, which is a tribute to the taste of the director, and adds much to the artistic merit of the picture. Antoinette, the Duchess who was driven to coquetry, is executed by Miss Talmadge with supreme skill. An actress of less force, of less experience, of less judgment in the delicacies of the art would have spoiled the rare opportunity for emotional expression and repression of which this star makes so much. Love was shown as a flame that glows and sears and consumes completely and this idea was stressed vividly throughout."—New York Journal.

Fresh news every week.

"SONNY"

Richard Barthelmess in an Inspiration Picture, directed by Henry King.

Frank L. Browne, Liberty Theatre, Long Beach, Cal., says:

"An exceptionally fine picture and star. Did a big week's business despite its being the hottest week of the year. Pictures like this one make friends for the star, the theatre and the industry. I wish there were more of the same calibre."

"HURRICANE'S GAL"

Starring the beautiful Dorothy Phillips and produced under the direction of Allen Holubar.

The Cleveland News says:

"Splendid screen entertainment. A whale of a tale."

The Cleveland Press says:

"It has as many thrilling incidents as three average movies."

The Seattle Times says:

"Undoubtedly one of the screen's most artistic offerings, filled with thrilling action and exquisite sea scenery."
